LOCAL GREEK NOT KILLED

George Kondyles Was Reported Killed, But Later Reports Say It Was His Cousin

Reports reached this city a few days ago that George Kondyles a local Greek, who went to the war centre a month after Mr. Louis Yeotes, was killed about two weeks ago. When the news arrived Mr. Yeotes sent word to Kondyles' brother, Nicholas, in Lindsay. The latter came immediately to this city, but yesterday the New York Greek papers brought the good tidings that it was not the local man but his cousin, whose name is George Kondyles. There was great rejoicing among the local Greeks when they found out that their comrade was still alive.

PRINCE GEORGE TOWNSITE OPEN

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway announce the sale by auction of the townsite of Prince George, situated at the confluence of the Fraser and Nechaco Rivers in Central British Columbia, 450 miles northeast of Vancouver and 467 miles east of Prince Rupert, British Columbia, or midway between Prince Rupert and Edmonton, Alberta. By reason of its central location Prince George will be the natural distributing point for the extensive territory comprised in the Pacific Province of the Dominion and it has therefore long been the expectation of the general public that upon the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, Prince George will early become a large and important centre. Having purchased what was known as the Fort George Indian Reserve, No. 1, for the purpose of locating a townsite thereon the Grand Trunk Pacific Development Company, has caused the same to be surveyed and platted and will offer lots in the townsite for sale by public auction at Vancouver, British Columbia, Wednesday, September 17th, 1913 and at Edmonton, Alberta Wednesday, September 24th, 1913. The terms of the sale will be one quarter cash and the balance payable in one, two and three years with six per cent interest. All particulars and plans can be secured by applying to G. U. Ryley, Land Commissioner, Grand Trunk Pacific, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

OBITUARY

Miss Isabel Simpson

A well known and highly respected resident of this city, Miss Isabel Simpson, passed away this morning a few minutes before seven o'clock. Deceased had been ill for some time and her death was not totally unexpected. She was born in Smith some 76 years ago moving to Peterborough in 1904. In religion she was a Presbyterian and a member of St. Paul's Church.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her nephew, Mr. John Simpson, 780 Water street, on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, service at the house by the Rev. R. Fogg and then to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

WEATHER WAS BAD.

But In Spite of Rain 83,000 Attended Toronto Fair.

TORONTO, Sept. 4.—Although the attendance of 83,000 was on account of the rain, 15,000 behind last year the Farmers' Day attendance at the Exhibition yesterday was worthy of the best traditions of the agricultural industry of the banner province of Canada. A high note of mutual interest and social co-operation was sounded at the directors' luncheon by Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, and Mr. George C. Creelman of the Agricultural College at Guelph.

Although the unsettled weather impaired the attendance somewhat, the early morning trains were laden with excursionists. Not only was the carrying capacity of the regular service doubled and trebled, but many trains had to run in two sections and not a few specials were required to provide adequate accommodation.

Ilderton carries off the diplomas in the butter-making competitions again. The free-for-all was settled yesterday afternoon, with Miss Gregory leading slightly on Richmond Hill.

JUDGE BARHQRST
DOES HIS DUTY TO
SUFFERERS

If you suffer from Rheumatism and don't read this advice, then the terrible disease must have robbed you of your power to be fair to yourself. Read it:

"I, John Barhorst, Justice of the Peace of McLean Township, Ft. Loramie Ohio, do certify that after treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previous to using RHEUMA I was a cripple, walking with crutches, and I feel it my duty to let other sufferers from Rheumatism know what it will do. The result seems almost miraculous to me. I have advised RHEUMA to at least a dozen persons, and each one speaks as highly of it as I. I will answer anyone suffering from the disease if a two-cent stamp is enclosed."—May 31, 1912.

You can secure a bottle of RHEUMA for only 50 cents at Warne's Drug Co., and they say, if not as advertised, money back. It's just as good for Gout, Arthritis, Lumbago and Sciatica.

PASSING OF ANOTHER FAMOUS GRIDIRON STAR

Phil. Cornellier Has Given Up Rugby to Study for the Priesthood.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—Phil Cornellier, the brilliant flying half of the Ottawa University football team, will not be available when Rev. Father Stanton trots out the local candidates for their first practice next week. Cornellier has decided to enter the priesthood, and is studying at the Lachine Scholasticate. He has played his last football. The retirement of Cornellier means the passing of one of the greatest young footballers in the game. Cornellier achieved fame two years ago, when he almost booted Ottawa College to the championship of the Dominion. He was unfortunate through injuries and illness last season, with the result that he did not have an opportunity of living up to the great reputation he built up two years ago.

Were Cornellier available for this season, he would be a great asset to the combined University-Ottawa team. However, Father Stanton will have Eddie Gerard, Don Brophy, and Jack Williams to do the kicking, and perhaps Dick Sheehy to assist with the line plunging. Nevertheless, Cornellier's retirement will be regretted.

The first practice of the University-Ottawa team will likely be called for next Monday at Varsity Oval. Heretofore the Ottawas have not been able to get down to practice until after Exhibition week at Lansdowne Park. The field is always torn up for a week or so after the fair and in consequence the Ottawas have always been obliged to start out in the season in poor shape. There will be none of that this year. President Cameron, Coach Stanton, and the other officials are determined to have all the players out at once and will make their headquarters at Varsity Oval until after the fair.

This will meet with the approval of the players, who regard condition as the biggest factor in the short Canadian Rugby season. The call to pigskin raiment will likely be sounded in a day or two.

"BUCK" O'BRIEN

"Buck" O'Brien, who last season was in the World Series was dropped by Boston in June, and Callahan, of the White Sox, picked him up to see what was the matter with him. If he found out the trouble he kept it to himself, but last week he released him to Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League.

SKETCHES OF N.Y. GIANTS

John J. McGraw Manager

Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York National League team was born at Truxton, N.Y., on April 7, 1873. His first professional engagement was with the Olean Club in 1890 when but 17 years of age. In 1891 he joined the Cedar Rapids Club of the Western Association. Before the season was over, Manager Barnie secured him for the then Baltimore Club. McGraw played second base for a time in Baltimore but his remarkable talents were not appreciated until Hanlon took charge of the team in 1892. Hanlon's keen eye at once saw the possibilities of the little infielder and he put him on third, where he played till he became bench manager for the Giants. In 1900 McGraw along with catcher Robinson was sold to the St. Louis National League Club and played that season there. In 1901 he and Robinson organized a new Baltimore Club and placed it in the expanded American League, but they couldn't get on with "Ban" Johnson so they sold out to New York National League Club.

Under McGraw's management the New York team has always been a potent factor in the National League.

It won the championship in 1904 and 1905, the World Series in 1905, lost the pennant by a technicality in 1908, finished third in 1909, a good second in 1910 and first in 1911-12. If something unusual does not happen the Giants will win the pennant this year again and perhaps the World Series.

Of manager McGraw it may be justly said that he is the greatest and most valuable asset of the New York Club.

Note:— Each night The Review will present a true autobiography of the members of the New York Giants. Read them and get posted for the World Series. To-morrow night it will be Christie Mathewson.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Ed. Walsh, better known as "Iron Man" went into the box once too often. Bonesetter Reese has now to perform the miraculous if Big Ed. is to wear a Chicago uniform much longer.

Ed. Coombs, one of Connie Mack's most reliable pitchers is out of the game for the rest of the season and perhaps for good. Like Walsh he went into the box once too often. He is down an dout with his old intestinal troubles, brought on by overwork.

Writes Damon Runyon in The American: "Truly it was a memorable birthday for Master Richard W. Marquard, jr. He arrived in the league in the small hours of Monday morning, and if you want to take his papa's word for it, he arrived with a jump to his fast bawl that rivals the one with which his daddy subdued the parent of Miss Rudolph of the Bronx, yesterday. Miss Rudolph came into the world only a few days ago, an dso the meeting between the new members of the 'Proud Pops' Association possessed a certain domestic interest.'

"Father Rudolph gave Father Marquard a terrific tussle before he finally succumbed to Merkle's smash to the right field wall and Murray's single in the fourteenth and the big crowd gave the Bronx parent as much applause as it did Paw Marquard. Harry Hempstead, president of the Giants, had his band on the premises, and some one told the leader the glad tidings about Master Marquard, so every time the young man's parent came to bat the musicians uttered, 'Here Comes My Daddy Now,' 'Some Boy,' or 'Snooky Ookums.' "

It is reported that Ross Craig, the Peterborough boy, who has won fame chasing the pigskin, will be with the Argos this season. He and Jackie practically won the championship for the Alerts last season with their line plunging.

Ottawa are building on having Dick Sheehy again this season. Evidently they will be surprised when they hear of "Dick" going to Toronto University.

STRATTON TROPHY SEPTEMBER 13

Owing to the extreme weather in August and to the fact that so many of the golf players were holidaying, play in the Stratton Trophy will be held on Saturday, Sept. 13.

PRESENTATION MADE TO MR. AND MRS. McCREA

Smith Couple Presented With Chairs and Address On Their Departure

The neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McCrea, of Smith, who leave in a few days to reside near Pontypool gave them a big surprise last Tuesday evening. About eight o'clock a large number gathered at the McCrea residence and presented Mr and Mrs McCrea with two chairs upholstered in leather, and also the following address, which was read by Mr. John Cox:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. McCrea,—It is with deep regret we have learned of your departure from our midst. We have always found you sociable and always willing to lend a helping hand when needed, and we, your friends and neighbors have gathered here to-night to say good bye, and to ask you to accept, as a small token of our esteem, these two chairs. We trust that in your future home they will remind you of us all.

May God's richest blessing rest on you both with long life health and happiness.

Signed on behalf of the neighbors.
JOHN COX.

Messrs. Blodget and Pummict made the presentation.

Mr. McCrea made a very suitable reply, thanking his neighbors for their kind remembrances and also assured them that though they were moving to another part, yet the friends they had in Smith would be ever uppermost in their minds.

The happy crowd then spent a social evening together during which refreshments were served and before midnight the gathering broke up.

FORESTERS' SPLENDID WORK IS DESCRIBED

An Interesting Account of the Work of This Deservedly Popular Order—How It Is Progressing

One of the most fascinating spots in Society Row, if not in the whole Exhibition Grounds, is the large striped tent of the Independent Order of Foresters overlooking the waters of Lake Ontario. It is surrounded by shrubs and foliage on the outside, while its interior is even more inviting. The floor is richly carpeted, and scattered around are plenty of easy chairs for the comfort of tired visitors. Flowers and palms add to the restful appearance of the tent.

The tent has been the scene of many reunions, and has been visited since the Fair opened by over a thousand Foresters from all over Canada and the United States, according to the names on the register. Mr George A. Mitchell, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger, assisted by other obliging and courteous officials, is in charge, and information with regard to the Order and the splendid work it is carrying on may be obtained at a moment's notice. It is interesting to listen to the conversation carried on among the visitors, for real, true stories of a work that is building good men out of raw, fatherless boys are often related. There is knowledge to be gained which will appeal to all Foresters, as well as to those who are not already members of fraternal societies. At present the Order, which was founded 38 years years ago, has a membership of 250,000, and its branches are to be found in Great Britain, Canada and the United States. The triennial meeting of the Supreme and High Courts, held in Toronto last week, revealed the fact that the increase in membership during the past year was 29,000, while the number added last month totalled 2,180. These facts are a striking manifestation of the increasing interest in the Foresters. The growth of the Order in Canada is in a large measure due to the untiring efforts of Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger Mitchell. An indication of the faith reposed in the I.O.F. was given last week, when the Supreme Chief Ranger, Hon. Elliott G. Stevenson, made a gift of $160,000 to erect and maintain a home for aged Foresters, and at his death a further sum of $100,000 will be given towards the maintenance of the institution. The meeting also demonstrated the fact that the Order is in a splendid financial position, and funds are guaranteed in a manner to suit the most exacting people. Benefits range from $500 to $5,000, and $5 a week is paid in case of sickness. The permanent disability fund provides that 70 per cent. of the amount shall be paid in case of permanent disability, and when a member reaches the age of 70 years a similar amount is paid. It is a notable fact that during the past year this organization has paid out in disability benefits a total of $108,218.60. To beneficiaries it paid no less than $2,400,311.60 in 1912, while the total sum disbursed for old-age benefits in the past twelve months was $552,596.76.

One of the important branches of the Foresters' work is their sanitaria. One of these is located on Rainbow Lake, in one of the most beautiful parts of the Adirondack Mountains. At present there are 53 patients receiving treatment there. That the place is doing splendid work is borne out by the large number of invalids who have returned to their homes completely cured. The treatment is given to members free of cost, and every comfort is afforded the patient. None of the expense is deducted from his sick benefits, which he is entitled to receive during the time of his affliction. The Order also has an orphanage at Oakville, where 50 children are being cared for. The total number looked after now reaches 800. It is missionary work such as this that begets the enthusiasm these Foresters display. Mr. Mitchell and his associates extend a hearty invitation to every Forester to visit the I.O.F. tent, and those in charge will answer any questions regarding the working of the institution.

INQUEST INTO DEATH OF ARTHUR JONES RESUMED

Witness—I wasn't there when the accident happened.

W. H. Moore—You are sure you disconnected the wires?

Witness—Certainly.

W. H. Moore—There must have been a current to give these men a shock.

DR. SUTTON

Who said that he was summoned to attend the deceased. On arrival there, he was just regaining consciousness. He had received several severe burns, and his heart was showing symptoms of a shock. After which he was taken to the hospital. About 7.30 the same evening evidence of a severe shock was visibly pronounced. He treated him for this but patient passed away next morning. Death was apparently due more to the electrical shock than the burns.

DR. EASTWOOD

Who performed the post-mortem reported the man's face and left side seriously bruned, and several other deep burns and hair singed on forehead. The cause of death was apparently shock, as the body was that of a well nourished man.

Thos. Yost, chief testor in the testing department, and foreman of the rheostat department, said that the wires were all off but three at the back of the rheostat, which led to the oil switch. He couldn't cut the wires without closing down the whole test department. Warned the three men to be careful of the three wires at the rear, which contained 6600 volts. Left the men at work at the machine and went upstairs. Shortly afterwards saw a flash and came downstairs and found Harry Shed being being carried away and Arthur Jones laying at the side of the frame of the rheostat. Didn't know what caused the accident.

Harry Shed, a fellow employee of the late Arthur Jones told how they disconnected the wires from the frame of the rheostat.

"In taking out some bolts to loosen the rheostat from its frames, we, (Arthur Jones and myself) stood on each side of the frame. After loosening some more nuts, we turned it still further around. I was working at the left side and Jones was appointed. I was watching the rheostat being moved from the frame, when the accident occurred. I felt the current pass through me as I stood with my one foot on the base of the machine and my left hand on the panel of the machine. I then found myself on the floor. My hand and foot was burned. I have not examined the machine, as I haven't been to work since the accident. Jones was badly burned and unconscious. I have no theory how the current occurred. I have no idea where the current originated."

Herbert Lucas, one of the men who assisted to move the rheostat says:

"Just as I stepped off the frame of the rheostat, I saw the flash, and Jones dropped to the floor. We all kept away from live wires at rear of machine, as instructed by Mr. Yost."

Matthew Hiscock, the next witness, corroborated the other witnesses' evidence.

Albert Stephens, a C.G.E. employee told how he remained first aid to both the men. Examined the rheostat and noticed the back of the switch board and the marble of the rheostat turned.

The rheostat was fully a foot away from the wires.

CASTRO LEADERS, CAPTIVES, PARADED BEFORE GOMEZ

ON THE PLAZA AT MARACAY

President Gomez demonstrated the strength of the Venezuelan government's military arm when he paraded the entire division stationed at Macaray. A group of twenty political prisoners, who represent the visible residue of the Castro revolution: six thousand infantry, cavalry, and mountain howitzers, all well equipped and disciplined, marched from the barracks three miles away, at Tapatapa, where the prisoners were taken from Coro.

President Gomez had left the train, purposing by this spectacle to demonstrate to the populace the futility of seditions plots.

"THE GIRL AND THE BARON"

One of the best musical offerings of the season "The Girl and the Baron" will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, Sept. 6th, matinee and night, with the entire original New York Company. This attraction comes well recommended by both press and public from the cities where it has appeared.

Every song is new and original and is up to the minute. The costumes are very gorgeous, among them being some of the latest Parisian creations. The scenery is very grand and the electrical effects are very novel. The big Broadway Number which shows "Broadway in action at midnight" is one of the most original features ever attempted on any stage.

Miss Eva Malvin, the prima donna, is due much credit for her fine work and good singing. She makes a great hit as evidenced by the many encores. The big beauty chorus can all sing, and dance and have been selected with great care by the management in order to give "The Girl and The Baron" the most beautiful chorus with any road show out of New York, this season.

Children's Eyes

How many people realize the fact that children are just as liable to require glasses as older people.

Many children who are backward in school and considered stupid, are not really so, but are laboring under difficulties on account of not being able to see properly. They are young and do not realize that they do not see as well as their companions and of course their parents don't know it either. But it is the duty of parents to have their children's eyes examined and see if they require glasses, because school work is hard enough for children without their being handicapped with poor vision. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. make a special study of children's eyes. Come and consult us and we will advise you in the matter.

INQUEST OPENED ON FALL OF TURNBULL STORES BUILDING

WITNESSES EXAMINED WHO THREW LIGHT ON WHAT WAS DONE

Probable Causes of the Disaster to be Gathered From Evidence. Inquest Adjourned Until 16th September

The inquest on the recent disaster that resulted in the fall of the building at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, opened, (after formal adjournment on the 28th of August) at the Council Chamber last evening before Coroner Dr. Greer. In addition to the County Crown Attorney, Mr. R. E. Wood, there was present quite an array of legal interest, including Mr. E. A. Peck, who appeared in the interests of Mr. John Belcher, architect; Mr. W. H. Moore, for the owners of the premises, Mr. G. N. Gordon, for the Sisson and Kelly relatives; Mr. W. H. Johnston, of Dumble & Johnston, for the Toronto Loan and Savings Co., Mr. E. H. D. Hall, for Mr. F. Might; Mr. D. O'Connell, for Contractor J. W. Johnston, and Mr. J. W. Bennett.

The jury were placed on the east side of the room, the coroner occupying the dias, usually filled by the mayor. The evidence was taken in short-hand by Miss Dundas, thus materially facilitating the proceedings.

The jury were called to order and answered to the call:

A. G. Carruthers, foreman.
J. J. Lynch.
Wm. Fleetwood
Wm. Carter
Wm. Langford, Jr
W. S. Merrin
Andrew Robson.
Frank Conna.
Arch. Weir.
Jos. Kelly.
J. W. Carey.
E. Waterman

Dr. Eastwood testified that he had viewed the bodies of Mrs. Kelly, Mr. Cuffe, Miss Boddison and Miss Sisson, and that they had all met death as result of injuries in the fall of the building. Miss Sisson had died from injuries and from suffocation, so near as might be determined without a post mortem examination.

Mr. F. J. Might, said that he was the manager of the Turnbull business. It was decided to make alterations in the premises, and arrangements were made with the owners of the building to submit plans for approval. These were prepared by Mr. Belcher. These were looked over by Mr. W. Langford, and the information was given that Mr. Belcher was putting in too much iron. The report to the owners was such that they approved of the going on with the alterations. The proposition was to take out the wall between the Turnbull and Barrie stores, and the outside wall on Simcoe street to have windows put in, and on the second floor two arches to be cut. A new front on George street, to make the whole face uniform. Mr Belcher made plans at direction of witness, the work being done at day work. Mr. Johnston did the work, Mr Belcher being architect. Witness was to pay Mr. Johnston when he was through. Mr. Johnston bought materials. Witness had not paid Mr. Johnston anything as yet. Witness said everything went on until the morning of the 28th August. He was at rear of 2nd floor, on the Turnbull side. He fell with the crash, the whole thing giving way all together. He fell to the floor below and crawled out at the back. Could not tell how other parts fell. When the ground floor wall was taken out the wall above was supported by steel girders and iron colums, these latter resting on the foundation below. Saw bodies taken out of the wreck. Mr. Cuff was in the employ of Mr. Johnston, Mrs Kelly being a customer.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall asked Mr. Might if he interfered in any way with the architect or contractor, and he replied that he left the whole matter in the hands of the architect and contractor doing the work.

Mr Johnston gave two tenders and they decided to do the work under the terms as it was being done. The agent of the owners was told that Mr. Johnston was doing the work.

Mr. W. Langford, called and sworn, said he was a contractor for 30 years. He had looked over the plans at the request of the agent of the Toronto Loan and Savings Co. and saw Mr. Might and reported on the plans, judging if the material was sufficiently strong and if the work could be done safely. He looked at the details, the steel and iron proposed to be used, and reported favorably, saying it was heavier steel beams that he would have used. Was quite satisfied that the iron was ample, away beyond what was required. He did not determine how the work was to be done that laying with the contractor. The opening would be about 80 feet, and space 19 feet between columns. The girders were two 12 inch beams, resting on cast iron columns. He did not report on foundations. He afterwards found they rested on a very poor brick wall 18 inches wide. Must have stood there since 1865, nearly 50 years. Possibly the brick were fresh from the kiln when used. There seemed no bond between the brick and mortar. The outside of the wall was not so poor as the centre. He had been told that the pillars were resting on a piece of steel.

His impression was that the foundation wall gave away, throwing the pillars out of plumb and bringing on the destruction of premises Certainly, the wall was deceptive in its appearance. Had no doubt but that the fall of the wall spread the joists pushed out the outer wall, and the rest followed. The foundation was the critical part and its breaking up brought on the crash.

To Mr. Hall the witness said that if the wall had been a good wall the structure would have stood. The wall, however, did not appear, from outside view, to be bad. There were eight iron pillars to support the girder that replaced the wall.

To Mr Gordon—The I beams were the girders on top of the pillars. The pillars are often stood on a base of iron distributing the weight. If so carried it might have saved the day. He would have advised tearing down the wall (now that he knew its character) and replacing it with a new one, or placing the pillar on a concrete base.

To Mr D. O'Connell witness said that in the part now standing the pillars stood on flat stones on top of the wall. It had stood for 18 or 19 years, the mortar being very hard.

W. J. Johnston was called and sworn. He said he was a contractor of many years experience. He had charge of the work for Mr Might in making the alterations, as desired by Mr. Might. He had given an idea of what the work would cost. He engaged in a verbal understanding to take out the central wall, also west wall on Simcoe street. He gave estimate, Mr. Might decided to change front on George street, and also carry out the alterations on Simcoe street. Told him to go ahead, get it and do the work. Nothing said about supplying material, but as he had worked this way before for Mr. Might he went ahead.

Mr. Belcher made the plans and looked after the work, such as would be involved in such work. He was given some blue prints, locating columns, etc. Began work last spring making two openings in wall upstairs. Began some time in July and began on the walls middle of August. Took out the wall, supporting the upper wall by six columns spaced at different intervals. The columns rested on cement footings on a brick wall, or foundation. This wall was 14 inches, as far as he knew, being a brick-and-a-half. The bottom of column went to the bottom of the joists, with a footing of 5 or 6 inches under the columns. The brick was removed by some of his workmen who placed the concrete. Base of columns was 12 inches square. Twelve inches was all the bearing surface.

He did not examine the wall, except to look at the footings of the columns, removing about 16 inches in depth of brick. He did not examine the wall to judge of its strength. Was on the work on morning of accident, the centre wall completed. Beams had been inserted on the George street front. At the time of the fall he was about 15 feet from the door of the Barrie store. Heard a funny sound, turned and it appeared as if everything was on tremble. All down in less than a minute. Could not see what fell first. Jumped out as material fell at his heels. Could not tell at the time which part fell first, but he afterwards concluded that the fault lay in the centre foundation wall. Found that one of the columns was broken in two—another standing in the cellar. The wall was crushed down and destroyed. He assisted in the work of rescue as well as he could. Helped to lift out Miss Boddison, Mrs. Brown and Mr. Cuffe all being dead. Saw Miss Sisson removed.

To Mr. Hall—He had done Cressman's and other work similar to that at Turnbull's. No accidents heretofore. He considered himself a competent contractor at such work. He had no interference or direction from Mr. Might.

To Mr. Gordon.—The cement base under the columns, the third and fourth from George street would be 2 feet long by 18 inches wide. There was a door cut through the wall and across it an I beam. The wall did not look bad when chiseled down as far as the plans show the column might have stood on the brick wall without cement base. He took precaution of putting the cement bases in position.

He had no impression that the building was unsafe. He took every precaution. He did not know the weight of stock on the floors. No one said to him that the building was unsafe. Even had the store been closed his methods would have been the same.

To Mr. O'Connell.—The witness said that he was told by Mr. Might what was to be done, and also by the architect. From the plans he was able to go at the work. From blue prints he would get, and did get details. The architect determined the strength of beams and columns. The placing of columns on the wall was determined by the detail and plans, including the column resting on an I beam over an opening. The wall at the east end of the I beam appeared now to be broken down. The architect was aware of the existence of the opening in the wall and concurred in the placing of the beams to support the pillar above. He followed the instructions of the architect implicity, when anything came up that had not been fully understood.

To Mr. Peck.—He was working on a plan that had been approved. He undertook the work and to place these pillars on the wall below. The owners of the building also approved, in so far as they gave permission. He has had a good experience in such work and confidence in his ability. Also the architect had confidence. There was no specification as to the work other then a blue print. He considered that he had placed the pillars on a good foundation, as four were now standing dispite the shock. The opening in the cellar wall was put through a month before the work was started. The opening was made on order of Mr. Might to give access from one cellar to another. He found that one of the pillars would come where the opening had been made. He got two pieces of beam nine inches deep and six feet long, bolted together. These were not injured. His men placed them in position.

To Mr. Hall witness said that Mr. Might did not in any way tell him to bridge the opening with the beams. He had no orders as to any detail from Mr. Might.

Alva Wilson called was sworn.—He was in the employ of the Toronto Loan & Savings Co., and had general care over their buildings in the city. He never saw the plans of this store, never was consulted, knew nothing about it. He had not examined the premises, having been once ordered off by the police. He went and stayed off. He had passed through the building while the work was in progress. Upstairs, he thought Mr. Johnston was doing the very best he could do and doing it in the right way.

At the conclusion of the evidence of the last witness the inquest was adjourned until Tuesday evening, 16th inst., at the Council Chamber.

ANOTHER STORY OF THE TURNBULL DISASTER

Intense Interest in Court—Was the "Opening" the Weak Spot? Tortoise and Elephant Theory—Mr. Johnston Tells How He Escaped

Last night the resumed inquest into the Turnbull disaster was held in the Council chamber. Dr. Greer, the city coroner, presided, and there was a crowded attendance of men in the court.

The proceedings were keenly followed by all present and at times the interest was intense and not a breath could be heard in the room.

The chief witnesses were Mr. Might, the manager, Mr. Langford, the contractor consulted by the owners of the building, and Mr. Johnston, the builder in charge of the work. The architect, Mr. Belcher, was not called as the inquest was adjourned till the 16th inst.

The story so far as it was unfolded last night in the evidence, and by the cross-examination is as follows:—

Mr. Might, the manager of the Turnbull store was a tenant in the building which belonged to the Toronto Savings & Loan Co. Some time ago he decided to make some alterations and having consulted with the owners he called upon Mr. Johnston to make out an estimate for the job. No written contract was signed, but it was verbally understood that Mr. Might was to pay the bill on the completion of the work, whatever it would cost.

Before proceeding Mr. Might called in Mr. Belcher, the architect, and instructed him to draw up a plan as to how the alterations should be carried out. Mr. Might left the work entirely in the hands of the architect and the builder.

The architect drew up the plan which was to take out the lower part of the centre wall of the building. This wall ran the full length of the building, east and west and rose from the basement to the roof. In place of the portion of the wall removed a number of iron columns were to be inserted surmounted by a steel girder, said by Mr. Langford to be strong enough to support four times the weight put upon it.

There is no doubt about the sufficiency of the steel girders and iron columns; all above the base of the columns was in good order. But like the elephant upon the tortise there was no foundation for the columns to rest upon, at least not a satisfactory one.

Mr. Langford described the wall from the first floor to the basement upon which the columns rested as "a very poor brick wall." He said it was fifty years old, that the mortar was crumbling, that it was badly built in the first place. It was 18 inches thick and did not look so bad. If the wall had been good it would have been sufficient to support the column.

The builder was asked if he had made any special examination of the wall. He replied that he had not, but that he worked according to the plans of the architect.

It transpired that the builder had made an opening in this wall in the basement, and that one of these columns happened to come in immediately above this opening. Instead of moving the column an iron beam was inserted above the opening, and it was found on examination of the ruin that the wall had given way at this point.

There is little doubt but that this was the weak spot. As to the responsibility for trusting such a weight upon "a very poor wall," weakened by an opening with only a nine inch beam to make up for the gap, this lies between the builder and the architect.

One counsel suggested that an iron beam of some kind ought to have been placed upon the lower wall to secure the columns.

The inquest was adjourned till the 16th of the month. The architect and a number of other important witnesses are yet to be called.

Mr. Johnston, the builder, in relating his experience at the fall of the building, said that he was just coming out on George street, when he heard "a funny sound," he could hardly describe it. He turned his head and everything seemed to be on the tremble, and then the crash came. It all occurred in a minute and the brick fell at his heels as he fled from the building. He barely escaped with his life.

DIARY OF THE INQUEST; BRIEF SKETCH IN COURT

Snippets From the Evidence and Examinations—Mr. Johnston Does Not Speak Up

7.30; Dr. Greer, the Coroner, presided.

"O yea, O yea, O yea," cried the usher to a crowded court.

The jury roll was called and answered, all "here."

First witness was Dr. Eastwood. He had examined bodies. Miss Sisson's death was due to "crushing and suffocation."

The second witness was Mr. Might. He said he left all in the hands of the architect and the builder. There was no signed contract between him and Mr. Johnston, the builder.

Counsel—"Who employed the architect?"

"I'm not sure," replied Mr. Might. "I think I did."

Everything went well till the fatal Thursday. The crash came when he was on the second floor at the back of the building, he managed to crawl out of the debris unhurt.

The third witness was Mr. Langford, who had been instructed to survey the plans for the Toronto Loan and Savings Co. To see if the work could be done safely. He said he reported favorably. The iron used was strong enough to hold four times the weight.

Counsel—"Did you make any calculations as to what the columns would rest on?"

Mr. Langford—"I supposed they would rest on a foundation of some kind. I took Mr. Johnston for a practical man."

Counsel—"What did the columns rest on?"

Mr. Langford—"A very poor brick wall." "If I had known what the wall was like I should have torn it down, but it was deceptive, it looked alright."

Mr. Johnston, the builder, was called next.

"Speak up!" was repeatedly heard from the jury. But Mr. Johnston still spoke down, and could scarcely be heard.

He said he did not examine the lower wall before putting in the columns. He put in six inches of concrete beneath each column. It had three or four days to set.

He said he was standing near the door on George street when he heard a "funny sound," he turned his head, everything was "on the tremble," he fled with the building falling at his heels.

Counsel, Dan O'Connell—"Who instructed you to place columns on the wall?"

Mr. Johnston—"Mr. Belcher, the architect."

Mr. Johnston stated that he had cut an opening in the basement wall and had put in an eye beam above it, one of the columns rested upon this beam, and that was where it went down. He considered this should have been safe enough.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell made a searching and brilliant cross-examination of all the witnesses.

Inquest adjourned at 10 o'clock, till the 16th of the month.

Famous Anti-Thaw Lawyer Is Now In the Toils—Charged With Gambling

Canadian Press Despatch.

COATICOOKE, Que., Sept. 5.—William Travers Jerome was arrested here this morning charged with gambling.

Complaint on which Jerome was arrested was made by a resident named Mulford Aldridge, who swore he saw Jerome playing poker in public yesterday. Jerome was taken to jail. Arrest supposed to be outcome over irritation felt by citizens over Jerome's presence here and Thaw's lawyers say they have nothing to do with it.

The charge against Jerome is "common gambling on railroad property" and a maximum penalty according to the Crown Attorney is one year's imprisonment without the option of a fine." He was promptly bailed out. It transpired that to relieve the monotony of waiting for the outcome of the Thaw enquiry he indulged in a game of penny ante yesterday sitting in an automobile with a suit case for a table.

The case against Thaw was resumed this morning with prisoner on the stand but he was almost immediately requested to stand down and the board suddenly adjourned.

BIRDS AND FEATHERS

The Ottawa Free Press takes a local minister to task for making the following statement from his pulpit on Sunday last:

> "A young girl, alone in the city and employed in one of the large stores, was paid so small a wage that she was unable to clothe herself and get three meals a day, and as a result of insufficient nourishment was taken and placed under a doctor's care."

A great many rash statements of the same kind are uttered not only from the pulpit, but from certain platforms in Canada, England and the States. In fact, it has been asserted that much if not all of the "social evil" is the result of insufficient wages of the lady shop assistants.

It is time this matter was sifted and when this is done it will be found that the responsibility for the degradation of girls does not rest altogether with the employer.

We would reiterate the concluding remark of the Free Press: "Is there no such thing as individual responsibility?" The question as to whether the wages received by this particular girl was sufficient to clothe her, depends a great deal upon the kind of clothes the girl thought necessary for her covering.

If she is the average Canadian young lady, she is certainly not too economical in the cost of her garments, however parsimonious she may be in the cutting of the material.

Fine feathers make fine birds, and very expensive birds, too. When the birds have to buy their own feathers and keep up with the New York or Paris plumage they naturally find their wages very small and insufficient for the necessities which maintain the bird itself.

Excess, we had almost said intoxication in personal adornment, is too often the cause of girls going astray. No self-respecting girl who is not caught in the whirl of fashion would forfeit her character even for food. The truth is that when a girl is put to the test of a small wage she is more thrifty and sober-minded than one who has more money than she requires to sustain herself decently.

WHOM SHALL WE PLEASE?

"Despatches received from Berlin indicate that Lord Haldane's address in Montreal has been received here not entirely favorably.

"The German press seems to be under the impression that Lord Haldane has made the journey as a political emissary. Several journals describe his speech as a shrewd bid by the present British Government for American and Canadian friendship."

So the British Government have no right to Canadian friendship. Why Germany should be jealous, supposing Lord Haldane did come as an emissary, is a question worthy of the consideration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party.

It has been long since evident, from the comments of the German press on the rejection of the Naval Bill, that Germany is keeping a jealous eye upon the relation between Great Britain and Canada, and nothing would please the Fatherland more than that the Dominion should make light of her Imperial connections.

Why this should be so, we repeat, is an interesting problem. No doubt the Globe will oblige with a lengthy and verbose disquisition in which its Liberal readers will become enveloped as in a fog, and consequently be unable to see anything in it but a German "emergency" scare. Canada has nothing to fear from emissaries, and if it come to a matter of pleasing one nation or another every true Canadian knows in which direction his duty and fealty lies.

"Thaw's Time Limited" is the title of an editorial in a Hamilton paper. At first glance it looked liked the name of a new Company.

Harry Thaw is to be deported as an "undesirable alien." That is letting him down lightly too. When he gets over the line he will cease to be an alien, but he will still be "undesirable."

General Felix Diaz of Mexico, is reported to have started for Germany where it is said he intends to remain for some time. The German navy may yet find something useful to do.

EXCERPTS

A Girl's Coolness.

A girl of eleven, by her courageous coolness and presence of mind, was the medium of saving the life of a laboring man at Castlelyons, County Cork, Ireland. It appears that the laborer, named Daniel Linehan, in the employment of Mr. David Fouhy, Rathbarry, Castlelyons, was driving in some cows from the farm, when a bull belonging to Mr Fouhy, which he had purchased a day previously, suddenly attacked and felled him to the ground just outside the yard gate. The bull was fiercely mauling Linehan when his cries for help attracted the attention of Jennie Watson, who immediately took in the dreadful predicament in which the man lay, and without a moment's hesitation took up the handle of a shovel lying near her and went to the man's assistance. She struck the infuriated animal on the forehead with the shovel handle, and this momentarily dissuaded him from the object of his attack.

Vanished Thousands.

The Paris police are in search of a fortune of £112,000 which has vanished completely, its puzzling disappearance causing no little concern to the heir to the estate.

The money belong to a wealthy lady of British nationality, who died in Paris two years ago after having spent the greater part of her life in France. She married a wealthy dentist who, when he died, left her all his fortune. After the wife's death, in 1911, her only son laid claim to the estate, but in spite of a complete inventory of her belongings, which had been made by the authorities at the time of her death, no trace of the money could be found.

It is believed that, in a fit of eccentricity, she hid the money, and died before being able to divulge its hiding place.

With the Bucket.

"If you take on that man without a reference," said the mate of the Saucy Sally, to the captain, "you'll be sorry for it."

"Nonsense!" retorted the captain. "I like the look of him. He's going to sign on with me."

"Mark my words, you'll be sorry," declared the mate, when the seaman had signed on, "you'll be sorry."

"Didn't I tell you you'd be sorry about that seaman?" he inquired some days afterwards.

"What's the matter?" said the captain.

"I said he wasn't honest."

"What's he done now?"

"Done? Why, he's gone overboard and taken your bucket and mop with him. I told you you'd be sorry!"

A Huge Crab.

A crab weighing 35 lbs., which proves excellent eating, was reported by the lighthouse keepers at the Caskets Lighthouse, as found hanging out of a crab pot. The shell is being sent to a museum.

RAGPICKERS OF PARIS.

Uncanny Spectres Who Grow Rich on the Sweepings of the Town.

Visitors to Paris a generation ago will remember those strange figures groping their way along the dark streets of the city long before daybreak. They crept along stealthily, with a stooping gait, and stopped now and then to examine the heaps of debris that lay in the gutter and the boxes placed outside the doors filled with unsavory household refuse ready for the town scavengers, to cart away in the early morning. They were armed for their curious trade, these industrious nightbirds, with a short stick ending in an iron spike, which was continually thrust into the rubbish heaps and then raised to the wicker basket, which they carried on their backs, and into which some castaway object, such as rags and soiled linen and even paper, was dropped with a mechanical wave of the arm.

It used to be a curiosity of Paris to watch these uncanny figures intent on gaining their living with the sweepings of the town. When returning home on cold winter nights late revellers could see the faint glimmer of the little lamps with which the Paris "chiffonniers" were wont to examine and select their wares on their slow and monotonous tramp through the silent and deserted streets. But the old "chiffonnier," or maybe "chiffonnière," of former days is gone for ever.

Their modern counterparts no longer wander like specters for former times, but drive in their own carts to their field of operations, or their own allotted quarter. The modern ragpickers of Paris work their separate districts by mutual agreement, like the dogs that used to scavenger in the streets of Constantinople without intruding on each other's rights.

In the morning these "chiffonniers'" carts return to the suburbs outside Paris, laden with the spoils of the night. In the piled-up sacks the drowsy ragpickers, men and women, are dozing, while one of them acts as driver. These people dwell chiefly in groups or colonies, a few miles from the city walls. They are frequently owners of their queer tumble-down dwellings and adjacent yards, heaped up with the most miscellaneous collection of articles imaginable. Here the real work of the trade begins, that of sorting.

Many of these ragpickers, inhabiting the most dilapidated old shacks, are rich—one old man is believed to possess $300,000, in paper and coins, hidden away in some corner of his strange old abode.

To start things coming your way go after them.

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

Fitch laughed aloud at the consternation in the faces of the two detectives. It was manifest both Donnelly and Carson were so far from the facts in the mystery that not only had neither of them dreamed of making a prisoner of Griswold, that suave society man who had volunteered so much assistance to them in their efforts to weave a web of circumstantial evidence against Elinor Holcomb, but that they were absolutely ignorant of the existence of such a person as Millicent Delaroche. They shuffled their feet with increasing nervousness as they felt the eyes of their chief upon them. Donnelly shot a glance of ill-suppressed hatred at Britz as the lieutenant, at ease in his revolving chair, faced the crestfallen detectives with a satirical smile.

Once or twice Donnelly essayed to speak, but each time he caught the expression on the faces of the Chief and Britz, and the words died in his throat. Nothing remained save for the two brilliant crime-hunters to carry out the lieutenant's orders. As they turned to go their discomfiture was augmented by the real detective's mock solicitude.

"You'll find it an easy job, boys. Just ask the two of them to come down here quietly, and if they don't want to come, make 'em. Show them your shields, you know, and all that sort of thing."

As Donnelly and Carson crossed the threshold on their way out, they fairly snorted with exasperation.

When they had gone, Britz indulged his amusement to the extent of a laugh; Fitch joined him, and Manning, after a brief attempt to keep his face straight, also laughed heartily.

CHAPTER XXV
The Attack on the Yacht

Britz, Manning and Fitch walked briskly around the corner and boarded at Bleecker Street a subway train. At Fourteenth Street they caught the first uptown Van Cortlandt express of the morning, and they made good time to Two Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. There they left the train, and walked quickly along the edge of a grassy bluff overlooking the government cut that now connects the Harlem and Hudson rivers by a more direct route than the old Spuyten Duyvil creek. A few hundred yards beyond the low fence that separates the meadow from the street they came upon a man standing close behind a large tree. He was screened from the little street and from the bridge that spans it by thick underbrush. When he sighted Britz he lifted his hand warningly and beckoned. The three men went within the shelter of the bush.

"Anything new, Gordon?" inquired Britz.

"Yes," said the other detective. "They have gone aboard."

"Where's Hicks?"

"Down there near the water, piping them off."

"Are they on deck?"

"No, in the cabin; they seem pretty busy, too."

Gordon looked at the sky. It was growing brighter every minute.

"Their lights are burning still, but you can't see them from here."

"How many?"

"Four," said his assistant.

"Think they've got the loot?"

"Sure of it; the way they acted was enough to tell me that. They slipped along as if they expected someone to pounce on them any minute."

"We'd better get busy," said Britz to Manning. "How about you, doctor? Ready for a scrap?"

"Ready for anything!" the doctor rejoined. At the thought of Elinor, he would attack singlehanded almost any odds.

"There are five of us," Britz explained, "and only four of them. Guess we can finish anything we start."

Manning nodded. "Easy is the word," said Gordon. "They were busy in the cabin a while ago, but they may have a lookout on deck by this time, though I think Hicks would have got word to me."

Stepping with most solicitous tenderness on the grass, and avoiding every leaf and twig that might give forth a slight crackle, the four men made their way slowly among the bushes to the spot where Hicks, lying at full length with his head only a little way above the ground, was waiting and, at the same time, watching a naphtha yacht of more than ordinary size. Not a sound broke the silence of the early morning. The ground was bare of snow, the grass almost as green as in late summer, and only the chill in the air and the nakedness of the trees indicated the winter season. The sun was just rimming the far shore of the sound. A pioneer ray gilded the Spuyten Duyvil headland, caroming thither from the crest of Marble Hill.

Fitch, waiting the signal for action, stole a moment from the business in hand for an appreciative glance at the beauty of the scene—one with which few New Yorkers are familiar. The water rippled freely in the cut. The yacht was almost motionless, rising gently at long intervals as wind gusts from the Palisades ruffled the surface of the strait. Far to the west, he glimpsed the Hudson's stately stream. Then he turned his eyes again to Britz, who was in command of the little expedition. After a whispered conference with Hicks, Britz slipped his hand into a side pocket of his coat, and took out something that glittered in the sunshine. At a single word from Britz, Gordon and Hicks wormed their way along the bank until they were at the bow of the yacht. Britz, Fitch, and Manning stayed near the stern. Suddenly the lieutenant fired a shot over the yacht that echoed metallically from the cliffs, and at the signal, all five of the attacking party leaped aboard the yacht, their feet striking the polished deck with a concerted thud that must have made those within the cabin think they were feeling the first shock of a landslide.

The five men on the deck gave those below little time for analysis of their sensations. Gordon and Hicks raced around the wheelhouse to the starboard side of the craft, and dashed down the companionway from that direction, while Britz, Manning, and Fitch hurled themselves into the port entrance to the cabin, alighting on a richly carpeted floor a dozen feet below the deck. Two shots followed before the police party could seize Prince Kananda and Ali, who, facing in opposite directions, stood at bay in the center of the cabin. Britz and Gordon struck upward the revolvers of the Indians as the triggers were pulled. The bullets flew high, harming no one. Behind Kananda and Ali, using a table as a breastwork, stood two more Hindoos, both of them strangers to Britz. They were unarmed save for wicked looking Malay krises they gripped nervously as they crouched in waiting for an attack. Britz and Manning jammed their pistols into the faces of the men with the krises; but the Indians, undismayed, made savage slashes at them with their razor-edged long knives. Gordon and Fitch sprang upon the kris-bearers, Hicks with a pistol in each hand standing off Kananda and Ali. Again and again the Hindoos slashed at their assailants, and that they did not split at least one head was due to the wary agility of the four who attacked them. Shots from the detective's revolvers would have brought them down at such short range, of course; but the policemen seemed bent on capturing them alive, and Fitch was not a man to have recourse to bloodshed until he could be certain it was inevitable. Britz and Manning waited their chance. After futile swings at the Indians, they closed with them, clubbing their revolvers and bringing them down with crashing force on the gaudy turbans of the Orientals. A few seconds of that vicious pounding stunned the Hindoos, and it was then but the work of a moment to slip handcuffs on them. Kananda and Ali, in the meanwhile, had made no further attempts to use their pistols. They read death in Hick's eyes as he confronted them with his long, blue gleaming barrels aimed straight at them. Their hesitation was fatal to their hope of escape. For even as Ali, doubtless at a whisper or signal from the Prince, swung himself about to interpose himself between Hicks and the petty potentate's son, while Kananda turned for a dash to the deck, Britz, Fitch, and Manning, leaving Gordon in charge of the captured Indians, surrounded the other two and disarmed them. Breathing heavily from the short but sharp struggle, the captors marched their prisoners to the far end of the cabin and seated themselves between the Hindoos and the doors. They were still on the alert to prevent an attempt to escape on the part of Kananda or Ali. The other two Indians being handcuffed, it was less likely they would make a spurt for liberty, but the policemen took no chances.

"Now, Mr. Kananda," said Britz to the Prince cheerily, "I reckon we'll have those diamonds."

Kananda eyed him with a snaky malignity. Fitch could not account for the little shudder that ran through him until he remembered the gleam of the cobra's eyes. There was the same look of frozen death in the glance of the Oriental kinglet.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to explain," parried the Prince with his most blase Cambridge manner.

"Explain nothing!" shouted Britz. "I've fenced with you fellows long enough. We've caught you now and we want the goods."

All his customary self-control vanished at the sight of faces like those that had grinned at him from the interior of the cab as he rode, head down, at top speed up Riverside Drive.

"I haven't the slightest idea what you mean," Kananda persisted. "Your demand is inexplicable to me, as is this unwarranted invasion of a private yacht. What are you? Government agents or river pirates?"

"Neither," answered Britz, "as you very well know, Mr. Kananda. You may be a prince in your own country or you may be a piker. Here you are just a common burglar, or, at best, a receiver of stolen goods. You, or one of your men, broke into a lady's apartment in the Hotel Renaissance, and stole a diamond necklace."

A sneering laugh was Kananda's only reply. Ali glowered at the detective, and the handcuffed Hindoos glared as if, despite their shackles at a word from their leader they would hurl themselves at the lieutenant's throat. Britz noted the menace in their looks and scoffed at them.

"You're not at a necktie party now," he said, "and it's a good thing for you, or you might find that somebody else knows how to tie four-in-hands. Fortunately for you, we do not adopt your sneaking Eastern methods. When we fight, it's on the level and in the open. You're just a bunch of second-story men, and a pretty cheap bunch at that, Prince! Oh, cut it out!"

Manning smiled at the lieutenant's wrath, while Gordon and Hicks listened wonderingly. Fitch was too much engrossed in his anxiety to see the Missioner jewels recovered to perceive any comedy in the situation. His hands gripped each other as he leaned forward from his chair waiting for the information sought from the Prince.

"When you have amused yourself sufficiently," said Kananda with an unabated show of scorn, "possibly you will be kind enough to restore our property, release my companions and take yourselves off. If this is a drunken frolic, I would suggest that all five of you seem to be rather beyond the undergraduate age."

"You'll find it's no joke, my dark friend," Britz rejoined. "The sooner you hand over those diamonds you stole, the better it will be for you. You'll do your bit up the river for this, anyhow, but there's no use getting extra time for resisting the police."

"Police, eh?"

"Yes, police!" Britz, contrary to the custom of professional sleuths, did not throw back his coat and show a shining shield. He contented himself with the simple assertion, and left it to the man he was addressing to accept or reject it as he liked. What mattered it? The thieves were caught.

AMBUSH FAILED.

British Tories Tried Hard to Get Snap Division.

The present Parliamentary session in Britain is like a strong man dying, says a London political writer. When long months of incessant work, the approach of the holidays and the mid-summer heat seem to have exhausted its vitality, it suddenly springs into fierce life again. A few days ago, for example, it was full of exciting and dramatic incidents. The most exciting and dramatic of these incidents, of course, was the tremendous preparation of the Tories for a snap division and the triumphant defeat of this perilous and skilful manœuvre by the combined forces of the Liberals and the Irish.

Never in the history of this Parliament have the Tories shown such resource, such party loyalty and party skill. They accounted for every member of their party except five, and they conducted the debate which was to end in a snap division with laborious dalliance. Their benches remained empty and their men did not make an appearance in the House of Commons until a few seconds before the fateful division.

Even after their arrival in the House the ambuscade was concealed by their men hiding themselves in portions of the Parliament Buildings where they could not be seen, five taking refuge in one of the bathrooms of the House of Commons. But somehow or other information of the coming coup reached the Irish some hours before, and assured of the coming victory, the Irish members could not refrain from publicly exulting. Many of them left the House of Commons, watching the long stream of motor cabs which brought up the Tories, and received them with jeering cheers. It was an Irish member also who discovered the five Tories who had concealed themselves in the bathroom.

The division took place amid a scene of tensest excitement and when the majority of the Home Rulers was announced, there was a cyclone of cheers from the Liberal and Irish benches and there was a lively exchange of epithets not always complimentary between the Irish and the Tories, which at one time threatened trouble.

Nearly all the Orangemen returned from Ulster to take part in what was hoped to be a defeat of the Ministry and Home Rule, and it is rumored that Carson had remained awake in a hotel in Belfast to receive the news of the joyful relief and to announce it to the Orangemen.

Maddened by such a victory, the London Tory papers attribute the victory to Irish vigilance to an exaggerated degree, and publish fantastic stories such as that the Irish party employs a large number of detectives to trace all the movements of the Tory members. Some Irishmen fooled these English Tories to the top of their bent and gravely declared they are now employing female as well as male detectives.

Needless to say, there is no truth in these wild stories, but it is true that the Irishmen are attending Parliament with extraordinary fidelity, and serve as a splendid example to all other sections of Ministerial supporters by their loyalty, determination, and self sacrifice.

Meantime that broadening of the political issue which came with Lord Lansdowne and Lord Curzon's arrogant speeches in the House of Lords when it was rejecting the Irish bill, is broadening more every day. Englishmen now realize that at this moment English and Irish liberties equally are imperiled by those insolent claims of the still untaught and unteachable House of Lords. Already it is evident that an immense impulse was given by these events for a fierce campaign against any further toleration of existence of the House of Lords.

Their Own Letters Home Convict Them of Atrocities

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 5.—In order to prove that Greek soldiers were responsible for a number of atrocities against the Bulgarians in the fighting last July between Bulgaria and her former allies, Greece, Servia, and Montenegro, there has been made public in Sofia extracts from letters written by Greek soliders and officers to friends at home. These letters were captured in a mail bag of the 19th Regiment of the 7th Greek division by Bulgarian troops in the vicinity of Razlog. They have been given out by the Bulgarian telegraphic agency in pamphlet form. Each letter is printed in fac simile of the original Greek, followed by a translation in French, which gives the dates and the names signed to each communication.

The first letter in the pamphlet is dated July 11 and the last July 15. Extracts from some of these communications of Greek soldiers and officers follow:

"We have burned all the villages abandoned by the Bulgarians. They burned the Greek villages and we the Bulgarian villages. They massacre, we massacre, and the Manlicher has operated against every member of this dishonest nation who has fallen into our hands. Out of 1,200 prisoners that we took at Nigrita only 41 remained in prison, and everywhere we went we have left no root of this race."

Another letter from a sergeant says:

"We burned the two villages of Doutlli and Bandtza, and put everything to the bayonet or the flame making exception only of women, children and old people and churches. We did all this without pity and without grace."

A third letter, dated Nesto River, July 12, says:

"Here at Vrondon, I captured five Bulgarians and a girl from Serres. We shut them up in a police station. The girl was killed. But the Bulgarians also suffered. While they were still alive we gouged out their eyes." This letter is signed Sosti.

MRS. PANKHURST COMING.

Militant Leader Will Sail For New York After Rest Cure.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—On finishing her rest cure in France, Mrs. Pankhurst will sail for New York, it is reported here, intending to wage a woman suffrage campaign in the United States with special reference to the white slave traffic. Miss Jean Wickham, a special organizer of the Woman's Social and Political Union, will leave for New York next Wednesday to organize the campaign.

Mrs. Pankhurst will speak at meetings in Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other great cities.

She plans to return to London in time for the reopening of Parliament and speak to an Albert Hall demonstration of her followers on the eve of the new session, when she will outline her new campaign.

In the meantime it is understood the truce is to be adhered to.

There is no foundation for the statement that Miss Christabel Pankhurst will quit her safe retreat in Paris to direct the militant movement in England in place of her mother.

THAW CANNOT CONTINUE HIS JOURNEY AS A "TOURIST"

On Two of the Charges Now Being Heard Before the Immigration Officials Escaped Asylum Inmate Can Be Taken to the Vermont Line.

COATICOOKE, Que., Sept. 5.—Harry K. Thaw was not "railroaded" across the border by the immigration authorities yesterday as his counsel had predicted. A special board of inquiry sat on his case from ten o'clock in the morning until nearly 5.30 in the afternoon, then adjourned until half-past nine o'clock this morning when the prisoner will be recalled. Thaw was on the stand most of the day and made a good witness. Toward the close of the afternoon session, his inquisitors gradually worked into the question of his sanity, and though his counsel violently objected it was of no avail and this line of interrogation will be taken up again to-day.

Though staving off deportation for the day, Thaw lost in two particulars. His lawyers were denied a writ of prohibition by Superior Judge Matthew Hutchinson at Sherbrooke, the same judge who sustained the writ of habeas corpus which cast Thaw out of the Sherbrooke jail and he failed to establish before the board the contention that he had entered Canada as a tourist and, like "Jack Johnson" should be allowed to continue to his destination. He could produce no through ticket to any point outside Canada. There was in his possession a ticket to Detroit, but unfortunately for Thaw, it had been purchased at Coaticooke.

Unable to show that he had come into the Dominion at any recognized port of entry, Thaw was practically convicted of entering by stealth, and on this charge alone he can be deported. But on this charge he could appeal to the Minister of the Interior, while no appeal would lie should he be found insane at this time or to having been in an insane asylum within the past five years. If found to be insane now it is within the jurisdiction of the board to deport Thaw direct to the New York State line. Conviction on either of the other two charges would mean deportation to Vermont.

BIG CROP CERTAIN.

Grain Yield Will Exceed 1912 by Several Million Bushels.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 5.—"The total grain crop of Saskatchewan, which is now practically assured, promises to exceed that of 1912 by several million bushels," says Hon. W. E. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture.

"The crop will be of an unusually high grade, and if frost keeps off for the balance of the season Saskatchewan will have every reason to be well satisfied with the results of the year's operations. To reap a bountiful harvest in a season in the early months of which the outlook seemed far from promising, is exceptionally gratifying.

"Two-thirds of the Saskatchewan crop is now cut, and it is all in first-class condition. The balance will be harvested as fast as binders can be made to work and this uncut grain is in good condition. In many districts cutting operations have been completed, and where the grain has been later in maturing from 40 to 50 per cent, has been harvested."

Parliamentary Counsel.

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—The appointment of Francis H. Gisborne, K.C., assistant deputy Minister of Justice, to the newly-created position of Parliamentary counsel may be anticipated very shortly. He has been selected for the position. Mr. Gisborne will head the law branch of the House of Commons. A. H. O'Brien, former law clerk of the House, is transferred to the Justice Department.

TWO ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

Woodstock Prisoners Took Advantage of Sick List Privileges.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 5.—Two prisoners, William Klue, who was sentenced here on Aug. 8 to six months in jail for vagrancy, and who was also sent up for trial on a larceny charge, and Albert Bernard, a colored youth of about 26 years, who was sentenced on July 29 to one year in the Central Prison for larceny, escaped from the local jail early yesterday morning and are still at large.

The two men were both on the sick list, Bernard suffering from epilepsy and Klue from tonsilitis, and accordingly were allowed special privileges. They gained access to the south yard and used a long, narrow table, placed against the wall, to climb over and gain their freedom.

Editor Is Arrested.

HAMILTON, Sept. 5.—R. H. Rogers, editor of Jack Canuck, a weekly paper published in Toronto, was arrested here shortly before midnight on a warrant charging him with defamatory libel. The complainant is Hugh McReynolds of the Hamilton and Interurban Railway Co. In the current issue of his paper Rogers has an article reflecting on the company, and as soon as a paper reached Hamilton yesterday afternoon a warrant was sworn out for the editor's arrest. He was in Hamilton as a witness in the investigation into the affairs of the city hospital, and is to be called to the stand to-day.

PLEBISCITE UNLIKELY.

Dominion Wide Referendum Plan Is Dropped by Alliance.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—In spite of its evident approval of such a course on Wednesday the Dominion Council of the Alliance decided yesterday not to inaugurate any extreme tactics for placing Canada under prohibition.

The reports that the alliance would promote another Dominion plebiscite were given a quietus by such a suggestion not being even mentioned in any of the resolutions or requests.

On the recommendation of the committee on legislation the following declaration was adopted:

"That in the face of the conditions confronting our Dominion, created by the tremendous tide of immigration pouring in amongst us from the countries where the liquor traffic is not so effectually curbed as here, and realizing that the importance of cultivating the highest form of society, if we are to build a great democracy, we deem it all-important that every effort should be made to secure at the earliest possible date the enactment of a Dominion prohibition law of the amplest character."

The most advanced action taken was the reference to the executive of a suggestion that the Dominion Parliament next session be asked to pass a resolution in favor of prohibition. It is improbable that this action will be taken.

The executive was authorized to endeavor to reorganize an advisory committee at Ottawa of members of Parliament favorable to prohibition. This would be a revival of method followed a number of years ago, but which lapsed when prohibition activity was transferred to provincial spheres.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, J. R. Dougall, Montreal; president, F. R. Spence, Toronto; treasurer, W. H. Orr, Toronto; recording secretary, J. H. Carson, Montreal; corresponding secretary, D. A. McDermid, Toronto.

CONSTRUCTION FAULT.

Trust Company's Inspector Says Stone Wall Wasn't Well Built.

PETERBORO, Sept. 5.—Evidence brought forward in the council chamber last night at the resumption of Coroner Greer's inquest following the collapse of the J. C. Turnbull departmental store on Aug. 26, in which five lives were lost, tended to show that the disaster was the outcome of faulty constuction work when the original structure was erected about 50 years ago. William Langford who inspected the building while alterations were in progress as a representative of the Trust & Loan Co., the owners, said it appeared to him that the central wall had not been carefully built and that the defect undoubtedly led to the collapse. Other statements of a confirmatory character were given and the investigation adjourned until Sept. 16.

Specially would we mention the weave known as Chinchilla, and the new Brocaded Stuffs.

The former, with its rubbed or tufted surface, is particularly suited for outer garments of every description, and is to be obtained in many pleasing shades.

The fancy Brocades—more in vogue than ever, are woven in light, medium or heavy weights—the attractive patterns standing out in bold relief, which is the special feature of Brocades.

And side by side with these fabrics is a host of tweeds, diagonals, cords, velvets, silks, etc., presenting a wide and varied field of choice to the prospective buyer.

MR. BURNHAM, M.P., WRITES LETTER TO THE SENTINEL

We have been requested by Mr. Burnham to publish the following letter written by him to the Orange Sentinel:

Editor Sentinel.—In my letter of last week to you in reply to the statement of Mr. Livingstone, I showed that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the session of 1911-12 had supported the Beland amendment to the third reading of the Borden Bill for extending Manitoba's boundaries, and I quoted that amendment, which was as follows:—

"That this House is of opinion that Negotiations should be reopened with the Government of Manitoba in order to define by amicable conference the status of minorities, either Catholic or Protestant, with regard to education, in the light of existing laws, in the annexed territory."

This, I presume makes it quite clear that notwithstanding Sir Wilfrid's professions of 1896 of respect for Manitoba's autonomy he was quite willing to disregard it in 1911-12, and for what purpose? He voted against Mr. Mondou's amendment to the Borden motion, which, if he had supported it, would have left him in the awakened predicament of having followed the lead of another. Hence it was necessary for him to put up an amendment of his own and one equally strong. He was fairly trapped and had to show his hand. I think it will be acknowledged.

But what I wish particularly to speak of in the letter is the attitude from 1896 onwards of Sir Wilfrid towards Manitoba, and I will support my remarks by quotations from the revised Hansard. On page 1960 (1911-12 session) Vol. 3, Sir Wilfrid says respecting the 'settlement' which he made in 1896 which has deceived so many, and which is of great interest to-day in view of the present legislation of the Manitoba Government:

"The settlement that we made with the Government of Mr. Greenway at that time was that wherever in any school in a town or city there was an average attendance of 40 children of the Roman Catholic faith they would have a right to have a teacher of their own persuasion. In rural districts wherever there was an average attendance of 25 children they would have the right to obtain from the trustees a teacher of their own persuasion and a right at certain times and under certain conditions to be determined by the trustees to have religious education in the schools. Children speaking the French language would have the right to receive their instruction in French. That was the tenor of the settlement we made with Manitoba."

These are Sir Wilfrid's own words. What more need be said on that point?

In 1896 Mr. Greenway was in power. When Sir Wilfrid was "invited" Sir Mackenzie Bowell was found to be making a threat. At that time Sir Wilfrid was too long-headed for the Conservative party, but "times is changed." He must show his hand now where formerly he kept it in his sleeve.

When the Beland amendment was put up in 1911-12 and supported by Sir Wilfrid a different aspect of affairs presented itself.

The Opposition in the debate on that amendment proposed to penalize Manitoba unless the Catholic or Protestant religious rights of the minority were "protected." As in Sir Wilfrid's "statement" of 1896-5 what excuse can there be for such action? There was no "judgment of the Privy Council" to argue over. There was no case before the courts with a judgment that could be read a half dozen ways to fight about. His action was gratuitous and bold attempt to upset provincial rights and the public school system for all time. It was the most extraordinary act of inconsistency and political wrong-doing ever perpetrated by a statesman of repute in Canada.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—A suit in equity to obtain from the federal court an injunction under the Sherman law against the so-called "jewelry combine" to curb the activities of the middleman or jobber, was prepared for filing yesterday by U. ## UNSANITARY CONDITIONS

Inspector Reports on Sanitation of Elm Street Houses

The Sanitary Inspector yesterday completed an inspection of Elm-st. residences and is much dissatisfied with the unsanitary conditions existing in this neighborhood. There is no sewer on this street, which aggravates the unsanitary features. A number of houses are unfit for habitation and instructions have been issued to the owners to have necessary work done, which if ignored will result in the houses being condemned. In justice to the Italians a number of whom live in this section it should be stated that the inspector found them on the whole as clean and sanitary as circumstances would permit.

After the minister has preached his congregation to sleep the sermon is followed by a religious awakening.

"M.P.'s—You May Smoke!"

During the proceedings of the House of Commons Grand Committee considering the Scottish Mental Deficiency Bill it was observed that Mr. C. E. Price, the Radical member for Central Edinburgh, was smoking a cigar, and the views of the chairman, Mr. Arthur Henderson, Labor member for the Barnard Castle division of Durham, were invited. He said that although in two cases chairmen of Grand Committees had ruled against smoking, as they had assembled that day at 11 o'clock after an arduous sitting, and were conducting their business so admirably he did not feel disposed to prohibit the smoking unless his attention was pointedly called to it. After this, of course, other M.P.'s soon took advantage of the opportunity to smoke. This is the first time smoking has been permitted in a Grand Committee, although it frequently takes place at private sittings of Select Committees when the public are not present.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

Betty's Idea and the Result of the Experiment.

By SUSIE B. WIGHT.

"Now, Tom, dear," said little Mrs. Ellis, handing him a cup of coffee, "I have something serious to say to you."

"Yes?" Mr. Ellis' tone was notably absentminded. He was looking at the alluring curve of her soft white arm. She had the cunningest way of giving her big sleeves a twitch to keep them out of the way as she passed anything at table, and this morning the sleeve was a great silken one embroidered with Japanese iris. However, for her own good her husband had not told her all her attractions for him. Not knowing his train of thought she observed only the preoccupation in his tone. This confirmed her in the wisdom of her determination, but it also gave her a queer little disposition to let down the corners of her mouth.

"Well, it is only this, Tom," she proceeded, her eyes studiously avoiding his. Preoccupation in his tone was bad enough; to recognize it in his eyes would be intolerable. "You see, we have been staying so closely together since the wedding, now three whole months. Aren't you just a little afraid we are overdoing the devoted? When I see so many married couples who are just as happy away from each other, or more so, I dread the time"— Her lips quivered, but this time Mr. Ellis was giving his attention to the smooth whiteness of her neck. He did not answer, and in a moment she went on in a steadier voice, "You remember the 'ounce of prevention,' dear?"

"Worth a pound of medicine, isn't it?" he replied frivolously, and when she proceeded gravely her voice had shaded down to actual wistfulness.

"For fear, Tom, that our happiness should lose some of its tone in such constant association as ours I have been thinking that maybe it would be better not to see each other quite so often. I couldn't bear to see that you were growing tired of me"—

"Her infinite variety," he began to quote, but she interrupted him with a lift of the kimono clad arm that set his thoughts adrift again. "We must consider the subject seriously, dear," she said softly and plaintively. "Suppose we plan deliberately to keep new to each other by taking some of our pleasures away from each other."

"Goodness, Betty!" he exclaimed. "I thought we married in order to enjoy ourselves together."

"We did, but see how people get after a few years! The Thomases, now, for instance—how different they are! And yet I am old enough to remember that they were perfectly selfish together at first. There are the Ripleys too. They are congenial and apparently the best of friends, but Mrs. Ripley doesn't seem to mind at all that her husband spends the greater part of his time away from her. It is only that I dread such a phase in our life."

He looked at her in surprise. Who would have thought her capable of such serious consideration of a life problem, this pretty creature of sunshine and smiles? Just then a thought popped into his mind. Suppose she were already getting tired—just a little bored with him. It would be like her to contrive some tactful way of telling him. And then Betty had been a belle; there had been a score of fellows dancing attendance upon her even up to the very day of the wedding. Perhaps she was feeling dull, and no wonder, with such a poor stick as he as her only companion, even if she did love him as she professed. He pondered a few moments, making a great sacrifice, while trivially engaged in sipping his fragrant breakfast coffee. When he spoke his tone was cheerful.

"Well, Betty, darling," he remarked, "that had not occurred to me until you spoke, but you are right. There is danger of overdoing the devoted, and we mustn't get tired of each other—we just must not! I have not been to the club—not since the wedding. I will go there to dinner this evening, and you must accept one of your numerous invitations. You have Dolly to go with you and I will send a carriage to be at your disposal for the evening."

"Yes," acquiesced Betty in a small voice, keeping her eyes upon her plate. She had not expected her ideas to be adopted with so little protest, and it was not cheering to find herself so correct in her forethought.

He looked at her sharply for a moment, then came over to her side of the table and kissed her goodby most affectionately. She longed to tell him that it would seem like a month for him to be gone until late that evening before she should see him again, but no—if he was already feeling the pull of the silken chain that bound them together she must not let him know that she was aware of it. She sprang merrily up, went with him to the door, chattering about this and that, as though her every thought was not of the evening that was going to be so lonely without him. When he turned back at the corner for a last look the wave of her small hand was positively hilarious.

The day crept by. At first her impulse was to remain quietly at home for the evening, but he was going to the club, and she must not be behind him in carrying out the plan.

She accepted Mrs. Ripley's invitation to hear Nordica with her. In the afternoon she dressed and went to a tea, wasted some hours over a visit to her dressmaker, and when evening finally came she arrayed herself for the sacrifice. It was no fun at all to fluff out her golden hair when there was no one there but Dolly to remark upon the effect, and then Dolly was painfully matter of fact. She would wear the violet silk with the yellow lace cascades, even if there was nobody there to tell her it was the prettiest dress that ever a pretty woman wore. It was a sort of solemn satisfaction to be making herself lovely without the encouragement of an admirer sitting over in that big chair, his knee over the arm and a cigar in his mouth, but at the mental picture she smothered an irrelevant sob. Dolly looked at her acutely.

"I—believe I am about to take cold," faltered the little mistress mendaciously. "My throat feels so queer."

When she entered the box and threw her great white cloak in a luxurious heap in the chair behind her Mrs. Ripley glanced over her with a look of decided approval.

"You were never prettier, Betty," she whispered, "and then it is so sensible of you not to be foolish about having Tom Ellis dangling after you everywhere you go."

"That is what we agreed only this morning," said Betty in a burst of confidence, and then she grew suddenly silent.

Her eyes, sweeping the crowded house, had fallen upon Tom Ellis in a group of men down near the footlights. As the moments went on she began to feel aggrieved that he did not even glance toward the Ripley box, although he surely had known of the invitation. She was glad when the music began because her throat still had that queer feeling, and her lips wanted to tremble. Nordica's superb presence and her singing failed for the first time to absorb Betty's attention. She would not look again at that group down near the stage, but she could not keep from seeing them in her mind's eye. She was glad there were others in the box who felt like talking. She did not want Mrs. Ripley to regard her too closely after the drop of the curtain. The hum of conversation began in a moment, and she half turned toward those near her, seeming to listen, although she heard not a word. Still she would not look below her.

"Boo!" came a frivolous exclamation at her shoulder, and she started violently. The rich blood surged into her face. She did not need to see whose hand was resting on her arm.

"Why, Betty Ellis," cried one gay voice, "you don't mean to tell me you are actually blushing over Tom; you ancient married woman, you! The blushes are for the buds."

"Then they are for Betty," said Tom gallantly. "What rosebud ever looked sweeter than she does this minute?"

"Tom!" she remonstrated, and he laughed and sat down beside her.

When the others were absorbed in themselves again he whispered to her: "Forgive me, Betty, if I bored you by coming. I just couldn't help it. I had forgotten all about the Ripley invitation until I saw you in the box. I came along just to be doing something."

"Don't," she begged, and the eyes that were lifted to his were full of tears. He covered her hand a moment with his and waited; then, when she had slyly wiped the moisture from her lids and had swallowed that troublesome lump, she whispered: "I was just mistaken after all. I don't believe in preventive measures like this. We are not tired yet. Let's just wait until we are."

"Done, Betty!" he agreed rapturously. "You are so sensible."

"Sensible!" interrupted Mrs. Ripley, turning quickly at the word, which had drifted to her ears. "Isn't she so, Tom? I was just telling her a little while ago that she was most remarkably so."

The two accepted the unmerited praise unblushingly and looked at each other with a happy laugh.

HURRY up with a bottle of Kuntz's Old German," said the man from New York. "It's worth a trip to Canada to get a drink of this corking brew. Anyway, you Canadians ought to feel proud of Kuntz's for brewing such a superb beverage. And I guess you are from the number I see drinking Kuntz's Old German.

Charms of a Soldier's Life.

The inducements England once held out to suitable men to join the ranks of the light dragoons, as given in the following passage taken from the London Times of Sept. 25, 1801, were certainly strong. Those willing to join are informed that they "will be mounted on the finest horses in the world, with superb clothing and the richest accouterments. Your pay and privileges are equal to 2 guineas a week. You are everywhere respected. Your society is courted. You are admired by the fair, which, together with the chance of getting switched to a buxom widow or brushing with a rich heiress, renders the situation truly enviable and desirable. Young men out of employment or otherwise uncomfortable. 'There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.' Nick it and instantly apply to the above."

Long Lived Dancers.

Louis XIV., who granted L'Academie de Danse of Paris its charter, strongly advocated dancing, for he considered it an aid to develop dexterity and deportment and adapt men for a warlike career. It would be somewhat exacting today to require recruits to take dancing lessons, but dancing seems to produce longevity, judging from the long life enjoyed by many of the aristocracy of the profession.

Vestris lived to be eighty, his son reached the age of 102, and one of his cousins attained ninety years. Pettitpa, who died in 1808, reached eighty years, and a brother passed away at St. Petersburg wanting five years of his century, while the brother of Louis Merante, who was well known at the opera, died in 1902 at Rouen, having reached the age of 102.

London Hydro To Have Surplus.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The Hydro-Electric department will show a surplus of $40,000 by the end of November, the close of the fiscal year.

For the first half it was $20,000 and the last part of the year has seen a great increase of business. The consumers now number nearly 6,000, and the amount of power sold is nearly 6,000 horsepower.

As a result of this surplus, power rates will be reduced next year. It is the intention of the commissioners to supply energy at a price as near cost as can be furnished.

"I am confident that we will have a surplus of forty thousand dollars," said Chairman Pocock.

STOVE POLISH EXPLODED.

Toronto Servant Girl May Die From Her Burns.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—When a bottle of stove polish exploded in her hand and set fire to her clothing shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon, Hilda Pridmore, aged 22, an English domestic employed at 90 Yorkville avenue, was so terribly burned that she is not likely to live. The girl now lies in the Lyndhurst private hospital on Yorkville avenue in a precarious condition.

In the absence of the family the girl decided to clean the stove and secured a bottle of polish from the shelf.

Evidently she had opened this and put one rub on the stove when the bottle exploded. The liquid struck the wall and ceiling. Then the girl's clothes became ignited. Instead of smothering the fire with any one of the numerous rugs, she rushed out into the back yard to seek aid. The flames were extinguished after a hard struggle.

The bottle of polish which exploded had a strong smell of coal oil from it.

SKETCHES OF N.Y. GIANTS

Christopher Mathewson Pitcher

Christopher Mathewson, one of the star pitchers of the New York National Club, is one of the most famous players in the land, thanks to the phenomenal work he has done for the Giants since 1901. "Matty" is a native of Factoryville, Pa., where he was born in 1878, and he first attracted attention as a pitcher when playing on the village club. After he had gained some reputation while in the box for the Keystone, Pa., Academy nine, he entered Bucknell University, where he "made the team" in his first year. His love for the game led him to follow it as a profession. [illegible] with Taunton and [illegible] with Norfolk, where he was found by the New York Nationals. That was in the fall of 1900. In his first game he defeated Brooklyn by the score of 3 to 2. He was on the Giants' [illegible] the [illegible] season. In 1901 he signed a contract with the Athletic Club of Philadelphia, but broke it and returned to New York. He was the star pitcher of the Giants until 1903 when Joe McGinnity shared the honors with him, the two being mainly instrumental in the winning of the pennant by New York in 1905 Mathewson topped a wonderful season's record by defeating and shutting out the Athletics in three world's series games, thus winning the series for the Giants. Since then he has been a star and this season he is better than ever. Truly "Big Six" is the grand old man of baseball.

DUCK HUNTERS HAD GOOD SPORT

One by one the duck hunters are beginning to straggle back into the city. Some are well pleased over their outings, while of course there are the few dissatisfied ones. Owing to the heavy gunfire the feathery creatures were forced to endure at Rice Lake on Labor Day they have been rather difficult to approach since. However the season son promises to be a good one.

PETERBORO BOY ELECTED

Ross Craig is President of New Rugby Club in Hamilton

The Alert Football Club has disbanded and the East Hamilton Amateur Athletic Association was on Wednesday evening organized to fill its place. There is little if any difference in the two clubs outside of the name. The officers installed are practically the same as last year's Alert officials.

The team will apply for a place in the O.R.F.U., and it looks as though they will get it, inasmuch as the Hamilton Rowing Club, who were billed to represent the Mountaineers this season, prefer to lick everything pertaining to a Rugby team bar the name.

Ralph Ripley will be asked to coach the new aggregation, and even should they not be granted a place in the O.R.F.U., they expect games for the city championship with the Tigers which always create keen interest in the Football Town.

Officers elected were:—Hon Pres., Mayor Allan; hon. vice-presidents, J. G. Gauld and R. B. Harris; president, Ross Craig; secretary-treasurer, Frank McComb.

LARRY DOYLE.

The captain and star second baseman, of the New York Giants, who was married on Wednesday morning, to Miss Gertrude McCoombs, of Florida. Larry is 27 years old.

CANADIANS CHAMPIONS

They Are First, Second and Third Marksmen in the World.

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 5.—By winning the individual Palma match with an army rifle, Major Geo. Hart McHarg of the 6th Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles, Vancouver. B.C., becomes the individual champion of the world by having a total of 220 out of a possible 225 on the 800, 900, and 1,000 yards ranges. Capt. Neil Smith of the 24th Regt., Chatham, Ont., was second with a score of 220, and Lieut. Mortimer of the Canadian Army Service Corps, Ottawa, Ont., was third with a score of 220.

Places were awarded according to merit. The best scores on the long distance range counted for first place, the next best for second place, etc.

Wolfe, U. S. Infantry, made 219; Osborn, U. S. Navy, 218; J. S. Stewart, Massachusetts, 218; Duff, Texas, 218; Sergt. McInnes, 19th Alberta Dragoons, Edmonton, 218; Sergt. W. A. Smith of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, 218; Lieut. F. H. Morris, 30th Regt., Winnipeg, 217.

By winning the first place Major McHarg won a prize of $50 in gold. Sergt. Smith won $40 and Lieut. Mortimer $31.25. Forty cash prizes were awarded and there were 159 entries.

The Palma Trophy will be shot for on Monday, Sept. 8.

The Argentine shooters are holding six high places out of the first ten, the United States has three, and Peru one.

The weather conditions were bad for the shooting yesterday, rain interfering with the early shooting and during the afternoon a strong wind blew from the northeast.

Major Geo. Hart McHarg won the Governor-General's match at Ottawa, at the Dominion Rifle Association meet last week. It is the biggest individual rifle-shooting event in Canada.

Interesting Qualities of Glass.

Brittle and breakable as glass is, yet it exceeds almost all other bodies in elasticity.

If two glass balls are made to strike each other at a given force the recoil, by virtue of their elasticity, will be nearly equal to their original impetus. Connected with its brittleness are some very singular facts.

Take a hollow sphere, with a hole, and stop the hole with the finger, so as to prevent the external and internal air from communicating, and the sphere will fly to pieces by the mere heat of the hand.

Vessels made of glass that have been suddenly cooled possess the curious property of being able to resist hard blows given to them from without, but will be instantly shivered by a small particle of flint dropped into their cavities.

DRAINING BRITAIN.

Emigrants to Canada Are Becoming a Serious Menace.

Lord Emmott, the Colonial Under Secretary, when in Toronto last Monday, spoke of the heavy British immigration into Canada as being a matter of serious concern to the Old Country.

"You are not merely," he said, "drawing the less desirable classes. You are attracting to your country men from all ranks. Men of wealth and culture are to be found in considerable numbers in British Columbia. Thousands of good lower middle class people are now leaving England for Canada."

From the point of view of Canada, there is nothing to complain of in this. In the advent of new, sturdy, citizens of British stock she receives to herself fresh elements helpful to the national progress of a vast and growing land. But, so far as the United Kingdom is concerned, this ceaseless and increasing stream of emigration from herself to Canada wears a somewhat different aspect. During the fiscal year ending March, 1912, close on a hundred and forty thousand British people left the British shores for this country—and, in the main, these were people of whom the Mother Country herself has great need. That is the serious aspect of affairs from the British viewpoint.

As everyone knows, there is a large class in the Old Country to whom she would be ready to say farewell without being plunged into depths of grief. But that class of British immigrant is not arriving in Canada in any large numbers now. The loafer, the wastrel, the man whose business in life it is to get a job and never find one, stays at home—for the reason that he is not wanted in Canada.

On the other hand, some of the best of the blood and bone and brawn and brain among British workers is coming here. And in every shoatload of people that leave her shores for ours, Great Britain sees herself drained of elements which, while they are helpful to our national progress, are really no less essential to her national existence. A hundred thousand people—full of courage and strength — cannot leave their native land every year without weakening her terribly. The huge annual drain is serious to her as regards mere numbers. But as regards quality, it is little less than a peril to her. So long as Canada, as in days gone by, was content to receive the surplus urban population of Great Britain, Ministers of Lord Emmott's stamp and standing could look on the spectacle unmoved. But to-day the lure of Canada is appealing to the sons of the British countryside, the men of the fields, the young and hardy men, who come direct from the hamlet and the village, leaving behind them hopelessness, looking forward to opportunity.

Go where one may in England, the cry is the same. Young men are not content, they tell you, in Kent, in Somerset, in Dorset, in Hampshire, to be hedgers and ditchers, as their fathers were. "All the young fellows," the report from one West Country village runs, "who are worth anything are going to Canada." From the sturdy North of England comes the same tale. In Scotland, from which country emigration to Canada is larger in proportion to population than it is from any other part of the British Isles, a regular process of rural depopulation has long been going on.

All over the country it is spelling the substitution of grass for arable land, with a reduced supply of British-grown food, a reduction of the general rural wealth, and so on. But if one regards this movement from the broader standpoint of the British nation, it becomes a menace. With the departure of the fittest from the shires and villages and hamlets of the Old Country, the reproduction of the race is being left to the least fit. Overcrowding is doing its worst for the city-bred people of Great Britain, while the rural sources of physical regeneration are becoming weakened and exhausted.

London's Social Beauty.

Viscountess Curzon maintains her reputation as the most beautiful young matron of the 1913 season. She is a superb dresser, a fact which enhances further the charm of her slim fairness and beautifully cut features.

Were she to live for a century Queen Alexandra would also hold a place among beautiful women. Queen Mary is a remarkable example of the woman whose looks are enhanced as she matures. Those who recall her as a girl say that at no time in her history has she looked so strikingly attractive as she does this year.

Princess Alexander of Teck brings sunshine wherever she goes, and is certainly the prettiest of the younger royal ladies. The Duchess of Portland is another of the beauties whom treacherous years seem helpless to alter. In her mob-cap headgear this summer she looks little more than a girl.

"If only people would not talk or think about our ages how happy we might be," said a girl who had been "out" five seasons at a party the other night. "And, oh, the memories, people have in regard to all things that point to your exact anniversary." There was an almost tragic smile on her face as she spoke.

PARTICULARS OF ACCIDENT AT PORT ARTHUR

Funeral Will be Held To-morrow Afternoon

Fort William papers of late date give particulars of the deplorable accident that, on Labor Day, resulted in the death of Mrs. J. T. Emerson, formerly Miss Louisa Wells, of Peterborough.

"When the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a street car, Mrs. J. T. Emerson was brusied and badly shaken up. Mrs J. W. Crooks had her face cut and Miss Helen Smellie received a shaking up yesterday morning at the corner of Pearl and Cumberland street, Port Arthur.

"They had been out to see the Labor Day parade, and after it had passed they had come along Water street to Pearl and turned up. At the corner of Cumberland street two street cars were coming in opposite directions. The one east bound stopped, but the other was loaded, and the motorman was attempting to get through the crowd without stopping. The crowd of people who had gathered on the street to watch the parade, prevented the automobile getting out of the way, and the street car struck, breaking the hind wheel and throwing the car around so that it ran towards the sidewalk crowded with people. Then Roy Emerson, who was driving, applied the brakes and stopped the car before anyone was seriously injured.

Mrs. Emerson was sitting on the side near the street car, and it is supposed that she was hit by the end of the car. Miss Smellie was thrown out of the motor on the sidewalk while Miss Cameron who was sitting on some cushions in the car escaped unhurt. A lady on the sidewalk seeing the accident became hysterical."

The following morning (Tuesday) Mrs. Emerson died as the result of internal injuries.

The deceased leaves to mourn her loss a husband, two sons, Roy and Burton of Port Arthur. Four sisters, Mrs. A. McFarlane, of Peterborough; Mrs. D. Cameron aund Mrs. M. Corner, of California and Mrs. Jas. Meek, of Port Arthur, and one brother, J. L. Wells, city, are also left to mourn her sad demise.

The funeral will take place in Port Arthur to-morrow afternoon.

MISS ALLAN'S RECITAL ON MONDAY NEXT

Miss Allan Offered Position in Montreal Choir. But is Loyal to Peterboro'—Excellent Programe for the Conservatory

A musical recital of great interest will be given in the Conservatory Music Hall, on Monday, 8th September, by Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist of St. Paul's church.

Miss Allan, as is well known, was studying all summer with Clerici, one of the few remaining great masters of the Italian School, and other great musicians. The public will thus have an opportunity of hearing Miss Allan, with whom Clerici was delighted, for he said the true musical temperament combined with voice was rarely met with in so young a singer, Miss Allan being only seventeen years of age. Signor Clerici is anxious that Miss Allan should return next summer, but in the meantime she will go on studying French and Italian, as well as pursuing her vocal work under her father, Mr. John Allan's guidance. The program is an excellent one, comprising operatic airs and songs of widely differing character, to show Miss Allan's versatility. Mr. Asa Huycke, who is so well and favorably known to Peterborough audiences, is kindly assisting ing, and thus a program of a very high standard and of great interest is assured. Mr. John Allan will be the accompanist. Miss Allan, when passing through Montreal on her return to Peterborough, was offered the position of soloist in one of the wealthiest churches in that city at a large salary, but but declined the offer, as she wishes to remain here.

"THE GIRL AND THE BARON"

One of the big features in "The Girl and the Baron," which come to the Grand Opera House on Saturday Sept. 6th matinee and night is the big Broadway number which shows Broadway in action at midnight. This is one of the most realistic scenes ever produced on any stage.

The stars of "The Girl and The Baron" include Nat S. Ferber, one of New York's funniest German comedians, also Miss Eva Malvin, one of Broadway's beautiful prima donnas. In the cast will also be found Frankie Burns, George C. Hall, Emily Montrose, Robert Algier and others assisted by a big beauty chorus that can sing and dance. The scenic equipment and electrical effects gives "The Girl and The Baron" something that is entirely different from the old hackneyed idea which has always predominated in musical farce.

Sale of seats at box office, and lovers of musical comedy cannot afford to miss this attraction.

DEPOSED PORTUGUESE MONARCH IS MARRIED

On Account of the Political Situation the Ceremony is a Quiet One and a Close Watch is Kept for Undesirables Prince of Wales Represents Royal Family of Great Britain.

SIGMARINGEN, Germany, Sept. 5.—Manuel, former King of Portugal, was married here yesterday to Princess Augustine Victoria, daughter of Prince William of Hohenzollern, by Cardinal Netto, former Archbishop Patriarch of Lisbon, who conducted the religious ceremony, and by Count August Zu Eulenburg, grand marshal of the Prussian court, who presided over the civil function.

The religious rites began at 11.30 in the Roman Catholic parish church near the palace. The road along which the bridal pair passed from the palace to the church was spanned with arches covered with bright flowers and along both sides were drawn up lines of soldiers and school children.

Although it was understood that the marriage was to be celebrated in as quiet a manner as possible owing to the political situation, a gate of honor was erected at the railroad station, where all the royal guests were met by military escort. At the same time a strict watch was kept on all strangers arriving here because it was thought by the police that an attempt might be made on the life of the former King of Portugal.

EX-KING MANUEL.

The persons of royal blood present included the Queen-Mother Amelie of Portugal, the Prince of Wales, representing King George of England; Prince Eitel Friedrich, representing the German Emperor; the Duke and Duchess of Coburg, Infante and Infanta Carlos of Spain, representing the King and Queen of Spain; the Duke of Genoa and the Duke and Duchess of Aosta, representing the Italian royal family; the Duke and Duchess of Vendome and the Duke of Montpensier, representing the Bourbon family; the Duke of Oporto, uncle of Manuel; Prince Carl and Princess Elizabeth, Prince and Princess Henry of Reuss, Princess Friedrich of Hohenzollern, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden, several members of the Royal Wurtemburg family and also of the Portuguese royal house.

Immediately after the performance of the ceremony at the church, a homily was addressed to the newly married couple by the Prince Abbot of Einsiedeln, in place of the Arch Abbot of Beuren, who had fallen suddenly ill. After their return to the palace the royal couple received deputations representing the various classes of citizens who presented their congratulations and gifts. A reception ensued followed by a luncheon, after which the newly-married pair departed on their honeymoon.

Nearing Million Mark.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—With an attendance of 86,000 persons Americans' Day at the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday surpassed last year's record by 20,500 in spite of gloomy weather. The much-coveted million mark toward which the directors have been striving for some time, now seems near achievement if the weather holds fair. The chief speaker at the Directors' luncheon was F. T. Bliss of Chicago, who spoke in behalf of the visitors.

The mayor and council from Montreal, along with visiting newspapermen, were also guests at luncheon.

O'Donohue of Toronto. The chairman has not yet been named. Just when and where the board will meet is not yet settled, but Toronto is the most likely place.

How many people realize the fact that children are just as liable to require glasses as older people.

Many children who are backward in school and considered stupid, are not really so, but are laboring under difficulties on account of not being able to see properly. They are young and do not realize that they do not see as well as their companions and of course their parents don't know it either. But it is the duty of parents to have their children's eyes examined and see if they require glasses, because school work is hard enough for children without their being handicapped with poor vision. # THAW'S LAWYERS APPEAL IMMIGRATION BOARD'S DECISION

By a Sensational Play His Lawyers Secure a Double Writ In Montreal Restraining Officials From Deporting Their Client and Now He Waits Until Sept. 15, When Case Will Be Heard—Jerome Arrested.

COATICOOK, Que., Sept. 6.—Harry K. Thaw will be produced before the full King's Bench, appeal side, at Montreal on the morning of Monday, Sept. 15.

Meantime he may be detained here or at Sherbrooke, or taken to Montreal on a moment's notice, at the discretion of the immigration authorities. Two of his counsel, J. N. Greenshields and N. K. Laflamme, obtained a double writ — habeas corpus and prohibition — at Montreal yesterday and whirled in a special train into Coaticook, where not long before the immigration authorities had ordered Thaw's deportation from the Dominion.

Counsel for Thaw, who had remained in Coaticook, had announced that the writ was returnable forthwith, and a special train was made up to take the prisoner to Montreal last night. A great crowd collected about the station, where Thaw was confined, and it was not until eight o'clock that it became known that he might remain here several days because the writ is not returnable until Sept. 15.

There were cheers when the writ arrived and more cheers whenever Thaw's face appeared at the window of the detention room. When the special train pulled out for Montreal without Thaw aboard there were cries of disappointment, then more cheers when the news got abroad that for Thaw the new move meant ten days' delay.

Not only by the writs secured in Montreal, but by the action of his attorneys on appeal, did Thaw yesterday block his deportation. In addition he had the pleasurable knowledge that his old enemy, William Travers Jerome, had been arrested, charged with gambling.

If ever a little town produced "sensations" Coaticook did yesterday. First came Jerome's arrest and release on bail on a charge that he had played poker yesterday on railroad property with some newspaper men. Then came word that Thaw's lawyers had obtained in Montreal a writ variously described here as one of habeas corpus prohibition and restraint, demanding Thaw's production in court there forthwith. Meantime the special board of enquiry ordered Thaw's deportation to Vermont under two clauses of the Immigration Act, namely, that he had entered Canada by stealth and had, within five years been an inmate of an institution for the insane. Both these decisions Thaw's lawyers appealed, then clinched matters with a notice by telegraph that the writ had been granted in Montreal.

The immigration officers, headed by E. Blake Robertson, were inclined to question any court order coming over the wire, but they were powerless in the matter of the appeals and Thaw remained in the detention room over the G. T. R. station. Finally the Thaw lawyers in Montreal, J. N. Greenshields and N. K. Laflamme, chartered a special train and began a race here with the writ itself.

Jerome's arrest was not prompted in any way by the Thaw lawyers. One and all they expressed indignation at the move and said they were ready to aid him.

Mr. Jerome left town in his automobile yesterday afternoon. It was explained that he "had gone for a ride." His case is set for a hearing before the magistrate to-day.

AWAITING NEW ENVOY.

Huerta's Personal Representative Is Coming To Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Developments in the Mexican situation are likely to await the arrival in Washington of Manuel De Zamacona Inclam, personal envoy of the Huerta Government, to continue with the Washington administration the negotiations begun by John Lind, personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico.

Administration officials had not decided last night whether they would receive Senor De Zamacona unless he brought positive assurances of Huerta's elimination from the situation in Mexico and was ready to act upon the other points in the American proposals for the establishment of peace.

Some of the Washington officials feel that the United States has made its position clear through the parleys conducted by Mr. Lind and the address of President Wilson to congress. Further negotiations on the same points they regard as useless and merely a process of delay. There is a disposition, however, to receive Senor De Zamacona in view of the courtesy shown Mr. Lind.

Diaz Presidential Ticket.

The followers of Gen. Diaz expect the head of the ticket to return to Mexico by the end of the month.

BANK IS DEFRAUDED.

Swindler Walks Off With $2,000 From Lindsay Concern.

LINDSAY, Sept. 6.—With $2,000 added to the sum of about $8,000 which he had secured in the past few days by defrauding banks in Galt, Guelph and Berlin, a clever swindler left the local branch of the Standard Bank yesterday morning, taking the train for the east. While he has not thus far been apprehended, his arrest is expected hourly by the local police.

Undaunted by the publicity given his operations, the crook, who spent Thursday night at a local hotel, entered the bank and asked for Manager Alcorn, who had received several days ago a letter purporting to be signed by the manager of the bank branch at Kindersley, Sask. This letter said that a western patron would shortly call upon the Lindsay manager, and requested that credit be extended. The swindler presented a letter of introduction, and, on his tendering a check for $2,500, the manager, who had not read of the swindler's operations, initialed it without hesitation. The man drew $2,000 in bills, leaving $500 to the credit of his newly-opened account. He was later seen boarding the 11 a.m. train.

The sharper is described as a man of about middle age, shabbily dressed, and with several days' growth of beard, his whole appearance being far removed from that of the typical bank swindler.

Police Chief Chilion thinks the man may have gone to Peterboro, and a general warning to the banks has been sent out.

FIRED ON JAPANESE.

Three Non-Combatants Are Killed By Chinese Troops.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—A Shanghai despatch to The Times says: "Nanking has been desolated by looting, which for the most part could not be prevented. Eight Japanese, carrying the Japanese flag, fled toward their consulate. Some of the Government troops fired and two of the Japanese fell dead. A third was wounded, but died after reaching the consulate. There is much anti-Japanese feeling among the Government forces, and the Japanese flag hoisted over shops has been no protection."

A Tokio despatch to The Daily Mail says: "Owing to the alleged massacre of Japanese at Nanking when the northern troops captured the city, M. Oishi, leader of the progressive party, and other politicians are urging occupation of Tien-Tsin or some other port until China has paid compensation."

Capt. Reid Buried.

Did Police Abuse Cause Death?

FOUR MILLION DOLLAR FIRE SWEEPS HOT SPRINGS

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 6.—More than thirty blocks on the eastern edge of the business district of Hot Springs have been swept clean by a fire which for a time threatened to eat its way toward Central avenue, the main business thoroughfare. A high wind was blowing, and the Hot Springs and Little Rock fire departments, the latter hurried to this city aboard special trains, had made but little headway in checking the flames.

Sidney Dillon, commissioner of public utilities, estimates the loss as at least $4,000,000.

The fire originated in a negro dwelling on Church street, near Malvern avenue, just east of the Army and Navy Hospital, shortly after three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and spread quickly to the south and east. A number of small dwellings, dry as tinder as the result of an extended drought, were an easy prey to the flames, which in a few minutes were beyond control of the local fire department. From this region the fire spread to a manufacturing district and then residence and hotel districts, and then at nine o'clock the shifting wind threatened to carry the flames to the main business section. A supreme effort was made to divert the fire toward the suburb of South Hot Springs when it was apparent that efforts to control it would be unavailing. This plan succeeded.

Among the buildings destroyed were the city's light, water and power plants, the county courthouse, the park Jefferson, Princess and Moody Hotels, the city high school, Iron Mountain Railroad station and shops, Ozark Sanitarium, People's Laundry, Crystal Theatre and Bijou Rink, besides a hundred or more business buildings and many residences, including some of the best in the city.

No fatalities have been reported.

Fifteen minutes after the fire started it was beyond control of the Hot Springs fire force and aid was asked of Little Rock. Special trains brought additional apparatus from the city, but water, dynamite and every available means of fighting fire had failed to check the flames [illegible] hours after the fire started.

At times early in the night the gale reached a velocity of 40 miles an hour, and three times the shifting wind currents changed the course of the fire. Twice it was headed for the main business district, the last time shortly before nine o'clock, when by the free use of dynamite, the fire-fighting force succeeded in diverting the course of the fire toward South Hot Springs.

Some candidates can't distinguish between a dust storm and a landslide.

To Prevent Grain Leaks.

QUEBEC, Sept. 6.—The Quebec Board of Trade has sent a letter to Premier Borden pointing out that the remedy for the leak of grain through United States ports is to be found in the completion of the transcontinental railway and the enlargement of the elevators at Montreal, Quebec and Halifax, rather than in the costly and slow alternative of deepening the Welland Canal. The transcontinental railway, it is argued, can handle grain all the year round, while the canal is only open for seven months.

Farm Labor Bureau.

The establishment of an international labor bureau to remedy this was advocated.

CALGARY, Sept. 6.—Mayor Sinnott has announced his intention to frame a civic legislation that will prevent "wild catting" in rural subdivisions. ## BREAKS NECK IN FALL.

Toronto Y.M.C.A. Physical Director is Killed In "Gym."

TORONTO, Sept. 6.—While teaching a class of boys a new trick in gymnastics, George [illegible] Barnes, aged 24, slipped from the parallel bars at the Central Y.M.C.A. last night and broke his neck. He died a short time later, while being carried up the steps of Grace Hospital. Barnes was assistant physical director of the institution, and came from Sherbrooke, Que., a week ago.

The accident occurred about nine o'clock. Barnes had taken his class to the gymnasium in order to show them the trick, swung on to the bars himself. He twisted about until his head was hanging just below the bar, while his feet were in the air. Then in changing his position he lost his hold and fell headfirst to the floor.

Dr. Walter Thomson, 31 Carlton street, was summoned, and ordered Barnes' removal to Grace Hospital. F. W. Matthews' private motor ambulance made a record run to the Y.M.C.A., and as soon as the patient had been taken aboard the ambulance broke all speed limits in the rush to the hospital. Twelve minutes after receiving the call the ambulance reached Grace Hospital.

Barnes died just as the attendants started up the stairs with the stretcher. Dr. Thomson decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

A particularly sad feature of the case is that Barnes, who roomed at 200 Macpherson avenue, had invited several friends up from Sherbrooke to spend a few days with him. They will arrive in Toronto to day. He was unmarried.

Many a brave man is apt to fear a silent woman.

Many a good brain throb escapes from under a cheap hat.

Frank Miller and Frank Rouleau, Employed by Provincial License Department, Are Convicted of Accepting $25 From Woman Saloonkeeper as Price of Immunity—Judge Deals Out Sharp Sentence.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., Sept. 6.—Frank Miller and Frank Rouleau, the two liquor detectives in the employ of the Provincial License Department at South Porcupine, were sentenced to six months each at hard labor in the Central Prison, Toronto, after having been found guilty of having accepted $25 bribe from Mrs. Margaret Brennan, a South Porcupine saloonkeeper, in order to stave off prosecution against her house.

The payment of the money took place in South Porcupine on July 29, and the men were given a preliminary hearing before the magistrate on Aug. 4, and remanded for trial to North Bay jail, where they have remained until the speedy trial they elected to have held before Judge Harlman.

A. G. Slaght, counsel for the prisoners, asked Judge Harlman for a lenient sentence for Rouleau, who is a 17-year-old youth, but his honor could see no reason why one sentence should be lighter than the other. In sentencing the spotters to six months each at hard labor, his honor stated that he could not believe their story. The entire case turned on the receipt handed over to Mrs. Brennan, signed by Miller and Rouleau. Some of the crown witnesses had been very unsatisfactory as to the evidence, Judge Harlman admitted, but in a serious offence of this nature, for which the maximum was seven years, he considered the prisoners were receiving a light sentence at six months. He also felt sorry for Rouleau, but could not see why he should not receive the same sentence as his partner, Miller.

Coaticooke, Que., Sept. 6.—Harry Thaw is still here and his guards say he slept all night in a pile of excitement. During the evening the local band, which was billed for a concert on the Square, played instead underneath his barred window, winding up with "God Save the King," while the crowd shouted three cheers for Thaw.

Suffragettes Make Attempt to Destroy Dulwich College.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Dulwich College, the famous school in the southern suburb of London, which cost in 1870 $500,000 to build, was set on fire in two places at an early hour yesterday morning, and suffragette literature pinned to trees in the vicinity with women's hat pins is accepted as proof that a militant, suffragette "arson squad" was responsible for the crime.

A watchful policeman on patrol duty in the neighborhood discovered the outbreaks in time to get three fire brigades on the scene before serious damage to the handsome buildings had been done.

Dulwich College, known as the "College of God's Gift," has been in existence since 1619, when it was founded by Shakespeare's friend, Edward Alleyn.

NARROW ESCAPE

Autoist's Idea of a Joke — Mr. Spence Pays for the Fun.

Yesterday afternoon, Sanitary Inspector Spence drove to Warsaw to inspect a slaughter house, and had just arrived at his destination, leaving the horse in charge of his little girl who had accompanied him, when an automobile passed without warning from behind and frightened the animal and it bolted. The little girl fortunately jumped out and escaped with a few bruises, but the buggy was badly wrecked. The horse was caught about a mile away from the village. Mr. Spence got the buggy repaired in Warsaw and returned to the city. The four occupants of the car seemed to think that the whole affair was a huge joke. Had they sounded their horn they would have saved Mr. Spence a lot of trouble. Very fortunately the little girl had the presence of mind to jump or else she would have been seriously injured.

PRIZE STOCK IN LINE.

A Thousand Prize Winners Draw Big Crowd at Toronto.

TORONTO, Sept. 6.—Yesterday saw a great crowd gather for the review of the live stock at the Canadian National Exhibition. A thousand prize-winners paraded in front of the grand stand—horses, cattle, sheep and swine—representing what competent judges declare to be the finest selection of live stock ever brought together at one fair.

Yesterday's attendance was 78,000, an advance of 3,500 over last year. The million mark seems now in sight.

The chief speaker at the directors' luncheon was Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, who declared that Alberta had been talking too much about its wheat fields. They were getting over that now, and the gospel that was being preached was the gospel of live stock farming. Alberta to-day was harvesting the best crop in ten years. Not only was the crop large, but the quality was high and the farmers would get better prices.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 5.—Arrested at her home and brought to Cleveland, Mrs. Margaret A. Carter, of Elyria, Ohio, a society woman, is confined in the county jail, charged by the federal authorities with using the mails to defraud. It is alleged that she wrote Miss Lillian Huntington, daughter of W. R. Huntington, a well-known Great Lakes yachtsman, asking for $3,000 under pain of having her fiance, a Cleveland man, taken from her. In the letter she is alleged to have represented herself as a young woman whom Miss Huntington's fiance had promised to marry, suggesting that if Miss Huntington wanted the young man she must pay the stipulated sum or the writer would take him herself.

PRAYING AND VOTING

The Christian Guardian in an article dealing with the subject of the East York bye-election endeavors to lead its Methodist readers into the paths of Liberalism via "Abolish the bar."

The Guardian is no doubt quite sincere in its desire to get rid of the evils of drunkenness, but it must at least give Conservative journals credit for as good intentions and perhaps as lofty ideals as itself.

The Guardian concludes its article by saying that:

"No political party in this province can hope to champion the bar and survive. The bar must go. We pray that way; let us vote that way."

The inference to be drawn from the first sentence is that the Conservative party is "championing the bar."

Conservatism, like Liberalism, is a political creed, and men of all Christian creeds are to be found in its ranks; and for a christian paper to dub Conservatives "champions of the bar," simply because they do not happen to see through Mr. Rowell's or Dr Creighton's spectacles, does sound a little intolerant and narrow.

The Guardian would be well advised to keep out of party politics altogether, and to make the best use of whatever government may be in power to further its moral and social reforms. To reject a party and refuse support to a government simply because it does not promise at one stroke to abolish drinking at a hotel bar, is as foolish as for a Methodist to refuse to take the Guardian because it does not promise to bring in the millenium next year.

We would all like to see many other things along with the bar, abolished, and if Sir James Whitney were after votes merely, he might promise to abolish the bar with as much intention of doing so as Mr. Rowell.

But the bar is not so easily abolished as Mr. Rowell's dupes think. The Liberal leader knows this as well as anyone else, but what can he do? He must get votes and he will promise the moon to Methodists so long as he can get them to, not only pray for Liberalism, but also to "vote that way."

PREACHING THAT GETS THERE

President Woodrow Wilson says: I have heard a great deal of preaching, most of it with respect, a great deal of it with disappointment, because I felt that it had nothing to do with me. So many preachers whom I hear use the gospels in order to expound some of the difficulties of modern thought, but only now and again does a minister direct upon me personally the raking fire of examination—which consists of taking out of the Scriptures individual concrete examples of men situated as I suppose myself to be situated—and search me with the question, "How are you individually measuring up to the standards which in holy writ we know were expected of this man?"

The President's father was a preacher, and this fact gives him some right to speak on this subject. There is little doubt but that preachers in these days, not only preach over the people's heads, but over their hearts and souls too. Very little of the modern preacher's sermon "gets there." It returns unto him void.

Whether the fault lies with the pulpit or the pew cannot be decided here. The pew has a great deal to do with it, for it will not long sit under and support a man it does not care for. But it might be truly contended that the right man can make it care.

After all, the most indifferent and somnolent congregation is only waiting to be woke up and told just what the Scriptures says about it. Let some Peterborough preacher try it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

To read an editorial in the Montreal Star and fancy one was reading the Globe, was the strange and delightful experience of a man who feasts daily among the "Exchanges." It was like the fulfilment of Pastor Russell's millenial dawn.

"What is a stunt?" is the interrogation of an Englishman in this office. Perhaps some reader can oblige with a definition. It is in the dictionary alright but not as a noun as it is used on this continent. There is the verb—to stunt, and the adjective—stunted. But what is a stunt?

The Review was asked over the 'phone yesterday, "When is Thanksgiving Day?" No one seemed to know exactly, and it was decided that it was a moveable date. If the inquirer was really anxious about it and was in haste to be thankful the offering need not be postponed until a public holiday.

Note—By act of parliament some years ago, Thanksgiving Day was set for the last Monday in October. The date this year is the 27th.

30 YEARS AGO

Thirty years ago yesterday, Mr Geo Fitzgerald, the local carriage maker caught a 22 1-2 pound lunge at the A.C.A. camp at Stoney Lake.

Thirty years ago Mr. E. Courtney, of this city, had his thumb almost severed by a very lively buzz saw.

Thirty years ago Ald. Harry Piper, then manager of the Toronto Zoo, was in the city en route home from the A.C.A. meet.

GOSPEL HALL

Mr. Richard Irving, of Belleville, will speak at the Gospel Hall this evening at 7 o'clock, and at Central Park at 8 o'clock. Mr. Irvingg will also address the open air service tonight at the corner of Brock and George street.

FARM LABORERS EXCURSION $10 TO WINNIPEG

Going Dates:—

August 22—From all stations, Toronto to Sarnia Tunnel, inclusive, via Stratford, and south thereof in Ontario.

August 25—From all stations north of, but not including main line, Toronto to Sarnia Tunnel, via Stratford; all stations Toronto and north and east of Toronto to Kingston.

September 3.—From all stations Toronto and east, and east of Orillia and Scotia Junction.

September 5.—From all stations Toronto to North Bay inclusive, and west thereof in Ontario.

Farm laborers' special trains will leave Toronto at 8.50 a.m. on Aug 22nd, via Hamilton and London, and at 2.00 p.m. on Aug. 25th, and Sept. 5th, via Guelph, Berlin and Stratford. This is an exceptional chance to visit the West, which is truly called the land of "Golden Opportunities," and many prosperous farmers and business men now residing in Western Canada can trace the origin of their good fortune to a "Farm Laborers' Excursion." The route as via Chicago is an attractive one, many large cities and towns being passed en route, which breaks the monotony of the journey, there being something new to see all the time. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is the shortest and quickest route between Winnipeg-Saskatoon-Edmonton, with smooth roadbed, through the newest, most picturesque and most rapidly developing section of Western Canada.

Full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices, or write C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, G. T. Ry., Toronto. 16d

It is something difficult to forget the mean things we know about ourselves.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
BIBLE STUDY ON ### GOD'S TEN COMMANDS.

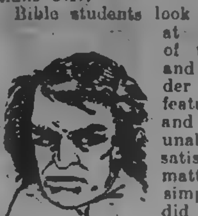
—September 7.—Exodus 20:1-11.—

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind."—Luke 10:27.

GOD'S Covenant with Israel at Mt. Sinai was that if they should keep perfectly the Decalogue—the Ten Commandments — they would thereby demonstrate that they were perfect men, worthy of everlasting life. Then it would be possible for them to obtain the chief blessing under the Abrahamic Covenant—to become the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, through whom God promised to bless the world.

St. Paul represents to us the spirit of the worthiest of the Jews, anxious to do God's will and to obtain the blessing, as crying out in anguish, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from this dead body?" Their minds were certainly alive to the promises and prospects, but their flesh was imperfect, depraved through Adam's fall—like that of all others. "Ye cannot do the things that ye would."—Galatians 5:17.



Hatred is incipient murder.

Bible students look in amazement at the simplicity of the Decalogue, and at first wonder which of its features the Jews and others were unable to perform satisfactorily. The matter seems very simple, just as it did to the Jews, until we perceive that God's Law, represented in the Ten Commandments, has a depth of meaning not seen on the surface.

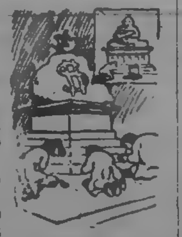
Apparently the full meaning of this Law was seen by none until Jesus "magnified the Law and made it honorable." He says that hatred toward a brother is incipient murder, and that adulterous desire in the heart is a violation of the Seventh Commandment. This throws a light on the whole matter, and explains why no one has been able to keep this Law, except Jesus, since Adam's fall.

The great Teacher also explains that the first table of the Law, appertaining to man's duties toward his Creator, means much more than merely to avoid image worship and profanity. It means that the true God shall have first place in the human heart. Any division of heart, strength, mind or soul violates this commandment.

God's Law to man was not given originally at Mt. Sinai. Indeed, the Mt. Sinai statement of the Law was given, not to mankind, but to the Jewish nation alone—as the terms upon which they might become God's Royal Priesthood for the blessing of all nations.

God's original Law to man was given in Eden, written upon Adam's heart, in that he was created in the Divine image—with attributes of mind and heart fully in accord with his Creator. He loved righteousness, and would have hated iniquity, had there been any to hate. But up to that time there was none.

After Adam's fall, the work of degeneracy progressed so rapidly that Adam's first-born son, Cain, became a murderer. Doubtless the chagrin of Mother Eve in the loss of Eden and in battling with the thorns and the thistles of the earth under the curse embittered her mind, arousing anger and resentment, which marked her child. From then until now the course has been downward in general, with occasionally a well-born child less seriously marked by sin—less depraved. Still the Scriptures inform us that "There is none righteous, no not one."



"Thou shalt have no other gods."

Mankind's experiences for six thousand years forbid us to expect that any could commend himself to God upon the terms of human perfection and ability and willingness to keep the Divine Law. Jesus alone has kept that Law, and He because His life was not derived from Adam, but from the Heavenly Father directly, by a change of nature. Begotten miraculously, He was "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners."

God refuses to grant everlasting life to any except the perfect who will keep His Law willingly and gladly. What hope then is there for our race? There is one hope for the world in general, and a different hope for the Church, instituted at Pentecost. The hope for the world is that God will in His own due time establish the Messianic Kingdom—its rulers and judges being the Royal priesthood.

This Messianic Kingdom will begin by deposing Satan, and binding him for a thousand years. Speedily the iniquities of earth will be set aside, and the rule of the "rod of iron" will begin. Everything opposed to righteousness will be dashed to pieces. Everything sinful will be discouraged by chastenings, and everything righteous will be encouraged by blessings. The judgments of the Lord will be broad in the earth, and the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.—Isaiah 26:9.

Under that administration, the world will again reach the condition of human perfection from which Adam fell. All wilfully rebellious, all lovers of sin, will have been cut off in the Second Death—"everlasting destruction."

No oculist can do anything for the blindness of self-love.

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World —Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

"Since you are resolved to carry this miserable farce further," said the Prince, "I suppose we shall have to submit."

"You'll submit to a search, that's what you'll do!" interrupted Manning. "I don't blame you, Britz, for losing your temper with this crowd; fresh is no name for it."

The Chief nodded to Gordon and Hicks, and they began a search of the four prisoners that left nothing undone to find the diamonds. When they had examined every article of the Indians' apparel, from the Oriental costumes of the low-caste Hindoos to the conventional attire of the Prince, they looked to Manning for further instructions, for they had found nothing.

Then all four of the detectives, with the Chief and the doctor, ransacked the cabin, fore and aft and from starboard to port, as thoroughly as the Indian burglars had gone through the apartments of Griswold and Sands. They even lifted the carpet on all sides, rolled the heavy furniture about, and prodded every locker. In vain. If the diamonds were on board the yacht, they were not in the saloon.

Fitch, at Manning's request, mounted guard over the captives, while the four policemen went over the remainder of the vessel. Half an hour passed before Manning and Britz gave up the search. They, as well as Gordon and Hicks, were ready to make oath that not one of the jewels was on board. But Britz did not flinch from his course. He was convinced he had the right man, and that in the end he would get the gems. Turning to Gordon, he asked:

"Do you know how to run this sort of boat?"

Gordon did know. He had handled naphtha craft of all sizes and needed little assistance to navigate the yacht.

"Very well," Britz continued. "run her down the North River to Pier A. I don't want this ship to get out of the Department's hands for a moment."

Gordon went to the wheel, while Hicks, who had some knowledge of machinery watched and regulated the feed of the motor. Silently as a giant swan, and as smoothly, the yacht threaded the cut to the broader stretch beyond the Spuyten Duyvil creek, passing under the long railroad bridge on which the famous little Dolly Varden train toddled from bank to bank, swung downstream in the Hudson and headed for the Battery. The yacht was off Grant Tomb before an idea occurred to Fitch, for which Britz not only gave him full credit, but blessed him heartily.

"See if any one of these men is wounded, lieutenant," Fitch suggested.

Britz and Manning looked the Orientals over, and made them walk up and down the cabin. The Prince halted slightly in his gait for an instant then recovered control of his muscles and strode as steadily as his low caste compatriots.

"That man has the Maharanee," Fitch declared. "You'll find it in the calf of his leg."

Britz seized Kananda by the collar and shook him savagely.

"If you don't give up that diamond your finish will be the operating table," said the detective.

Kananda forced a laugh. Britz, Manning, and Fitch seized him, and baring his leg to the knee, searched for marks of a wound. Strangely enough there was a little lump in the calf. The detectives looked at the doctor.

"Here's a slight protuberance, doctor," said Britz. "I guess the rest is up to you."

Fitch took out a pocket instrument case, and selected a tiny knife. Kananda, on the point of beginning another struggle to escape, was choked and held powerless by Britz and Manning. Gripping the Prince's leg firmly, the doctor worked his scalpel gently into the small lump in the flesh—a wound so recent that it had been bound together by pieces of court plaster the color of the skin. Then he triumphantly extracted something which, though ruddied, sparkled in the gleam of the incandescent lamps with which the cabin, despite the daylight was illuminated.

"The Maharanee diamond!" cried Britz and Manning together.

"Only that, and nothing more," answered Fitch. "But where can the rest of the jewels be?"

Fitch was pitiless in his purpose, now, as his sweetheart's vindication hinged on the recovery of the smallest stones belonging to the Missioner necklace. It wasn't enough that they had found only the Maharanee itself.

A similar examination was made of the other Hindoos, but without result. No other protuberances of flesh were found. The gem-hunters were obliged to rest content with the recovery of the greatest diamond.

Britz looked admiringly at Fitch.

"How did you ever think of it?" he asked.

"It was suggested by the way the Kohinoor was carried out of India," the doctor replied. "The coolie who stole it made a gash in his leg and then thrust the jewel within the wound. Then he waited for the wound to heal. When the edges were knit together there was no evidence of the stone except a slight protuberance in the flesh. The jewel hurt, of course, but the coolie stood the pain through a walk of many hundred miles until he was well outside the border of his native land."

They were now at Pier A and Gordon stopped the yacht alongside the police boat Patrol. Britz and Manning went aboard the Patrol, and the chief of detectives turned over the yacht to the captain of the Harbor Police. Then the detectives took their prisoners ashore, and in a couple of taxicabs all were whirled to Mulberry Street.

CHAPTER XXVI

Mutual Explanations

It was breakfast time, and Britz and Fitch after their exciting night were hungry enough to eat a Hindoo, but they did not stop to show consideration to their inner men. The great Missioner mystery was too close to a climax for thought of self. The lieutenant and the physician were equally eager to bring the case to a close. The doctor's one thought was of the lonely girl in the Tombs who in that moment doubtless was wondering whether she ever would be released; who perhaps was terrified by the prospect of her trials approach and who, it might be, had begun to doubt not the will, but the skill of her lover and the Headquarters man in their efforts to free her from the predicament in which the density of Donnelly and Carson had placed her.

Britz in whose mind the incidents were rapidly arranging themselves in orderly array, was none the less eager for the actual fruition of his triumph. By that time, all the other prisoners must be in the Detective Bureau unless Donnelly and Carson had bungled even more seriously than he was prepared to believe they could do.

As he expected, Britz found Griswold and Mrs. Delaroche in the big reception room of the Dectective Bureau with the detectives who had arrested them waiting ponderously near the door, and an interested desk lieutenant looked up from his work to hear the denouement of what Police Headquarters had come to regard as the "star" case of the year.

When Griswold saw Britz he reddened with anger.

"What's the meaning of this outrage?" he demanded.

Britz looked at him with a silent smile.

"Why have I been brought here?" Mrs. Delaroche inquired.

Britz answered her only with an ironical bow.

Meanwhile, Manning, Gordon, and Hicks had taken the four Hindoos into the lieutenant's room. Fitch was pacing nervously up and down the corridor, anxious to carry to Elinor the good news he knew would be forthcoming soon. Britz joined the physician and walked up and down with him two or three times, smoking an extraordinarily black cigar with the gusto of a hungry man, trying to make himself believe he had breakfasted heartily.

"Doctor," said the detective, "I am going to send for Miss Holcomb. Williams will go to the Tombs to fetch her, and I think it will be well for you to accompany him so she won't be frightened. If a strange detective called for her alone she might think he intended to take her to the trial court, or to some other prison, and it would be a shame to run the risk of giving her another shock when she will be at liberty in a few hours."

Fitch seized the detective's hand and wrung it warmly. He tried to frame his thoughts in words but for the first time in all the wearying work for his sweetheart's freedom and vindication, his voice failed him utterly. He could only grip the strong hand of the detective and shake it as if Britz was the first friend he had ever had and he expected him to be the last.

A man with a pleasant face came out of the Detective Bureau, and Britz introduced him to Dr. Fitch as Detective Williams.

"Here's an order from the Chief to bring Miss Holcomb here, Williams," said Britz. "The doctor will go along with you,—and—well, it won't be necessary for you to stick to them too closely on the way back. You understand, Williams; you're a married man, you know."

The detective replied with a sympathetic smile, and Fitch, with another hearty grasp of the detective's hand, hurried away with Williams.

Neave's Food

FOR INFANTS

What a Mother who has raised two fine boys on it says.

233 Boultbee Ave., Toronto, 29 March, 1913.

"In addition to our two sturdy boys, we have a dear little baby girl aged 5 months. Her name is Eva Muriel, and of course we are bringing her up entirely on Neave's Food, as we believe that to be the very best food in the world for babies. She is getting along fine and is strong and healthy, and so bright and contented. She has been fed on Neave's Food since she was two days old and it suits her admirably, as I am sure it would suit every other child if it was properly made. That little "Jack" I spoke of is such a sturdy little boy now. Neave's Food certainly saved his life."—Mrs. J. W. PATEMAN.

Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book "Hints About Baby" by writing Edwin Utley, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, Agent for Canada, and mentioning this paper. Neave's Food is sold in 1 lb. tins by all Druggists in Canada. 47

Fortunately for the summer girl the hammock cannot talk.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to little ones. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentry, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Upward Trend and Bottom Stop of a Brainy Youth.

Norbert Postlethwaite was a wonderful boy. When but eleven months old he could repeat the alphabet clear through from either end of it and at six years old had memorized the Declaration of Independence. At the untimely age of fourteen he was fitted for college in mathematics, philosophy, ancient and modern languages and the sciences, and in less than three years after entering he completed the regular four years' course and received the degree of bachelor of arts at the ripe age of seventeen.

Thus this brainy youth proceeded up the hill of learning until, when he was twenty one years old, he was truly an appalling example. He was as familiar with the late Aristotle, Plato, Demosthenes and all such as you and I are with William J. Bryan, and had he chanced to meet in the highroad a gentleman who addressed him in either of seven different languages and dialects he would have had a working notion as to whether the stranger opined it looked like rain or merely wished to pick a fight.

But, although thus armed, equipped and overloaded, he found when he went forth to battle with the world that some one had stolen the ladder to success and that his neck was too thin to permit him to hold a job as a street car conductor. Our learned hero was nothing daunted, however, but straightway mounted the lyceum platform and, displaying his matchless eruditeness to people who had very little idea what he was talking about, was for a time a notable success.

Presently, however, untoward fate again assailed our hero. Moving picture shows and ten cent vaudeville sprung up like noxious weeds and speedily put the intellectual treat on the bummer. But Norbert, again equal to the emergency, procured an appropriate costume, converted his lecture into burlesque, and with his spindle shanked neck, overhanging brows and a squeaky chuckle he was a veritable scream as a silly boy monologist. He is now diligently practicing a song and dance, and as soon as he fully masters a funny fall of his own invention and a new and exceedingly humorous way of spitting, which he has already thought out, he expects to climb into polite vaudeville on the big circuits, where he can doubtless soon dictate his own price.

Because of the manner in which he overcame every obstacle in his path way we should feel warranted in giving three hearty cheers for Norbert Postlethwaite.—Tom P. Morgan in Puck

HE IS FREE AT LAST.

Old Bill Miner Dies In Prison After Remarkable Career.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 5.—Death has freed "Bill" Miner, notorious robber and jailbreaker, from his last prison term. His picturesque career, which included clashes with the laws of more than a score of states and several Canadian provinces, ended Wednesday at the Georgia State Prison Farm.

Miner's criminal career began nearly sixty years ago. He left his home in Jackson County, Ky., before he was fifteen years old and went west. He admitted numerous stage coach robberies and train holdups, and was several times imprisoned for robbing banks. Three years ago he was brought to the state prison farm here for robbing a train near Lula, Ga.

Miner's first big job was a coach robbery for which he served nine years of a sentence of 25, and three days after his release rifled a safe on the 'Frisco railway, getting $25,000.

This took him to Australia, and he drifted on to Turkey, where he became a slave dealer. He returned to California and worked as a miner, but soon tired, and after looting an express train in Oregon he traveled east and lived in luxury until his spoils were spent; then he went back as a hobo. That was in 1906. Then with two companions he held up a Southern Pacific express train near San Quentin, Ore., scene of his first conviction, and escaped into Canada, only to be nabbed for his unsuccessful exploit at Mission. The above are of course only some of the "high spots" in Miner's self-related career of crime.

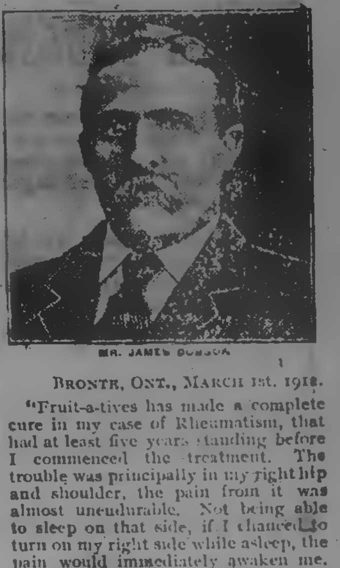
A GREAT BELIEVER IN "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Well Known Ontario Merchant Has Faith Because "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him



MR. JAMES DOBSON

BRONTE, ONT., MARCH 1st, 1913.

"Fruit-a-tives has made a complete cure in my case of Rheumatism, that had at least five years standing before I commenced the treatment. The trouble was principally in my right hip and shoulder, the pain from it was almost unendurable. Not being able to sleep on that side, if I chanced to turn on my right side while asleep, the pain would immediately awaken me. This kept up until I started taking "Fruit-a-tives". I started by taking one or two tablets with a large glass of water, in the morning before breakfast and experienced pronounced relief very shortly. After a continued treatment for about six months, I was cured and am now in firstclass health. This, I attribute to my persistent use of "Fruit-a-tives" and I heartily recommend your remedy to any Rheumatic sufferers."

LONDON'S ENTHUSIASM IN BASEBALL AROUSED

"Rube" Deneau and His Tribe Had the Fans Interested and the Team Was Well Supported

Perhaps no other team in the Canadian League was pulling so hard for London to win than the locals. Not only did the players work hard to keep Ottawa in check, but when on Monday evening the score came in the local fans felt that London losing the pennant was worse than the Petes losing third place. Too much credit cannot be given "Rube" Deneau for the way in which he handled the team and misfortune seemed to be following him all year. He had great difficulty in getting a good pitching staff and a third baseman thus the London team was at the bottom of the list for some time after the season opened. When the team rounded into shape it was apparent that the championship might come to London, but fate in its most cruel and aggravating form again visited the Tecumseh's camp. Linneborn, the fast second baseman, received word after the first game of the London-Ottawa series in Ottawa that his mother was dying, thus their fast infield machine was thrown out of gear at a very crucial moment.

London has long been noted as a good ball town. Back in the late '70's the famous team of which Thos. Gillean, the jeweler, was centre fielder; Goldsmith, pitcher and Powers, catcher, brought the city into international prominence. Ten years later Patsy Donovan, afterwards manager of several National League clubs, was a member of a London team that figured in the International League. There was a great revival of interest in baseball in London after another decade when Pete Lohman's team won the Canadian championship. That year of 45 games played on the home grounds London won 42.

Since the Lohman team passed away interest in professional baseball in London declined. Now, 15 years later, "Rube" Deneau and his crew have aroused the old-time enthusiasm among the fans in a way that no others have done in recent years. Every game played on the London grounds this year has drawn large crowds, and what cannot be said of the majority of the Canadian League centres, the London fans were always ready "to back their team up a lane."

SKETCHES OF N.Y. GIANTS

"RUBE" MARQUARD

Pitcher "Rube" Marquard was the leading pitcher of the Giants and star left hander in 1911, and its mainstay for the first half of 1912 when he won 19 consecutive games, thus tieing Keefe's 188- National League record. He is a big southpaw for whose release New York Giant paid Indianapolis $11,000, the largest price ever paid up to that time for a minor league player. In 1909 he pitched 48 games, of which he won five. His poor control was the cause. He possessed great speed and a variety of benders, but his control was very bad. In 1910 up to August Marquard had only pitched four games, winning two, his control again being the weak spot. In 1911 he demonstrated that he was worth all that McGraw paid for him and was a shining example of what time and patience will bring. "Rube" was born at Cleveland, O., in 1889 and had pitched but one season professionally when New York purchased him. In the last world series "Rube" won two games and lost none.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Allan Campbell, who played quarter for T.A.A.C. three years ago, arrived in the city yesterday, and is anxious to get back into the game with T.R. and A.A. Allan, who is a brother ~~of Pete Campbell of Varsity~~, was grand quarter when he played with T.A.A. Toronto Star.

Jack Maynard, this year's captain of the Varsity team, has just undergone an operation on his nose to improve his breathing. Maynard's ankle, which was weak last year, is quite strong again, and some of the "Maynard" runs that have made Varsity famous will be in evidence again this year.

"Dick" Sheehy, of Ottawa College, and Reaume, of Argonauts, will be the most likely candidates for outside wing at Varsity this year. Reaume will be missed by the Argos.—Toronto Star.

Ottawa City-University team and the new East End Club of Hamilton have announced the first exhibition date for the season. Ottawa play at Hamilton on September 27, while the return will be played in Ottawa on Thanksgiving Day.

The Standard says: "If it is an earnest of the intention to bring about an Anglo-American alliance, we are afraid his Majesty's Government is too sanguine and distinctly premature, unless, of course, it has some real reason to suspect the whole trend of American policy since Washington is likely to undergo a change under the menace of external dangers."

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

WEDDING—PERSONALS

SMITH—BEATTIE.

The marriage of Miss Minnie Beattie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. James Beattie, to Mr. J. Ernest Smith B.S.A., advertising manager of Farm and Dairy, Peterborough, was solemnized at noon on Tuesday last in the Methodist church. The impressive ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. A. W. Barker, B.D., in the presence of the immediate relatives and intimate friends. The beautiful bride, who was conducted to the altar by her father, was becomingly attired in a travelling costume of jacquard moire silk, Bulgarin blue shade, with hat to match and carried a bouquet of roses and valley lillies. The wedding march was played by Mrs. A. S. Miller. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty luncheon was served, during which congratulatory messages were read. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on the afternoon train to spend a short honeymoon in muskoka before taking up residence in Peterborough. Guests were present from Toronto, Niagara Falls, Welland, Owen Sound, Shallow Lake, Galt and Markdale. The bride is beloved by a wide circle of friends, who wish the young couple many happy and prosperous years.—The Huron Expositor.

Skill, Devonshire, Regiment, and Mrs. Skill, of Cobourg. Prof. James Dickinson, of Philadelphia, played the wedding march and also played softly during the service. The bride was given away by her brother, Major Hayward, of Toronto. She wore ivory charmeuse satin en traine. Her wedding veil was arranged with orange blossoms and she carried white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss E. C. I., Toronto, was in blue voile over silk with hat to match. Mr. T. S. Chatterton was best man. The ushers were Mr. Roberts and Mr. F. D. Boggs.

The wedding breakfast was served at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Schwabe, after which Mr. and Mrs. Skill left for a trip to Western points, the bride wearing a navy serge suit with blue plush hat with white plumes. Among out-of-town guests were: Major and Mrs. Hayward and Miss C. Cole, Toronto; the bride's brother-in-law and sister Dr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Buffalo and their daughter Grace. Mr. and Mrs. Skill will reside in Mrs. Schwabe's residence, King-st.

AFTER MANY YEARS OLD DAYS IN PETERBORO

Wonderful Improvement—Manufacturies and Streets Where Once the Cattle Grazed—Misses Old Familiar Faces

To return to Peterborough after an absence of 25 years, is the experience of Mr. James D. Lewis, who is at present on a visit to his brother, Rev. J. G. Lewis, of Stewart street.

It is forty years since Mr. Lewis first left Peterborough where he spent his young days, he has only been back once before and that was 25 years ago.

Mr. Lewis has lived in the States all that time and is at present a resident of St. Paul, Minn.

"What do you think of the city after being so long away?" asked the Review of the old Peterborough boy. (Mr. Lewis is not so old as his years of absence might indicate, he is somewhere in the region of fifty.)

Mr. Lewis replied that he could see a wonderful improvement, a lot of old land-marks are gone, new buildings have gone up, and the residential part of the city is almost entirely new since his day. What used to be pasture land and farms is now cut up into streets.

He was amazed at the number of manufacturing concerns which had sprung up in the city, which at one time was thought would go back when the lumbering industry was finished in the district.

There was no C.P.R. and G.T.R. in Mr. Lewis' days, the "Midland" being the only line that ran through Peterborough at that time.

What Mr. Lewis missed mostly were the old business men. He mentioned Mr. Cluxton in particular, who was at one time a very prominent local figure as well as a political enthusiast, he was M. P. for East Peterborough. Also Mr. Bertram, Mr. Stevenson and a number of others who played a conspicuous part in the public life of the city some years ago.

Mr. Lewis is on a trip for the sake of his health, Mrs. Lewis accompanies him, and they hope to remain in this district for a couple of weeks.

PLENTY OF BUILDING GOING ON IN CITY

Over $10.000 in Permits Issued Since 1st. of the Month

With the building of the DeLaval and the Hope factories in the south end of the city, a great necessity has arisen for the renting of low moderate-priced house for the employees of the above concerns. The majority of the houses in the south end of the city are either too expensive for the ordinary working man or else they are up for sale.

An excellent chance is open for some local capitalist to build a few blocks of houses and rent them as the majority of the owners of houses are more anxious to sell than to rent.

Since the first of the month over $10,000 in building permits for dwellings and repairs have been taken out at the city clerk's office.

The following were issued for the various purposes:

F. Packenham, dwelling, King street, $300.

Episcopal Corporation, Reid street, $500.

Toronto Savings and Loan Company, repairs, $4,000.

R. W. Reid, dwelling, Walton St., $300.

Turnbull Company, Simcoe street, $100.

Mrs. Saddler, Smith street, $150

W. Jones, dwelling, Concession St., $350.

T. M. Caldwell, Reid St., $1,800.

Thos. Blodgett, dwelling, George street, $800.

S. A. Blade, green house, $175

ITALIAN KILLED

Nicola Tannone Met Death Near Kendry

On Thursday evening a fatality took place at Kendry station, which is about five miles west of here and a few particulars reached The Review this morning. An Italian by the name of Nicola Tannone, accompanied by other Italians, was in the city about seven o'clock Thursday evening, buying provisions. They started out about half an hour later on a hand car. The cars where the men live are on the C.P.R. track near Kendry, and in some manner while they were unloading the provisions, the local, which arrives in the city at 7.57 came on them unexpectedly and Tannone was killed. The coroner of Millbrook arrived at the scene yesterday, and the body was removed to Millbrook. It will be sent here and all particulars will be announced later.

MISS ALLAN'S RECITAL ON MONDAY NEXT

Miss Allan Offered Position in Montreal Choir. But is Loyal to Peterboro'---Excellent Programe for the Conservatory

A musical recital of great interest will be given in the Conservatory Music Hall, on Monday, 8th September, by Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist of St. Paul's church.

Miss Allan, as is well known, was studying all summer with Clerici, one of the few remaining great masters of the Italian School, and other great musicians. The public will thus have an opportunity of hearing Miss Allan, with whom Clerici was delighted, for he said the true musical temperament combined with voice was rarely met with in so young a singer, Miss Allan being only seventeen years of age. Signor Clerici is anxious that Miss Allan should return next summer, but in the meantime she will go on studying French and Italian, as well as pursuing her vocal work under her father, Mr. John Allan's guidance. The program is an excellent one, comprising operatic airs and songs of widely differing character, to show Miss Allan's versatility. Mr. Asa Huycke, who is so well and favorably known to Peterborough audiences, is kindly assisting, and thus a program of a very high standard and of great interest is assured. Mr. John Allan will be the accompanist. Miss Allan, when passing through Montreal on her return to Peterborough, was offered the position of soloist in one of the wealthiest churches in that city, at a large salary, but but declined the offer, as she wishes to remain here.

Children's Eyes

How many people realize the fact that children are just as liable to require glasses as older people.

Many children who are backward in school and considered stupid, are not really so, but are laboring under difficulties on account of not being able to see properly. They are young and do not realize that they do not see as well as their companions and of course their parents don't know it either. But it is the duty of parents to have their children's eyes examined and see if they require glasses, because school work is hard enough for children without their being handicapped with poor vision. The TAIT OPTICAL CO. make a special study of children's eyes. Come and consult us and we will advise you in the matter.

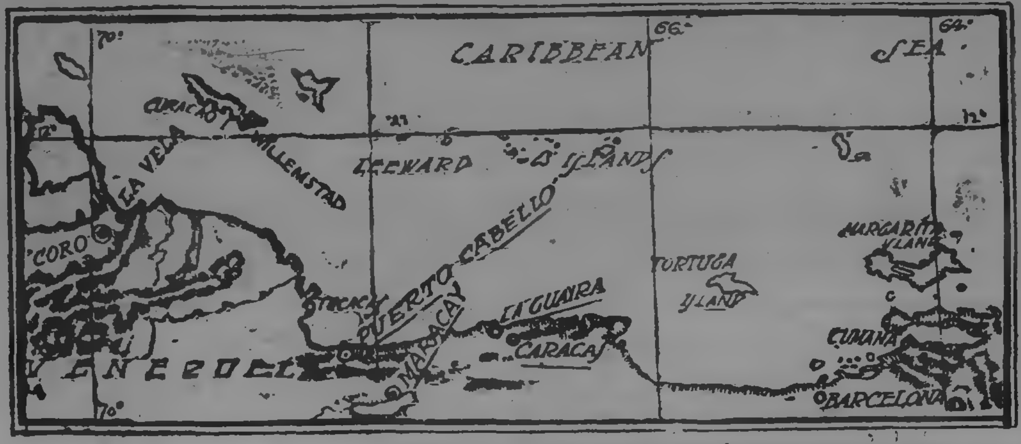
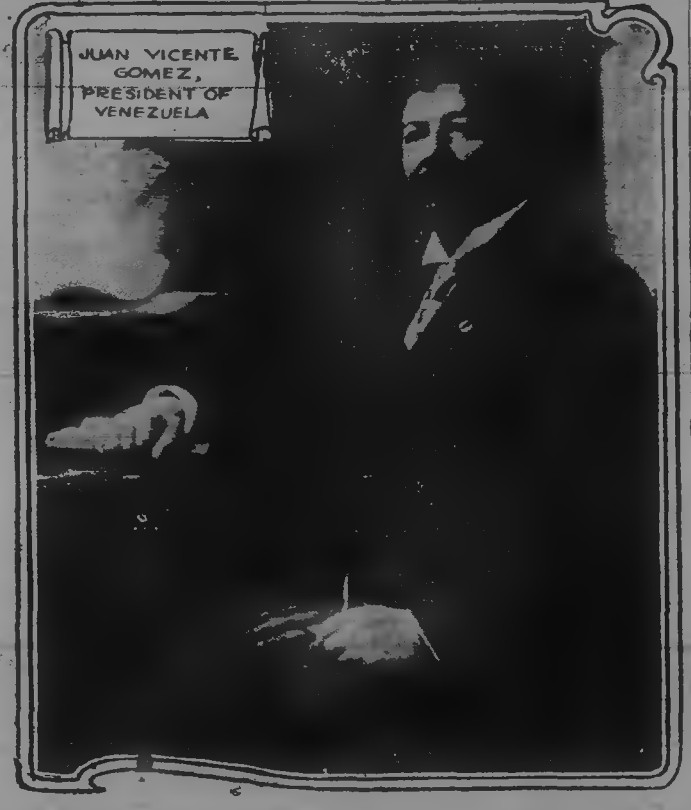
PRESIDENT GOMEZ PLEDGES HIMSELF TO REESTABLISH PEACE





JUAN VICENTE GOMEZ, PRESIDENT OF VENEZUELA

While Venezuela is eagerly awaiting a declaration of intentions by President Gomez he has chosen to publish to the world his military and political attitude.

He promises the absolute restoration of peace in the Republic within a period not exceeding six months. He hopes to achieve this in a much shorter time, but frankly declares he will maintain martial law and continue the suspension of the constitutional guarantees until that result has been attained.

The six months' limit emphasized by President Gomez covers the period of preliminary elections essential to the constitutional election of a successor, whose inaugeration is due in April.

The above illustration shows President Juan Vincente Gomez, of Venezuela, the victor of Coro, who has defeated the partizans of General Castro, and map showing the northern coast of Venezuela, which his army has traversed.

JAPANESE DEMAND WAR; RIOTOUS MOBS IN TOKIO

Assassination of Mortiaro Abe of the Foreign Office by Students Because of His Pacific Attitude Towards China is Followed by Big Demonstration.

TOKIO, Sept. 8—The assassination of Mortiaro Abe, director of the political bureau of the Japanese Foreign Office has inflamed the masses and yesterday a dramatic chapter in the history of the new Japan was written.

Fifteen thousand persons gathered in mass meeting in Hibiya Park, calling for military action against China. A majority of these marched to the Foreign Office and clambered for admission. They demanded the despatch of troops to China to take measures as were necessary to obtain satisfaction for the killing of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, Baron Nobuaki Makino.

The speakers denounced the emptiness of Japanese diplomacy in connection with California and China, and insinuated that the insult to the Japanese flag at Nanking should be wiped out. The manifestation in its treatment of the California and Chinese questions.

Abe's assailants, who are believed to have been students, lay in wait for him in front of his house Thursday evening while he was at the railway station to meet H. Ijun, Minister to China, who had just been recalled from Pekin.

The motive in the assassination of director Abe may have originated in resentment of the policy of the Foreign Office regarding the massacres of Japanese by Chinese troops in Nanking. The Foreign Office officials have steadily urged and adhered to a policy of calmness.

Profiting by the lesson of the riots which followed the conclusion of peace between Russia and Japan, the Government reduced the risk of violence yesterday by refusing to allow a single soldier or policeman at the scene. The manifestatants, many of whom were students, were orderly during the early part of the proceedings. A score of agitators, including a girl, decried Japanese diplomacy and declared that it had never contributed to the upbuilding of the empire and had ended in failure. The incidents in China were unbearable.

Suddenly the cry to march on the Foreign Office was raised, and there was a general stampede, many persons barely escaping being crushed. The crowds surged through the streets headed by the gesticulating leaders and reached the Foreign Office to find that the high iron gates were locked. Scores of the demonstrators pounded on the gates and called for them to be opened, but in vain. The under officials refused. A delegation was appointed, the members of which climbed the gates, and then ensued a long parley.

Meanwhile the crowd was cheerful but determined. It showered compliments on a beautiful Geisha girl struggling by in a rickshaw, but angrily stoned a photographer seeking to take snapshots of the chief delegate, who, having returned, mounted the portals to report progress. Perched unsteadily on the pickets, he made a fantastic picture, and in a harsh harangue declared that the committee demanded either the despatch of troops or the retirement of the Foreign Minister.

"We told the officials," he shouted, "that the voice of the people speaks, that the agitation will never end until our demands are granted."

The extraordinary scene continued for five hours, the delegates emerging periodically to pacify the crowd. Finally, when the discussion ended, they reported that Baron Makino had promised to receive them on Sept. 15. This was greeted with howls of derision and a thousand marched to the Foreign Minister's residence, three miles distant. A cordon of police, however, prevented their approach.

Another mass meeting was called for last night at the Young Men's Christian Association Hall.

When washing handkerchiefs, add some slices of lemons to the boiling water, and they will come forth much nicer and whiter. Another good way to bleach handkerchiefs is to wash them and then let them soak over night in water in which a little cream of tartar has been dissolved.

HAD BAD LUCK ELEVEN TIMES

LA CROSSE, Wis., Sept. 8—Marius D. Hamilton, 73, until recently owner of a mill at Green Lake, Minn., and walking from Minneapolis to Milwaukee in search of work, told one of the worst hard luck stories ever related in this city at the court house here.

Eleven flour mills in which Hamilton has been employed or which he has managed in forty-five years, have been wiped out by fire, tornado, cloudburst, explosion or bankruptcy. One daughter, Mrs. William Labelle, and her two children were buried in the San Francisco earthquake of 1906. Another daughter, Miss Lavera Hamilton, perished in the Iroquois Theatre disaster in Chicago.

Mr. Hamilton was caught beneath the wreckage of his mill at Green Lake, Minn., where the structure was destroyed by a tornado in March, 1912, and was in the hospital in New London, Minn., recovering from his injuries two months ago.

GOT HAULS IN BRANTFORD, WOODSTOCK AND INGERSOLL

Information Leaks Out That Operations of "James Ray," Who Presented a Letter From a Western Bank Manager, Was Successful in Getting About $2,300 From Three Banking Concerns

BRANTFORD, Sept. 8.—That a local bank had cashed a worthless check for $2,300 for James Ray, the man who has been getting money in various parts of Ontario by means of a forged identification letter, was admitted by the police yesterday. Sergt. J. T. Wallace, who is in charge of affairs during the absence of Chief of Police Slemin, who is on his holidays, stated that a check had been cashed here for $2,300, but he also declined to state the name of the bank which was caught, saying that he was acting under instructions to give no publicity to the case.

The man has been working the Union, Sterling and Standard Banks in other parts of the province. The Standard Bank does the Union Bank business here, but its officials deny having cashed a check for Ray. The Sterling Bank business is handled by the Bank of Commerce, and its officials also deny any knowledge of the case except by hearsay. The remainder of the banks, the Bank of British North America, Bank of Hamilton Bank of Montreal, Bank of Nova Scotia, Bank of Toronto, Imperial, Royal and Merchants' Bank, and the Royal Loan all denied having been caught, and all equally stated that they know nothing of the report that a local bank had been caught.

Woodstock, Too.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 8.—It came as a surprise Saturday when news leaked out that the local branch of one of the banks had been victimized by "James Ray" to the extent of about $2,300. The manager of the local branch was very reticent when questioned and refused to admit or deny the story, but it was learned on excellent authority that the bank here had on Tuesday last received a letter purporting to come from the manager of the Union Bank, Kindersley, Sask., saying that Ray would be here in a day or two, and would present a demand draft for between $2,000 and $3,000, which should be honored as he was a valued customer. Next day Ray came, bringing a letter of introduction as stated in the letter received by the manager, and he obtained $2,300 without trouble, courteously thanked the manager, and walked away. On the same day a man registered in the morning at Hotel Oxford as "W. H. Ray, Tor," stayed for lunch, then checked out, carrying a heavy grip. He received some letters waiting for him there. It is believed he came here from Ingersoll, and departed for Brantford.

And Ingersoll Also.

INGERSOLL, Sept. 8.—The unrefuted statement that the mysterious stranger known to the public as Jas. Ray succeeded in defrauding a local branch bank out of $2,300, has created keen interest here, in view of the wholesale manner in which this man has operated. No positive statement has been given out by the manager of the bank, as he has neither denied nor confirmed the report. It is generally understood that the methods of Ray were identically the same as followed elsewhere. It is said that $2,500 is the amount he drew from the bank, but that he left $200 on deposit.

According to reports Ray was cleverly disguised here. He played the role of a cattle-dealer, and is believed to have worn a wig to give him a somewhat elderly appearance. In dress he has been described as almost shabby. Since his disappearance, however, it has been recalled that his hands were white, and looked as if they were not accustomed to hard work.

In reference to the above it might be stated that Ray was known to purchase a ticket from Guelph to Peterborough. Chief Thompson was notified and Chief Chilton of Lindsay, came here to help to pick him out. "Mr." Ray was a little too smooth, and the local officials accompanied by the chief of the village companied by the chief of the village north-west of us boarded the trains in vain.

Chief Thompson stated to the Review that he was certain Ray did not come to Peterborough.

THEY MADE IT A MILLION

Torontonians Turned Out Last Day to Help Fair

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—The "Make-it-a-million!" slogan won at the Canadian National Exhibition. Before the gates closed on Saturday night, bringing the fair of 1913 to an end, the turnstiles registered 105,000 paid admissions, bringing the aggregate attendance for this year to 1,009,000. The fact that 96,000 was required to reach the million record proved a stimulus to everybody who could spare the time and had the inclination to be one of the many.

People having passes paid their way into the grounds to help the count. Those who had portions of the six-for-a-dollar strips left offered to go in and out to use all the coupons. Snatches of conversation in the crowd told of many who were coming "just to make the million." Between the hours of two and five o'clock in the afternoon over 40,000 people passed through the turnstiles, and by six o'clock the million was absolutely assured. All through the grounds the question was frequently canvassed, "I wonder if they have got it yet; I hope so, that is why I came." Later when an improvised electric sign conveyed the good tidings to the crowd in the grand stand the news was received with loud applause and cheers."

KIDS WANT SHORTER HOURS

MONTREAL, Sept. 8.—The school children of Westmount are demanding shorter hours in the school room, and within the past few days have been circulating petitions among their parents asking that they be allowed to attend school for four and a half hours instead of five hours daily.

The scheme of the children is that they shall go to school at the usual hour, nine o'clock, but that instead of having an hour and a half for lunch at noon, they shall work right through until 1.30 o'clock, and have the whole afternoon off.

Orchard Seeks Pardon.

[illegible]E, Idaho, Sept. 8.—Harry Orchard, self-confessed assassin of former Governor Frank Steunenberg, and at one time sentenced to be hanged, has published the required notice in a Caldwell paper that he will apply to the board of pardons at the October meeting for a full and absolute pardon. A church of Waukesha, Wis., is at the head of the movement for pardon.

After the minister has preached his congregation to sleep the sermon is followed by a religious awakening.

HARVEST IS PROGRESSING

Manitoba's Yield is the Banner One Thus Far

WINNIPEG, Sept. 8.—Resumption of fine weather throughout the Canadian prairie west has sent the garnering of the wonderful 1913 crop toward the final stage. Cutting is practically completed in most sections and the total absence of frost gives rise to optimistic hopes that the whole crop will be taken in unharmed.

Of the three provinces Manitoba looks best, the heads showing no effect of the hard weather of three weeks ago. The rain last week did little to retard operations. The majority of farmers had much wheat in stock, and as the rain dried off the wheat dried out ready for threshing. In Saskatchewan five-sixths is already in stock and acre after acre is being smoothed out as the separators, great and small, take in the golden sheaves.

Alberta is not so far advanced as Saskatchewan, but the cutting is well under way, and another week will see threshers busy in every part of the province. In Peace River district an especially heavy crop is reported, ideal weather ripening the grain fast. Already shipments of early threshed grain are arriving in Edmonton, though lack of transportation facilities militates against northern pioneers reaping as full benefits as their brothers of the lower plains.

The Manitoba crop so far as quality is concerned is likely to show the best grain, conditions having been particularly favorable. Some rain fell on Wednesday, but warm weather soon dried it out. New wheat is beginning to move and threshing is likely to be general next week.

The grain crop of Saskatchewan promises to exceed last year's by several million bushels, according to the declaration of several authorities. One prominent grain man puts the yield at an average of 20 bushels to the acre for the entire province. Over 85 per cent. of the cutting is finished and considerable threshing. At Moose Jaw over 20,000 bushels of new wheat have already passed through and the machines will be busy generally next week. Here again the labor shortage is felt. Incoming trains were met at every town and the men snapped up eagerly at good wages.

Boat Destroyed By Fire.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8. — The steamship Penn of the Ericsson line which operated between here and Baltimore, was yesterday destroyed by fire while tied up at one of the Deleware river wharves.

The only persons on the boat at the time were the captain and 31 of the crew. All escaped in safety. The Penn was flooded by city fire engines and fire boats, and the blaze was only extinguished when the boat sank at its moorings. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

WOULD IT BE A FAIR SWAP? THAW-PANKHURST NEWS LTD.

A New Proposition.

HARRY K. THAW.

MRS. EMMELINE PANKHURST.

One leading American newspaper brings forth the idea that it would be an even trade for United States to trade Harry K. Thaw to England for Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

As Mrs. Pankhurst is said to be planning a visit to America, the two notorieties might be made acquainted with a view of coming to some mutual agreement. They might form a news syndicate for instance and arrange their escapades to suit the exigencies of the news market.

SITUATION UNCHANGED

U.S. Government Has No Assurance of Huerta's Withdrawal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—While no announcements were made at any of the Government departments yesterday, of any change in the diplomatic side of the Mexican controversy, two phases of the situation attracted much attention in official circles.

One was the published disclaimer on the part of Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge d'affaires at Mexico City, that any positive assurance had been given him of the intention of Huerta, not to be a candidate in the approaching elections. The other was the receipt of private telegrams from sources close to the administration in Mexico City, stating that Gen. Trevino would be made Minister of War soon to succeed Gen. Blanquet. It had been generally supposed here that Trevino was ordered back to Mexico City by Huerta, to be given the reins of the Government as Provisional President, while Huerta entered the Presidential campaign.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy's statement was not surprising here, as it was pointed out from time to time by Washington officials that they had relied only on the repeated emphasis by Frederick Gamboa, Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, of the statement that Huerta was ineligible by the constitution to succeed himself. Mr. O'Shaughnessy incidentally disclosed the fact that the Mexican officials had supplemented the argument of the second Gamboa note, calling attention to Huerta's ineligibility by verbal references to that part of the note. This further encourages Washington officials to believe that the Huerta candidacy will not materialize.

They realize that Huerta could circumvent constitutional obstacles by resigning in advance of the elections, but such an act, it has been openly stated by high administration officials, would be regarded as a breach of faith and a subterfuge, and they are still proceeding on the assumption that Huerta has been eliminated.

CANADA IS LAST!

Rifleman Had No Practice at 300-Metre Range.

CAMP PERRY, O., Sept. 8.—The international team match shooting trophy remains in Switzerland. The Swiss team, which have won the trophy for many years, was again victorious yesterday, defeating its nearest competitor, France, by 186 points.

The shooting was with free rifles on the 300 metre range, 120 shots, forty standing, forty kneeling and forty prone.

The Swiss team piled up a score of 4,957 points. France was second with 4,771, United States third with 4,677, Sweden fourth, 4,571, Argentine fifth, 4,080, Peru sixth, 3,883, and Canada seventh, 3,745.

The scores of the Canadian team were: Lieut. A. M. Blackburn 799, Sergt.-Major W. L. Dymond 735, Sergt. Alex. Martin 798, Lieut. Geo. Mortimer 730, Col. J. Duff Stuart 683.

The Canadian team entered the race with no intention of winning, as they had no practice at the 300 metre range.

By winning first place Saturday, Switzerland gets the $1,000 cash prize. Each member of the team receives a gold plaque. The team getting second prize receives $900, third $800, fourth $700, fifth $600, sixth $500, seventh $300.

Timber Mill Burned.

OTTAWA, Sept. 8.—Three hundred men are thrown out of work as the result of a fire in the timber mill of the J. R. Booth industries here yesterday. Damage to the extent of $100,000 was caused by the blaze, the origin of which is a mystery. The mill destroyed was only rebuilt three years ago, new machinery being installed at the time.

Splendid work by the firemen prevented the flames spreading to the other buildings owned by the same firm.

Thirty Quakes at Martinique.

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique, Sept. 8.—A series of earthquakes occurred here at an early hour yesterday morning. The shocks numbered 30, but no material damage is reported.

THAW'S LAWYERS WILL CONTEST IMMIGRATION ACT

Fight Revolving Around Stanford White's Slayer Will Be One Regarding the Constitutionality of the Immigration Law, and Will Be Heard By the Full Court of King's Bench.

MONTREAL, Sept. 8.—No move in the matter of seeking the liberation of Harry K. Thaw on bail will be made before the local courts, according to well-informed sources here last night. The friends of the slayer of Stanford White, now that they have brought the whole question to the attention of the Court of the King's Bench will content themselves with awaiting developments in the ordinary course of justice.

Thaw may be brought here early this week or he may be detained at Coaticooke until the 15th. This is a matter entirely in the hands of the Dominion authorities. Once landed in the city, he will be kept in the detention house of the immigration department, not in the city jail.

While awaiting a decision in his case, he will be provided with comfortable quarters, will be able to receive friends and will be allowed any luxuries he may care to pay for.

He will be in no wise a prisoner except that he will be detained as any ordinary immigrant concerning the advisability of whose entry into the country the immigration authorities entertain any doubt.

The whole litigation will resolve itself into a discussion of the question of whether the Canadian immigration act is or is not constitutional. The Thaw attorneys will contend that the act, in its present form contains an infringement of the right of the individual to free locomotion. They will also represent the enactment as embodying an infringement of the habeas corpus act as well as of the Magna Charta. Thus it is seen that the scope of the case is widened to such an extent that the Dominion Parliament, the constitutionality of whose enactments is placed in jeopardy will be directly interested.

Thus far it is only the immigration department which has been embroiled in the litigation, but it is not unlikely that Parliament will have to intervene directly to back up the constitutionality of the act which it passed.

When the matter comes before the Court of King's Bench it will be heard by the full bench, which consists of Chief Justice Archambault, Justices Trenholm, Cross, Lavergne, Carroll and Gervais.

Of these, five constitute a full bench for an actual sitting.

EAST YORK TO-DAY

The bye-election in East York is already in progress, and we shall soon hear of the result of the contest. The candidates are Mr. Geo. S. Henry for the Conservatives and Mr. Chamberlain for the Liberals.

While the general belief is that the seat will be retained for the Government, there is a feeling that lethergy and overconfidence on the part of Conservative voters may give too much advantage to the Liberals who are doing their utmost to weaken the Government's position.

Very little interest has been displayed in the contest, even in the constituency itself and Mr. Henry complains that he cannot rouse a decent discussion over the campaign.

Antagonism is the life of a political contest, and there is no contest without it. North Grey was a case in point, but it is not necessary to rake in the mud and indulge in vile personalities to create an interest in political affairs.

It is not that there are no problems to discuss and nothing to fight about that East York is taking the election so quietly. The season of the year, the many detractions of holidays and fairs, the comings and goings that keep the people preoccupied, all make it difficult for Mr Henry and his opponent to get the people's interest concentrated upon politics.

But it may be that East York has made up its mind and does not want to talk about it, but will vote for the right man and every Conservative knows who that is.

NOW FOR PETERBOROUGH'S FAIR

The Canadian National Fair is over and has closed with the satisfaction of having achieved all and more than it set out to do. Over one million passed through its gates and the interest displayed in the many departments of the exhibition was even greater than of yore.

Wonder has often been expressed by visitors to Canada at the unabated success of an annual exhibition run on so stupendous a scale, and drawing as it does, interest from all over the Dominion. Such a show would be impossible in any other country in the world. The explanation is perhaps in the fact that Canada, while it is almost entirely agricultural, is at the same time progressive. The educative value of the National exhibition to the average farmer and his family is invaluable. It brings him into touch with the trend of things not only in agricultural matters, but with almost every phase of modern life, which he would be practically ignorant of if there was no such display to draw him to the city once a year.

But although the National is over it has by no means satiated the desire for fairs, but rather whetted that desire. Its progeny is numerous. No sooner does Toronto begin to breathe easily again (if it ever did breathe easily) than every town and village throughout Ontario and the other provinces begins to emulate the capital city by gathering from the country round about everything worth looking at in the way of cattle, horses and stock of every kind, together with local manufactured goods and works of art and craftsmanship.

This week will see the Peterborough Fall Fair in full swing, and like the Mother of Fairs in Toronto we are all anticipating a show unexcelled by any in past years.

The managers of the fair have been working toward this end and they no doubt intend imitating the Queen City by getting a high mark of attendance from the surrounding cities and villages. They cannot hope for a million, but they can deserve it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Hawkes, in the Canadian says in reference to the naval question and his attitude thereon, that the best thing is to 'make up your mind what you are going to do and stick to it' even though you land the country in bankruptcy? There was an old sea-song which ran:

"I'll stick to the ship lads,
You save your lives."

Mr. Hawke's version would run thus:

"You stick to the ship lads,
I'll save my life."

The Montreal Star seems fearful that Mrs. Pankhurst may arrive in Canada before we get rid of Harry Thaw.

The Daily Telegraph of Montreal takes up the greater portion of its front page with a heading about the movement of the escaped lunatic Thaw. If there is much more of this Thaw mania among newspapers it will look as though lunacy [illegible] infection.

EXCERPTS

To Extend Flogging Penalty.

The flogging penalty for "white slave" traffickers worked so well in England that it has been decided to extend it to the British crown colonies and to India. In the eastern colonies the whole subject will be dealt with in one general ordinance. The powers of the protectors of Chinese immigrants and the police are to be increased, and the penal provisions of the ordinance are to be made very severe.

"Executioner to Her Majesty."

The actual signboard of John Calcraft, the famous public executioner who during his long term of office carried out the extreme penalty of the law on many notorious murderers, has just been placed on view in Mme. Tussaud's Exhibition. The board used to be outside Calcraft's shop. It is framed, and has crudely painted upon it, in large block letters, the following extraordinary inscription: "J. Calcraft, Boot and Shoe Maker. Executioner to Her Majesty." Surmounting the frame is the Royal Coat of Arms. John Calcraft who was born in 1800 and died in 1879 was executioner in London from 1829 until 1874.—Evening Standard.

An Old Liquor House.

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of these reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Since his arrest he has been held in the East Cambridge jail without bail, pending the arrival of extradition papers. These reached Boston Saturday and he was at once turned over a New Brunswick officer, who left immediately with his prisoner.

Police Far Too Busy.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Sept. 8.—Keen popular resentment has arisen against the officiousness of the police and their alleged unwarrantable interference with the freedom of the citizens and as a result of numerous specific complaints the police commission Saturday afternoon decided to hold a public investigation beginning to-day. Merchants declare that lumberjacks with big rolls from the woods are leaving Prince Albert alone, because the police will give them no peace, and are going to Saskatoon instead.

Won't Lift Cattle Embargo.

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, returned from the old country yesterday. Speaking of the Ghent fair, he said Canada undoubtedly had the feature exhibit there. At its close Commissioner Hutchinson will take the exhibit to the Panama Pacific Fair. The Minister made a study of extensive farming operations in Belgium.

He sees little prospects of Britain lifting its cattle embargo for the benefit of Canada.

Rain Floods N. Y. Subway.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Not a wheel moved in the New York subway, between 96th street and the Brooklyn terminal, during the rush hour yesterday morning, resulting in one of the worst traffic congestions the city has known.

Over three inches of rain fall during the night caused a flood of subway tracks to the depth of three feet or more, and over nine miles of four-tracked subway were out of commission.

One good turndown may obviate the necessity for another.

Chicago People Going Crazy?

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—The percentage of crazy people in Chicago is increasing at an alarming rate. Investigation covering four years shows an increase of twenty-five per cent. in insanity, a rate almost twice as great as that of the increase in total population. In other words, while the city gains less than three per cent. a year in population, the number of insane increases by almost five per cent. a year.

The Indignant Major.

Perhaps one of the funniest "Spoonerisms" told is the story of the peppery old retired major who marched into church one Sunday and found a stranger occupying his favorite seat.

Choking with indignation, he spluttered out: "Sir, are you aware that you are occupying my pie?"

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

Britz [illegible] slowly to [illegible] room, where the [illegible] Orleans were penned [illegible]. While the chief of detectives and his two subordinates were talking, [illegible] rest in the lieutenant's easy chairs, Britz talked to Manning in whispers, then went to the telephone and called Mrs. Missioner's house.

"Good morning, Mrs. Missioner," he said over the wire. "This is Lieutenant Britz. Britz, of Headquarters. I called you up to tell you we have arrested the jewel thieves and—beg pardon? What did you say, your jewels have been returned to you? That's strange. I have one of them in my pocket now. How's that? You say you have all your jewels? Then whose is this—the Maharanee? Pardon me, Mrs. Missioner, I don't quite understand. We have the thieves here and the biggest of the diamonds. What did you say—you don't want the thieves prosecuted? Why, really Mrs. Missioner—yes, of course—yes, I am talking from Police Headquarters—they are here now, all the thieves, lot No. 1 and lot No. 2. You say you don't understand. Well, I tell you, Mrs. Missioner, perhaps you had better run down here. Yes, I know it is a great deal to ask, but I have worked pretty hard to find your diamonds—yes, day and night. The Chief thinks it would be better if you could arrange to come down. It won't take you long; you need not stay more than a few minutes. Oh, but you don't know who the thieves are; yes, you have guessed in part—not altogether; but I think you'd better come down, Mrs. Missioner; you will be interested, I am sure. How's that? Bring Mr. Sands? By all means, if you wish. Yes, I will await you—then you'll come? Thank you very much, Mrs. Missioner. Good by.

"Now, what do you think of that?" said Britz to Manning. "After all our work, Mrs. Missioner calmly informs me that her jewels have been returned to her, and that she does not wish to prosecute the thieves. She says she is willing to overlook their little deviations from the path of honesty as she is so glad to recover her jewels. I told her I had the Maharanee in [illegible] hated she has [illegible]. What do you know about [illegible]?"

Manning was utterly nonplussed, while Gordon and Hicks, knowing only parts of the story, were at sea.

"She says she is going to ask Eriston Sands to come down here with her. I told her that was all right. We'll have quite an audience, Chief, when we ring up the curtain. While we're waiting for Mrs. Missioner, we may as well get out the facts in the case of Mrs. Delaroche." Turning to Gordon and Hicks, he said: "Will you take these second-story dark men into the next room for a little while?"

The two detectives hastened to comply with the lieutenant's request and Manning braced himself to put the lady of the Renaissance through the third degree mercilessly as he had done in the case of Elinor Holcomb.

Mrs. Delaroche was brought in by a private of the detective force, and Britz, with elaborate politeness, bowed her to a chair. She was too angry to acknowledge his courtesy, and she sat looking at the lieutenant and the Chief with flashing eyes.

"Mrs. Delaroche," said Britz, "I may as well tell you at the outset that the game is up. We know all about your connection with this case, and the best thing for you to do is to tell us everything you know. Your friend, Mr. Griswold, as you have seen, is under arrest. What do you know about him?"

"I shall answer no questions," said Mrs. Delaroche, "until I shall have had an opportunity to engage counsel."

"You won't need any counsel in this case, madam," the Chief interposed.

"No, indeed," said Britz, "I don't want to be rude, Mrs. Delaroche, but I may as well tell you that the District Attorney will give you all the legal advice you require, if you persist in withholding your information from authorities. We know pretty well nearly all we need to know about Griswold, and when you tell us—as you are going to do—what you know about him, the Missioner mystery will have been cleared."

"I know nothing about Mr. Griswold that can militate against him in any way," said Mrs. Delaroche. "He is a gentleman whose only misfortune is that he has fallen into the hands of such men as you!"

"Oh, indeed!" said Britz. "Well, misfortunes never come singly, and if Mr. Griswold is unfortunate enough to find himself here, you won't find any little golden horseshoes hung about your presence in Police Headquarters—I suppose you know this is Police Headquarters, madam?"

"So I was told by the boor who brought me here," replied the woman.

"Never mind calling [illegible] any names, madam," said Manning. "We don't hire Chesterfields to arrest crooks."

She sprang [illegible] like a panther and glared [illegible] until she towered over the Chief. She seemed about to [illegible], but restrained herself by a visible effort and then, covering her face with her hands, burst into a storm of tears that would have swept the two men off their feet if they had not been accustomed to that sort of thing a dozen times a month. Manning and Britz waited for the storm to subside. Then Britz said, a little more gently:

"There's no occasion for hysterics, Mrs. Delaroche. I only want you to tell me everything."

"I shall tell you nothing," she replied again. Although her voice was shaken with sobs, there was a note of resolve in it that spoke the strength of her courage.

"Yes, you will; you'll tell me everything, but first of all I'm going to tell you something. You are engaged to Mr. Curtis Griswold, aren't you?"

"Not that it's any affair of yours," she returned, "but merely that you may understand I am not at all ashamed of it, yes, I am."

"Does that mean that Mr. Griswold is engaged to marry you?"

"Of course!" she replied with an indignant flush.

"Now, Mrs. Delaroche," Britz replied, "I'm going to tell you that you are the most mistaken lady in Manhattan Island right now. Griswold is not engaged to you; at any rate, he doesn't understand that he is."

The woman was threatened with a return of her passionate outburst, but curiosity got the better of her through her emotions, and whirling toward the lieutenant, she asked:

"What do you mean, sir?"

"I mean, madam," answered Britz, "that Mr. Griswold, though he engaged himself to marry you—though he gave you reason to believe that you and he would be married very shortly, has been industriously engaged for some time past in attempting to become engaged to another woman."

"Who is she?" asked the lady of the Renaissance eagerly.

"A most natural question, madam," said Britz, "but one which an innate sense of delicacy restrains me from satisfying. However, the lady to whom I refer is on her way here now, and in half an hour at most, you will have the pleasure of seeing her."

"Who is she? What is she? Where is she?" exclaimed Mrs. Delaroche.

Doris Missioner's blond beauty would have fared badly at her hands, perhaps, had the multi-millionaire widow been in the room at that moment.

"She is the possessor of many millions," said Britz, "a woman of acknowledged beauty and of undeniable charm. Of course, I don't undertake to say for a moment, madam, that her attractiveness equals yours. Doubtless, Mr. Griswold, being an enterprising young man, has eyes more to her millions than to her looks. Nevertheless, she is a beauty."

He watched closely the effect of her words on the high-strung woman facing him, and saw that he had touched a responsive chord. Her eyes flashed as if her very soul vibrated with jealous rage. Her breath came and went in short gasps. Her fingers twisted and untwisted nervously, and she seemed to be on the point of a violent revelation when the situation was interrupted by a knock on the door.

Washing blankets is easily and well done in this way: Pour into a tub half a pint of household ammonia; cover immediately with fine warm water. This sends the lather through the blanket and loosens the dirt. Stir the blanket with a stick until the dirt is in the water. Rinse in a tub of clean water, the same temperature as the first. Run lightly through a wringer and hang out to dry.

A RUSE THAT FAILED

By LAURA IDA ROSS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

John and Gertrude Bingham were obliged to have live with them John's aunt, a disagreeable old woman, who was constantly making them miserable. There were two reasons why they should keep her in the house. One was that she had no other home, and the other was that she possessed about $50,000 of property which John expected or at least hoped she would leave to him at her death. Besides, the old lady was constantly quarreling with the only home open to her and making new wills, leaving her money to some distant relative. There were a number of these wills outstanding, but John knew that he had the last one locked in his desk in his bedroom.

Not long after this will was made the old lady became an imbecile, and it became necessary to send her to a sanitarium. John now felt perfectly safe, for his aunt could not make another will that would be legal.

The old lady's departure was the beginning of a new era in the lives of John and Gertrude. Not a ripple ever came between them, and their home was peace and comfort. True, John's income was very small, but his aunt had never paid any board, always throwing out as a reason that at her death he would be amply reimbursed. But the cost of living was constantly increasing, and at the time of the old lady's departure his household expenses were double what they had been when the couple were first married.

Mrs. Bingham's mother became ill, and Gertrude was obliged to go to her. While she was away John slept in the house, taking his meals at restaurants. He would return from business late in the afternoon, get on as best he could till dinner time, then go out and dine alone at a cheap cafe.

At last Gertrude's presence at her mother's home was no longer necessary, and she concluded to give John a surprise by returning without notifying him. Her train arrived at such an hour as would take her to her own home about the time John reached it after business hours. She arrived before him. Going upstairs, she saw a figure flitting through the hall. Gertrude gave chase and cornered a woman in one of the bedrooms. She was altogether too well dressed for a common thief. Indeed, she was very comely, so the demon of suspicion entered Gertrude's breast.

"So this is the way my husband passes his time while I am away, is it?" she said to the woman, the blood mounting to her cheek, while at the same time a tear stood in her eye.

The woman made no reply at first. She seemed to be thinking. Presently she said:

"I presume you are John Bingham's wife. If you make any ado about my being here you will ruin him and me. You will also make my husband miserable and bring disgrace and unhappiness on my children. I beseech you, let me go. John will tell you how we have been tempted."

"I will let you go after John comes home and I have had an opportunity to tell you both my opinion of you."

"You shall not prevent my going."

The woman started to leave the room, but Gertrude stood in the only opening. How the matter would have resulted no one knows, for at that moment the front door was heard to open and close and some one was heard in the lower hall. In another moment John Bingham appeared in the upper hall. His wife turned upon him like a fury. The cornered woman simply stared at both the others without speaking.

"I never saw this person before," said John quietly, but firmly. "Madam," he added, addressing the stranger, "what did you come into my house for? You had some object in doing so, but I confess it puzzles me to guess what it is. You are too well dressed for a thief. Your pretending to come here to visit me is a subterfuge."

He studied her for a few moments, during which she stood mute, looking from him to his wife like one at bay. Whatever was her real object in entering the house, matters were going hard with her. John turned to Gertrude and said quickly:

"Aunt Caroline is dead. I received a notice to that effect at the office today. She died the day before yesterday. The letter was delayed by being sent to the wrong address."

Husband and wife looked at each other. An idea struck them at the same moment, or perhaps it was communicated from one to the other by telepathy.

"The will!" exclaimed Gertrude.

"Go to my desk and see if it is there," said John. "Here is the key."

She took the key from him as she passed him, went to the desk and looked for the will.

"It's gone!" she cried, running back to where she had left the other two.

"Madam," said John sternly to the woman, "you are some relative of mine who, having heard of the death of my aunt and having an old will leaving her property to you, have stolen mine to destroy it. Give me the paper and go free. Retain it and I shall send you to a police station to be searched. This is a penitentiary offense."

The woman considered awhile, then, taking a paper from a hand bag she carried, tossed it at him.

"Who are you?" he asked. "I wish to know from curiosity alone."

"Jane Medway, a cousin of yours on your mother's side. Ten years ago your aunt made a will in my favor."

Ancient Cities.

Jerusalem in the days of Solomon probably did not contain 20,000 people.

Constantinople at the time of its greatest splendor as capital of the eastern empire had a population of about 1,500,000.

Babylon, whose name has come to be synonymous with dense population, never had over 1,200,000 inhabitants in its palmiest days.

Rome, the mistress of the world, the great city to which all roads led, "Rome the Eternal," did not exceed 2,000,000 in population. Gibbon, indeed, believes that it had only 1,200,000.

Athens when she led the Greek states in repelling the invasion of Xerxes had only 30,000 inhabitants, but Herodotus speaks of this number as if it was something to boast of.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is now raising oranges near San Diego, Cal.

Mrs. John Buzzell, an active lady of ninety years, recently traveled alone from Florida to New Hampshire.

Mme. Hatoyama, a Japanese woman who was educated in this country, states in an eastern paper that Japan has no old maids and therefore no suffrage question.

Miss Nellie O'Farrell of San Francisco, who has gained considerable notice as the first woman wireless operator in the world, has retired from the operators' field. She was married recently.

Miss Hallie M. Daggett, said to be the first woman in the United States appointed to the position of lookout at a forest reserve station, lives in Siskiyou county, Cal. She has been placed in charge of Eddy's gulch lookout, situated on a peak of the Salmon Alps, 6,000 feet high. Her duty is to keep a lookout for fires and report to the nearest forest station.

Weight of the "Limited."

Generally speaking, the heaviest of the cars comprising a "limited" train is the diner, which exceeds the other cars in weight by about 10,000 or 15,000 pounds. Such a car, with full equipment, usually weighs something like 140,000 pounds when ready to make its customary division run.

A 16 section sleeper may weigh from 110,000 pounds to 125,000 pounds, while the buffet library car of the transcontinental type comes at 107,000 pounds.

The baggage car, weighing 85,000 pounds, may be the lightest in a train, but the postal car next to it weighs, on an average, 103,000 pounds.

A chair car is full weight at 87,000 pounds, while the ordinary coach tips the scales at 93,000 pounds.

With a locomotive and tender weighing, say, 260,000 pounds, it is easy to estimate the enormous weight of some of the modern through trains of seven cars.

Much reading will not make a full man as quickly as much feeding.

TO RECONSTRUCT THE ESTURION

Extensive Alterations to be Made

The Lindsay Post states that the owners of the steamer "Esturion," the Trent Valley Navigation Co., it is said contemplate making some important changes in her for next season. The present engines will be removed and powerful twin engines to drive twin screws will be put in. The overhang at the sides where the paddles wheels now are, will be cut off by about eighteen inches.

A dancing floor will be built where some of the engine room now is, and means will be provided so that the exposed parts of the upper deck can be closed in with canvas in a few minutes in case of rain. There will be other changes of a minor nature.

If the proposed plans are carried out the boating public will hardly recognize their old friend, the "Esturion."

THE SAME OLD STORY

Thos. Sarginson, a blacklister was fined the usual $10 on his appearance at police court this morning, on the charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list. When called into the witness box to tell where he got his liquor, he sprang the same old guff, which is as old as the hills, to wit; that he got the booze from a stranger at the Grand Trunk station on Saturday morning. Witness said that he was at the station waiting for a friend to come from Toronto and he and a stranger started talking and as a result the stranger produced a bottle and treated.

Chief.—I have been informed that you have got liquor several times lately.

The witness admitted getting an occasional drink but they were always from a stranger. Also admitted taking a bottle home, but got it from a stranger.

I think that the liquor habit destroys a man's conscience, remarked the magistrate.

RT. HON. ANDREW FISHER DISCUSSES THE YELLOW PERIL.

Former Prime Minister of Australia Says the Commonwealth Will Not Welcome the Little Yellow Men to its Shores—Not Desirable in Large Numbers — Australia's Military Training.

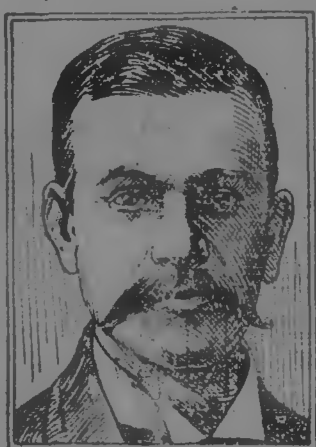
In spite of the alliance that exists between England and Japan, Rt. Hon. Andrew Fisher, until a few days ago premier of the commonwealth of Australia, declares himself emphatically for Japanese exclusion. He is considered to voice the views of an overwhelming majority of the views of the people of Australia and New Zealand.

"The newer countries," says Mr. Fisher, "those with many natural resources still undeveloped, are considered fair fields for exploitation in these days of migration and emigration and it is time that the lawmakers of such countries guard the eternal well being of their own peoples, regulate severely the incomings and doings of the alien who would reap a harvest at the expense of or at least in unfair competition with the legitimate heir to the soil and its products. I am unwilling to insult the patriotism and intelligence of Australians by even intimating that the Nipponese are welcome to our shores.

"Millions of the best and most loyal people of the empire will rejoice when the time limit set for the life of this understanding will have been reached.



RT. HON. ANDREW FISHER.

It was entered into inadvisedly, at least on England's part, for its working out must have made England take sides with Japan as against some of the white nations, Russia, Germany, France or Portugal, over eastern affairs.

"I do not regard the Japanese as a desirable people to have in large numbers in a white man's country. Even with the franchise — which they will never obtain in Australia—they would form elements separate and distinct from the rest of the community.

"A few years ago it was believed by most people that the vast sections of land in the new countries would never be taken up for settlement. Yet land is almost at a premium to-day and the time is probably not far distant when the last portions of the public domain will be thrown open to the people.

"Australia is learning, and we do not propose to lightly or lavishly bestow our public lands."

Australia has provided for future contingencies by the building of a navy and the adoption of compulsory military service. Every Australian boy from 14 years of age is a senior cadet and must do 16 days' drill annually. At 18 he is moved up into the citizen army and from then until he is 26 he must do 16 days annually, if infantry or horse, and 25 days in case of artillery or engineers. There are 178,000 senior cadets registered throughout Australia. In July, 1912, the first batch of cadets, 18,000, were moved up into the adult ranks. Military observers have expressed astonishment at the energy and ability of the new soldiers.

The Empire's Resources.

Only hard figures can adequately tell the story of the resources of the British Empire. In the production of staple articles that part of the world under our flag has some amazing facts to unfold. Take the year 1911, for example. During that year staple products to the following values were produced within the British Empire: Coal, £125,000,000; diamonds, £8,299,000; gold, £55,000,000; silver, £4,368,000.

Turning to quantities from mere cash values, the British Empire produces of wheat, 788,700,000 bushels; of wine, 6,500,000 gallons; of tea, 455,600,000 lbs.; and of cotton, 1,279,616,000 lbs. All our Overseas Dominions contribute their quota to the above amazing totals, and the figures of our smaller Colonies, such as Newfoundland, give one the idea that such Dominions are, after all, not quite so small as one would imagine.

Aerial Flights.

The aeroplane yet remains a dangerous plaything.—Baltimore American.

Cody promises to hurdle the Atlantic in an airship in twenty hours without stopping. Last fellow who tried it got his feet wet.—New York American.

Still another German dirigible has encountered a squall to its own great disadvantage. All that stands in the way of making the dirigible airship an assured commercial proposition is the unfortunate liking for play the wind has for huge bulks that are lighter than air.—New York World.

One hideous injustice of the silly season is that everybody can get away with an alibi except a baseball team.—Cleveland Leader.

WARSHIPS' JOBS.

Strange Tasks Fall to the Sailors in Times of Peace.

Fighting fires, rescuing passengers from sinking ships, exploring unknown lands, and dredging the mysterious abysses of mid ocean—these are some samples of the various tasks which fall to the lot of our sailors.

Sometimes a warship has to do the job of bailiff. The people of Tory Island, on the west coast of Ireland, have always been noted for their objection to paying taxes, and more than once gunboats have been sent to enforce the demands of the rate collector. The first occasion ended in a terrible disaster. The Wasp brought a posse of bailiffs to levy county cess. She ran on the iron rocks which fringe the coast and was lost, with every soul aboard. It is believed to this day by the people of Tory Island that the reason for her destruction was that the famous "cursing stone" of Tory was turned upon the ship.

Several of our smaller gunboats, beautiful yacht-like little craft of about eight hundred tons, of the Circe type, are always busy at fishery protection work.

Twelve years ago the action of one of these fishery gunboats very nearly led to a war with France. H.M.S. Leda found the Star of the Sea, a French lugger, fishing within the three mile limit off Dungeness, and hailed her to stop. She refused and made off. Blank cartridge were fired in vain, then at last live ones were used, and the steersman of the French lugger was killed.

The Moray Firth is closed to trawlers of all nations, our own included, and British gunboats act as water bailiffs. But to be forced to catch and run in their own countrymen is not a job that Jack at all enjoys.

Not long ago the British cruiser Pelorus sailed straight away into the heart of the South American continent. From Para at the mouth of the Amazon she steamed a thousand miles to Manaos, and then another thirteen hundred up to Iquitos. Her object was to assist British trade, and the beneficial effects of her visit are already plainly to be noted.

As odd an experience as ever befel any man who wears His Majesty's naval uniform was the lot of a diver aboard H.M.S. Ringarooma. Off the New Hebrides a torpedo was lost at practice. The diver was sent down seventeen fathoms to try to recover it. In little more than a minute he signalled to be pulled up, and was then found to be bleeding from eyes and nose. He explained that there was a volcano under the ship and the water was boiling!

Helping Him to Play Better.

Mr. Charles Brookfield, the British co-Censor of Plays, who has been very ill lately, has the reputation of being one of the wittiest men in London.

He once ran a theatrical season at the Haymarket Theatre. It was not very successful; in fact, the theatre was nearly empty every evening, and the box office returns were heart breaking.

One night the manager asked Mr. Brookfield as he was going on the stage: "What time shall I bring you the box office receipts?"

"Just before I go on in my pathetic scene, please!" said Mr. Brookfield.

FLOWER DAY

Saturday afternoon saw the inauguration of Flower Day in Peterborough, when some fifty boys of the Y.M.C.A. gave flowers to the hospitals and the sick of the city. The flowers were the gifts of local citizens and members of the Y., but were delivered by the junior members of the institution under the leadership of Messrs. Galley and Hainsworth of the Y.

With the wonderful success they met with Saturday the event will be an annual one for the Y.M.C.A. The boys in their visits to the different hospitals evinced remarkable interest in the sick. Among the places visited were the Nicholls and St. Joseph's hospitals, the House of Providence, and others. Flowers were also delivered to a large number of sick in the city. Over one hundred boquets of flowers were used in the distribution.

Rev. Mr. Peever spoke a few words to the boys at the Y. before they started forth on their mission.

MUST WAIT FIVE YEARS

Before He Can Make Love to His Sweetheart

Sometime ago the accused appeared before Magistrate Dumble in Police Court, on the charge of abducting the same girl from her home in the city, but was let go on suspended sentence.

Shortly after the case here Dixon left the city and went to Port Hope about the middle of August, the girl Saddler left her home and went to Port Hope, where she met Dixon, who managed to get a marriage license, but just as the marraige was about to be performed, the police walked in on the couple and as a result Dixon had to face the charge of perjury.

Whether Dixon will be brought back to the city on the alleged charge of abduction or not, it is not known.

Suffragette Skirts.

Having seen a picture of the new suffragette skirt, it is our notion that it brings the waist line into too close propinquity with the lower deck of a double chin to be an artistic success.—Toledo Blade.

The newest importation from Paris is a skirt having two pockets, one of which is a dummy with hooks. One gets into the skirt through this pocket. Heretofore women have got into their clothes through their husbands' pockets, and this may explain why the new garment is called "the suffrage skirt."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Town Topics.

New York has inaugurated church services on the tops of skyscrapers. That's getting nearer heaven.—Boston Transcript.

Kansas wants to know what to do with 1,200 abandoned churches. In Cleveland they are useful as garages and vaudeville houses.—Cleveland Leader.

Chicago's health department advises citizens to keep their temper in hot weather, that being about the only thing that the pickpockets and burglars there can't steal.—Detroit Free Press.

A preserve closet should be cool and dark. If it has a glass door hang a black curtain over it. It is a good plan to wrap jars of cherries, raspberries and strawberries in paper to exclude the light.

When poaching eggs, try adding a teaspoon of vinegar to the water This helps to set the white and keeps it from spreading.

Points For Mothers

If it's a shame to give a dog a bad name, how much more deplorable is it to thus brand a little child, says a recent correspondent. Yet some parents proceed to do this very thing with the utmost unconcern. They give their little child the worst heritage that they have in their power to burden him with, the consciousness that he is not a good boy and hence that goodness can hardly be expected of him.

Perhaps the first thing that any man or woman has to learn in undertaking any business of life is the lesson of confidence in his own worth. If a man believes himself a failure, success would be a miracle or an accident.

And it's pretty much the same way with behavior. Unconsciously we model our behavior after the type of person that we imagine ourselves to be.

But all these things are platitudes which every parent knows. Yet, knowing them, how often does he proceed to give his little child that worst of all gifts—a willingness to think evil of himself!

Perhaps one reason why this is so is the almost general failure of grown people to realize how early in life impressions are made. It must be remembered that before a child can talk coherently he can understand, or at least gain definite impressions from conversation which he overhears. This is proved time and time again by the chance remarks a baby makes which show that he has heard and understood something not meant for his ears.

And yet how often his parents take him out and apologize for his behavior or imply by their conversation that he is a "terror!"

"Well, there will be no peace for us now that Johnny is up from his nap," says Johnny's mother in the presence of her small son.

Far be it from Johnny to disappoint the expectations of his maternal relative.

This is only a sample of the sort of thing that grown people repeatedly say in the presence of children. And it's a very great pity. Give the child at least a fair chance and don't brand him at the start with a bad name.

Fancy Work For Children.

The children often come to you and ask for something to do, something to make, for a child's ideas are always creative. Here is some rainy day work for busy fingers:

A wall match holder can be made on a foundation of cardboard cut out in a diamond, the upper portion of which is much larger than the lower. Fold the two lower ends upward so as to form a pocket and cover the whole with silk or any bright colored fabric. Then bind with heavy cord and attach a ring to hang it up by.

A hanging pincushion is also easily made. Cut out two pieces about five or six inches square from bristol board and cover one with figured material and one with plain. Sew them together and then bend the square thus formed into a cornucopia shape, with the plain side as the lining. Bind with cord and leave a loop to hang by. Fill with absorbent cotton or with bran all the way to the top and sew silk tightly over it. Cotton is better, as bran is rather heavy.

A button penwiper may be made by cutting a circle of bright colored silk, buttonholed to cardboard or cartridge paper, and then several other circles of chamois a bit smaller. Fasten all together with a large ornamental button. Even the smallest child can make this.

A simple footstool should be made of a strong wooden box with the lid nailed firmly down. Screw on small casters and pad the top of the box Cover with coarse canvas. Now cut out a piece of brocade in the shape of a cross and large enough to cover the tops and sides of the box after padding. Nail this down and finish off the edges by furniture gimp held down by tiny brass tacks. This is something for the boys to make.

A man is all right in his way as long as he keeps out of your way.

A good home-made polish for floors can be prepared as follows; Melt half a pound of beeswax by setting the vessel containing it in an outer vessel of boiling water, and to the wax add, while stirring constantly, a quart of hold ammonia, and let it stand in ho[illegible]

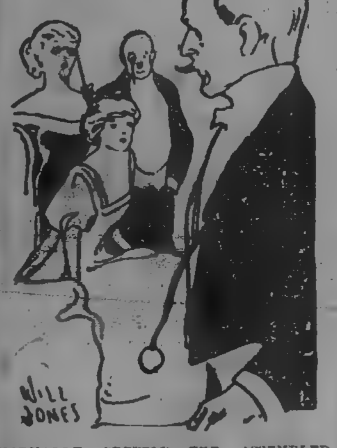
He Saved a Friend's Life, but That Didn't Count With the Smart Set.

By L. B. HITCHCOCK.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

New York society may be typified by the confluence of two streams, the one clear, the other muddy. A member of the upper circles must be rich—not the young people, who may float temporarily on the surface, but the married people, who are regularly in the swim. Both these branches must contain a golden sediment. The clear branch typifies the old New Yorkers of social prominence, who have retained sufficient means to live high. The muddy branch represents the newly born commercial aristocracy.

Ned Van Amsterdam belonged to the clearer of these two branches. His ancestors had brewed the beer drunk by the Dutchmen while playing at bowls on the bowling green at the lower end of Manhattan Island and owned a bowerie in what is now the middle of New York city. That was 200 years ago, and two centuries is quite enough to produce a gentleman out of almost any human material. Ned still owned enough of the farm to make him very rich and was a gentleman through and through. But during the first years of the twentieth century he found himself in a swim principally occupied by those whose fortunes were as much larger than his as their ownership had been shorter.



FORMALLY GREETED THE ASSEMBLED COMPANY.

Ned was a sportsman. He had hunted in every land where there was game, and travel had made him cosmopolitan. Next to hunting his favorite sport was yachting. One summer as soon as the season opened, he put his yacht in commission and made up a party of men and women for a cruise.

Now, it so happened that when the list of those who had accepted was complete nearly all the guests turned out to be of the muddy branch of the social stream. In other words, they were of the commercial aristocracy. If Ned had had a wife to "blue pencil" his lists she might have insisted on making this one over, but he was democratic and used to associate, especially when hunting or traveling, with any one he happened to fall in with. Therefore he failed to notice that his party was made up principally of snobs.

There was one guest, a German, whom Ned had picked up somewhere in the west. In fact, he had just arrived from the land of cattle and wore a costume not much better than that of a cowpuncher. A man is always at a disadvantage as a foreigner, and Carl Schmitt would have received the cold shoulder from Van Amsterdam's guests on this account if on no other. Besides, so fresh an importation was he that he could speak no great amount of English. Ned lent him a yachting suit, and in this he looked as refined as any of the party, but this did not help him with them. As in days of yore people were used to inquiring as to one's pedigree, so did these ignore any one who was not known to possess a big income and who had not been permitted to buy a ticket of admission into the gilded circle.

There was one young lady in the party, Miss Ten Broek, poor, but respectable, who was considered to have received her invitation from being a distant connection of the host. Every one felt obliged to treat her civilly on account of this relationship, but no one wished to take the trouble to do so. It happened that Miss Ten Broek was preparing herself to go to Dresden to study music and was giving a part of her time to making herself proficient in the German language. Great relief was experienced by the guests when Miss Ten Broek availed herself of Mr. Schmitt's presence to practice conversing in German. Since the two occupied each other's time and attention, there was no necessity for any of the party to expend any effort on either of them.

Van Amsterdam was much disgruntled at the treatment of his German friend. In speaking to his guests of Schmitt he said:

"I met him out in the wilderness and asked him to go with me on a hunt for grizzlies. I had killed all sorts of game, including bear, but never a grizzly, and was quite anxious to shoot one. They are the worst game to tackle we have in our country, and that's what makes hunting them fascinating. Schmitt agreed to go with me, and it was lucky he did. We found the grizzly, and I poured lead into him. But my bullets had no more effect than hailstones. I had wasted all the ammunition in my gun and had no time to put in any more, for the bear was on me. Schmitt sprang at him with his knife and saved me."

"That was very brave, Ned," said one of the party, "and I don't wonder you feel under obligations to do something for the fellow. But, really, wouldn't it have been better for you to write him a check for a thousand or so—you could afford it—than to put him in with people with whom he can't assimilate?"

Ned looked at the speaker through a pair of honest eyes that bespake indignant disagreement, but he was too much of a gentleman to reprove a guest on his own yacht, so without a word he arose and walked away.

The incident was repeated among the party, but it did not improve Mr. Schmitt's position with them a jot. What had they to do with the repayment of their host's obligations? Because an ordinary fellow—a German at that—who had probably come over in the steerage had helped Ned out of a scrape was that any reason why he should inflict the man on them?

Meanwhile Mr. Schmitt and Miss Ten Broek chatted in the German language, the latter deriving much benefit therefrom. She discovered that whatever station he might have occupied in his own country he was very intelligent. But education in Germany is breathed in with the air. Miss Ten Broek told some of the party that Mr. Schmitt knew enough to have been a professor in a university in his own country. The information had no effect whatever. Had he discovered an antitoxin for the disease most fatal to mankind and given it to the world free the fact would not be a reason why they should make a companion to him.

The days passed, during which the yacht skirted the coast southward and returned to New York. It was agreed that the trip had been an enjoyable one, though the unanimity of the party had been somewhat broken in upon by the presence of at least one person who had no place in it. In parting with his guests Ned told them that he had made a mistake in trying to introduce a foreign element among them, but that he hoped to make amends very soon. He wished them all to dine with him in New York, and they might assure themselves that there would be no one present they would not wish to meet.

The dinner came off at Van Amsterdam's residence, and every member of the yachting party was present except Miss Ten Broek. Her cousin invited her, but she declined. When the guests were assembled and went into the dining room it was noticed at once that the chair next the host on his right was vacant. Several courses had been served, and the guest for whom the chair was intended did not appear.

"Who's to be on your right?" asked one.

"Count Ludwig von Gehrenstein," said Ned.

"Why is he not here?"

"He is in Washington. He went yesterday to pay his respects to the president. You know, he is on the staff of Emperor William—I mean his personal staff—one of his aids-de-camp. He'll be with us before we finish."

The company looked at one another with congratulatory glances that they were to be honored at meeting so distinguished a person. The conversation turned upon the count, and Ned told them something about him. There was royal blood in his veins, he being a connection of the empress. He was also one of the richest men in Germany. This added a stimulus to the excitement, and when the women were told that he was unmarried each woman present began to cherish a faint hope that she might snare him while exposed to the armies of spinsters in America.

Ten o'clock came, but not the count. Another hour passed, and still the lion to be of the evening had not arrived. Van Amsterdam directed a butler to telephone to the station and ask when the train from Washington would arrive. The answer came that it was just in. It would still be at least an hour before the count could get into evening dress and appear.

"Telephone to him to come in traveling costume," suggested one of the ladies.

"Not I," replied the host. "I know him too well for that. On all formal occasions he is a great stickler for etiquette, especially his dress."

So they were obliged to wait.

At a quarter past 12 the dining room door was opened, and a butler announced:

"His serene transparency Count Ludwig von Gehrenstein!"

And, immaculately attired in evening dress, there entered no less a personage than Carl Schmitt.

"Stung!" said one of the men to his next neighbor.

"Not at all," replied the other. "Count Gehrenstein is in America. That I know. And Ned Van Amsterdam would never introduce another in his stead."

The count formally greeted the assembled company. There was no need for a presentation since he had spent ten days in the same yacht with them. Some of them tried to laugh off the mistake they had made, but the count ignored the subject. Some left the table at once, indignant with their host for having taken them yachting with an incognito celebrity. The count maintained his reserve till the last person had gone, then, slapping Ned on the back, said jocosely:

"America is a ferry ott country, mine poy."

She is a quiet, refined girl, very fond of outdoor sports. As a child she was a familiar figure in Kemp Town, Brighton. Every morning she and her sister, with their governess in attendance, could be seen bowling their hoops in Sussex Square. Often they would play with the other children. ## "CINCINNATI" BASE HIT IS NOT UNDERSTOOD

Unintentional Favoritism is Shown Players in the Matter of Errors Because Scoreers Are Not Posted as They Should be

Perhaps the least understood finer point of baseball is the "Cincinnati" base hit. Many scorers are not properly acquainted with it, thus we have often seen hits slipped to players when the rankest errors had been committed, not that the scorer favored the batter intentionally, but he was unfamiliar with the finer point.

WHAT IT MEANS.

Common sense after all is a pretty fair guide to a proper solution of every problem. The "Cincinnati" base hit—as the name implies—originated in the home city of the Reds. Sporting writers of Garry Herrmann's town believed that under certain conditions when a batter helped his running mate to advance without himself being retired, he should be credited with a base hit and not charged with a time at bat and nothing to show, for it as prevailed when the play was formerly designated as a "fielder's choice."

Here was the proposition pure and simple. The old fielder's choice was just what the name implies. With one or more base runners on the paths, when the ball was batted to a fielder the latter had the choice of making a play at any of the several bases. If a force play resulted or if the batter was retired at first base there was no question about the batter being credited with a time at bat and nothing more. Naturally when there appeared time for the play it was policy to try to force the man who had progressed farthest round the bases. Often long chances would be taken with him where an out at first would be a dead certainty.

But if the play were made other than at first base it was always open to argument the question as to whether or not the batsman might have beaten the ball to first base. It was maintained by the advocate of the "Cincinnati" base hit that there was no way to tell for sure in the absence of the play at first base whether the batter would or would not have been retired. It was maintained that the runner should be given the benefit of the doubt. Furthermore it was argued that the skill of a base runner is avoiding retirement in the face of a possible force-out should reflect to the credit of the batsman.

Team play is one of the two necessary essentials of a winning club. Harmony between batter and base runner must prevail at all times in order to establish this characteristic. In the interests of the base-runner the batter must often take chances on batting balls at which he would not offer, if left to his own initiative, or if no base-runner preceded him. Working in conjunction with the runner and having to jeopardize his chances of batting safely whereby it has been argued that whatever return the base runner may give is nothing than fair and just to be credited toward the joint cause of the two.

The "Cincinnati" base hit was never intended to be abused the way it has been. It was not the sense of the rule to credit the batter with a hit every time the opposing side failed to register an out. Errors should figure as prominently in this play as in any other. No one is given a base hit if a ground ball is mis-handled. The fact that the play may be made to some other than first base does not eliminate a fielder's liability to err.

The more one considers the "Cincinnati" base hit, the more fair it seems. A batter is not charged with a time at bat when he sacrifices or intentionally advances a runner a base to his own disadvantage. Why should he be charged with a time at bat and not given a hit when he not only advances one or more runners, but likewise reaches first base safely himself. Certainly he has done more for the common cause than the fellow who is lucky enough to drop a bunt into the infield. It stands to reason also, that his deed has been of more service than that of the man who scores a runner from third as the result of a long fly.

"GABBY" CRAVATH

The right fielder of the Philadelphia National League team, who is batting second in the National League. Daubert of Brooklyn is leading by only a few points. Last year Cavath batted .281.

SKETCHES OF N.Y. GIANTS

Charles Tesreau Pitcher

Charles Tesreau, the Herculean "spitball" pitcher of the New York Giants, proved himself the mainstay and virtually the saviour, so far as the championship was concerned—of the Giants in the second half of last season. When Marquard failed and Mathewson faltered, Tesreau went in week in and week out, and staved off the deluge of defeat and held disaster at bay until the Giants recovered from their long slump.

Tesreau was born in Ironton, Mo., March 5, 1889. He is a giant in physique and weighs 230 pounds. He pitched for Houston, Galveston and Shreveport until Detroit took him. They sent him back to Shreveport where McGraw got him in 1910. In the spring of 1911 he was sent to Toronto, in the International League. He worked extra well for Toronto and New York recalled him in the autumn. Since then he has developed from an experimental relief pitcher to a star of the first magnitude.

BAKER IS AT IT AGAIN

John Franklin Baker

J. Franklin Baker is up to his old tricks. That the slugging third sacker of the Athletics is a bad man to loom up before the opposing twirler when the Mackmen are driven into a tight hold, many of the hurlers organization have found out this season. When the athletics need a run or two, and there is any chance of Baker, of home-run fame, coming to the bat, the rest of the White Elephants just sit back and smile. His stickwork has been a big factor in keeping the Athletics up in the race this year, and everybody expects to see Frank wallop out a few of his fence-breaking drives in the next world's series.

Off the baseball field little is heard of Frank Baker. He is quiet until the battle gets under way. This was demonstrated recently when the Chicago White Sox were figuring on a victory. There hopes were shattered by a three-base wallop off Baker's bat with the bases filled. Baker was exercising by swinging three bats when the White Sox sought to check the Mackmen by sending in a fresh pitcher. Scott was the man selected. He managed to get two strikes over on Baker. The next offering got only part way over the plate, for the "home-run" king met the sphere on the nose and sent three men over the plate, putting the Athletics one run to the good.

Baker is clouting the ball at a .338 clip for the Mackmen. He has accounted for 70 extra bases on his raps this season, including a number of homers, triples and doubles. Many of his extra base clouts came with men on the bases and when most needed. He is the most feared of any man in the American League when it comes down to a pinch. The opposing twirlers seem unable to find anything in the line of curves that will baffle the Athletics' third sacker. Connie Mack states that much of the success of the Athletics is due to the timely hitting of Baker. Upon several occasions when the Mackmen have appeared to be sure losers he has advanced to the plate and slammed out a wallop that has put the Mackmen back in the running and allowed them to get away with victory.

SPORTING GOSSIP

London fans are calling for a longer Canadian League season.

Manager Knotty Lee and President J. Barns, of the Hamilton baseball team, are trying to sell out their club. According to Hamilton papers they have several offers before them. Commenting on one of these the Hamilton Herald says: "One of these, and the one that looks best from a Hamilton standpoint, comes from Jas. J. McCaffery, president of the Toronto International League club. It suggests that a stock company be formed and that the Toronto club secure sufficient stock in the club to warrant it being a farm for the Toronto club, and that Edd Holy, the Toronto shortstop, be appointed manager. This looks very nice from a local view, and it would be better for all concerned. Holy is recognized in the International league as one of the brainiest men in that company, and he would surely make an ideal manager for Canadian league club. The fact, too, that the Hamilton club would be used as a farm for the Toronto club, it would give the Tigers a real ball ball team, and they would be up there fighting all the time. That's what the fans like and that's what brings them out in large numbers."

The Guelph Leafs hold all records in the Canadian League for new leaders. The Leafs have had five in the past three seasons.

President Stanley, of the St. Thomas Canadian League Club, denies that Pitcher Wilkinson is the property of the Cleveland club. Wilkinson signed a contract and now belongs to the Saints.

Cricket Accidents.

There are certain accidents which are all "in the game" at cricket.

Bowlers and fieldsmen may easily split a finger in stopping a hard hit. A wicketkeeper's thumbs and fingers are often broken or sprained, while, of course, batsmen must be prepared to take hard knocks from fast and "bumpy" bowling.

Some cricket accidents, however, are out of the common. Only the other day Mr. J. E. Raphael, the ex-Surrey amateur and international rugby footballer, playing for the M. C. C. v. Kent, dislocated his right shoulder. He did so when throwing in the ball from the long field.

More extraordinary, however, was the accident which befell Hartigan, the South African, last summer. Returning a ball he gave his arm such a jerk that it was broken, an unprecedented accident in the history of the game.

Many a brave man is apt to fear a silent woman.

THE PLEASURES OF MOTORING READER DOES NOT LIKE DUST

The Balmy Breezes Marred by Autoist on Sabbath Evening—The Sacrifice of the Many to the Few

We print the following letter for which one of our readers expresses his views on autos and the dust problem.

To The Editor of The Review

Sir—On Sunday evening a throng of neatly dressed people were wending their way to church on one of Peterboro's streets, and the air was beautifully calm and clear.

Suddenly their came an auto driven at a great rate along the dusty road, and lo! the air was no longer clear and sweet, and the clothes of the church-goers were no longer clean and neat. Everybody began to cough, and some, less calm spirited than others, forgot they were going to church and began to say things about the auto that were neither complimentary nor charitable.

The position to the writer was this:—

Here were three or four citizens who wanted to whirl along the road at fourteen miles an hour, and on the other hand there were three hundred people who wanted to walk quietly to church and breathe the balmy evening air.

The three autoists, no doubt, enjoyed their spin, but they left a lot of dust and discomfort and bad language behind them. Not to mention that they spoilt the enjoyment of a few hundred souls who had done them no wrong whatever. Must the comfort of the many be sacrificed to the mad pleasure of the few?

Yours,

"DUST EATER."

Music and Drama

With pretty girls and popular musical numbers, The Girl and the Baron, a nonsensical musical mixture, delighted a fairly large audience at the Grand on Saturday evening.

The musical numbers made a decided hit with the local theatre goers. Miss Alice Gay, the leading lady, proved herself to be an actress of ability, while Nat S. Ferber was the biggest hit of the show with his efforts to imitate a German Baron and was very funny.

Some of the most popular of the musical numbers were: "Pullman Porters on Parade," "When its Apple Blossom Time in Normandy," "On the Honeymoon Express," and several others.

SUN SPOTS VISIBLE NEW COMET DISCOVERED

Dr. Marsh Sends Review Latest News From The Heavens

Dr. Marsh, of Springville, has communicated the following interesting news item from the heavens to the Review:

This morning there is a very nice group of sun-spots visible on the sun. The extent of the group covers some five thousand miles.

This is the first group of sun-spots that have appeared for some months, and this would intimate that the sun-spot period is about over.

A NEW COMET.

A new comet has been discovered by the Rev. J. H. Metcalfe of Vermont State. This comet was discovered on Sept. 1st. It has also been observed by Professor Frost and W. W. Campbell. Its position is right ascension 6 hours and 49 minutes. Its declamation is 57 degrees above the equator.

This new comet can be seen by good optical aid about 4.30 in the morning.

A VIOLIN 260 YEARS OLD

Miss Palmer to Discourse Sweet Music This Season on a Relative of the Strad

The musical people of Peterborough will doubtless be interested to learn that Miss Edwina Palmer, of the Conservatory of Music staff has become the possessor of a genuine old Italian violin made by the famous Armati, of Cremona, dating back to 1650. Armati, it will be remembered, was the master of the great Stradavarious.

This beautiful old instrument is unique in appearance, its lines and curves being very delicate, while the beauty and quality of its tone is perfection, and in the hands of this talented young artist great things may be expected. The violin was recently purchased in London, England, at considerable cost, from a well known maker and dealer in these instruments, who vouches for its genuineness.

Miss Palmer is to be congratulated on her acquirement of this valuable instrument, and her many friends will no doubt avail themselves of the many musical treats in store during the coming season.

You'll never have good neighbors unless you are one.

ENTERPRISE OF THE INDEPENDENT ORDER FORESTERS

Yes! A Million, A Million, A Million! has been the watchword of the President, Directors and all who are interested in Canada's Greatest Exposition. This no doubt has been heralded from sea to sea, and will be a great advertisement for Toronto and Canada throughout the country of our neighbors to the south of us and the British Empire.

This is something worth achieving, but in our praises of this accomplishment let us not forget that years ago when the Fair was but little more than a local institution, there was another organization that was not only bringing Toronto and Canada to the attention of the world but was conferring great blessings on humanity into what ever land it entered.

This organization is known as the Independent Order of Foresters and there is hardly a part of the civilized climes of the world that it has not entered and its pathway is easily discernible by the monuments of benefits it has conferred in the true spirit of Brotherhood.

It has a record of thirty-eight years and can boast to-day of a membership of 250,000. During these years it has distributed in benefits to the widows and orphans over $38,000,000, and now has a reserve fund of nearly $22,000,000.

Can anyone imagine the immeasurable suffering this fraternal organization has prevented and the joy it has brought to the thousands of homes where hardship and gloom would otherwise have prevailed had it not been for the timely aid rendered by the Independent Order of Foresters.

The Supreme Court has just closed its session and the amended constitution as it now stands makes the Independent Order of Foresters one of the soundest, safest and most reliable of all fraternal insurance societies in the world.

It stands to-day as one of the greatest munificent forces on this continent, and not only provides insurance, but it is also caring for all orphans of deceased Foresters who cannot care for themselves. It has in its orphanage, including a number of those cared for in their own homes, nearly eight hundred children, who are being educated and fitted for the battle of life.

Another feature of this work is the care free of charge of members affected with tuberculosis. This organization is fighting the white plague among its members by the establishment of sanitariums in the Adirondacks and on the Pacific coast. This is, indeed brotherhood work in earnest.

The enterprise shown at their beautiful tent in Society Row during this year's Exposition is but another instance of the thoughtfulness for their members and the public generally, for here it was that thousands rested and enjoyed the lake breezes, besides leaving something of a great blessing distributing force that has brought Toronto and Canada to the forefront in the eyes of the world.

Mr. George A. Mitchell, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger, of Toronto, and his assistants are to be congratulated upon the success of their hospitality and provision made at this year's Fair for the thousands of visitors who called at their tent.

A letter received at the Grand Trunk headquarters from a member of the Canadian Underwriters Association, who convened at Ottawa on August 19th and 21st, 1913, read as follows:

"It will, I know, interest you to learn that the L.U.A.C. convention was a great success, and that each member present stated over and over again, that the success of the gathering, and in great measure the individual enjoyment on part of the delegates and their lady friends, was due to the Chateau Laurier and the exceptionally solicitous attention on the part of Manager Folger and his able staff." 15

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the house wife finds the numerous duties of home a burden, in fact every walk of life suffers from depleted nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. # PART OF BODY IS FOUND

A Ghastly Discovery in New York Baffles the Police

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The chest and back of a woman was found floating in the Hudson River, along the New Jersey shore opposite this city, on Friday. The balance of the torso was found nearby Sunday night. The head, lower arms and legs are still missing.

An autopsy revealed that the body was dismembered while life remained. Death was ascribed to the shock caused by the severance of the limbs and head.

Because of the absence of the murdered girl's head the physicians could only guess that the victim had been stunned either by a blow or by inhaling some anaesthetic, and that while she lay in a coma the work of dismemberment was done. No mark of knife or bullet appeared on the torso—there was no trace of poison in the stomach.

Both packages found were in linen pillow covers bearing an embroidered "A." On the back of the body, was either a birth mark or tattoo work that also had much the form of the letter "A."

GIRL NEARLY DROWNS.

Guelph Men Save Domestic at Sanitarium From Death.

GUELPH, Sept. 9.—Miss Kennedy, a maid employed at the Homewood sanitarium, narrowly escaped a watery grave in the River Speed yesterday morning, and had it not been for the timely appearance of two young men who dragged her out she would have been drowned.

Darley Naggs and Harold Cars noticed the woman wading out into the river from the opposite bank. There was an old boat near at hand and the boys jumped into it and brought the girl out.

Miss Kennedy is one of a number of English girls who are employed as maids at the Homewood sanitarium. Dr. Hobbs stated that she had been acting strangely for some time past. She may be deported, having only been here since last January.

MAY DEPORT MRS. PANKHRST

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 9.—Before Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the British militant suffragists, can be admitted to the United States in October, the time set in the latest announcements for her coming, the immigration authorities will decide whether any of the acts for which she has been imprisoned in England constitute moral turpitude within the meaning of the law and make her an undesirable alien.

She will be detained at whatever port she lands, but whether eventually she may be permitted to enter cannot be foretold.

Duke Goes To Ireland?

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Daily Citizen, a Labor organ, announces that the Duke of Connaught crossed to North Ireland last night and precautions have been taken to prevent the journey from becoming publicly known. It suggests that the visit has some connection with the Ulster agitation, as the Duke of Connaught has been mentioned as the first viceroy of Ireland under home rule.

LOCOMOTIVE OF WHITE MOUNTAIN EXPRESS WHICH COST MANY LIVES IN NEW HAVEN ROAD CRASH

MAGISTRATE ACQUITS LAWYER JEROME WITH AN APOLOGY

In Dismissing Charge of Gambling Magistrate Mulvena Says He Speaks in Behalf of Right-Minded Canadians—Thaw May be Permitted to Conduct Case

COATICOOK, Que., Sept. 9.—Wm. Travers Jerome was acquitted last night of the charge of having gambled on Thursday last on the station property of the G. T. R. here while waiting for the immigration authorities to pass on the case of Harry K. Thaw. In discharging him the court apologized for the humiliation to which he had been subjected.

The hearing before Magistrate Henry Mulvena of Sherbrooke, lasted less than an hour. It began at 7.35 o'clock, and at 8.20 the court said:

"Sir, you are honorably discharged."

Joseph Beaulno, a Coaticook lawyer, who said he variously represented justice, the people and the criminal code, interrupted the afternoon session, but when he endeavored to renew similar tactics last evening he was ruled out of court. After taking the evidence which was trifling, the prosecution asked for a conviction. The defence did not even sum up its case.

Magistrate Mulvena leaned back and pondered, for not more than 50 seconds. "In rendering judgment," he said, "I shall be very brief. I believe every right-minded man in Canada regrets and feels the humiliation at the indignity which has been placed upon you. It is excusable neither in law nor in fact. The evidence adduced at the hearing gives no reason for the charge which was laid against you, nor for the indignities which you have suffered.

"I believe, sir, in all the circumstances, you will not attribute the apparent offence offered you while in a friendly country, in the discharge of your duty as a public officer to the real thinking people of this community. You are, sir, honorably discharged."

When acquitted Mr. Jerome thanked the court, spoke flatteringly of his reception in Canada, and added that he did not attribute his arrest and brief imprisonment last week to the thinking people of the Dominion. He took a late train from Coaticook last night in order to be in New York tomorrow, and will return to Montreal later.

May Extend Rare Privilege.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—If the judges of the Court of King's Bench prove willing the hearing of the Thaw appeal against the immigration act may prove to be unique in still another manner.

When formal application was made for the writ of habeas corpus directed to the immigration officers last Friday, Mr. Laflamme also had a lengthy private conversation with Judges Gervais and Cross, in the course of which he made a special request that, if the case came before the courts Wm. Travers Jerome should be allowed to speak.

Although American lawyers have no right to speak in a Canadian court, Mr. Laflamme considered that, under the circumstances this courtesy might be extended to Mr. Jerome. As the makers of the appeal show a desire to depart from the usual custom, it is practically within the jurisdiction of the court to permit this if it sees fit, in which case still another new departure will be, evolved in the already unique Thaw case.

J. K. Greenshields, K.C., was engaged in a famous forgery case a few years ago in New York. At that time, although he was the chief counsel for the defence, he was not permitted to take part in the proceedings before the court. By way of returning good for evil, Mr. Greenshields has added his request to that of Mr. Laflamme that Mr. Jerome be permitted to handle the State of New York's interest before the court in person.

THREE KINGS AT MANOEUVRES.

Kaiser Will Be Supreme Umpire of German Army's Fighting.

BRESLAU, Germany, Sept. 9.—The grand manoeuvres of the German army opened yesterday in the presence of Emperor William, who is acting as the supreme umpire; King Constantine and the Crown Prince of Greece, King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, and the chiefs of the general staffs of the armies of Germany, Austria, Italy and the Argentine Republic.

Two army corps are engaged, and the manoeuvres will test the actual battle tactics of straight fighting and frontal attacks, flanking movements, etc., being barred.

Zeppelin dirigible balloons and many aeroplanes are attached to each side. They will be allowed for the first time to practice aerial war between themselves with harmless bombs and machine guns.

THE TARIFF VOTE TO-DAY

Senate Takes Final Poll on Measure at Four O'clock

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The Senate will vote on the Democratic tariff bill this afternoon at four o'clock. This agreement was reached last night at 11.45 p.m., when it became apparent that it would be impossible to carry the plan to pass the measure before adjournment.

The party leaders agreed to keep the Senate in session until well into the morning to dispose of as many of the reserved amendments still pending as possible, and then adjourned until nine o'clock this morning.

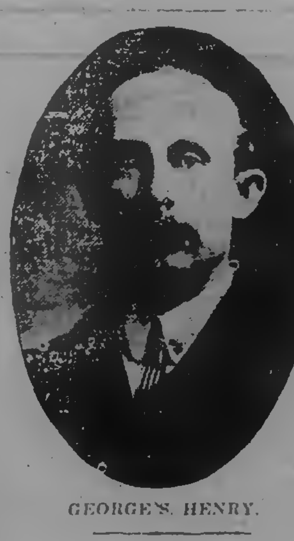
Democratic lines in the Senate stood solid last night against the final onslaught of the tariff fight. With party leaders urging their colleagues on to approval of the bill, the ranks closed up against the anti-free wool and anti-free sugar forces, and defeated all amendments to the bill as fast as they came to the vote.

Attempts to restore a duty on raw wood and to raise the duty on woolen manufactured goods made in successive amendments by Senators La Follette, Catron and Penrose, were defeated without the loss of a party vote. A last stand by the anti-free sugar forces, led by Senator Ransdell of Louisiana, Democrat, held the attention of the Senate throughout the evening, but the votes of Senators Ransdell and Thornton had been long conceded to the Republicans on the sugar issue.

Repeated efforts were made to secure a general agreement for a final vote on the bill at some definite hour this afternoon. Democratic leaders were willing to adjourn at midnight if such an agreement could be reached, but while negotiations were under way they insisted the Senate should remain at work, with the prospect of an all-night session if the attempt at the agreement failed.

EAST YORK RETURNS GEORGE S. HENRY TO LEGISLATURE

Conservative Elected by 616 Majority in Bye-Election Against Albert Chamberlain, the Liberal Candidate The Vote is Very Light.



GEORGE S. HENRY.

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—East York electors again endorsed the administration of Sir James Whitney and his Government yesterday by electing Geo. S. Henry as their representative in the Legislature. Over 2,932 votes were polled, and Mr. Henry's majority, although there are still a few polling subdivisions to hear from, is 616.

Compared to the last election, when Sheriff McCowan was returned, the total vote was remarkably light, being 961 votes less than formerly.

The results in the various districts were as follows:

| | Henry. | Chamberlain. |
|---|---|---|
| City divisions | 150 | 158 |
| York Township | 293 | 49 |
| Richmond Hill | 46 | 47 |
| North Toronto | 272 | 118 |
| Markham Village | 49 | ... |
| Stouffville | ... | 80 |
| Markham Township | 312 | 432 |
| Scarboro Township | 316 | 273 |
| Totals | 1774 | 1158 |

Majority for Henry, 616.

Little interest was taken by the general electorate in the campaign, and only one-quarter of the electors took advantage of their franchise. Since the last general election the riding has grown, numerically, by leaps and bounds. Some idea of the apathy evinced by the urban electors is gained by the fact that the Deputy Returning Officer, assistants and scrutineers waited at subdivision 85, Mr. John Vincent's house at 2 Redwood avenue, in vain for an elector to cast his ballot. Not one individual helped to relieve the monotony of the weary wait by taking advantage of his registration in the constituency. Not a vote was cast in many other city subdivisions before the noon hour was struck, and even then not 20 per cent. of the electors put in an appearance.

POLICE EXONERATED.

Jury at Berlin Find No Evidence of Abuse of Prisoner.

BERLIN, Ont., Sept. 9.—"That Joseph Griffin came to his death by rupture of the bladder, the cause of which is unknown to us. We further find that no blame for said death can be attached to P. C. Meehan or P. C. Farrell."

The foregoing is the verdict of the coroner's jury, which inquired into the death of Joseph Griffin, who died at the General Hospital, on Thursday night last, under peculiar circumstances.

Seventeen witnesses were called in all, but they failed to prove who inflicted the wounds, which caused the death of Griffin, although, the evidence showed that he was ill-treated by some one.

Press Honors Sir George Reid.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia, was entertained by the British press yesterday, prior to returning to Melborne on official business. The good wishes of the British journalists were expressed by Robert Donald, as president of the Institute of Journalists, who referred to Sir George as a man who had done more to make Australia known to the British people than any man living, and had been the real spokesman of the United Commonwealth.

SHUFFLE IN CABINET.

Chinese Ministry Has Been Reorganized To Include Reformers.

PEKIN, Sept. 9.—The Chinese Cabinet has been virtually reconstructed. The nomination of six new Ministers has been approved by the lower House. The new members of the Cabinet are as follows: Foreign affairs, Sun Pao Chi, former governor of Shantung Province; interior, Chu Chi-Chien, formerly Minister of Communications; justice, Wang Chi-Chiao; education, Wang Tah-Si; industry, Chang-Chi 'En, formerly president of the board of agriculture; communications, Chow Tszchi, formerly acting finance minister.

Premier Hsiung Hs Ling will take the portfolio of finance temporarily. The Cabinet includes three partisans of the reformer, Kang Yu Wei.

SHOCKING DISCOVERY MADE AT BRANTFORD

Unknown Boy's Body Found in Terribly Mutilated Condition—Mute Evidence of Horrible Murder.

Canadian Press Despatch.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 9—An unknown lad, twelve to fourteen years of age, was found in a ditch on Blossom Avenue or River Road, a branch of the Hamilton-Brantford Road, near the farm of William Tottle, about one mile from Cainsville, at eight o'clock this morning. Mute is the evidence of the ghastliest crime ever recorded or committed in the county. The body was terribly mutilated, the head being almost severed from the trunk, which the coroner thinks was the first wound inflicted and that which caused death. There were three stab wounds in his head, twelve in the chest and several penetrating to the lungs, and the body was disembowelled by a long sweeping cut. The victim has not been identified.

BRANTFORD, (Later) It is thought the murder was not committed at the spot where the body was found but that the corpse was carried there and left in the ditch. There is no boy missing from Brantford or vicinity. The coroner thinks the victim may be a foreigner though he had brown hair and blue eyes and on the body was found a copy in English of Service's poem; "Call of the Klondyke." The inquest was opened and adjourned until next Monday afternoon.

They'd Like To Kill Him.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—The Socialist, Dr. Liebknecht, has manifestly got badly on the nerves of the officers of the Krupp Company, who apparently fear some further disclosures.

The Vorwaerts yesterdays said that one high Krupp officer challenged Dr. Liebknecht to a duel with pistols, which naturally Dr. Liebknecht refused, but The Tageblatt suggests that the challenge was really an ingenious scheme for silencing an uncomfortable opponent.

BIG CROWD AT LONDON

First Day of Western Fair is Unqualified Success

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 9.—The Western Fair opened in earnest yesterday. The exceptionally fine weather that prevailed gave promise of a good attendance Monday; and hopes of the directorate in this respect were not disappointed. The grounds and buildings were in excellent condition, and, taken by and large, the exhibits were considered by visitors to be considerably in advance of other years.

The first of the two daily performances of acrobats and other Exhibition attractions was given in front of the grand stand yesterday afternoon. Last evening the performance was and was thoroughly enjoyed by all, running more smoothly, and there was a larger crowd. While those who visited the fair in the evening saw as fine a fireworks display as has ever been given in London, those who sat on the grand stand in the afternoon were entertained by some interesting horse races.

Wages on the Welland Canal.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 9.—E. N. Compton, inspector for the Department of Labor, is in the city to look after the observance of the fair wage clause by contractors on the new Welland ship canal. His attention has been called to the fact that the Government is paying trades workers on the canal lower than the prevailing rate.

STEEL CAGES FOR PRISONERS

KINGSTON, Sept. 9.—Steel cages to be placed around the cells of Bonner and Frank Jones, two Stoney Mountain prisoners in the penitentiary here, are being rushed along. These men have been given every chance to behave but as they will not obey rules they will be given no liberty. They are in the confinement ward along with eleven other prisoners. They do no work and the only fresh air they get is about thirty minutes each day. The cages are not the first to be placed in prison. Chartrand, an insane prisoner, who has [illegible] of them.

FATAL FIRE IN TIMMINS

Child in Mining Town Perishes in a Serious Conflagration

TIMMINS, Sept. 9.—Fire Sunday cost the life of a child and gutted several frame buildings which comprised the first business section opened in Timmins in the early days. The loss is estimated at about $20,000. The fire broke out in the upper storey of the Ottawa House, a frame hotel, and got a good start before it was discovered. A stiff wind was blowing and the entire centre of the town appeared to be in danger at one time.

The child, which is believed to be buried in the debris of the Ottawa House, could not be found after the fire broke out, and was no doubt trapped in some portion of the burning building. It has not been seen since.

R.M.C. Syllabus Antiquated.

KINGSTON, Sept. 9.—The Minister of Militia is dissatisfied with the syllabus of the Royal Military College, which he thinks is not up to date, and will see that it is improved. He is not satisfied with the work being done by the military staff of the institution. The curriculum is behind the times and the college does not give the educational training that it should. Col. Sam Hughes had a conference in Ottawa with the acting commandant and Prof. I. E. Martin, the latter for years in charge of the mathematical department. Prof. Martin is to report to the Minister as to changes essential in the syllabus. He will probably be made director of studies.

PAPER IS SUPPRESSED

Japanese Journal Was Expressing Anarchistic Sentiments

TOKIO, Sept. 9.—Anarchistic expressions appearing in the Japanese press in connection with the agitation over the killing of Japanese at Nanking, and by the assassination of the directors of the political bureau of the Japanese Foreign Office, Moritaro Abe, led to the suppression yesterday of The Niroku Shimbun, an independent newspaper.

The journal asserted that the punishment of the spies of Yuan Shi Kai, the Chinese provisional President, has just commenced; that the murder of Director Abe was a heavenly judgment, and that other assassinations would follow.

The members of the Japanese Cabinet are being constantly protected by detectives.

The police arrested the ringleaders of the mobs which were assembling to hold another meeting here yesterday and the meeting was not held. Premier Yamamoto received the organizers of Sunday's meetings and informed them that there was no necessity of sending armed forces to China at present.

According to another version the Premier declared that the sending of troops to China might bring about the partition of that country by the powers.

This city is filled with unsubstantiated rumors that the occupation of Chinese territory is impending.

Gen. Viscount Yoshimichi Hasegawa, chief of the general staff, and Gen. Viscount Kageaki Kawamura, commander of the Tokio garrison, conferred yesterday with Emperor Yoshihito at Nokko.

The Chinese Government has apologized to Japan for the murder of several Japanese at Nanking and has ordered an investigation. The Chinese note voiced the desire that a peaceful solution of the affair be reached through diplomatic channels.

U. S. HOLDS PALMA TEAM TROPHY FOR MARKMANSHIP

CAMP PERRY, O., Sept. 9.—The United States won the Palma match yesterday. Its score was 1,714. The team from the Argentine Republic, was second, with a score of 1,684, nine points ahead of Canada with a score of 1,675. Sweden made 1,494 and Peru 1,465.

The shooting was on the 800, 900 and 1,000 yard ranges. The scores are considered good as a strong north wind blew in the faces of the shooters. The winning score was six points below that made by the U. S. team last year, when it captured the prize in Canada.

The Argentine shooters did well, considering that they were not accustomed to long range shooting. When they came here they had hard work to locate the targets. They say that when they returned to South America, there will be more shooting at 1,000 yards.

The individual scores follow:

United States—Capt. Guy Emerson 221, C. B. Winder 211, Capt. C. G. Duff 212, Capt. K. K. V. Casey 217, Lt. L. W. Waller 209, Geo. Chesley 212, Lt. Robt. Sears 218, Maj. P. A. Wolf 214. Totals 1,714.

Argentine—Ferreyra 210, Mendez 202, Daneri 217, Ferreyra 214, Yanis 211, Pugnali 208, Gerosa 214, Barrientos 208. Total 1,684.

Canada—Sergt. Freeborn 209, Pte. W. Hawkins 214, Sergt. D. McInnes 211, Capt. Neil Smith 208, Sergt. G. W. Russell 201. Total, 1,675.

Sweden—Christiansen 193, Nilsson 178, Stare 193, Hedsablad 157, Ohlsson 186, Wallsberg 189, Eriksson 193, Bjorkman 195. Total, 1,494.

Peru—Clausels 194, Ozorio 186, Rodriguez 172, Lopez 163, Segarra 190, Toledo 190, Montoya 178, Albornoiz 192. Total, 1,465.

The Canadian shooters used a new ammunition with special long bullet.

The international team revolver match was won by the U. S. team by a score of 2,324, France was second with 2,234, Sweden third, 2,222; Switzerland, 2,097, and Peru, 1,717.

Lt. Wilhelm Carlsberger of Sweden yesterday won the world's individual championship at the 50 metre range by a score of 488 points in 60 shots.

BRITAIN'S LAND FORCES

A German colonel has been meting out a little "friendly" advice to Great Britain. He has been telling the British Isles that they ought to give more attention to their land forces than they are giving to the sea.

That it is useless to have a north sea fleet if they have not got a good army on land to meet the invader. The advice resolves itself into a plea for the German system of conscription.

The Liberal journal, the Westminster Gazette, dismisses the advice of the German army man and regards it as a subterfuge to try and discourage the naval defence of the east coast and furthermore very wisely remarks that England has quite enough to do in maintaining her navy and keeping up with the competition of arms on the sea, and does not desire to enter into a competition of land forces with the Fatherland.

Germany has, without doubt, the finest army in the world and much more fighting forces both on sea and land than she can find use for or shall ever need if she keeps herself free from jealousy and intimidation.

EAST YORK SATISFIED

East York has maintained her reputation for common sense by continuing its support of the Government. All the blandishments of the Liberal candidate and the Fatherly castigation of the Globe did not avail to move it from its steady and even course of true progress and broad-minded Government.

The election was a quiet one and the reduction in the majority on the last election is not really a reduction at all, for the poll was very light as compared with the last election, and had it been anything like a full poll there would very likely have been an increased majority for the Conservatives.

The result is a case of "as you were" and it showed that nothing had happened to turn the confidence of the people from Sir James Whitney's policy of sane and efficient Government. What Ontario requires is not to be doctored with patent medicines "cure-all" labled "reform" or "abolish the bar" etc. What it wants is to be governed. There are laws enough already on the statute book, when these have been given a trial by being put into operation, then it will be time to think of supplimenting present legislation. This is the present policy of the Whitney Governmnet, and East York and the rest of Ontario are satisfied with it.

FIRES AND THEIR CAUSE

Canada has the unenviable distinction of leading the world in fire losses. "We burn more property than any other country," says the Industrial Canada.

"It is an open question whether the careless fool or the deliberate criminal does more damage by fire. Advantage seems to lie with the fool, because he is everywhere gladly bringing down destruction, while the fire bug must go about his deadly work stealthily, at weird hours and in awkward places.

"Chief among the fools who carelessly cause fires is the smoker. His blazing match is cast down still alight. His cigarette end falls into piles of paper or shavings. The burning ashes of his trusty pipe descend gently into oil vats and barrels of gunpowder. If the fool destroyed only himself, the world could bear his actions philosophically, but he usually escapes while better men perish.

"One whould think that the smoker would hesitate to light his weed in the neighborhood of explosive liquids, but a recent report of the National Fire Protection Association of the United States shows that, out of 1,030 fires occurring in places where benzol, gasoline and naphtha were stored, 30 were caused by the smoker and 135 by matches, the smoker's friend.

"Smoking should be absolutely prohibited in or about every Canadian factory, and employees breaking this rule should be dismissed. If the rule became national, manufacturers could inform each other of these dismissals and could refuse employment to persistent offenders. If it were enforced there would be fewer fires, better work would be done, and the smoker would enjoy his weed more keenly in the evening, after a day's self-denial."

EXCERPTS

Queen Bars Riding Astride.

Queen Mary of England is a great stickler for the proprieties and her latest edict is against women riding astride.

Of course, the Queen has no power to prevent English women from riding on cross saddles if they want to, but she decidedly refused to attend the International Horse Show in London unless it was stipulated that all the lady participants ride on side saddles. Since the Queen rules the King it is said, and since the King could stop royal patronage of the show, which would mean a great financial loss, the edict went forth.

Flower Bed Signs.

Now that the large advertising posters that were so great a disfigurement of the country on either side of the French railway lines have been rendered illegal by Act of Parliament, advertisers on the Orleans Railway have begun to plant flower beds of brilliant colors in the fields on either side of the line, with the flowers arranged so as to spell the name of the goods to which they are to call attention.

Temple for Monkeys.

In Benares there has been for many years a temple for monkeys, and it is one of the most costly buildings there. The followers of Brahma hold this animal sacred and worship it as a deity.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Corn today rose to a new high price for the season in the December option and narrowly missed a new high level in other futures. Inadequacy of relief from drought and heat was largely responsible. The close, tho easy, showed an advance of ⅜c to 1⅛c to 1⅜c net. Other leading cereals, too, made gains—wheat, ⅛c to ¼c to ⅜c, and oats ¼c to ⅜c to ½c. In provisions, the outcome varied from 5c decline to 17½c advance.

The Liverpool market closed ⅛d to ¾d lower on wheat, and ½d lower on corn.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 8.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended September 6 were 2100 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 1000 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale were 1600 cattle, 2700 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 800 calves.

There was a much better feeling in the market for cattle today and prices in some cases ruled higher. The supply of really choice steers was limited and only odd small lots sold at $6.75 to $7, but there was an ample supply of good steers, which brought $6.25 to $6.40 per cwt. in full carloads. Demand for common stock for shipment was active and prices for such were 25c per cwt higher at $3.50 to $3.75, while there was also a good demand for store cattle at $5 to $5.25 per cwt. Trade on the whole was active.

A feature of the small meat trade was the demand from American buyers for grass fed calves and the tone of the market in consequence was stronger at an advance of ½c per pound, with sales at 3¾ to 4c per pound. There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, prices being steady under a good demand from local buyers, and as supplies were fairly large an active trade was done. A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices ruled 20 to 25c per cwt. lower than this day week. The demand from packers was good and sales of selected lots were made at $10.25 to $10.40; rough, at $10 to $10.15; sows, at $8.25 to $8.40, and stags, at $ to $4.50 per cwt.; weighed off cars.

RAIN CHECKED BLAZE.

Hot Springs, Ark., Fire Did Damage of $6,000,000.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 8.—A generous downpour of rain Saturday proved a valuable aid to weary workers among the smouldering ruins of the $6,000,000 conflagration which swept Hot Springs Friday night. About 55 city blocks are in ruins. Perfect order prevails, however, due to the efforts of 250 citizen police. The 2,500 persons rendered homeless are being cared for, and it is probable the city authorities will not call for assistance from the state at large.

The light and power company has provided emergency facilities for the newspapers and other industries to resume operations, but the city will be in darkness for at least thirty days.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

Britz, a flash of amusement in his face, walked to the door, opened it, and thrust his head out. In the corridor he faced a man from the Detective Bureau who said:

"The prisoner, Griswold, requests an immediate interview with Lieutenant Britz."

Britz hesitated a minute, then said: "Bring him in here," and then returned to Mrs. Delaroche.

"I shall not ask you to take my word for it, madam," he said. "I'll soon give you proof of the very best kind that what I have told you about Mr. Griswold is true. Just sit over here in this alcove where you cannot be seen from the middle of the room, and pay attention to what goes on."

Mrs. Delaroche was too far gone in the throes of jealousy to be squeamish. She crossed the room quickly and seated herself in the place designated by Britz. Shortly after that, Griswold was brought into the room, and the lieutenant, his hands in his pockets, his shoulders squared, his features cast in an iron mould, confronted the clubman.

"How long is this farce going to be kept up?" Griswold demanded.

"Is that what you came here to ask me, Mr. Griswold?" returned Britz.

"Yes, I want to know whether I am a prisoner, or in what capacity I am here. If the former, I insist upon being taken before a magistrate at once. I know my rights and I will have them—depend upon it."

"You know a great deal, don't you, Mr. Griswold?" sneered Britz. "Well, let me make you understand that you are here as long a time as we choose to keep you. Yes, you are a prisoner, and you are going to be one for a good long time—a good many years. You don't like the classification, do you? Well, you'll have leisure to get used to it. I call your bluff, Mr. Griswold, clubman, society man, embezzler, would-be jewel thief."

Griswold stepped forward as if to strike the speaker of the offensive words. Britz gripped his wrist and whirled him into a chair.

"Sit down!" he cried. "And if you make another move like that, I'll fix those wrists of yours in a way you won't like."

Britz turned to the Chief and remarked: "Ever see such cheek as this before?"

"Cheek, eh?" cried Griswold. "Why, you blundering——"

"None of that now, Mr. Griswold. I've got the goods on you. The less of that kind of talk you indulge in, the better for all concerned. Mrs. Delaroche has told everything!"

Griswold inquired sarcastically, "And what, pray, had she to tell?"

"A great deal more than Mrs. Missioner knows," answered Britz craftily.

"Don't mention that lady's name in such a place as this!" exclaimed Griswold with a show of chivalry that would have gone very well before a jury, but which was lost on such hardened thief-takers as Britz and Manning.

"No harm in mentioning her name, is there, when the lady herself will be here in a few minutes?"

This time there was no simulation in the start Griswold gave. He stared at the detective as if he doubted his own hearing.

"For God's sake, man, you're not going to bring her down here?"

"That's just what I'm going to do, Mr. Griswold," replied Britz. "She's on her way here now."

"Why—why—you simply must not let her come here," said Griswold again. "I would not have her see me here for anything in the world. Can't this be arranged somehow? Say, you know I am not a poor man——"

Britz grinned at him.

"Oh, I know you can't be bought," said Griswold. "But this is a serious matter to me. It means my whole future. I don't want Mrs. Missioner to come here and see me a prisoner. It will be different when the case comes to trial. I will have counsel then, and I can take care of myself, but just now I'm helpless. Don't bring the woman here to make her lose all respect for me; darn it, man don't queer me!"

Millicent Delaroche from the alcove heard and saw all that passed between the men. She gripped the slender arm of her chair until her tapering fingers curving around it bit into her pink palm. She watched the unmistakable agitation of the prisoner until no doubt remained in her mind of his attitude toward Mrs. Missioner. Then her rage broke through all restraint. Casting the detective's caution to the winds, she strode to the center of the room and towered above Griswold, as, thunderstruck at sight of her—in his self-centered pride of what might happen, he had utterly forgotten for a while her presence in Police Headquarters—he moved uneasily in his chair.

"Perjurer!" she screamed. "Liar! Ingrate! Thief!"

Each word was like the snap of a lash that brought a wincing start from Griswold as if a black snake whip had stung him. He stretched his hands toward her imploringly.

"Millicent!" he cried.

"Never call me by that name again," she almost screamed. "I wish I could forget every occasion on which you have dared to utter it. You wretch!" and she wrung her hands fitfully, as if she would like to clasp them about his throat.

Fitch opened the door softly and looked in. Behind him stood Elinor Holcomb and Detective Williams. At a sign from Britz, they entered the room noiselessly and stood beside the door. Before Williams could close it upon them, Mrs. Missioner and Braxton Sands appeared on the threshold.

Mrs. Delaroche turned to Britz in cold fury, an icy reaction from her volcanic rage of a moment before.

"I will tell you all you wish to know, lieutenant," she said. "I will tell you all I know about Mr. Griswold."

Britz poised himself in an attitude of polite inquiry.

"That is the man," Mrs. Delaroche continued, "who stole Mrs. Missioner's diamonds!"

The wealthy widow, standing near the door, put her hand to her heart as if about to faint from the shock. Sands, his only thought being to support her in such a trying moment, forgot the presence of all others, and passed his arm about her shoulders to steady her slightly swaying form. Elinor, with a little sigh, turned to Fitch and clasped both his hands with unmistakable tenderness. Then her head sank upon his shoulder and the doctor, bolder than Sands, encircled her waist with his arm.

Britz, without making a move to interrupt Mrs. Delaroche, stretched one hand behind him and pressed a button that communicated with the room where Gordon and Hicks waited with the four Hindoos. The connecting door opened and the Orientals could be seen within. Mrs. Delaroche, absorbed in her own grievances, intent only upon vengeance that should shatter Curtis Griswold to the very foundation of the man, again fixed her eyes upon him as she continued her denunciation to the detective. Britz and Manning listened alertly. Gordon, in the adjoining room, whipped out a notebook and began taking in short-hand everything the woman said.

"Yes, you stole the jewels," said Mrs. Delaroche to the crouching clubman in his chair. "I didn't know it when you gave them to me, and fool that I was, the suspicions I might have had were kept aloof by my affections for you. You wooed me for a long time. You told me I was the only woman in the world. You swore you never had a single thought of any other. And all that time, it seems you were courting this Mrs. Missioner. You were seeking to win her—for her wealth I suppose—it matters not for what. And even while you were in her house as a recognized, even an accepted suitor, you robbed the very woman you really intended to marry!"

Turning with a panther's speed and with its steely strength, she addressed herself again to Britz.

"Mr. Griswold," she said, "gave me a necklace a few weeks ago—a diamond necklace. It was contained in the jewel case you found in my room. He told me he had purchased it for me, and that it was to be his bridal gift. I wondered at the munificence of the present, but he assured me he was a man of much greater wealth than was generally supposed, and that when we were wed, we would live in luxury equalling that of anyone in New York society. I believed him. He explained that he wished me to take charge of the necklace at once as he feared to keep it in his own apartment, and for business reasons did not wish to intrust it to a safe deposit company. When the news of the Missioner diamond robbery was published in the newspapers, I commented upon it to the man I supposed to be my fiance, and expressed wonder as to whether Mrs. Missioner's diamonds were as beautiful as those he had given me. He asked me to say nothing about my possession of the necklace until our wedding day. He said he did not wish the directors of the Iroquois Trust Company to know he had laid out such a large sum of money yet awhile.

"When you, Mr. Britz, tried to steal the necklace from my room; when in fact, you did take the case that had contained them, I supposed you to be an ordinary burglar. Naturally I became excited at the thought of losing such magnificent gems. How the jewels were ever taken from my custody I do not yet know. I have no idea where they are. All I know is that Curtis Griswold stole them, and that, in turn, they were stolen from him.

"As for you," and she turned upon Griswold anew, "I pray Heaven I shall never hear your name again unless it be under circumstances that will give me further opportunity to revenge myself upon you!"

Silence followed the theatrical outburst of the woman. Griswold stood with clasped hands, his eyes on the floor. Mrs. Missioner, her eyes resolutely averted from his crouching form, gazed at Britz expectantly. Elinor, her fine womanhood athrill with sympathy in spite of her weeks of suffering—more keenly because of it perhaps—sought to soothe the agitation of Mrs. Delaroche, who was close to collapse. Fitch, too, strove to calm the woman. As a man he pitied her, as a physician, he felt some alarm for her because of the great excitement to which she had wrought herself—excitement plainly beyond the endurance of her emotional nature. A feeling akin to indignation stirred him when, glancing toward Britz, he saw a sarcastic smile on the detective's face. His hands in his pockets he was rocking gently on his heels, and watching Mrs. Delaroche as one would concentrate his vision on a great tragedienne near the grand finale of her performance.

"Bravo!" said the lieutenant detective at last. "Bravissimo, Mrs. Delaroche! If it were not for detaining our good friends, I'd insist upon an encore. Really, you know, you're entitled to any number of curtain calls for that."

The heroine of the Renaissance burglary flashed furious eyes upon him. Fitch, despite all he knew Britz had done for Elinor, could not conceal his anger. Even Miss Holcomb was indignant. Mrs. Missioner and Sands looked at the detective expectantly. Manning's face was impassive. He was prepared for any surprise from his shrewd lieutenant.

"You behold in Mrs. Delaroche," said Britz, including everybody in a sweep of his hand, "one of the most talented actresses in America. True, she isn't on the stage, but that's only because the managers haven't discovered her. If any of the big managers saw such an example of her art as this, he'd engage her on the spot."

"I don't understand you, Mr. Britz," said Mrs. Missioner inquiringly.

"SENSATION IN COURT."

The Most Dramatic Scenes in Great Legal Cases.

Few dramatic scenes have held a law court so spellbound as that enacted in the recent £1,000,000 will case.

In this instance it was the sudden production and reading of a private letter which thrilled and amazed all who were there.

Sir Charles Mathews, the Director of Public Prosecutions, has seen some terribly dramatic moments in the courts. Curiously enough, the most dramatic of all was in a will case, when Sir Charles appeared as prosecuting counsel against a solicitor charged with having forged the will of a dead lady.

For the defence a woman swore that she had seen the lady, who was ill in bed at the time, sign the will. She added that the prisoner handed the deceased lady the ink and pen with which to sign.

"Did he touch her hand?" demanded Sir Charles.

"I think he did just touch her hand," the witness replied.

"When he did touch her hand," proceeded Sir Charles, and in an instant his voice rose and became harsh and terrible, "was she dead?"

Turning deadly pale, the witness seemed to struggle for breath, swayed in the box, and fainted. The solicitor had taken the hand of the dead woman and with it had written her name to the forged will!

Hanged by the Court Clock.

Nearly every murder trial has its tense moments when every eye is on the witness in the box. A man named Hardy was on trial, and a witness swore most persistently that the prisoner had been in his company at the time the murder was committed.

"Are you quite certain of the exact time?" asked the prosecuting counsel.

"Certain!" replied the witness.

"How are you so sure about it?"

"We were in the Bear public house and I saw the time by the clock in the bar," said the witness; "it was twenty seven minutes past nine."

"You saw that clock yourself?" asked counsel.

"Yes."

Suddenly counsel turned round, and pointing dramatically to the clock in the court said, "You see that clock. What is the exact time by it?"

The witness became ghastly pale, gasped, and was silent.

He looked helplessly at the counsel and then at the clock.

He had been lying, for he could not tell the time!

The prisoner was condemned.

Few people who were present will forget the dramatic outburst of Seddon when on his trial for the murder of Miss Barrow.

In vehement tones and with hand uplifted, the murderer declared, "I swear before God that these are the words that were used."

Great as was the effect of this dramatic utterance on the jury, it was all destroyed by the quiet reply of Sir Rufus Isaacs.

"Mr. Seddon," he said, "all the statements you have been making are statements before God!"

Censor of Morals in India.

The state of Faridkot, in the Punjab is making an interesting experiment in the censorship of public morals.

The affairs of Faridkot are administered by the president of the Council of Regency, whose avowed aim is to develop a perfect community, where no crime shall exist and where all men shall work for the public good. He has set up a system of state registers, under which the whole people are classified under three heads, Good Characters, Conciliators and Evildoers. The system is all embracing, so that there is hardly an inhabitant of a village whose name is not duly recorded according to his conduct and character. The names are entered in a public place so that all may see them and know their moral standing. Everyone therefore is always careful that his character is absolutely free from fault. We are gravely assured that in six months the system has had the miraculous effect of ridding Faridkot of "litigation, disputes, criminality and immoral and unsocial practice."

LIKES HOME NAVIES.

Admiral Paley Thinks Australia's Plan the Best.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Admiral Paley, commanding Australia, was given a rousing send-off at Durban Saturday. Paley, in the course of an interview, was emphatic in declaring the navy policy adopted by Australia was undoubtedly the right one.

"Of course, the dominions have to decided for themselves the best way in which they can contribute to empire defences. What is suitable for one dominion may not suit another. The distance from the motherland, length and character of coast line, strategical position and population have all to be considered as factors in deciding what is to be done," he said, "but I consider Admiral Henderson's scheme excellent and most soundly built up. The individual independence of dominions overseas need never clash with the unity of the Empire as a whole."

FATHER MUST ATONE.

He Knew of Erring Lads' Offence Declares the Magistrate.

HAMILTON, Sept. 8.—Although his sons, 10 and 13 years of age, stated positively that they were guilty of the theft of lumber from Naylor & Robshaw, contractors, and that their father knew nothing about it, the magistrate sentenced the father, J. Spong, to a month in jail. He was charged with the theft, but declared he knew nothing about it, as he was away from home when the boys brought the lumber in.

"I am going to believe you did know the lumber was stolen. Some one has got to go to jail, and instead of sending the boys down I am going to sentence you," said the magistrate.

Unrest In Portugal.

MADRID, Sept. 8.—The Correspondencia de Espana prints a report that grave events are happening in Portugal, but gives no details in this connection.

A despatch from Tuy, which town of Valenca de Minho, says that the garrison at that place has been strongly reinforced by cavalry and artillery. The gates of the city are closed at sunset and the streets are regularly patrolled.

Violent Speeches at Johannesburg.

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 8.—At a labor meeting here last night, at which several thousand workmen were present, the speakers vehemently denounced the Government, which they described as a "scab" agency.

Canadian Girl Perishes.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 9.—French-Canadian Miss Renee Ugster, lost her life Sunday while attempting a difficult climb in the neighborhood of Chamonix. In company with a guide and porter she attempted a crossing from Aiguille de la Perseverance to Aiguille Orientale which overlooks the valley of the Chamonix, and which is well known to Alpinists. The party had almost finished the difficult feat when Miss Ugster fell into a deep crevasse. Her companions were unable to recover the body.

Aged Woman Drowned Herself.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 8.—The Sault Dredging & Construction Co. of this city have been awarded the $90,000 contract for dredging the channel between Goat Island and Little Current on Manitoulin Island to a depth of 22 feet.

The largest freighters on the lakes will then be able to dock at Little Current and it is probable that the dredging is but the first part of a big program of terminal facilities at that point.

RENTING ROOMS

CANON DAVIDSON'S HOME COMING

Interesting Remminisences of His Visit---Old Country Cities Visited--- Impressed With Beauty of English Life

Canon Davidson of St. John's church, has arrived home from his extended visit to England and conducted his own services on Sunday last.

Last night a reception was held and the congregation of St. John's tendered a warm welcome home to the rev. gentleman.

The reception meeting was presided over by Mr. H. W. Morphew, people's warden, who in his address of welcome said that the Canon's course in England had been watched with interest, and they were all glad to have him back again.

Mr. Hazen Ritchie also spoke of the healthy condition of the parish work during the summer season.

Canon Davidson was warmly received upon rising to respond. He said that the best part of going away was the final pleasure of coming home, no pleasure is so great as that of coming again among old friends after absence in other lands and among other people. He said he had had two profitable months in England, and was not occupied in sightseeing, but rather taking rest and recreation. He spent his time chiefly in social intercourse and he met many distinguished and interesting people.

The Canon went on to say that he was struck with the extreme beauty of English country districts and seaside places, and the beauty of English life strongly appealed to him.

Canon Davidson left for England on June 15th on the "Canada" and during the two months he visited many English cities, Leicester, Derby, Worcester, York, Eastbourne, Margate and Sussex. He also visited Birmingham and was present at the boy scout rally which took place in that city. He preached at York Minster and Hartlebury, and conducted services on the "Canada" and the "Ascania," the vessels upon which he voyaged to England and back.

The Canon was very reticent in expressing himself on church and political matters to our representative who attempted to interview him this morning. He intends later on giving a lecture on this visit when he will go more fully into his experiences in the old land.

PERFECTION

A New Drinking Fountain Which May be Introduced Here

Ald. Duffus has received a sample drinking fountain, which may be adopted by the Council and placed throughout the city. Ald. Duffus noticed the fountain at the Toronto Exhibition, and arranged to have a sample bubble sent here, and the affair was exhibited to the members of the council last evening. The bubble is made by the Rochester Germicidn Company, and is for a full flow bubble, and needs no adjusting. The bubble will rise from three-fourths to one inch above the top of the catch basin. The catch basin is made narrow and deep to prevent the user's lips coming in contact with the nozzle.

Sanitary drinking fountains are certainly a necessity in Peterborough, and if the bubble Perfection fountain is adopted, it will in all probability prove satisfactory.

STREET PAVING

Work Will Soon Commence

Reports from officials in charge of the street paving are that the work will be commenced in a few days. The machinery and men, who are at present constructing the Lindsay paving will be here shortly to start work here.

Nails used in batrooms and kitchens, on which damp cloths and towels may be hung, should be painted with enamel, so that they do not leave rusty marks.

ANOTHER NEED TO BE FILLED

What the City Needs--- Whether it Wants it or Not

We are certainly making progress. Every day brings up some want—which presently becomes a need. And it is and must be satisfied. Which brings up the difference between a want and a need. A citizen wants a fast horse and a piano box buggy. That is want. What he really needs is three tons of coal. But about our municipal wants. We will presently be overrun with inspectors. We have gaily added three or four this summer and just now comes Mr. Strickland and demands that we get a man with a judicial eye to view our electric wiring and the [illegible]. Forsooth. And why? He plainly means that we must watch the electrician to see that he does not botch his work and leave undone the things he ought to have done.

Look at the small army of inspectors. They are legion. Inspector of hydro wire interring, of garbage collecting, of sewer excavating, of school teachers, of drain laying, of cement construction, of licenses, bonds and a dozen other utilities.

What we need now, it is plain and pertinent, is an "Inspector of Inspectors." Why not? Who the mischief is to hold these people to their work if not another inspector. He will be a sort of watchdog of the force, able to snarl, bite and bark so as to keep the other fellows afraid. That's it. Inspect the inspectors. He will earn his salary and perquisites. He must be above suspicion. Above graft and influence, and ward politics and able to snap his fingers at the bloated, avaricious capitalist and the workingman.

By employing a very highly trained and expensive inspector of inspectors we will be able to get along with an inferior grade of sub-inspectors and effect savings in that way.

Already there are indications of several more appointments, including a building inspector. Wouldn't it be just as well to employ some people to do their work properly, at the beginning, and save all this inspection.

Bids are now open for the position of "Inspector of Inspectors." Who will have it?

A CHARMING SINGER MISS ALLEN'S RECITAL

Music Season Has Fine Send Off—An Artist in Song—A Peterborough Girl of Great Promise

Miss Dorothy Allan gave a recital of classical songs and pieces taken from operas, etc., at the Conservatory of Music last evening to a large and select audience. She was assisted by Mr. Asa Huycke and accompanied by Mr. John Allan.

Miss Allan is well known to Peterborough musical circles and has only recently returned from England, where she has been studying under the tutelage of Signor Giovanni Clerici, the tutor of the famous Caruso.

The pieces rendered by Miss Allan last evening gave her an opportunity of displaying and the audience of judging the wonderful compass and beauty of her voice.

"In Love's Garden" was particularly well rendered. "O Lovely Night," "Four by the Clock," and "His Lullaby," were sung with a delicacy of expression and feeling not often met with in the concert room. "The Flower Song" was brisk and vivacious, but "Happy Day" was a bright clever little song, cleverly and happily sung. The line "Golden trumpets sweet and low" was particularly fine and the singer well earned the encore she received. In response to the encore Miss Allan sang "Little Girl, don't Cry," a pathetic human little ditty.

"Her rendering of "Softly Wakes my Heart," "Love is Mine," and others were all that could be desired; but many would regard her "Voi che Sapete" as the prettiest in the program, but it ran hard with "Happy Day," which was perhaps more acceptable because it was English and understandable.

Miss Allan is a soprano but there is a rich mellowness in her voice seldom found in one of such strength; it has none of that shrill, ear piercing metallic tone which is characteristic of many sopranos.

Without the least exaggeration or flattering, it can be said that Miss Allan possesses a voice of remarkable quality and compass for a girl of her age. It is absolutely flawless, and rings as clear and sweet as a silver bell. Her facility in expression and the ease and grace with which she slides into the half notes is truly charming, and proves her an artist of a high order. There is nothing forced, strained or affected about her delivery, she seems entirely at ease. She took the top notes without apparent effort and fetched the lower chords with resonant clearness.

If there was one thing in the way of adverse criticism that struck the present writer, it was in connection with Miss Allan's enunciation; this was at times not as definite as it might have been. There was a time when the words of a song did not matter when the music was classical, but those days are happily past; the words are half the song, and if these are not clearly enunciated, half the effect is lost.

But Miss Allan is young and she has such a lovely voice that it seems a pity to even breathe a word that sounds depreciative.

Mr. Asa Huycke made some excellent contribution to the program. He has a fine voice and he sang with feeling and vigor "Tempest of the Heart," and "For You Alone."

This was the first concert of the season, and if this standard is sustained the people of Peterboro need not go out of the city to hear first class music.

The various communications were read and disposed of.

Mr. D. Elcombe of Harvey street was given permission to put in a cement septic tank under the supervision of the M.H.O.

Dr. McPherson reported six cases of typhoid fever and one case of scarlet fever during the past month in the city. There are no infectious diseases in the city at present.

A rather important discussion arose over the advisability of publishing the health by-laws for the benefit of the members of the committee, police and Sanitary Inspector.

Dr. McPherson: "We won't enforce by-laws unless we know what they are."

Mayor Bradburn thought the idea a good one.

It was agreed that the City Clerk and Dr. McPherson go over the by-laws and arrange matters.

"What about this anti-spitting by-law," asked the M.H.O.

After a lengthy discussion on the evils of spitting on the streets and public places, the matter was left in the hands of the M.H.O. to get prices of signs with the notice of prohibiting expectorating on the streets, from the local hardware men, and report at next meeting.

Sanitary Inspector Spence reported on the inspection of the bakeries of the city. Some of the bakery shops were found in very poor condition.

The bakers were notified to clean up their shops.

The M.H.O. was instructed to get in touch with the bakers and try and get better results in the cleanliness of bread.

Inspector Spence's report on Elm street was also read. Mr. Spence was instructed to have the residents of Elm street apply for a sewer to be put in on Elm street.

The meeting then adjourned.

MR. S. NEWHALL THE INVESTIGATOR

Local Detective Brought the Amendment to the Boarding House Law

About two years ago Mr. Newhall, the local detective, conceived the idea of the necessity of having some law to protect those people who keep lodgers and boarders. He acquainted Chief Thompson with his ideas and the two worked steadily along this line for some time. At the last session of Parliament J. H. Burnham, the local member, brought forth Detective Newhall's plans and the result was that the following is the way the amended law reads:

OBTAINING FOOD AND LODGING FRAUDULENTLY

"107B. Every one is guilty of an offence and liable upon summary conviction to a fine of one hundred dollars and costs or a fine of three months' imprisonment who fraudulently obtains food, lodging or other accommodation at any hotel or inn, or any boarding or eating house.

EVIDENCE

"2. Proof that a person obtained food, lodging or other accommodations at any hotel or inn, or any lodging or eating house, and did not pay therefor and made any false pretence or fictitious show of having baggage, or had any false or pretended baggage, or surreptitiously removed or attempted to remove his baggage or any material part thereof, or absconded or surreptitiously left the premises, or knowingly made any false statement to obtain credit or time for payment, or offered any worthless cheque, draft or security payment for lodging, food or other accommodation, shall be prima facie evidence of fraud."

This will mean a great deal more protection for all places where boarders are kept. A poor widow is often keeping a few boarders in order to exist, and then some "smooth guy" will come along and do her out of a few weeks' board. Mr. Newhall had this class in view when he asked have some law made whereby this class of criminals could be punished. Too much credit cannot be given Mr. Newhall and Chief Thompson for their foresight in this matter.

The amendment came in force a week ago to-day or September 2nd, 1913.

The city of Weisswasser, Bohemia, is considering erection of a technical school to cost $100,000.

Car conductors, a policeman and an official of the L.C.C. got stuck in it, and their efforts to get free caused great laughter.

MORE HYDRO ELECTRIC NEWS

City Must Appoint an Inspector of Electric Wiring

At a special committee meeting of the council as a whole last evening, they were waited upon by Engineer Strickland of the Inspection department of Hydro-Electric, Toronto, in regard to the appointment of an inspector for hydro in the city. The matter after a short discussion was left to the Fire, Water and Light committee to report on the matter.

Engineer Strickland, of the Hydro Electric Commission was present and asked that the municipality appoint an electric wiring inspector to enforce the rules and regulations governing wiring drawn up by the commission. There has been, he said, considerable loss by fire and very serious disasters resulting from defective wiring. Consequently government has empowered the Hydro-Electric Commission to make rules and regulations in this connection and insist that Ontario municipalities shall appoint an inspector to enforce such rules and regulations.

To the Council, Mr. Strickland said a wiring inspector must of necessity be a competent, practical man in electric wiring.

A charge will have to be made for inspection of all new electric wiring.

The Commission has a uniform by-law governing inspection and wiring applicable to all municipalities alike, and embodying a schedule of fees, thus eliminating any trouble to a municipality in this regard.

Mr. Strickland said he is convinced that an awful number of fires are the result of defective wiring. The minimum charge for inspection is 50c for a small cottage; for even a fair-sized modern residence the fee would be but a dollar or two. A number of contingent towns are sometimes grouped under the supervision of one inspector. In the case of Peterborough at least, Norwood, Port Hope, Lakefield and Lindsay might be inspected by the former's inspector.

Ald. Buller contended that a good builder with a fair knowledge of wiring, after two or three weeks' training in wiring in Toronto would make a competent building and wiring inspector.

Mr. Strickland offered that the wiring inspector must be a good man to prevent interference on the part of the underwriters.

Ald. Duffus favored the appointment of one man to combine the duties of both building and wiring inspector. "We should call for applications for this position." This matter was referred to the Property and Fire, Water and Light committees to report on the following suggestions: The appointment of a building and plumbing inspector combined, of a wiring and building inspector combined; or of a wiring inspector apart from either of the other two positions.

Ald. Duncan offered that merchants on George street are asking that the sidewalk blocked through the collapse of the Turnbull building be cleared away as soon as possible, as their business is being interferred with. This will be attended to at once, commencing this morning.

APSLEY NEWS

Apsley, Sept. 6.—Our village has been undergoing some very nice improvements by way of sidewalk-building. Oh, you Apsley.

Oh, yes! we would just like to state here that after a visit (only one visit), "Well, more correctly," one hundred visits notwithstanding the fact that a visit with Lovekin sometimes lasts for four weeks, and now since Sept. 3rd, when the Rev. E. J. Goard made a call they have decided to remain at the Lunckill forever and ay. Congratulations to [illegible] and why!

Mr. Dill and Ollie McCauley, of Apsley, started to the west on Sept. 2nd, where Mr. Dill McCauley expects to make his future home providing he is pleased with the great west. However, we will wish them both success.

The Messrs. Richard and Arthur Hall, of Apsley, have just returned home after a few days absence. They were attending a convention at Belleville.

Miss Zella Hales, of Apsley, is engaged as teacher at No. 2 Chandos, for the balance of the term.

We are having some very pleasant weather at present and the farmers are taking advantage of same by, well, making hay.

To clean a smoke-blackened ceiling. Make a fairly thick paste of starch and water, and apply this with a pad of flannel. When dry brush off with a soft brush, and you will find the result well worth the trouble.

DAIRY TEST AT THE FAIR; A REMARKABLE COW

In the Peterborough Herd

Arrangements are being completed for the holding of the dairy test at the Fair here, and from present indications the classes should be well filled. The test will be conducted by Mr. Wm. Weir, recorder of the Peterborough Centre, and Mr. A. L. Andress, of the Finch Dairy Station.

That cow testing is a means of not only detecting cows of indifferent value, but is also a means by which valuable animals are discovered has again been proven in the Peterboro Centre. In the herd of Mr. Jas. Haggart of the Ennismore Association is a small, under-sized native cow which Mr. Haggart has been intending to dispose of as he has not placed much value on her but since starting to test his cows this year, Mr. Haggart has discovered that this small unpretentious cow is one of the best in his herd both for milk and fat. This is not an argument in favor of small cows or native cows, but merely goes to show that the man who puts off starting to test his herd until he disposes of some of his animals which he thinks are inferior, and replaces them with animals which he considers high class, may be making one of the greatest mistakes of his life, and sacrificing valuable animals.

POLICE COURT

At a special session of Police Court last night four men were fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to $12.60, for peddling without a license.

Chas. Fitzgerald, of Indian River, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was fined $7.40. It seems that Fitzgerald was arrested on Saturday night, but was let go on his promise to appear in court on Monday. When his name was called yesterday he failed to appear and as a result Constable Weller and Bullied had to go to Indian River for the man.

Patrick Fitzgerald also appeared last night on the charge of obstructing an officer when making an arrest. When Constable Weller was arresting the other brother Pat butted in and as a result it cost him $9.50

Nice for the Porter.

Another story which Oxford has laid to the credit of Dr. Spooner refers to an occasion when he was seeing Mrs. Spooner off by train.

First of all, on arriving at the station he called a porter and said: "Put this rag and the two bags in the town drain!" What he wanted, of course, was to have two bags and a rug put in the down train, and the porter, knowing the Warden, did as he was expected.

Then, just as the train was about to start and Dr. Spooner was saying good bye to his wife, the porter came along for his tip. Dr. Spooner immediately gave his wife a shilling and kissed the porter! That, at least, is the story they tell in Oxford.

Queer Ancient "Cures."

We who understand modern medical methods, sanitation, and the care of simple diseases are likely to be horrified at the "cures" offered by the ancients and accepted by them as the only possible remedies.

Before medicine became a science it was used to a large degree with superstition, and much of the medicine used by the ancients was thought to cure by supernatural means.

Tiger's flesh and new-born puppies were popular specifics for certain ills. One book of remedies, among the best of its time, recommended a live spider, rolled in butter, and formed in a pill. This pill was to be taken as an antidote for jaundice, and jaundice, in the days when the book was new, covered many forms of disease now known by other names.

Vipers were held in high esteem. These were given for various ailments, but one of their best uses was an eye remedy. Vipers, stewed into a broth, were supposed to be an excellent remedy for strengthening the eyes.

Even as late as the 17th and 18th centuries, powdered mummies were prescribed for various illnesses and fevers. As mummies were scarce and fever plentiful, many powders, supposed to be made from powdered mummies, were supplied to patients with the same excellent effect that the real mummy would have given.

ELECTRIC INCUBATORS.

Some Remarkable Developments in Modern Farming.

The wonderful manner in which crops and garden produce can be improved by what is known as electro-culture—i.e., the electrifying of areas and plants by special installations—seems likely to revolutionize farming and gardening. As a striking illustration, however, of the old saying that there is nothing new under the sun, it might be mentioned that, although electro-culture is still in its infancy, the idea of using electricity to assist Nature in the cultivation and development of plants was tried as far back as 1746, when an Edinburgh professor found that two myrtle trees that he had electrified blossomed sooner than others.

But the real beginning of practical electro-culture, as we know it to-day, was in 1885, when Professor Lemstrom, of Sweden, made his first experiments.

Method of Application.

That the application of electricity to crops is an enormous advantage to agriculturists may be gathered from the fact that, in some cases, as much as forty-five per cent. increase on crops has been obtained on land of medium productiveness through electric discharges. The usual method is to arrange a system of poles around the field to be electrified, these poles being surmounted by strong porcelain insulators. The main wire is fixed on to these insulators, extending round the outside of the area to be cultivated, says the London Daily Telegraph. Finer wires are also stretched across the field at intervals of about 30 feet.

Potatoes, radishes, and beetroots have been found to be greatly benefited by this "plant-shocking," as it is termed. Indeed, in almost every case in which the system has been tried excellent results have followed, and Mr. T. Thorne Baker, a well-known expert on electroculture, says that, in regard to radishes and beetroot treated electrically, these have shown a marked increase in the percentage of sugar, while in the case of a potato crop so treated in France the potatoes were ready for lifting a week earlier than the ordinary ones.

Mention of France reminds one that electrical apparatus is now being used in the vineyards of that country in order to prevent the formation and fall of hailstones, which are so disastrous in the vine-growing districts. The apparatus is really a new type of lightning-conductor, and is placed on a column not less than 100 feet in height.

Perhaps, however, the most extraordinary development of electricity as applied to farming is in regard to poultry rearing. Mr. Thorne Baker has pointed chicks, so that many young ones die sometimes yield a percentage of weak out that eggs hatched in incubators during the first few days. If, however, electric currents are applied to the chicks, these have such a stimulating effect that they not only preserve the life of weakly chicks, but enable them to gain weight on their normal amount of food, becoming in about two months as heavy as chicks grown for three months in the ordinary way.

Army "Dutch."

In most spheres of work we find the workers concerned have a vocabulary of their own, introducing "slang" words of weird design, turning phrases into such shapes that they are barely recognizable. An unlimited number of these phrases are used in the army.

A man whose duty it is to attend to the washing-up, serving up dinners, and responsible for the general cleanliness, is called either a "swab," "cook's mate," or "cook's bully," whereas a fellow concerned in the welfare of his mate's property while at drill is the "orderly buffstick." The orderly sergeant, who marches the sick to hospital, attends to the delivery of letters, etc., is nicknamed the "orderly pig."

Among the eatables we find "roofie" substituted for bread, "wads" for cake or pudding, the latter sometimes being termed "[illegible]." A request to pass the butter is made as follows: "[illegible]," or "Pass the roll-me in the gutter."

If a man undertakes to do anything risky he is said to be "chancing his arm," but if he gets promoted he "gets the tape." A soldier sentenced to light punishment is "on jankers," but if in prison he is in "clink," or in the "digger." Beer is known as "pig's ear," lemonade as "pop," a shabby is a "drop on top." Tins used for cooking purposes are "dixies," soap is named "Cape of Good Hope."

Instead of "What's the time?" you hear "How's the bird-lime?" The theatre is known as the "gaff." To be given your discharge is "getting your ticket." A recruit is known as a "rookie," an old soldier as an "old sweat," and a trumpeter is a "badgy."

In the Nursery.

Babies about a year old take a great delight in throwing their toys on the ground, often for the pleasure of seeing the mother pick them up again or to hear the noise made in falling. Tie the toys with soft strings to the child's chair and they will be easily replaced without any effort on the mother's or nurse's part.

A Bit of Drapery Is Often To Be Noted on the Ruffled Dresses.
Maison Jenny.

FLOUNCES are again in fashion. More than a year ago, at the same time that the [illegible] and [illegible] were introduced into [illegible] an effort to make flounces [illegible] did not succeed. Since Paris [illegible] to them this spring they have at last established themselves firmly in autumn fashions. The simplest dress takes on an air of daintiness when ruffles are a part of it, and as for evening gowns, flounces seem to be made for dancing steps and lacy elegance.

The new flounces of 1913-14 are not always scant affairs by any means. Indeed, the silhouette is changed by the way they stand out from the dress foundation. Many of the day time models are of taffeta—a taffeta, by the way, that is not at all like the old shiny silk, but a supple lustreless fabric that looks especially pretty when ruffled.

Fashion never repeats itself exactly and the new flounces are applied on a scant foundation that gives them a very different look than when they adorned the distended skirts of the fifties and seventies.

The tunic flounce is one of the novelties of this new fashion and probably will be a great favorite in America. A lovely model worn by Mlle. de Kerbyroet pictured here, is of black taffeta. The tunic represents one of the prettiest of these new tunic flounces. The yoke, about hip depth, is gathered lightly into the waist and the lower edge is cut in petal shaped scallops. The tunic ruffle is gathered to this lower yoke edge and is itself cut into these pretty petal scallops. In this model the lower tunic edge has the modish downward tendency. The bloused waist has drop shoulder seams and slightly surpliced fronts, which roll back to make a little collar. A rather U shaped décolleté is outlined by modish black and white net frills.

A bit of drapery is often to be noted in these flounced dresses. In one evening gown of white maline lace flounces, very [illegible] scant, mounted on net and posed over a white satin foundation, each flounce is headed by a double lace frill. Below the lowest flounce the tulle is draped, disclosing a little of the white satin foundation. Over the [illegible] and [illegible] foundation is posed a very large square collar that drops down, covering the sleeves and waist line. Two amber satin ribbons are discerned through [illegible] lace, posed in a V. A striking accessory [illegible] this dress is the long amber and p[illegible] lace of unusual length, wound about the [illegible] several times and caught up in artistic fashion.

A lovely evening gown worn by the pretty Mlle. Datthaix is all that is newest in this ruffled fashion [illegible] upon us. It is of blue tulle posed over a blue silk slip, and the placing of the three skirt ruffles has to do with the shape as well as the style. The upper one forms a tunic and the lower one shapes the uneven hem line. The middle ruffle takes the same direction as the others and stands out in the same fashion without any wiring, though the hems are embroidered with a [illegible] stitching. The ruffles are applied to the dress by corded piped shirrings, placed very close together. Reaching only up to the bust the blue lining is continued [illegible] over the shoulder by a [illegible] sleeveless lining. Over this a blue tulle [illegible] fichu-like blouse is posed. A broad girdle of [illegible] velvet passes around the waist and ties in a wide flat bow in front. This is a very advanced model; it is the keynote of more simple and conventional [illegible] to come.

Two views of a Louis XVI. blue taffeta casque top off an ultra modern flounced skirt of white mousseline de soie. The skirt ruffles are posed in the same fashion as in the other dress, except that the lower one is placed higher up, revealing the plain skirt below. Box pleating outlines the revers and wide cavalier cuffs and the front revers are continued round to the back [illegible] a sash of the material. Thus each is brought forward again and tied [illegible] ruffle in front. A [illegible] in under the sash.

THEY LOOK LIKE PENNANT WINNERS

THE GIANTS

THE SPORTING WORLD

McGRAW AND HIS MEN ARE BETTER THAN EVER

That the New York Giants will figure in the World's Series is almost a certainty. The Giants have played a fast, consistent game since the early part of the season and under the wise guidance of their resourceful teacher, John J. McGraw, have swept all opposition before them. The Phillies occupied almost the topmost position in the National League for several weeks in the early stages of the race, but they fell down at crucial moments and allowed the New York tribe to pass them. The Giants have still held the lead, the Phillies being unable to make up the ground they lost.

The success of the Giants this year is due to a variety of causes. One of the principal ones is that they have at their head a baseball leader of the calibre of McGraw. Good experts figure that without McGraw to pilot the team it would have hard work ~~leading the second division in the~~ National League. McGraw is the brains of the team and his orders are carried out to the letter by the men on the field. He knows the weakness of all the other clubs in the circuit and plans his battles accordingly. The pitching staff of the Giants showed up better than was expected this year. Mathewson who, it was figured by many of the critics was about done for as a boxman, has done grand work all season and has been a bulwark of strength to the team. Rube Marquard came back in fine shape and has gained a large number of victories for the Giants by his effective twirling. Jeff Tesreau has not shown up to last season's form but has nevertheless pitched some good games. Demaree blossomed out a reliable slab artist and has led his team mates to several victories. Shafer, Fletcher and Herzog have shown in the infield. Young George Burns has proved a star of the first order in the outfield, while Snodgrass and the others have won praise for their work.

The Giants will in all probability have the Athletics as opponents in the world's series and the outcome will be hard to guess. Some of the wise ones incline to the belief that Connie Mack's wonders will [illegible] all over the Giants, but the friends of the latter laugh at this and declare that Mathewson and the other sharpshooters of the McGraw bunch will mow down the mighty Farmen of the Athletics like grain before the reaper.

SKETCHES OF N.Y. GIANTS

Otis Crandall Pitcher

Otis Crandall, a clever and hard-hitting young right handed pitcher of the Giants was born in Wadena, Ind. in 1889. Before signing with the Cedar Rapids Club of the I.I.I. League in 1907, he played with an independent club in Frankford Ind. He joined the Cedar Rapids Club in [illegible] and of the 13 games pitched landed six. New York then secured him and he justified the good things said about him. In 1911-12 he was the Giants' most reliable pitchers and pinch-hitter. This season McGraw traded him to St. Louis for Larry McLean but was compelled to buy him back. He kept the players in harmony all the time and when he left the Giants started to wrangle among themselves. McGraw was quick to see that "Otis" had to be kept on his pay roll.

ARE YOU A SOCCER PLAYER

If so Get in on This

The Nomads Football Club is running a football competition, and the winners will be given a beautiful set of medals.

~~There will be four teams in the~~ competition, and every football player in the city who wants to be on one of these teams is asked to send in his name to either H. Smith, 151 Park street, or T.B. Moffatt, 292 Townsend street, before the 15th as the games will start on Sept. 20. Two games will be played every ~~Saturday afternoon on the Exhibi~~tion Park.

The Nomad Committee have chosen the following men to act as captain and manager of each team: Messrs. C. Hotston, W. Mildon, R. Jeffries and R. Hartshorn. Already the committee have received the names of over thirty good footballers who wish to be on one of the teams.

A fee of fifty cents for each player will be charged to help to pay for the medals, referees, bills, ground and other expenses of the competition and this is the only money the players will be asked to as the committee will bear all other expenses.

A meeting of the Nomads committee and the four managers will be held on September 15 at 7.30 p.m. at T.B. Moffatt's 292 Townsend street, at which each manager will pick his team.

The next day The Review will publish the four teams. The players are requested to hand in their fees to their manager before the first game on September 20.

All soccer players had better hand in their names right away and have a season's good fun.

PHILADELPHIA HAS A SMALL CHANCE

The chances of the Phillies overtaking the Giants are still being considered by some writers, but a glance at the possibilities will easily convince any follower of the grand old game that their chances are mighty slim. The Giants have 24 more games to play and if they win 12 and lose 12, which is about as poor a showing as leading teams could make, the Dooin Brigade must not lose more than 7 to tie them. A short summary of the facts is this: While the Giants are splitting even for the rest of the season Philadelphia must win 23 of their remaining 29 games; This is not impossible, but you must confess it is very improbable.

PAT

By CARROL H. PIERCE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I was tramping in Switzerland. I set out one morning from Vevay on the road to Geneva. I was walking along enjoying the beautiful prospect about me—Lake Leman and white Alpine peaks in the distance—when ahead of me I saw a figure topped by a conical hat, a greenish coat and knee breeches. Over his shoulder he carried a staff, to an end of which was slung a bandanna handkerchief, evidently containing the wayfarer's luggage. "Upon my word," I said to myself, "if there isn't a son of the Emerald isle tramping along here in Switzerland."

There is a kinship among those who speak the same language that comes out when they meet in foreign lands. It was this feeling that induced me to increase my pace till I reached the man. When I did so he turned toward me a good natured face and on seeing that I was amused at his appearance said jauntily:

"The top of the morning to you, sir."

"How are you, Pat?" I replied.

"And how did you know me name was Pat?" he asked.

"Oh, you green islanders are all either Pat or Mike. I had an even chance of hitting your name."

"You're not English," he rejoined, "unless you're a colonist. I know that by your talk."

"I'm an American. But what the dickens are you tramping for here in Switzerland—looking for a chance to carry mortar to the top of some new building?"

"Where there's a fellow to do all the work?"

My reply to this was a smile. The man puzzled me. His brogue was not so broad as that of an Irish peasant. And why an Irish peasant should be looking for a job in Switzerland I could not conceive.

Whether it was that I longed for the companionship of one who spoke a common language or because there was something very much alive with my fellow traveler I don't know, but I enjoyed his company so well that I was in no hurry to part with him. Coming to a village, we sat down together at a table in the grounds of a hotel on the margin of the lake and ordered a luncheon. Pat talked glibly all the while, his chat sparkling with wit and humor, so that I was very agreeably entertained. I undertook to pay for his lunch as well as my own, but he wouldn't have it. I insisted that it was a low price for me to pay for having been so pleasantly cheered, but he said that he had, or thought he had, money enough to take him to Dublin, and as long as it lasted he would pay his own way.

The result of the meeting was that we traveled together to Geneva. There he named a cheap hotel he proposed to stop at, and I was so loath to part with him that I chose the same hostelry. He intended to set out on his walk the next day toward Dijon, thence to Paris, Calais and across the channel and over England to his home in Ireland. But the next day he was taken down with rheumatism in one of his legs and couldn't move.

He did not quit Geneva for two weeks. It was one of my stopping points and I kept him company, in other words took care of him, then succeeded in inducing him to permit me to purchase a ticket for him to Dublin. Indeed, there seemed to be no other way for him to get home but by train, for he couldn't walk and he hadn't sufficient money to ride. I told him that I would make a tour of Ireland before returning to America and would see him there. If he found it convenient to pay the loan then, well and good, if not I would not miss the amount. On parting with him I asked him to tell me what he was doing in Switzerland. He smiled that good natured smile of his and said that would be explained when I saw him in Ireland.

It was several months before I started on my Irish tour, and on reaching Dublin I posted a letter announcing my arrival to the address he had given me, a village not far from the city. The next afternoon a note from Pat was handed to me stating that he had had a relapse of his old trouble, rheumatism, and could not get out. Would I kindly come with the bearer? The bearer was a liveried servant.

I thought there must be some mistake, but said nothing. I went outside, where I found a carriage with a coachman in the same livery as the bearer of the note. I was put into the carriage and driven for an hour when we turned into a handsome place. As we neared the house I saw a gentleman sitting on the porch with one leg resting on a chair. On his face was a broad grin, evidently at the surprise plainly visible on mine, for he was none other than my fellow traveler, Pat.

He thus explained the case. He was a gentleman's son and like others of his kind went out into the world to fight for a living, since his father had lost his property by speculation. He had fancied to tramp as an Irish peasant; having heard of the death of a cousin which would give him an entailed estate, he was making his way homeward on foot when I met him.

He entertained me royally, and since he expressed a wish to tramp in America we arranged for a pedestrian tour in the Rocky mountains.

The next year he came over, and we visited many of our western scenic curiosities together, tramping much of the way.

You'll never have good neighbors unless you are one.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Toronto Lady Took "Fruit-a-tives" And Cured Herself.

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO,
DEC. 15th, 1909

"I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without benefit. I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. After taking one box I was much better.

When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone.

After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-tives" cured me."

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

TOOK THE PROF'S ADVICE.

His Suggestion Was Promptly Acted Upon by His Hearer.

At a certain well known medical college not a thousand miles from New York there is a staff lecturer whose hobby is the necessity of a practicing physician possessing the ability to sleep at odd minutes. The gentleman in question, be it added, is as prosy in the enunciation of this theme as he is insistent upon it, wherefore he is affectionately known as "Cat Naps."

Just before the recent graduation he was for the hundredth time enlarging on the pet topic at the close of a long ninety minutes' discourse something like this:

"And let me again impress upon you young gentlemen, the prime necessity of training yourselves to that invaluable habit of sleeping here, there and everywhere, whenever an unexpected fifteen minutes offers itself to recuperate your often exhausted energies. It may be in a car, with a ride ahead and no one at your elbow to annoy you. It may be in your office, between calls—at first, you know, there may be intervals! It may come anywhere, any time. But seize the opportunity whenever you feel you are bored perhaps with what is going on around you—when you feel your time is being unprofitably employed."

And then from the hindmost bench came two loud, unmistakable snores!—Judge.

A girl's troubles soon cease to worry her after she tells them to her mother.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

DRAMITIC RECITAL

Coming Next Week to Opera House Interesting Event to all Lovers of Drama

An interesting event of a high and unique character is promised in the forthcoming appearance of Mme. Harriet Labadie who will give a dramatic interpretation of "To-Morrow," a recent production from the pen of Percy MacKaye whose plays have already placed him in the front rank of American dramatists.

In "To-Morrow" the author has painted a [illegible] picture of Californian life and scenes in Canada, which deals with the much discussed subject of eugenics from a new standpoint, making a powerful plea to woman to whom he directly appeals as the chief factor in the upbuilding of a better race.

Mme. Dale the principal female character in the play stands for the highest type of womanhood, and through this character the playwright makes his appeal to those instincts in woman which once aroused must surely awaken her to a sense of the wonderful responsibility she bears toward humanity.

Her power to handle the theme the theme of this play and her success in investigating it with an intensity of dramatic quality as to hold her auditors spellbound carried away a critical audience, formed of members of the Century Club, of New York, before which Mme. Labadie appeared last season, and led her being immediately elected as representative at large of the American Theatre Goers of New York.

Her presentation of this play on September 15, at the Grand Opera House, will undoubtedly be enjoyed by lovers of the highest in dramatic art. Mme. Labadie will appear under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Peterborough Health Association.

MME. HARRIET LABADIE.

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

Probably no book dramatization of recent years has enjoyed the success and popularity that has attended "Brewster's Millions," George Barr McCutcheon's remarkable tale of frenzied finance, which comes to the Grand Opera House Saturday, Sept. 13th, matinee and night. The title character is in the capable hands of Louis Nilsen and the supporting company is one of exceptional merit. The story of the play is familiar to the average theatre-goer and book reader and tells how Montgomery Brewster, inheriting a million dollars from his grandfather, while given a housewarming and a surprise party by his friends, who shower congratulations upon him, is informed by a solicitor that his mother's brother, who has just died, has left him a fortune of $7,000,000, on condition that he shall spend the million within the year, the reason for the stipulation being that the young man's mother had been left in want by the grandfather, and the uncle does not wish her son to enjoy an inheritance derived from that source. The conditions are that he shall not give the million dollars away—that would be too simple—yet he is not to be mean. He must spend it in some legitimate way, by investing it in some legitimate way, by investing in some business, or using it for his enjoyment and that of his friends. Above all he must not disclose his purpose. He accepts the conditions and his efforts to make himself penniless in a short time, makes up the fun that follows.

Up to the last minute, some complications or other threatens to defeat him; but his wit and dexterity extricate him from every emergency and he finally succeeds in his task. 17

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye-strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the housewife finds the numerous duties of home a burden; in fact every walk of life suffers from a loss of nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. ## HIS ROLL GROWING

"Jas. Ray" Gets $3000 in Hamilton in a New Disguise.

HAMILTON, Sept. 10.—Jas. Ray, who recently mulcted the banks of many Ontario towns and cities, has evidently not yet wearied in his chosen task of defrauding these financial institutions. Yesterday, it is said, he garnered in $3,000 from another Hamilton bank.

Recent publicity of his exploits has only served to cause Ray to demonstrate his versatility. Yesterday he discarded the role of Saskatchewan farmer, with his work-a-day clothes, his two weeks' growth of beard, his luxuriant moustache, and his long, grey-black hair. Incidentally, he dispensed with his monosyllabic nomenclature, for the more eastern and urban name of Graham. Graham was a young clean-shaved, well-dressed, citified young man, but he operated with the same smoothness and success as the western yokel, Ray.

The police are busy on the case, but believe that Graham has shaken the dust of Hamilton off his feet, and departed for other fields of activity where banks abound.

The manager of the local branch which was victimized was asked last night for a statement regarding the matter, but he declined to discuss it in any way. It is understood, however, that Graham made a deposit in the bank of a small amount, and that he later presented a check for about $3,000, which was honored, and that this was greatly in excess of the amount he had on deposit.

HID BODY IN CELLAR

Murderers of Chas. Robinson Sought by Ottawa Police.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—The body of Charles Robinson of Brooklyn, N.Y., an employe of Nathan Shapiro, a bookmaker of St. Louis, Mo., was found in the cellar of a vacant building on Somerset street, late yesterday afternoon, under a pile of coke, while nearby was a bloodstained trunk, in which the remains had evidently been taken to the place.

Robinson was last seen the night of Thursday, Aug. 28, last, and his employers notified the Ottawa police of his disappearance from his rooms and work, at Connaught Park race meet the following day. The body was badly decomposed, but that Robinson was murdered, the police have no doubt.

The police are working on a strong clue obtained from a real estate man, who has the renting of the place. On Saturday, Aug. 30, a man who gave no name, called at the real estate agent's, and obtained the keys of the building, saying he wanted to open a clothing store and was looking for a location. He was given the keys and retained them until the following Tuesday.

In the meantime, the police think, the body of Robinson had been packed in the trunk, those committing the murder awaiting an opportunity to dispose of it. Between Saturday and the Tuesday following, the body is thought to have been taken to the place, which is a house recently remodelled into an apartment, with several stores on the ground floor. The discovery yesterday came as the result of neighbors complaining of the stench.

No arrests had been made in the case up to a late hour last night. The police are searching for the hackman who took the trunk containing the body, to the Somerset street house.

Robinson had about $200 on his person when last seen, and it is probable that robbery was the motive for the crime, or that he may have been killed in an altercation.

Bilingual Rules Relaxed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—A new regulation has replaced old No. 17 in the bilingual instructions issued by the Ontario Government.

In the new order, a copy of which has been received in Ottawa, more liberty is allowed the chief inspector to vary the regulations to meet existing conditions in different schools.

In addition, English Protestant and French Catholic inspectors are put on a par except that all are under control of the chief inspector.

The new order is a big step forward for bilingual advocates.

Died In Tram Car.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 10.—Sitting in his seat on board one of the cars of the London and Lake Erie Traction Co., John Flynn of Calgary, aged about 65, suddenly fell back dead just before the car reached the city yesterday morning from St. Thomas.

Deceased was on a visit to his nephew at St. Thomas, one of whom, Hector McIntosh, was conductor of the car.

Late Session Is Forecast.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—The Federal bye-elections in Bruce, Chateaugay, Lanark and Middlesex may be deferred somewhat owing to the probability of Parliament's meeting later than usual. Some of the Cabinet Ministers will be away in October, a circumstance that does not harmonize with the idea of a November session.

LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND VISITS U.S. MILITARY ACADEMY

INSPECTION OF CADETS BY THE CHANCELLOR.

Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor of England, beheld the West Point of his dreams. He had known the United States Military Academy only through his studies when Secretary of State for War for Great Britain, and high as had been his opinion of the institution, he declared the reality surpassed his most sanguine expectations. "When I see how generously the government has supported West Point," he said, "I must say that the sight of these buildings on which so large appropriations have been expended make the mouth of a British War Minister water."

Lord Haldane made a thorough inspection of the buildings and grounds and reviewed a dress parade of the cadets in company with eminent Canadian officials, who had gone to West Point to greet him on his arrival there on board Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's yacht the Corsair, after a voyage on the Hudson.

MURDERER HAS CONFESSED DEED

"Taylor the Spaniard" After a Brief Catechism Acknowledges the Crime.

Canadian Press Despatch

BRANTFORD, Sept. 10 — James Taylor, known as "Taylor the Spaniard," who was arrested last night for murder of little Charlie Dawson the boy whose horribly mutilated body was found Tuesday morning in a ditch by the road, near Cainsville, confessed to the police early this morning, after a brief catechism that he killed the boy on the spot where the body was found, fearing, as he put it, "the kid would squeal on him," for an unmentionable offence he had committed against the lad. Taylor afterwards directed the authorities to the field, near the waterworks, where he, yesterday, threw a large pocket knife with a three inch blade with which he had commited the crime. Taylor who is a man of very low intelligence, says young Dawson made no outcry whatever, as his first slash almost severed the head from the body.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 10.—On appearance in Police Court this morning Taylor pleaded guilty to the murder, and to the sodomy charge not guilty. He waived examination and was sent for trial at next sessions on both charges.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 10.—In the arrest last night of James Taylor, an Indian, on a nominal charge of vagrancy, local police are hopeful that they have taken an important step toward solving the mystery of the death of Charlie Dawson, the 12-year-old boy whose body, terribly mutilated, was found in a ditch near Cainsville, four miles from the city, early yesterday morning.

Taylor was employed at the livery stable of Leslie Anguish, and the police state that the boy enquired for him between eight and nine o'clock Monday night. Whether he and the boy went out together or not has not been definitely ascertained, but it is known that Taylor secured a rig from the stable and went out. Taylor had not been questioned even as to his whereabouts at a late hour last night and he did not even know for what he was being held. In the meantime High Constable Kerr and Detective Chapman were scouring the district for further clue as to the boy's movements Monday night. The arrest of Taylor is regarded, however, as a most important development in the case.

The boy had frequently visited the livery stable in question and knew Taylor well. He liked horses and was fond of going out with the men. Taylor, the man being held by the police, is regarded as a half-witted fellow. He has been in the police court many times in recent years on various charges.

What is regarded as one of the strongest clue in connection with Taylor's arrest on a vagrancy charge is the finding by the police of brownish spots on his clothing. An analysis will be at once made to determine the nature of the spots.

A strip taken from the belt worn by the boy finally established his identity as Charles Dawson, son of John Dawson, teamster, employed by the T. E. Rogerson Co. A schoolmate thought he recognised the body and the boy's father was called, but was so greatly overcome that he could not make a positive identification. He cut off a portion of the boy's belt and hastened home in a friend's automobile to his wife. The father showed the strip to his wife, and asked if it belonged to Charlie. Only then, when the woman collapsed, was the identification established complete and certain. The woman's condition is precarious.

The father of the boy stated that his son had not come home overnight. While they were worried about it they were not unduly alarmed, because the lad was of a roving disposition and frequently stayed in the city until a very late hour.

It is considered as certain that he was not murdered where the body was found. One theory early advanced was that he had annoyed foreigners and suffered death as a result. This theory arose from the fact that there are a number of foreigners living in Echo place, who are employed at a local factory.

The boy lived about two miles from the place where his body was found. His relatives say that he was not a boy who would be likely to annoy foreign residents, although he was full of life.

One local doctor who examined the remains yesterday declared his belief that death was accidental. This view, however, is not entertained for a moment by the coroner, Dr. Raphael of Cainsville, or by his associate, Dr. Ashton. Both doctors point to the fact that the boy in spite of his wounds did not have a broken bone in his body. It was their belief that the boy had been a witness to a crime and that his death was the seal which his slayer had put upon it.

The theory that the boy was murdered some distance from where he was found is strengthened by the examination of his clothes and body after he was brought to the city. The lad's shirt or blouse contained absolutely no stains of blood. This was considered remarkable in view of the fact that the body had numerous stab wounds. These wounds were evidently inflicted after the boy was dead. The terrible gash at his throat, which almost severed his head from his body, was the cause of his death. After that he was hacked with an instrument which left marks like those of a stiletto all over the body. The only blood marks were caused by the gashes in the neck.

Charlie Dawson was a popular little boy in his own neighborhood. Residents in that section yesterday could not believe that it was he who was murdered, because it was not thought that he had an enemy in the world. Besides a mother and father he leaves two brothers and two sisters.

EXPLORERS MURDERED

Ottawa Man and an American Killed in Far North by Eskimos.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—A story from two sources, differing only as to detail, reached Ottawa yesterday announcing the death at the hands of an Eskimo band in the far north of Canada last summer of two explorers, George Street of Ottawa and H. V. Radford, an American, with whom the Ottawa man left for a journey into the Arctic circle two years ago. The first story received by mail steamer via the Hudson Bay route is that the two men left Chesterfield Inlet, on Hudson Bay, with a party of Eskimo traders and joined another party of inland Eskimos at Schultz Lake, intending to proceed to Bathurst Inlet, on the Arctic Ocean. Shortly afterwards an altercation occurred between Radford and one of the tribe, and the latter drove his spear through the white man. Street attempted to go to the rescue of his companion, but met death in like manner. The story was kept secret by the Eskimos for several months, but finally reached the ears of the mounted police at Chesterfield two months ago, and a special detail has been sent to investigate the story.

While regarding the story of the Eskimo as apparently authentic because of its circumstantial character, the mounted police authorities are not inclined to give it complete credence, as native stories are frequently magnified and distorted in the telling.

What gives hope that the men may be alive is the fact that on July 22 last Howard Allan reported in Edmonton that he had heard that Radford was alive and well, at Herschel Island.

Street was a son of C. F. Street of this city. He played football on the Ottawa College team which won the intercollegiate championship of 1907.

HEROINE OF THE STAGE.

Husband For Whom Mrs. Chas. Craig Labored Is Dead.

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—The death of Charles G. Craig, formerly one of Canada's most noted actors, which occurred at Trinity Hospital, Toronto, in his 61st year, brings forth a remarkable romance of love and devotion in married life.

At the height of his fame fifteen years ago Mr. Craig had been incapacitated by reason of an accidental fall while playing "Shore Acres," and as a result he lost the use of his lower limbs. It was then that his wife took up the stage career as the bread-winner of the family, and in a few years was one of David Belasco's best known character comediennes. At the time of her husband's death Mrs. Craig was playing in "The Sins of the Father" in Buffalo, the news of his death being kept from her until the conclusion of the performance.

Mr. Craig was born near Cobourg, Ont., and was married 27 years ago. The funeral is to take place at Grafton, Ont., the actor's former home, to morrow.

Girl Killed By Fall.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—An unidentified girl apparently about 15 years of age, either fell or jumped from the fourth floor of a Notre Dame street boarding house late last night and was dashed to death. The police are holding Pierre Valade, 21 years of age, in whose room the girl is thought to have been, and are instituting a thorough investigation.

The girl was only partialy dressed when picked up on the sidewalk, and blood stains upon her clothing suggested that she had been assaulted and was attempting to escape when she met her death.

Exit Federal Square.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—Plans are under way for Toronto's new postoffice building, which, it is estimated, will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. Tenders for the new custom house will shortly be advertised. The Federal square idea has gone by the boards, owing to the expense involved in appropriation.

U.S. DEMOCRATIC TARIFF MEASURE PASSES SENATE

Epoch-Marking Revision of Duties Is Accepted by a Vote of 44 to 37—Two Democrats Oppose It Because of Free Sugar and Two Republicans Support It—Wilson Is Pleased With Result.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The Democratic tariff revision bill passed the Senate at 5.43 o'clock yesterday afternoon, amid a burst of applause that swept down from crowded galleries and found its echo on the crowded floor of the Senate. Its passage, by a vote of 44 to 37, was attended with surprises in the final moments of the voting, when Senator Lafollette, Republican, cast his vote with the Democrats, and was joined a few moments later by Senator Poindexter, Progressive.

The Democrats had counted throughout the long tariff fight on losing the votes of Senators Ransdell and Thornton of Louisiana, Democrats who voted against the bill yesterday because it would put sugar on the free list. Until the names of Senators Lafollette and Poindexter were actually called, however, no one knew definitely the stand they would take, and their votes were greeted with enthusiastic applause.

President Wilson last night expressed great gratification over the end of the long struggle in the Senate. Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, who had piloted the bill through the finance committee, the Democratic caucus and the Senate, predicted that its passage would bring immediate stimulus to the business of the country.

As it passed the Senate, the tariff bill represents an average reduction of more than four per cent. from the rates of the original bill that passed the House, and nearly 28 per cent. from the rates of existing law. In many important particulars the Senate has changed the bill that passed the House, and a conference committee of the two Houses will begin work Wednesday or Thursday to adjust these differences. Leaders of both Houses predict that the conference will consume less than two weeks' time.

It was nearly 5.30 o'clock when the vice-president put the bill upon its passage. Senator Ashurst, first on the roll, shouted loudly "aye," and the roll call proceeded deliberately until the clerk called "Lafollette." The Wisconsin Senator seated in the front row, hesitated a moment. His head was bowed and resting on his hands. He leaned foward a little and vigorously answered "aye."

Instantly the applause broke from the galleries and Senators on the Democratic side joined in enthusiastic handclapping, nearly every Democrat on the floor participating in the brief but vigorous demonstration.

When the name of Senator Poindexter, the only Progressive Senator, was reached and he contributed his vote for the bill the applause was renewed.

When the vote had been announced Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, the leader of the minority, was recognized and congratulated Senator Simmons for his "courteous, kindly and considerate manner" in the conduct of the debate.

President Wilson last night issued a statement, in which he said in part:

"A fight for the people and for free business, which has lasted a long generation through, has at last been won handsomely and completely. A leadership and a steadfastness in counsel, has been shown in both Houses of which the Democratic party has every reason to be proud. There will be no weakness or confusion or drawing back, but a statesmanlike directness or command of circumstances. I am happy to have been connected with the Government of the nation at a time when such things could happen, and to have worked in association with men who could do them."

King's Name Left Out.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 10.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Much political capital is being made out of the action of Labor member Webber, who, on becoming mayor of Richmond, withdrew the name of King George from the toast list of the first official dinner. Webber declared himself a convinced republican and defended his conduct in retaining office while holding anti-monarchical views. It is stated to-day that Parliament is contemplating action. Liberal political associates are denouncing Webber as disloyal.

CELEBRATION OF PEACE

Ex-president Taft on One Hundred Years Peace Between States and Britain

Canadian Press Despatch.

PUT IN BAY, Sept. 10.—Former President Taft to-day formally dedicated the towering shaft of white marble in commemoration of Commodore Perry victory here a hundred years ago, and one hundred years peace between America and Britain. Taft sketched Perry's heroic and pathetic history, and concluding his speech said: "We cherish not so much the evidence of American manhood and love of country shown in Perry's triumphs as the teaching its memory brings to the world of the practical possibility of unending love and peace between international neighbors."

MINE OUTPUT IS GROWING

Gold and Pig Iron Show Big Increase During Half Year.

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—The mines of Ontario continue to yield their wealth in ever-increasing quantities. The first six months of the present year show positive advances in several particulars according to the returns made to the Ontario Bureau of Mines. The gold output exceeds that of last year by nearly two million dollars in value, and pig iron has climbed up over a million increase. Silver on the other hand has dropped a little.

The actual returns are as follows:

| | Quantity. | Value. |
|---|---|---|
| Gold, ounces .... | 106,091 | $2,171,147 |
| Silver, ounces .... | 13,590,692 | 7,693,713 |
| Copper, tons .... | 5,873 | 832,645 |
| Nickel, tons .... | 12,104 | 2,514,419 |
| Iron ore, tons .... | 62,527 | 141,324 |
| Pig iron, tons .. | 369,450 | 5,051,840 |
| Cobalt ore, tons .. | 79 | 7,374 |
| Cobalt and nickel oxides .. ..... | 404,660 | 186,347 |

Shipments of ore were 3,160 tons, of concentrates 8,353 tons, of bullion produced at the mines 2,792,311 ounces. The corresponding figures for the first six months of 1912 were ore 6,860 tons, concentrates 4,806 tons and bullion 2,443,639 ounces showing the progress being made toward complete treatment of the ore on the spot. Three mines in Gowganda and South Lorrain yielded 407,103 ounces.

The mines of the Sudbury district continue to increase their output, and the outlook is good. The Canadian Copper Co. and the Mond Co. remain the sole producers of matte. Recent drilling operations have shown very large ore reserves.

The production of pig iron in Ontario is growing rapidly. In 1902 it amounted to 112,687 tons, in 1907, 286,216 tons, in 1912 to 589,583 tons, and at the present rate of production, if maintained for the remainder of the present year, the output will be 738,900 tons.

WOMAN MURDERED.

Victim of Essex County Outrage Fought Hard For Life.

WINDSOR, Sept. 10.—The face and body a mass of bruises, clothing torn into shreds, and the ground in the vicinity bearing mute witness of a terrible life and death struggle, the body of a woman of perhaps 35 years of age was discovered last night lying partly hidden beneath a pile of cornstalks in an open field near the little village of Oldcastle, eight miles south of Windsor.

The condition of the corpse was such as to indicate that it had been lying for perhaps four or five days in the position where it was found.

At 11 o'clock last night Chief of Police Wills obtained the first and only clue which, it is hoped, will lead to the establishment of the woman's identity. He was informed that a purse, which contained nearly ten dollars in Canadian money and a slip of paper on which was written the name "Mrs. A. J. Roy, No. 10 Howard avenue," had been found near where the body was discovered. There is a woman by that name residing there. She said a woman answering the description of the victim called at her home eleven days ago, received change for a ten-dollar bill, and then left without leaving her name.

To Save Immigrant Girls.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—A determined effort to stamp out the traffic in immigrant girls and their exploitation by employment bureaus is to be made by the Montreal presbytery. Headed by Rev. John Chisholm, who brought to the attention of the presbytery meeting yesterday the unwholesome influences by which such girls are generally surrounded on arrival here and the manner in which they are often fleeced by employment bureaus, a strong committee of the presbytery was formed to investigate the entire question.

Canadian Press Despatch.

COATICOOKE, QUE., Sept. 10.—Thaw was seized in his quarters at eight o'clock this morning and rushed, shrieking and fighting to a waiting auto, which bore him away to the Vermont border. On the way to the auto Thaw shouted at the top of his lungs that he was being kidnapped, and though the immigration officers assured him it was all regular, he fought like a mad man and smashed a window with a bottle as the officers dragged him down stairs.

THAW FREE TO GO WHERE HE LIKES

AVERILL, VERMONT, Sept. 10.—The Canadian immigration officers with Harry Thaw crossed the border into this State at eight fifty-five. They left him at Norton Mills, telling him he was free to go where he liked and some newspaper men who had followed in an auto, brought him on here.

A DREDGEFUL CRIME

The Globe of Tuesday has a full length editorial of the removal of the name "Sir Wilfrid Laurier" from a government dredge and the substitution of the cryptic letters P.D.D. No. 64. The Globe thinks apparently that the dissociation of Sir Wilfrid's name with mud and scrapings is a "dredgeful" affair.

Our opinion is quite the reverse. Conservatism does not think it complimentary to be called after a mud scow. In this riding we still have the "Bob Hall" and the "J. B. McColl" to remind the sightseeing tourist of the palmy days of local mudslinging, but why seek to perpetuate the name of a prime minister in this way?

What would the Globe have said if the case had been reversed and P. D. D. No. 64 had been changed to "Sir Wilfrid Laurier?" It would have boiled over with rage, and

YET ANOTHER SLIGHT

The ex-Premier is just now undergoing severe trials, and is suffering from the ingratitude of the world in general. It was bad enough to be thought unworthy to be associated with a mud-hopper, that seemed the dregs (or dredges) of ignoming.

The latest and unkindest of all is the passing of the tariff bill by the U. S. Senate, admitting free wheat and cattle into the States. This means the absolute ruin of Sir Wilfrid's Reciprocity policy. It is a hard world for ex-Premiers.

MR. BALFOUR'S WARNING

Mr. A. J. Balfour has come out of his virtual retirement to have a round with the Home Rulers. It is a little pathetic to reflect that the man who fought side by side with the ex-Premier in the last Home Rule campaign, is at this moment living in obscurity and unable to take a hand in the contest.

The Liberal Government has not only the "bigoted" Ulsterites to contend with, there is a strong and intelligent opposition to Home Rule among the Presbyterians of the North of Ireland. Level-headed ministers who are uninfluenced by party politics, and who see in Home Rule a menace to the peace and progress of Ireland.

Mr Balfour knows the ground from personal experience as an ex-Secretary for Ireland, and has studied the subject in every aspect. His warning and advice to Mr. Asquith to appeal to the country before finally passing so drastic a measure should be considered very seriously by the Government.

NEGLECT OR DELUSIOUN

We referred in this column some time ago to the case of Benjamin Jewell, a London Christian Scientist, whose daughter was said to have died from lack of medical attention in diphtheria. The charge laid against Jewell was one of manslaughter and of this charge the jury have aquitted him.

The judge pointed out that the child's illness was really a remarkable case of diphtheria. "The doctors said that the symptoms had been unusual. Consequently it is unsafe to convict the defendant without we know that he is a Scientist," said the judge, "but we are not trying him for being a Scientist. We are trying him for neglect and will not admit the excuse that he is a Scientist. If this man were convicted for not calling a doctor, if he had reason to believe that the child had diphtheria or anything like diphtheria, we should punish him severely, Christian Scientist or not. We want to be quite certain of our ground before coming to a conclusion of this sort, however, much as we may think that he was a stupid donkey for not having more sense about the matter. But it is not for stupidity that we convict him in the criminal court."

Dismissing Jewell, the judge urged him to be careful in the future. "There are a great many things that you do not understand, that the doctors do."

"Manslaughter" was certainly an extreme view of the case, and of that charge the father of the girl was justly aquitted. For although from the point of view of a medical man and of common sense it was a case of neglect, yet it was not wilful neglect. Some would say it was neglect due to a religious delusion, and perhaps this is the worst that can be said.

It is difficult in a world that is governed by rational laws and ordinary physiological methods, to regard anyone who denies the existance, or minimises the importance of physical phenomena, as anything less than deluded, or at least blindly neglectful.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is reported that a band played "God Save the King" under Harry Thaw's window at Coaticooke. It would have been more appropriate for them to have played "God Save the People."

Lindsay seems to have a monopoly in "Fall Guys," and someone suggested that they were synonymous. "Mr. Ray" will recall the "Thomas Shoe Factory." This is a reputation worth losing.

EXCERPTS

A Last Wish.

The old major was nearing his end, and those about him were saying consolatory things.

"Nevuh mind," said the dying man. "I have but one regret."

"What is that, major?" asked the clergyman at his side.

"That I did not have a shot at that old scoundrel Colonel Dabney, suh," said the major.

"Dear me, major," returned the clergyman, much shocked. "Pray, what has Colonel Dabney done to deserve this?"

"Nothing yet, suh," replied the major. "It is for the insults that will appear in his obituary of me, suh, that I would avenge myself." — Harper's Weekly.

The deceased lady was 68 years of age and had gone to the West during the past summer. The body was brought in by the 11 a.m. train on Monday to the Sturgeon street station from which the funeral was held, the Rev. W. F. Chapman, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiating. There was a large concourse of friends and relatives who attended the obsequies as a last token of respect to one that was universally admired. The bereaved have the heartfelt sympathy of the village and surrounding districts.

The rural school fair was held on Mr. R. Boyd's farm, near the Sturgeon street station on Monday. The weather was ideal and the attendance was very great. There was a large tent in which the six competing schools exhibited their vegetables, grains, seeds, weeds, insect collections, bread, fine arts, etc., while the eastern part of the outside fair grounds was exclusively for the display of poultry. The schools in the competition were as follows: S.S. Nos. 5, 8, 10, 11 Emily and Nos. 7 and 9 Ops. The prizes awarded were badges. Each section received awards in its individual exhibits and then in the whole number of sections in competition for the best inside display. S.S. No. 9 Ops carried off the prize which was $5 worth of books. Teachers, parents, children and Messrs. Knight and Hare of Lindsey, with their staff of assistants were as busy as bees the greater part of the day. While the judging was being held there were field sports carried on and these were keenly contested. At the close, addresses were given by Mr. Knight and the gentlemen who judged the poultry, these were eulogistic of the initial efforts of Omemee's rural school fair.

The poultry exhibit was the product of eggs provided the pupils in the spring. The showing was a creditable one, and what joyfully illuminated faces the children bore when they stepped forward for their coveted prizes. The result of this social competitive and educational assemblage will be a better faith in agricultural pursuits, a more friendly relation among neighborhoods and a stimulus—to farmers' boys and girls—so far-reaching that its power and influence cannot be reckoned. It is a practical demonstration that the "tiller of the soil" holds one of the premier positions in this fair Canada of ours. The annual occurrence of this rural school fair will be looked forward to with much appreciation.

Mr. and Mrs. Horton and Miss Evelyn returned last week to their home in Cleveland, after a summer of pleasure with her parents and some excellent trips and fishing on the water.

Mr. Wm. Smith of Mount Pleasant came up the river this week and reports the catch of a 22 1-2 pound lunge.

A case in the Division Court was held on Monday, in which judgment was reserved till the legal counsel for plaintiff and defendant had opportunity to argue the case before His Honor, the Judge in charge.

Mr. George Balfour of Lindsay was in town on Monday attending the obsequies of the late Mrs. D. Balfour.

Our schools were given a half holiday Monday afternoon and marched in a body to the Rural School Fair. The show awarded prizes to the country schools only.

A large number of Omemeeites attended the funeral of the late John Boyd.

Dr. Thompson of Havelock is the guest of Omemee friends.

The Misses Parsons are out of town on an extended visit.

The Best Detective Story of the Last Ten Years

"[illegible] Mrs. Missioner," returned the sleuth. "She knows exactly what I mean. Don't you, Mrs. Delaroche?"

"No!" said the woman from the Renaissance so fiercely the word was like a poniard thrust.

"No?" retorted the detective. "How truly unfortunate! Surely you are mistaken, madam; surely you recall what happened in Paris? It can't be you've forgotten how you obtained possession of the Missioner necklace—the one with the Maharanee diamond, you know?"

She clung to silence as to a rock of refuge. Britz, still rocking lightly on his heels, raised a finger warningly and looked at her with that same sarcastic smile.

"You know as well as I do, Mrs. Delaroche," he went on, "that Curtis Griswold didn't steal the Maharanee necklace. Whatever other crimes are upon him, he is guiltless of that—in act, at any rate."

The woman kept her eyes on the floor, her face partly turned away. All the others stared at Britz in amazement, not excepting the Chief of the Detective Bureau.

"Let's run through the pages of history, Mrs. Delaroche," continued the lieutenant. "Personal history, of course—the history of a clever little Miss Vincent, one of the brightest young women in Paris. You remember her when she was an art student there, getting along as well as she could on a New England income in the Latin Quarter. A bright, clever little girl she was to be sure, and it was too bad she had such a hard struggle to realize her artistic dreams!"

All his hearers listened attentively—Mrs. Delaroche, in spite of resolute efforts to appear indifferent, full as faithfully as the others.

Prince Kananda moved forward until he stood within a few feet of Mrs. Delaroche. She turned her head slightly and saw him. A glance of mutual recognition passed between them, but so quickly that it was unobserved by the others. The Prince eyed her steadily, with malignant gaze, as of a man who has been tricked. A wild fear leaped into her eyes and she moved away, edging close to Britz.

"It isn't to be wondered at," said Britz sympathetically, "when you recall the many hardships Miss Vincent endured when you remember on how many mornings she had to trudge to her copying work in the Louvre without even the poor consolation of a French breakfast, that she permitted a young Hindoo gentleman to spend a little money upon her. It wasn't exactly in line with New England conventionality, of course, but the aristocratic Easterner had been introduced to her formally enough, his behaviour was always respectful, and she—well, she was very lonely and very blue and often very hungry."

Mrs. Delaroche bit her lip and turned on Britz a look of such resentment that Mrs. Missioner and Miss Holcomb shrank away a little.

"And it needn't astonish us," Britz continued, "that when the polished Oriental brought about her acquaintance with an American multi-millionaire she accepted friendly little courtesies from the rich man, even going so far as to dine with him in several of the luxurious cafes for which Paris is famous. The American was a man from her own country—a big, good natured, whole-souled chap, thoroughly satisfied with his fortune and himself.

Therefore, why shouldn't the lonely, starving Miss Vincent enjoy gay little dinners and, perhaps, gayer little suppers with him? She was always chaperoned. By whom? By the Hindoo, of course. Besides, the millionaire's wife knew there was a dash of romance in her husband that made him delight in these excursions into the realm of the unusual."

Mrs. Delaroche sat with those brilliant eyes of hers bent rigorously on the rug. The other women glanced at her curiously, Manning with suspicion, Kananda with a glitter in his eyes that seemed to command silence. But she did not look at the Prince.

"However," ran the detective's monologue, "you'll have to admit, Mrs. Delaroche, that it wasn't exactly grateful on Miss Vincent's part to listen to the Hindoo when he offered her a large bribe to—shall we say steal a certain rare and very beautiful diamond from the multi-millionaire."

Mrs. Delaroche's breath came in a series of soft gasps—almost in sobs. A rose film seemed to spread over her exquisite complexion.

The famous detective paused for a moment and looked accusingly at her. When he spoke, it was with finality:

"Mrs. Delaroche, you were Miss Vincent," he said; "you were the impoverished girl artist of the Latin Quarter. You have been married since then, and now you are a divorcee—but you were Miss Vincent."

She recovered her poise for a moment and gazed at him defiantly. Then her courage broke again, and she answered.

"It is true. How you have learned it I cannot guess, but—it is true."

Doris Missioner, despite the suggestion conveyed in the lieutenant's revelations gazed at Millicent Delaroche commiseratingly. Elinor's pity was more open.

"And now," Britz went on, "Mrs. Delaroche either stole those jewels in Paris or in New York. If they were stolen in Paris, the authorities of this city have no jurisdiction in the case. On the other hand, we can prove the necklace was in her possession only a day or so ago, and if the crime was committed in this country, we will call in the District Attorney." He turned abruptly toward the woman "Mrs. Delaroche," Britz said, "I do not believe Mrs. Missioner will call on the French authorities to act, if the crime was committed in their jurisdiction. If the jewels were taken here, Mrs. Missioner will have no choice in the matter."

She seized at the bait. Turning her flashing eyes on the detective, she burst forth:

"The jewels were stolen in Paris."

A tense silence was broken by Britz.

"You'll have to show me," he snapped. "It's your last chance to tell the truth."

"I stole the collarette from Mr. Missioner," she admitted. "It was shortly before his death, a long time ago. The plot had all been laid. Griswold and Prince Kananda got me to do it. I met Curtis Griswold through Mr. Missioner. He made love to me, made me believe he wanted to marry me. Then, one day, he proposed the plan to steal the jewels. It almost made me laugh, for I was already trying to get them for the Prince. His plan was to have me induce Mr. Missioner to let me wear them one night and disappear with the collarette about my throat. I had agreed to do this, when Griswold"—she cast a withering look at the club man—"brought me the substitute. He didn't know, of course, that I was in the pay of the Prince, and I didn't inform him of it. Well, one night Mr. Missioner, after much urging on my part, took the collarette from his wife's jewel box and let me wear it at a little supper party. It was then I made the substitution.

"What did you do with the real necklace?" Manning interjected.

"I kept it," Mrs. Delaroche returned with a bland smile. "I informed Prince that I had changed my mind about committing the robbery, and I told Mr. Griswold that I had been unable to make the substitution."

"But the paste jewels he had given you—what did you tell him in regard to them?" Britz asked.

"I simply told him I had lost them," she replied. "The fact of the matter is, I fooled both the Prince and Mr Griswold. Of course, when Mrs. Missioner discovered the robbery, Mr. Griswold guessed what I had done and since then he has been urging me to turn the jewels over to him. But I was determined not to let him have hem until after our marriage," she added in a voice laden with the vindictiveness she felt.

The semicircle of listeners contracted until Mrs. Missioner, Miss Holcomb, Sands, and Fitch were close to Britz. The detective, turning to the others, said:

"I have had the good fortune to recover the Maharanee diamond for you Mrs. Missioner, and it remains only to trace the other jewels of the necklace. I dare say Prince Kananda can tell us where they are."

"As I told you over the telephone Lieutenant Britz," Mrs. Missioner answered, "I have recovered my jewels."

"All?" asked the detective, slightly astonished.

"All," replied the widow. "Moreover, I do not care to prosecute any one connected with their disappearance."

"Not the Hindoos who were responsible for their second disappearance—is it possible you do not wish them to be punished?" Britz expostulated.

"I do not," said Mrs. Missioner quietly. "I understand their connection with the mystery thoroughly. In spite of the drastic methods they pursued, I do not blame them. They did not seek the lesser stones of the necklace. In fact, those gems were returned to me this morning by one of the Orientals—a man of scholarly attainment and high character, whom I met in the East. These devotees-fanatics, if you will—have braved death and imprisonment to recover a jewel which I take it is precious in their eyes as was the Holy Grail to Crusaders. It is a question not merely of religion, but of extreme piety with them. Under such circumstances, I cannot consent to appear against them, nor to countenance any attempt to punish them. Besides there was a mistake in the acquisition of the Maharanee diamond. It belongs to these men of the East. They are free to take it. I surrender all claim to it."

With an air of unmistakable respect Britz turned toward the widow.

"In the eyes of the law," he said, extending the big Maharanee, "this stone is yours. You may do with it as you choose."

Mrs. Missioner accepted the stone permitting her eyes to linger a moment on its blazing splendor. Then she wheeled abruptly and passed the diamond to the Prince.

"It is yours," she said. "Take it."

Kananda's eager fingers closed on the gem.

"Mrs. Missioner has restored your property," Britz said, turning to the Oriental, "and I dare say the Chief will agree with me that it is not necessary for us to take your case as far as the District Attorney's office. You and your fellow countrymen are at liberty to go. I advise you to go quickly before I get to thinking too strongly about that little upside-down ride you gave me in Riverside Drive. I have the honor to wish Your Royal Highness a very good-morning!"

He made a mock obeisance as the Hindoos, released from their shining steel bonds, filed silently out of the room.

"Miss Holcomb," said Britz, "Chief Manning will procure your release in just about the time it takes us to go from here to the court. You will be discharged at once. Yes, doctor that will be a complete vindication of your fiancee. My best wishes for your happiness."

Britz then turned to Mrs. Missioner.

"As for the prisoner, Griswold, Mrs. Missioner," he said, "it makes little difference to him that he was not arrested for the theft of your diamonds. The directors of the Iroquois Trust Company have a case against him strong enough to send him up the river for along while. I trust, Mr. Sands," Britz added significantly, "that in your new-found happiness you will forget the momentary unpleasantness between us. After all, you see, I was acting in your interests."

The rare smile the millionaire flashed at the lieutenant as with a proprietory air he took Doris Missioner's hand in his was as eloquent an expression of friendly gratitude as any one in society or "the Street" would expect of "Silent Sands."

Ranchman Found Shot.

Macleod, Alta., Sept. 10.—With a bullet from a revolver through his head, the body of James Patterson one of the most widely known cattlemen in Canada, was found on J Franklin's ranch, eighteen miles south of Macleod. The authorities consider it a case of suicide. Patterson was 62 years of age and was born in Texas. He is said to have brought the first big herd of cattle into Alberta thirty years ago. For six years he was inspector of brands at the west end stock yards in Winnipeg and was judge of the fancy and trick roping at the recent stampede in Winnipeg.

Twelve Thousand Fire.

ROCKVILLE, Sept. 10.—A string of eighteen small boat-houses, located beneath a sightseeing stand at the foot of the cliff near the dock, along the waterfront of Thousand Islands Park, with some 16 skiffs and five motor-boats, was wiped out by fire Monday, together with two other detached boat-houses. The loss is about $12,000, with little insurance. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the careless dropping of a match by one of a party of loungers.

THE POWER COMMITTEE

Met Yesterday Afternoon in Regard to Hydro Electric

At a meeting of the Power Committee yesterday afternoon in the committee rooms of the city buildings, they were waited upon by Johnson Greer, foreman of the Hydro Electric Construction work here.

Mr Greer advised the Board that the laying of a double cable for the lighting system in the city would prove more satisfactory than the single circuit. In case of a break down or anything the whole city would be in darkness but with the double circuit only one side of the street would be without the lights.

The double cable would necessitate the laying of about 1600 feet of cable at about twenty-four cents a foot.

Ald Gordon—We had better consult the head department of the Hydro Electric in regard to the matter. I think that doubling the cable would be the best.

The chairman was instructed to take up the matter with the head office in Toronto at an early date, with power to act.

DEER HUNTING MAY BE SPOILED

Deer Scattered Through Northern Fires—

ORILLIA, Sept. 10—Deer hunters are becoming anxious lest the bush fires have spoiled their hunting grounds and scattered the deer from their old haunts. The Longford Hunt Club has received word that their quarters and equipment were destroyed, although at first reported safe. The Red Tam Club has sent men into their camp to ascertain whether the fire did any damage and see if the deer are still feeding in that neighborhood.

The bush fires this summer have driven many wild animals into the open country and settlers are coming across them in parts they do not usually frequent. Word comes from the Ragged Rapids that Mr. George Page, Superintendent of the town's power plant, met a bear three or four miles below the Ragged Rapids and killed it the first shot with a 22 calibre rifle, the only weapon he had with him. The bullet went through the animal's heart and lungs. Mr. Page showed considerable courage to attack a bear with so small a weapon. Bruin weighed 198 pounds.

Mr. Strachan, in charge of the Government work on the Severn, shot a cub weighing 100 pounds a few days ago.

CANAL NOTICE

A RUNAWAY

A rather exciting runaway occurred on Water street this afternoon tached to a light waggon dashed tached to a light waggon lashed madly out of the yard near the Farm and Dairy building and ran down Water street. On nearing the Peterborough Canoe Company's building it collided to a farmer's heavy waggon attached to a team that was standing on the side of the road. The team started on the rampage and both the runaways ran down to King and turning King, were caught some distance down the street. Neither of the vehicles were badly damaged.

INQUEST ON DEATH OF NICOLA YONNONE

No Head-light on Engine— This Was the Cause of Accident

Last Friday evening at Kendry, the following jury was empanelled by Coroner Dr. McKinley, of Port Hope, and constable T. Miller, of Millbrook, to investigate the death of Nicola Yonnone, the Italian C.P.R. employee, who came to his death Thursday night, a short distance west of Kendry while riding on a hand car, by being struck with the C. P. R. local:

Harold Baptie, foreman,
James Baptie,
James Hern,
Robert Lush,
Harry Dunsford,
David Wilson,
Arthur Reynolds.

They viewed the remains and adjourned till last night.

Last night at six-thirty, the jury Coroner McKinley, Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr of Cobourg, Constable Miller and M. C. Pritchard, representative of the Denton, Grover and Field, barristers and solicitors, of Toronto, employed by the Italian Consul at Toronto, accompanied by Mr. D. A. Giannu, interpreter, assembled at the residence of Mr. James Baptie, Springville, to hear the evidence.

Thomas Miller, constable of the village of Millbrook, was first called. He said he was present when the body was viewed by the coroner and said the body was about a quarter of a mile southwest of Kendry station (in Cavan). He stated that it was covered with a piece of oilcloth on the north side of the track. The right leg was taken off at the hip, the right arm was broken in two places, and the top of his head was broken the scalp being torn off. The big toe and second toe on the left foot were smashed and there was a cut about three inches long on the calf of the left leg; altogether the body was badly bruised, showing evidence of being struck by very powerful force.

There was a clear view on the track for some three miles from the west, and about a mile, east. Mr. Miller enquired at the Cavanville station if the engine crew knew of the accident, and the agent 'phoned to Havelock and found they did not. Thus he thought it unnecessary to summon the engineer or fireman.

Dominica Par, the interpreter, was next called and was sworn in and his office explained. Roffel Ferro, one of the men who were with Yonnone on the hand-car, was then called and he said he was a member of the extra gang employed by the C.P.R. to lay track. Yonnone was 54 years of age, and had a wife and three children in Italy, in the province of Foggia. He was not a man who used intoxicating liquor. The following is the story he (Ferro) gave of what happened last Thursday night:

"In company with Frank Mantel-leo George Cardine, Dominica Gallo and Nicola Yonnone, I left our cars on a hand car for Peterboro. We never got any permission to use the hand car. We left a few minutes after six and started to return about nine o'clock and it was between half past nine and ten o'clock that we passed Kendry. We did not have a drink at all in Peterboro. All of us were working the car, two behind and I was on the front with two others, our faces to the east. Yonnone was the centre one of us three in front. It was very dark and the train had no headlight thus we couldn't see it approach. I did not see it until it was the length of about two rails away. We all saw it together excepting Yonnone, who was the only man facing east, the rest of us were all in a position to look both ways. Us men working beside Yonnone were standing side ways. We, who were saved, jumped sideways, while Yonnone jumped in the middle of the track. The train was on him immediately and when we got up to look for him, we found him down the track about seven rail lengths. The train never stopped till it reached Kendry. We never heard a whistle blow or a bell ring, although there is a crossing about seventy-five yards west of where the accident took place."

Witness said that he knew they weren't supposed to take the hand car without permission. He had taken the car before and sometimes asked permission. The hand-car belonged to the extra gang.

James Frost, of Norwood, the foreman of the extra gang, of which deceased was a member, was called. He said he did no know the men were going down to Peterborough for provisions. Sometimes the men who want to go for provisions go by the express trains. He stated it was not customary to go for provisions by a hand-car, for they often have the interpreter get the supplies wholesale. A hand-car is to be used only for company's purposes and a foreman is supposed to accompany it when it is used.

He did not see the train that night, but was called out by Ferro and went to Cavan station and the operator told him to go and see if the man was dead. He was quite dead and the body and the car had been carried about 100 yards.

The next day he asked the conductor, Thomas Baker, if he knew anything of the accident. The latter said that the engineer examined the pilot of his engine at Perth, and he then knew they had struck something. Frost added that he was not sure as to where the conductor said the engineer examined the pilot but he thought he said Perth.

Mr. Frost also stated that he had not informed the men it was against the rules to use the hand-car. On an earlier occasion he gave them the use of the hand-car because the interpreter was with them, but he did not tell them that was the reason he lent it to them.

George Cordine another man who was on the hand-car, was called. By means of the interpreter, he said: "I was working on the rear handle of the hand-car and did not see the train because it was very dark. I saw a very small green light but thought it was a switch light. When I saw the train it was about two rail lengths away, I jumped off and the deceased jumped right in the middle of the rails. We found the hand-car on the north side of the track and body on the south side. The body was about two rail lengths west of the demolished hand-car."

Frank Monteleone, another of those who were on the hand-car, and was on the south side of the front handle next to the man who was killed was then questioned. He also saw the train a couple of rail lengths away and jumped to the side. Yonnone jumped and fell in the middle of the rails. He saw him afterwards and he was dead.

Dominico Gallo, the other man on the hand-car, only corroborated the other men's evidence. He also said that Mr. Frost was not around and that he (Gallo) didn't know anything about rules. He did not notice if a wind was blowing.

George Atchison was then called, he said he was the flag man at Kendry, employed by the C.P.R. He saw the train coming that night and it did not carry a head-light. The train was coming into Kendry but he did not hear it whistle as trains generally do. He did not know anything happened till the next evening. He saw the Italians pass just before the train came in and he waved his hand at them. They were perfectly sober.

Coroner McKinley and Crown Attorney Kerr then went over the evidence for the benefit of the jury, who then withdrew. In the course of about fifteen minutes they returned and Foreman H. Baptie read the following verdict:

"We, the Jurymen appointed by Coroner Dr. McKinley, find that the deceased, Nicola Yonnone, while riding on a hand-car came to his death at Kendry, County Cavan, with the C.P.R. local going east about 9.30 p.m. on September 4th, 1913, and we further agree that the accident might have been averted had the said engine been carrying a head-light, which it did not."

Young London's Holidays.

In the last week in July, 800,000 elementary school children of London, Eng., were released for their annual holidays, which last one month. Most of them go away with their parents, many get to the country by means of the beneficent fresh air funds, and for those little unfortunates who have to take their holidays in the dust of London the London County Council Educational Committee has made arrangements for the opening of 40 holiday playground centres where they may pass their time in an agreeable manner. Teachers will be recruited to assist the children to make the best of the playgrounds, and the committee has voted money so that toys and games may be purchased. Stretcher cots are to be provided so that the children may stretch themselves out in the sun if they feel disposed to loll away the time.

Envious of the Worker.

The Crown Prince of Germany, whose bellicose utterances have been attracting attention, was brought up with extraordinary strictness and domestic severity.

This was his daily routine as a boy:

Rise 6 a.m. in summer, 7 a.m. in winter; 7 or 8 to 9.30 a.m., study; 9.30 a.m., breakfast; 10 a.m. to 1.15 p.m., study; 1.30 p.m., dinner; 3 to 6 p.m., study.

When the Eight Hours a Day Bill was exciting interest in this country, the prince asked for information about it.

The bill having been explained, he remarked significantly:

"It must be nice to be a working man. How I wish I could change places."

"Grip" at St. Kilda.

That an epidemic of influenza and pneumonia had broken out at St. Kilda, the lonely island in the Atlantic to the west of the Outer Hebrides, was stated in the House of Commons by Mr. McKinnon Wood, the Secretary for Scotland. Of the seventy-nine inhabitants, seventy-three were affected, and twenty-eight were now convalescent. H. M. S. Active, with a doctor, nurses, and medical stores for the relief of the islanders, has arrived at St. Kilda.

PITCHER REILLY TO GO UP

Former St. Thomas Twirler is Going to International League

William Riley, at one time a pitcher for the Saints, has signed a contract with the International League club and next spring the flinger who was with nearly every club in the Canadian League will be given a thorough tryout in the fast company.

Reilly was not in the best of health during the past season, and this considerably impaired his efficiency no..., but his work during the past month has shown that he has regained his old form.

Reilly, in his recent performances here, showed more stuff than any pitcher in the league, but he did not have sufficient speed to tighten up in the pinches, but now that he has regained his strength, "Will" is hurling in fine form. He has pitched several games in the different baseball teams throughout the country and has yet [illegible]. Recently he led a team of fast Detroit players who played for the town of Leamington, down with four hits and one run. Reilly was backed up by Tucker, Wright, Craven, Brundage and many Canadian League players. His work has always been featured by the number of men he has whiffed in his games, even in the Canadian League it being a habit to fan six or eight men, while in his recent semi-pro games he is going bad unless fourteen or fifteen men whiff.—St. Thomas Times.

OLD GERMAN LAGER

As a thirst-quencher what compares with Kuntz's Old German Lager! Brewed by the costly "Old German" process, it has more life, snap, vigor—and an "Old German" flavor that far surpasses the flavor of ordinary lagers.

Be sure the "Old German" scene is on the label, and the bottle is Peacock Green—to prevent the lager from deteriorating when exposed to light. 113

SKETCHES OF N.Y. GIANTS

"Chief" Myers Catcher

Catcher Jack Myers of the New York team has proved to be one of the real baseball finds of the seasons of 1910-11-12. His work in every department has been first class. The big catcher is, of course, an Indian, and his name is not Myers but Tortesbea. He has always been known as Myers. He was born at Riverside, Cal., on July 29, 1882. Myers had every advantage of securing an education. As a boy he played with his little white brothers of the town. He just naturally took to baseball and as he was big and strong he did all the catching.

From the sand lots he drifted to High School ball, then he went to study at Dartmouth. A year in college and Harrisburg persuaded him to seek the diamond for a vocation. He drifted West to Butte, Mont., in the Northwestern League, and made such a reputation there that St. Paul of the American Association purchased him about five years ago. From St. Paul he went to the Giants in the fall of 1909. He was an individual star during the 1911 world series and his batting has been a great feature of his work this season.

TORONTO EASY FOR NEW YORK

Irwin Trout Caught Part of the Game

In the exhibition game in Toronto yesterday between the New York Giants and Toronto, the former won 10 to 3. All the Giants' stars were missing, including Marquard, Mathewson, Tesreau, Snodgrass, Myers and McGraw. Wid Robertson handled the team in the absence of the manager. Jim Thorpe played first base and had a home run to his credit. Irwin Trout caught part of the game.

A delicious filling for layer cake is made by mixing a pound of finely minced shelled almonds with whites of two eggs, a cupful of confectioner's sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

DOME OF ST. PAUL'S.

Repairing and Gilding Cross of Old Cathedral.

Four hundred feet above the pavement of St. Paul's Churchyard a gang of men are at present engaged upon a task of unique interest. About 90 years ago the ball and cross which surmount the great Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral were gilded, and the work apparently was of such an excellent character that it has withstood the wear and tear of Time until lately, when it was decided to re-gild the Cathedral cross.

From the pavement the ball looks little larger than a football and the cross but three or four feet high. As a matter of fact, however, the latter, which is said to weigh 3,360 pounds, is no less than 30 feet in height, while the ball on which it is mounted is 6 feet in diameter and will hold ten or twelve persons.

Only the best English "double gold" leaf, as it is technically described, will be used—that is, pure gold beaten out and placed on transfer paper treated with paraffin wax and double the thickness ordinarily employed for outdoor work—from which it will be obvious that the re-gilding process will be a very costly one. As a matter of fact, the total cost of the job, which will take a couple of months to complete, will be considerably over £1,000.

The scaffolding which is being used is extraordinarily simple, consisting of little more than a few ladders, set up by a firm of experts in the fixing of lightning conductors. A different method, however, was employed when the original ball and cross, set up by Wren, were gilded in 1821. On that occasion they were removed, and apparently the scaffolding was not fixed as it should have been; for it has been told how, owing to the boisterous weather, scarcely a day passed without some part of the scaffolding or the machinery connected with it being deranged.

On one occasion, indeed, the greater part of a circular framework of heavy planks erected above the Golden Gallery, which is just above the Dome, for the prevention of accidents, was carried over the house tops for a considerable distance, and later an observatory which had been built above the usual site of the cross narrowly escaped the same fate.

It might be mentioned that this observatory was put up by a young artist who was anxious to make panoramic drawing of the metropolis and the surrounding country. Before preparations were made for the removing of the ball and cross, the artist had passed the whole summer on the lantern under the ball, climbing daily 600 steps to reach his perilous position; and when the ball and cross were removed, he then obtained permission to set up the observatory, supported by a platform, from which he eventually made a complete panoramic view of London and its environs on 280 sheets of drawing paper, comprising a surface of 1,680 square feet.

FLYER IS WRECKED.

Three Trainmen Fatally Injured and Many Passengers Hurt.

NEW MADISON, Ohio, Sept. 10.—The New York-St. Louis flyer, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was derailed four miles west of here at 9.40 yesterday morning, injuring 35 of the 73 passengers, and fatally injuring three of the crew.

Six coaches went into a cornfield on one side of the track, the engine and tender striking a bridge abutment on the other side of the track and turning one span of the bridge into the air.

The rear coach remained on the rails and the next coach, though off the track, did not overturn.

None of the passengers was seriously hurt, but two men were so badly crushed and scalded it is believed will die, and a chef in the diner was seriously scalded. The engineer suffered a severe scalp wound.

The wreck occurred on a sharp curve, where the track was weak, the train traveling at high speed.

The injured were taken to Richmond, Ind., on a relief train sent to the scene of the wreck from that place.

Parish Now Rich.

The Cockermouth Rural District Council have sanctioned a scheme under which the old parish quarry at Embleton, formerly considered practically worthless, but now discovered to be of great value, will be let to a firm making road material. The quarry is valued at over £50,000.

AFTER ALL
Style is the One Feature
That Really Distinguishes Good From Mediocre Clothes

¶Any tailor can use fine fabrics and put them together with more or less accuracy. But to get real style into them is another proposition.

¶The designer of Society Brand Clothes is an artist, known among clothes-makers as the best in his line.

¶The style he imbues in Society Brand Clothes is as essentially a part of them as the fragrance of a flower or the beauty of a woman. It's organic. It stands forth as a consummate expression of harmony and good taste. A Society Brand garment is a creation. In looking at it, you are moved to think of details—of style as such, of tailoring, or of fabrics. You behold an effect a result of an artist's complete plan, from the selection of the fabric down even to the buttons.

¶The final achievement, for the want of a better word, we call Style. But, like the masterpiece, it is the product of a higher artistic instinct, of feeling, genius.

¶And herein lies the secret of the wonderful success and adaptability of Society Brand Clothes to young and young thinking men.

¶Ask us to show you the models illustrated above. If you have never worn these Clothes, it will be a revelation to you to see them and try them on before one of our mirrors.

PETERBORO FAIR OPENS TO-MORROW

Grounds Open for Exhibitors in Morning and Formal Opening Will Take Place To-morrow Night

The entries are pouring in and are far greater than last year, remarked Secretary Hall to a Review reporter this morning, when asked about the entries.

Peterborough's Great Industrial Exhibition will be opened to-morrow. The prospects for the Fair this year are better than ever. The floor space in the exhibit building has already been taken up, while the directors are at their wit's end to know where they are going to store all the poultry, and the entries still pour in. The mid-way features this year are better than ever, while the very best vaudeville attraction has been secured.

The Exhibition will be open to exhibitors to-morrow morning and to the general public to-morrow night when there will be a vaudeville performance in front of the grandstand, a concert by the 57th Regimental Band and a splendid program of fireworks. The grounds will be illuminated as all the exhibits will be in place by that time, to-morrow night will afford local people a good chance to thoroughly see the exhibits and avoid crowing on Friday and Saturday. Many people usually do not have a chance to see the whole exhibition as their time is taken up by the amusement features. They should visit the grounds on Thursday night and make a tour of what is to be seen. In doing so they will find many surprises in store for them.

The Directors were hard at work at the grounds to-day and everything will be ready in good time.

The Secretary's office will be open to-night, but will be on the grounds after this evening.

A GREAT BAND IRISH GUARDS

Special Privilege for Peterboro To-night

This evening at Brock street rink Peterboro is to be given the special privilege of hearing one of the finest bands in the world.

The Irish Guards Band was said by the managers of the Toronto National exhibition, where they have played for the last fortnight, to have been the best drawing band that has yet visited the exhibition. Hundreds crowded nightly to hear them play.

Peterboro lovers of high class instrumental music ought not to let this unique opportunity pass of hearing the Irish Guards before they return home to the old country. The privilege may not happen again.

"We like your city fine, Canada is certainly a great country," said several of the Irish Guards Band, which plays here to-night, in response to a question by a Review reporter, how they liked Canada.

The Irish Guards are certainly a fine looking lot with their handsome and bright uniforms. An exceptionally large crowd is anticipated at the concert to-night.

The bright red coats of the Irish Guards were conspicuous upon George street this afternoon, and the men inside them seemed to be taking good stock of their surroundings.

One of them was heard to remark that he did not think Peterborough was as big as Toronto, nor that either of them was as good as Dublin or Liverpool, except for the trees and the pretty villas with the verandahs.

There is a story going round that a few of the red coats, having a big thirst between them, went into the Oriental to quench it, and were told they were in the "wrong shop" What would they have done had Peterborough gone dry at the last Local Option fight? They would have gone dry, too.

OBITUARY

The Late John Jamieson

This morning the death took place of Mr. John Jamieson, an old resident of the city, and a familiar figure on the streets, and a man associated with us all for many years. He was 66 years of age, and was long and favorably known in his connection with the printing business, having been for many years manager of the Examiner office. In his early boyhood he entered the Review office as an apprentice, and after he reached the position of journeyman he was selected by Mr. J. R. Stratton and engaged as manager. His affable and genial personal qualities made him a general favorite, and he gained the esteem and respect of the business community in a marked degree. He was identified with several of the local societies, being one of the first members of the local Courts of the Canadian Order of Foresters. So much so was his counsel and assistance valued that he was taken into the affairs of the Order, and became associated in the direction of affairs as a member of the High Court Executive Committee for many years. He was entrusted with the getting out of large quantities of printing for the Order, which he invariably handled well. Some years past failing health necessitated his giving up active work, since when he had lived retired. He was a member of St. Luke's church since the parish was instituted, and for several years was a member of the Board of Education, filling office in several local organizations as well. He had been honored by the appointment as Justice of the Peace in this district.

A sorrowing wife and one son, Mr. Percy Jamieson, of Winnipeg, are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, Hervey street, on Friday afternoon, at 2.30 to the Little Lake cemetery. The Rev. F. J. Sawers will officiate.

The vaudeville between acts, is worthy of special mention.

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the housewife finds the numerous duties of home a burden, in fact every walk of life suffers from depleted nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. # THE JURY ARRIVES AT A VERDICT AFTER THIRTY MINUTES DELIBERATION

Expert Witnesses Heard and Jury Agree That Nore Mordern Insulations Should be Used

We, the jurors empanelled to enquire into the death of Arthur Jones, find that he came to his death on August 20th from injuries received in the Test Room of the C. G. E. on August 19th, while in performance of his duties and under the proper authorities he received an electric shock which was directly the cause of his death. We further believe from evidence produced that the accident would have been avoided had more modern methods of insulation been used on the lead wires or work of this nature done while the works are closed down.

(Signed) JOS. METHERAL,
Foreman.

The inquest was resumed last night in the Police Court Chambers, enquiring into the death of Arthur Jones.

Harry Shedd was recalled and gave evidence of the location of the different parts connected with the rheostat.

He had forgotten to mention in his last evidence that he had placed two pieces of flat iron three feet long to support the weight of the rheostat when it was being removed. It was between one minute and a half or two minutes after he had inserted the iron, when he saw the flash. He did not see a mark or burn on the north side of the rheostat.

Crown Attorney—Do you see a mark on this, (indicating one of the pieces of iron.)

Mr. Shedd—Yes I see where it has been burned.

Crown Attorney—What distance is the rheostat from the nearest wire?

Mr. Shedd—About 12 inches.

Crown Attorney — Then if this piece of iron extends over the panel frame in the right direction it would touch one of the wires.

Crown Attorney—You were there when the accident happened; did you know what became of the piece of iron; did you know it was picked up beside you?

Mr. Shedd—No.

He did not see any burns on the bars when he brought them down from his department.

Mr. Robt. Dobie, mechanical superintendent at the C. G. E.

Crown Attorney—How far from the frame of the rheostat is the first live wire?

Mr. Dobie—About 4 inches.

Crown Attorney—Had you anything to do with direction of the rheostat?

Mr. Dobie—No. When I saw the flash I ran down the shop and found one of the lead wires on fire.

Crown Attorney—Do you know where Jones was when he fell?

Mr. Dobie—He must have been on the base of the generator, immediately to the west of the rheostat. There were several marks of an arc on the generator. The mark on the generator would be about the same height as the mark on Jones' face. Mr. Shedd was found

THAW DEPORTATION NEW YORK'S COMMENT

DAZZLED BY CANADIAN SWIFTNESS

Compliments and Curses From the New York Press

Canadian Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 11.—The morning papers are complimentary to Canada over the deportation of Thaw.

The Tribune says; — "Canadian swiftness dazzles us, who are inured to the worship of legal red tape."

The World says;—"Thaw and his money bedevilled the administration of justice in New York for seven years. Little more than three weeks of them provide enough for Canada."

The Times says;—"This act of the Canadian Government was performed in a way that was both brutal toward their prisoner and unneighborly toward American authorities."

The Sun says;—"Hon Mr. Doherty did what all respectable and scandalized Canadians wanted to be done."

DENIES CONTEMPT.

Hon. Mr. Doherty Says Writ Was Not Meant For Him.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—The Minister of Justice, Hon. C. J. Doherty, who is acting Minister of the Interior, issued the order directing the deportation of Harry Thaw, explained the reasons for his action in a statement yesterday. Mr. Doherty pointed out that as acting Minister of the Interior it was his duty to enforce the provisions of the Immigration Act. He had done that simply and nothing more. Thaw, he said, had entered Canada illegally and a board of enquiry had ordered his deportation. From that order an appeal had been taken to himself. It had been considered and rejected and under the law the fugitive had been deported forthwith.

Asked as to how this action of his could be reconciled with the court order for Thaw's production in Montreal on Monday, Mr. Doherty said:

"There has been no order or anything purporting to be an order restraining the Minister from the exercise of his functions. The order was to officers of the Immigration Department, then in custody of Thaw. By my orders he has been taken in charge of other officers and taken across the border. I saw absolutely no reason for refraining to do my duty and carry out the law, merely because counsel for Mr. Thaw questioned the constitutionality of the act. Of its constitutionality I have no doubt. We will be able to justify before the courts the action which we have taken."

Plunges Sword Into Throat.

TOKIO, Sept. 11.—One of the assassins of Mortiaro Abe, director of the political bureau of the Japanese Foreign Office, committed suicide yesterday by plunging a sword into his throat.

Director Abe was attacked on Sept. 4 by two men, one of whom seized him by the shoulders, while the other stabbed him twice in the abdomen with a short sword. Mr. Abe died the next day. The crime was laid at the door of the student element, though the theory was held in some quarters that the director was mistaken by his assailants for Dr. Sun Yat, the Chinese revolutionary leader, whom be greatly resembled.

INSPECTOR TO DECIDE

French in Bilingual Schools May be Extended.

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—Following a meeting of the Provincial Cabinet last evening Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, stated that a certain policy, to be pursued in the future, had been decided upon with regard to bilingual schools, and that instructions to this effect would be forwarded to the different school sections of the province. The course which will now be authorized takes the form of a revision of last year's regulation and leaves the settlement of individual cases in the hands of Dr. Waugh, the chief inspector of public and separate schools.

A perusal of the new regulations will show that the claims urged by the deputations from troubled districts last year have not gone without consideration. The personnel of the inspectors has not been changed, however. There will be three French-speaking and three English-speaking, as before, and the status of all will be the same. The changes provide that whereas before French was to be used generally only to the end of Form 1, it may now be continued on the advice of the inspector. Further, whereas one hour a day was ordained for instruction in French on a school timetable, this still stands except where the time may be lengthened on the suggestion of the chief inspector.

The Minister states that the system of inspection has been altered in order to give the control of the situation to Dr. Waugh, who as a provincial officer is directly responsible to the Department.

ROBBERS WERE DISCREET.

Elaborate Plans of Jewel Thieves To Dispose of Loot.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Amazing evidence, more resembling fiction than fact, was given yesterday at the Bow Street Police Court in the hearing of Lockett, Grizzard, Silverman, Gutwirth and McCarthy of stealing and receiving the $585,000 pearl necklace, the property of Max Meyer, which was taken from the mails July 15 or 16 between London and Paris.

The statement by the treasury counsel, R. D. Muir, bore out almost exactly the story published by The Paris Matin last week. Whether the pearls were stolen in France or in England is not yet clear.

Meetings afterwards took place with Gutwirth, Grissard and Silverman in London teashops and hotels. At one tea shop three of the pearls were passed in a matchbox by one of the prisoners pretending to be a stranger to table.

Later, Mr. Spanier of Paris, acting as agent for the underwriters, succeeded in purchasing two of the stolen pearls and actually saw the whole of the missing necklace at a meeting at the First Avenue Hotel in Holborn. Another meeting was arranged for the purchase of the whole of the necklace at which the police arrested Gutwirth, Grizzard and Silverman, but when they were searched it was found that the necklace was not in their possession. Throughout all these negotiations the counsel said the prisoners acted with the greatest caution to guard against being surprised by the police.

Find the Driver.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—Discovery of the baggageman who delivered the trunk containing the body at 384 Somerset street, the scene of the tragedy, was the most important development yesterday in the quest for the murderer of Abe Rubenstein, alias Charles Robertson, the New York race track employe, whose dead body was found in the cellar of a vacant store here Tuesday evening. The trunk was shipped in from an outside town.

The theory of the police is that Rubenstein, who disappeared on Aug. 28, may have been lured some distance outside Ottawa, and there murdered, his body being afterwards shipped to Ottawa with the intention of destroying it.

Student Is Killed.

LINDSAY, Sept. 11.—John Sullivan, aged 16, a Toronto student who has been spending his vacation at his home in Victoria road, was accidentally killed Tuesday morning while out duck-hunting. Sullivan, along with a friend called Harris, were in a boat together, and when Sullivan noticed a flock of ducks coming their way he pulled the gun out of the boat, the hammer catching in the seat. The discharge entered Sullivan's left shoulder, penetrating the lung.

TAYLOR PLEADS GUILTY TO TERRIBLE BRANTFORD CRIME

He Declares That He Killed 12-Year-Old Charlie Dawson In Order to Cover Traces of Aonther Offence—Half-breed's Purchase of Cigarettes For Victim Led To His Own Undoing.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Sept. 11.—On his appearance in the police court yesterday morning, Taylor pleaded guilty to the charge of murdering Charlie Dawson and on the other charge pleaded not guilty, waived an examination and was sent up for trial at the next session for both charges.

The little court room was crowded when Taylor stood up in the prisoner's bench to answer the charge. His long black hair was thickly matted above his sloping forehead, and his dark brown face was thickly coated with grime. Although he glanced idly about the court room nodding to acquaintances here and there, he began to shake and his teeth chattered audibly when the magistrate read the charge.

"Have you engaged counsel?" enquired the magistrate. "Well, the folks at the livery stable said they would send me a lawyer," responded Taylor.

"Well, there is no one here. Whom do you want?" "Oh, I don't care. I don't know any person. Any of them will do, I guess," replied Taylor. Mr. Woodyatt then consented to act in the prisoner's behalf, and without any consultation the pleas to both charges were entered.

CHARLIE DAWSON.

Taylor confessed early yesterday morning to being guilty of the crime.

"Why did you kill him, Jim?" asked Sergt. Wallace.

"I did it because I thought the kid would squeal on me," replied Taylor.

Taylor related the story of the crime. His first slash was at the boy's throat when he almost severed the head from the body. In a dull monotonous tone, the half-breed described how he had hacked and carved the boy until he became tired of his fiendish work. He stated that he was twenty minutes completing the barbarous work.

The remarkable part of Taylor's confession and one that the police can hardly comprehend is the statement he made declaring that he murdered the boy on the spot where the body was discovered. Taylor's crime was apparently unpremeditated. It would appear that the thought occurred to him that the little chap might tell of the other crime which he had committed.

That the death of Charles Dawson was due to the instinct of fear which filled Taylor, and was to have covered another crime, was admitted by Taylor after being given a severe gruelling by the police officials.

Mentally defective and of a lower type, he was born in Brantford, and known about town as a ne'er-do-well. It is only during the past year that he has been mixed up in crime, having been convicted for a few petty thefts.

Taylor told the police that he committed the crime shortly after nine o'clock on Monday night, using a small half-inch penknife. Taylor himself escorted the police to the spot where he threw the knife away early Tuesday morning. He had been employed at the waterworks, and it was while working there that he threw the knife away.

A clue which aided materially in fastening the crime upon Taylor was afforded in the package of cigarettes found in the boy's clothing. These cigarettes were purchased by Taylor for the boy. Only one cigarette was taken from the package. Taylor purchased the cigarettes at the store on Colborne street. This he must have done just prior to going out with the boy.

After Taylor's arrest the officers went to his boarding-house and looked over his clothes. They discovered that the suit which Taylor had worn on Monday night had blood stains upon it. On the trousers' leg were stains, and also on the sleeve, and they were unmistakeable. The clothes were brought to the station.

The officers have also found out that Taylor when he came back to the stable with the rig Monday night had washed his hands. The stable man noticed that he had blood on them, and asked Taylor what he had been doing. Taylor replied that he had had a fight. The sponge that he had used in wiping his hands was thrown away and was missed by the stable man afterwards.

Queen Opposed the Gift.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—A London cable says: Queen Mary's opposition has caused a dissolution of the committee representing the ladies of twenty-five English counties, whose president was the Duchess of Portland, which was formed for the purpose of collecting funds for a wedding gift to the Duchess of Fife. The money collected, about $7,500, has been returned to the donors.

AFTER CARSON

Will He Grant Votes for Women in Ulster Constitution

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The Women's Social and Political Union is planning to make things uncomfortable for Sir Edward Carson and his colleagues if they fail to make provision for votes for women in the new constitution they are drafting for Ulster.

In a letter to the Ulster leader the women put themselves on record as follows:

"You and your colleagues and supporters are forming an Ulster government and preparing an armed rebellion against being brought under a system of government to which you do not give your consent. It is precisely on the same principle that the militant suffragist organisation refuses to submit to a government without the consent of women, either in Ulster or in any other part of the United Kingdom."

LETTER FROM EXPLORER

Ottawa Paper Gets Message Written on Day of Death

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Members of the Arctic Club here are surprised at the report of the murder of H. V. Radford of New York, and George Street of Ottawa, by Eskimos near the Arctic Ocean. It would be one of the first instances of display of savagery among the Eskimos.

There arrived at a newspaper office yesterday a letter written by Radford on June 5, 1912, the day he is reported to have been killed.

In his letter Radford told of his success of his mission and announced that he and Street were starting for the Mackenzie Delta. He said he believed that he and Street were the only whites who had entered Bathurst Inlet since Franklin's expedition. Radford said that he hoped to complete his inspection and mapping of the last strip of continental coast remaining unexplored, to make complete and continuous the coast line of North America.

WOMAN WAS WAYLAID.

Victim of Essex County Murder Was Mrs. Anna Sherman.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 11.—That plans were laid a week ago Sunday last to waylay and murder Mrs. Anna Sherman of Wyandotte, Mich., ten miles south of Detroit, who moved across the border three years ago, following an alleged disagreement with her husband, in the fear that her return to her former home in Kingsville, Ont., would lead to serious trouble, and that the body of the woman found eight miles from here, hidden in a corn field on the Talbot road, is that of Mrs. Sherman. This is the theory that the provincial officers, the county constabulary and the Windsor police are working up.

Yesterday morning a knife was found near where the body lay. It was covered with either rust or blood stains, and is of the kind that is used in the canning factories in this section. This find strengthened the theory of the police that a man from this section knowing of the woman's plans met her on the road, and after luring her to that lonely spot brutally murdered her.

Mrs. Wm. Frits, living in a farm house 260 yards from the place where the body was found, declared that she heard a woman's cries a week ago Sunday night, but she was frightened and did not tell anyone.

Acting Minister of the Interior Sends Agents To Coaticooke and Millionaire Murderer Is Promptly Dropped Over the Border—Thaw Now Under Arrest at Colebrook, N. H.—Mr. Doherty Defends Move.

COLEBROOK, N.H., Sept. 11.—Harry Kendall Thaw, fugitive from Matteawan, slept on American soil last night, barricaded in a hotel room here, after one of the most exciting days in his career.

Thrust unexpectedly over the Canadian border early yesterday, despite the writ of habeas corpus demanding his production before the King's Bench in Montreal next Monday, he was for three hours a free man, and during that time drove madly in an automobile for fifty miles through the hills of Vermont and New Hampshire. Near noon he ran into the arms of a New Hampshire sheriff and was brought to Colebrook, where he retained counsel to resist extradition.

William Travers Jerome, rushing hither in a special train, will assume charge of the case for New York State to-day, seeking to have Thaw as a ward of the state, returned to Matteawan. Meantime Thaw is "detained" charged with no crime, held on no warrant. Fearing kidnapping at the hands of officers from New York, he asked for a special guard, and Chief of Police Kelley swore in twelve special deputies, all armed. They were patrolling the streets about Thaw's hotel all night.

At 9.30 o'clock this morning Judge R. N. Chamberlin of the Superior Court will hear the applications of Thaw's lawyers for a writ of habeas corpus. Application for the writ was first made yesterday afternoon, but the judge, being occupied with another case, said he could not consider it.

Thaw's removal from the immigration quarters at Coaticook was sudden and dramatic. Three mysterious men, who said they represented C. J. Doherty, the Dominion Minister of Justice and acting Minister of the Interior, appeared. Thaw was asleep. They woke him him, commanded him to dress and after a struggle, in which he tried to brain one of them with a glass tumbler, took him to the border.

Thaw screamed as they brought him down the stairway.

"Don't let them kidnap me," he cried, "Save me for God's sake."

Silent, determined, the officers held him firmly, and, struggle as he might, he had to go. A few minutes after eight o'clock he was on his way to the border. Instead of a protracted legal battle in the Canadian courts his case, as far as Canada was concerned, was over in a twinkling.

Thaw's appeal against the order of deportation returned last week has been denied, and, writ or no writ, Canada was to be rid of him at once.

Back on American soil again and temporarily a free agent, Thaw hardly knew what to do with his new found liberty. In the absence of such guiding counsel as he has grown accustomed to in the last five years, with no one to lean upon, he marked for himself the erratic path of his automobile journey out of Vermont and into New Hampshire, which ended with his detention last night in a Colebrook hostelry. The circumstances of the journey were curiously molded.

Within a few minutes after Thaw had been hurried from Coaticook toward the Vermont border by the Canadian immigration authorities, the Associated Press representative, accompanied by a representative of a Montreal newspaper, followed in another automobile. The immigration officers' car was soon overtaken, and when Thaw was set free the two newspaper men were his only companions. Thaw asked permission to ride in the Associated Press car. The request was granted and Thaw was permitted to dictate the route traveled. The Montreal newspaper man left the party at West Stewarton, N.H.

Government In Contempt?

MONTREAL, Sept. 11. — Yesterday's developments in the Thaw case will in no wise result in the postponement of the hearing on the recently-issued writ of habeas corpus, slated to come up in the court of King's Bench next Monday morning. The writ will be returned; those to whom it was issued will either produce the body of Thaw, as required by the court order, or they will advance reasons for their failure to do so for the consideration of their lordships.

No matter whether their client is produced or not the fight will go on with a view to attacking the constitutionality of the Immigration Act under which he was deported from the country.

Canadian Press Despatch.

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 11.—The hearing in the case of Harry Thaw, under arrest for conspiracy in connection with his escape from Matteawan, is, by consent of both sides, postponed till four o'clock this afternoon, with probable further postponement until to-morrow.

Alienating Our Lands.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—"Truth," in its current number, alludes to the late Duke of Sutherland's will, which in its opinion contains one passage that should set Canadians furiously to think.

"This astute nobleman," says Truth, "like a number of other eminent persons, selected with extreme care certain properties in the Dominion, doubtless with a view to increment. I have often been astonished by the cheery optimism with which Canadian statesmen are alienating for all time the freeholds of their vacant territories, thereby reproducing for future generations the very land problems which are the bugbear of Europe to-day."

THE BRAND OF CAIN

Mr. Harry Thaw has gone. Some of our newspapers will be sorry to lose such a good subject for a bowling head-line. But they must wait, the time may come when we shall breed this kind for ourselves and will not have to import them.

It is a good thing that there is a prohibitive tariff on such creatures and that our law is sufficiently strong enough to deal with smugglers. Doubtless the mighty dollars rustled freely within reach of Canadian officials and if they were to be bought Mr. Thaw and his army of "friends" would have accomplished the deal.

There is a tendency with a great many people to sympathize with Thaw, and many Canadians would have been glad to see him free. Even among good, respectable folk is this to be found.

Thaw is in some respects a pathetic figure, but he is suffering not from the cruelty of the law, but rather the cruelty of the law-evaders and of those sentimental people who are "sympathising" with him.

If Thaw had been a man of less wealth and newspapers and silly hero-worshippers had regarded him in the same light as they would have regarded some poor criminal, Thaw would now have paid the full penalty of the law and have been at rest with the man he slew.

As it is he is branded as a murderer and a lunatic, and if he were set free the very people who slop over him would be the last to court his company, and he would go branded like Cain into the land of Nod.

DOVE OR EAGLE

Dr. J. A. Macdonald made an excellent fighting speech on the subject of peace at Put-in-Bay yesterday.

Peace has always been represented in the guise of a dove or as a maiden with a serene countenance and with hand outstretched timidly profering an olive branch.

But the old symbols are changing and yielding place to the new Peace now is to have her warriors no less ferocious than war. It is to be feared that Dr. Macdonald is not so enamored of peace as he appears to be, or as he thinks he is himself. His essentially pugnacious disposition will not permit him to speak for five paragraphs in the presence of the serene goddess without quoting "Scots Wha Hae."

Dr. Macdonald in his oration worked in a good deal of Globe philosophy, and let off a fusilade against the servile "centralizers." The word nationhood seems to have a certain fascination for him, and is as sacred as "Mesopotamia." One would infer from his speech that there was some sort of conspiracy to take away from Canada her freedom as a self-governing country, and that this conspiracy emanated from Great Britain—the Centre.

The good doctor can sleep soundly and retain his hair on that matter Great Britain has no desire to nurse her colonies any longer than she can help, and she would be only too glad to see them all walking without her support. Canada is not unsupported by the Motherland. We depend as a nation upon the British Navy, which is paid for by British workingmen.

All this talk about nationhood is mere schoolboy brag, and it would be better for us to get to our lessons. If we are full-grown let us prove it by showing that we are ready to pay for what we are getting. If Canada is a nation, then she is a pauper in naval matters.

This rhetorical bombast of apostles of peace, who do not see that they owe that peace to the "centralizers" whom they despise, is unworthy of a true Canadian. Nationhood is not created nor sustained by talk, but by honest and straightforward statesmanship. While Dr. Macdonald was boasting about peace, Great Britain was working hard to maintain it.

LOOK OUT! CANADA

"General Regan" the new novel that is taking Ireland by storm deals largely with Agriculture. Ireland has been driven out of wheat-growing by North America and now South America is supplanting North America. The same force has driven England out of grain-growing, the area having decreased from 2 millions to 88 thousand acres. Great and prosperous as we are we must keep Canada for the Canadians or our farmers will have to yield to cheaper living bountries. We all know what struck us and our farm lands when the west was first opened; although now she is beginning to repay us, which South America will not do. Look out! Canada.

EXCERPTS

In the Fog.

Mr. J. Hickory Wood, author of ever so many London pantomines, tells this story of a fog. He had run down into the country for a day's visit, and when he started to walk back to the station a dense fog came on.

Presently he dimly saw a pedestrian in front of him, caught him up, and asked him if he were on the right road.

"Yes," was the reply, and they fell to chatting. What struck Mr. Wood as curious, however, was the fact that he could not see his companion's face. The fog was pretty dense, but not so bad as all that. It gave Mr. Wood the unpleasant impression of walking with a headless man.

At last they reached the station, and under the lights Mr. Wood saw that his companion was a sweep whose sooty countenance had been quite invisible in the fog.

A Bull.

During the hearing of the Titanic claims, in London, Mr. Campbell, K.C., for the plaintiff, asked one of the witnesses, the fifth officer, whether he had given evidence before the Commission as to the state of the weather at the time of the accident.

The Witness: "I don't remember that I did."

Mr. Duke, K.C.: "Did you answer any questions that were not asked of you?"

Mr. Campbell (who is Irish): "I think we will have to send my friend over to my country."

Involving a Dramatic Scene on St. Patrick's Day.

By THOMAS G. O'GRADY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Pat Doolan and Maggie McShane were a young couple living in Killarney town, Ireland, and at the time this story begins were not out of their teens. Pat was a fine strapping young fellow and good looking, though he was so poor that his clothes were ragged—it's not every man whose manly beauty will show to advantage when his bare knees are peeping through his trousers and a tuft of his curly hair protrudes through a hole in his hat. But when Pat smiled that good natured smile of his clothes were forgotten and he was taken right into the hearts of those he smiled upon. As for Maggie, she was a housemaid in a family whose place bordered on one of the lakes, and she was always well dressed. She had a real Irish complexion, as white as milk and as red as a rose. There was so much mingling between the white and the red that it was impossible to tell where the one began and the other ended.

Pat and Maggie did a lot of walking about together on the banks of the lakes, and they were always noted for the difference in their appearance, Pat's being in such marked contrast to Maggie's. But if Maggie's clothes were spick and span and Pat's falling to pieces, Maggie's face wore a serious cast, while Pat's was always alight. His rags could not overcome the cheerfulness of his disposition nor chill his generous heart, for whenever he would meet any one worse dressed than himself he would sing out:

"Arrah, bedad, man, go sell your togs to a farmer to put up for a scarecrow."

Then Pat would thrust his hand in his pocket, and if by any possibility he should find a ha'penny there he would hand it out, saying, with a twinkle in his eye:

"Go buy a new suit of clothes."

The trouble with Pat was not that he was lazy, but that he was the kind of young man who needed opportunity. And what opportunity was there for him in a region where the land had all been taken up long ago by the gentry? Was not the road leading around the lakes so hemmed in by the estates of the aristocracy that the beauty of the scenery was shut off completely? What was a young man to do who had neither land nor money, and whose only work—if he could get it—would be dressing himself in livery and waiting on a master?

"Maggie," said Pat one day when he and his sweetheart were sitting on the bank of the lake near Maggie's mistress' estate, "Oi'm goin' to Amerikey."

"Oh, Pat!" exclaimed Maggie, her heart falling like the mercury in a barometer before a storm.

"Yes, Oi'm goin' to Amerikey, where they say gold dollars as big as cart wheels are rollin' around in the streets and all a fellow has to do is to pick 'em up. Whin Oi've collected a lot of 'em Oi'll send for ye."

"But, Pat, how're ye goin' to get to Amerikey?"

"Worruk me passage."

"In the cabin?"

"In the cabin! What would Oi look loike in the cabin in these togs? Oi'll go as a coal heaver. D'ye suppose Oi'd be dancin' around offerin' tay to the leddies and gintlemen whin I can get a much more respectable job below? And do ye suppose Oi'll be lettin' the muscles of me arrm grow soft whin Oi can keep 'em hard?"

"But how're ye goin' to git to the ship?"

"Walk. What were me legs given me for? Shurely not for dancin', because Oi've no illigant clothes, no grasshopper coat, for balls and parties. Oi'll walk to Queenstown and go in the first ship that'll take me."

Maggie had none of that happy go lucky disposition which was at the bottom of all her lover's actions. But Pat's disposition was not only happy-go-lucky; he was a natural gambler. His proposed move to America seemed to Maggie a jump in the dark. Pat was looking at the chances. There were surely none for him in Ireland, and there might be some for him in America. Ergo, America was the place for him. As to his getting there, why, any one can go anywhere. All he has to do is to go.

On the morning before Pat's departure he stood with Maggie on the banks of the lake where they had stood so often before and would probably never stand together again. They were looking out on the beautiful scenery, though it is questionable if they saw it. The mingled boughs of beeches, elms and oaks were putting on their summer apparel. Ivy vines springing from a tangle of holly and arbutus clung to the taller trunks. Beyond all this was the placid bosom of the lake, contrasting with the emotions in the hearts of the parting lovers.

"Don't be cryin' loike that, Maggie, dear," said Pat. "This is a beautiful scene and one we both love, to be sure, but whin ye see me ag'in ye'll be lookin' on a man dressed loike a gintleman. They say a man can do anything he loikes in that free land, and mebbe Oi'll be wearin' the wig and gown of a judge or the uniform of a gineral. How would ye loike to see me marshalin' a regiment o' sojers? Mebbe Oi'll be governor or president or somep'n loike that."

"Oh, Pat, ye have sich wild dreams."

Then Pat kissed her, took up his pack, slung it on to the other end of a staff and was about to set forth on his journey when Maggie handed him an envelope.

"It's for me cousin Bridget, who wint to Amerikey last year. She's workin' in one o' the hotels in Amerikey."

"Which wan?"

"Oi don't know. If ye don't foind her the week afther landin' open it and read what the writin' says."

"Oi'll foind her, sure," said Pat, and with a last embrace he started off with head erect at a strapping pace down the road.

Maggie waited till he had gone to a point where she could see him through an opening in the trees on the crest of a hill. He turned and threw her a kiss.

Firing up didn't trouble Pat a bit; it was when he reached the great city of New York, where "dollars as big as cart wheels were rolling about in the streets," that the real fight began. He didn't happen to meet Maggie's cousin Bridget, and, concluding that America was, after all, too big a country to warrant a search for her, he put the letter away. Indeed, he had no time for anything but making his living. He soon got a job, though a small one, and hadn't been in New York a month before he cast off his threadbare suit forever, donning a new one in its stead.

Pat spent a couple of years with a plumber learning the trade. The apprentice was smart and not only became a plumber, but a boss plumber, and four years after having landed set up for himself.

Pat had a great advantage in his cheery disposition. He became very popular with his associates, and, since popularity is an essential feature of leadership, he became a leader in a small way. A politician, perceiving his influence, took him up and made him one of his lieutenants. Pat developed fine political instincts. He had the art of turning down all grumblers among his adherents with that imperturbable smile of his. This is a power in politics. If he was obliged to give four plums to eight heelers, all of whom had worked equally well "for the ticket," he would give four of them a plum each, while every one of the other four men received a smile, an encomium and a promise for "next time."

Pat did not forget Maggie. Several times he made ready to send for her, but every time something happened to prevent. Then he began to make money, and it occurred to him that it would be a fine thing to go over, marry Maggie in Ireland and bring her home, just as the quality do. He wrote to her to that effect, but she wrote back that such a plan would be too great a waste of funds. So in the end Pat sent her a draft for plenty to buy her a first class ticket, but Maggie, who was of a frugal turn of mind and could not realize Pat's change of condition, would not come over in any berth above second class.

Now, it happened that when Maggie reached New York Pat was engaged in matters that required all his attention. He sent one of his workmen to meet her, but it happened that the man was a very stupid person. And as for Maggie, she had never looked upon a town bigger than Killarney, never seen a body of water bigger than the lake on which she had lived and, having always been a housemaid, had no head for taking care of herself. She missed the man who had been sent to meet her. Fortunately her affairs for passing the immigrant authorities were in first class condition, and she had no trouble with them. But when she was landed at the dock in a strange city, with no one to tell her where to go, her heart sank within her.

Some one looked in a directory for her and found the address of Pat's shop. Then he put Maggie and her belongings on to a trolley car, told her to ask for a transfer, take another line and so mystified her that she didn't know what to do. Riding up the street, she saw floating in the breeze the green banner of Ireland, harp and all. It was a welcome sight. When the car reached a broad thoroughfare it was stopped by a crowd. Maggie got out and was told a procession was about to pass. Some one invited her to get up on a stoop, where she could see, and she accepted.

Presently she heard music coming, and a man on horseback approached. He wore a "grasshopper coat" and a silk hat, and a green sash covered with rosettes hung from his left shoulder.

"Arrah, mushla," exclaimed Maggie, "it's my Pat!"

There was Pat sure enough caracoling as marshal of a dozen or more Irish societies celebrating St. Patrick's day.

"Pat," cried Maggie, "it's good luck I've seen you."

Pat could not have heard her, but at that moment he happened to turn his eyes toward her and saw her gesticulating at him. He rubbed his eyes and, being satisfied that she was really his Maggie, waved his baton for a halt, threw himself from his horse and elbowed his way through the crowd toward her. Then when the grand marshal took the Irish immigrant in his arms and smothered her with kisses a shout arose from a thousand throats.

After the wedding, which occurred the same evening, Pat remembered the letter he had brought for her cousin Bridget. He was about to hand it to her when he checked himself.

"What's in it anyway?" he said.

Tearing it open, he took out a five pound note.

Maggie had supplied him with her savings, hoping when he reached the foreign shore and did not find Bridget he would use it.

This time when Pat took Maggie to his arms a tear stood in his eye.

MOTHER SO POORLY

Could Hardly Care for Children — Finds Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bovina Center, N.Y.—"For six years I have not had as good health as I have now. I was very young when my first baby was born and my health was very bad after that. I was not regular and I had pains in my back and was so poorly that I could hardly take care of my two children. I doctored with several doctors but got no better. They told me there was no help without an operation. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me wonderfully. I do most of my own work now and take care of my children. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. WILLARD A. GRAHAM, Care of ELSWORTH TUTTLE, Bovina Center, N.Y.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine why don't you try it?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Miracle of Confidence.

That a miracle had been wrought in her was declared by the wife of a mechanic at Silverton, Devon, England, who, after lying helpless for more than five years, astonished her relatives and friends by getting up and walking. She received a message, she says, that she would be cured. When she asked that some slippers should be placed by her bedside in the tent in which she lay near her husband's cottage her sister told her that the slippers she wore five years ago could not be found. A visitor from Liverpool interested in faith healing, who prophesied that before she returned to the north the patient would walk again bought a new pair of slippers and placed them at the bedside. She rose, put on the slippers, and walked into the cottage. Her aged father and the sister who has cared for her for the last five years had not risen and she lit the fire and prepared the breakfast for them. Her husband was sent for from work, and visitors have flocked to see the change which has been wrought.

DEBTORS' LAWS.

Ways in Which They Can Avoid the Consequences.

A few weeks ago a case came into a British court in which a Poor Law officer was charged with having wrongfully forced a sale of the effects of a certain lady who had been unable to pay the Poor rate. The verdict went against the officer, who was held to have acted entirely beyond his legal rights.

Cases like this are by no means uncommon, though the ill-used debtor rarely seeks redress in the civil courts. Many are of the opinion that the laws of debt are sometimes unfair to the creditor. This is a question that can only be settled by our legislators.

On the other hand, there can be no doubt that the law is very extensively abused by a class of creditors who trade on their victims' ignorance of the law to perform acts which would promptly be penalized by any judge.

The chief offenders in this respect are probably the less reputable of those firms who supply goods on the easy payment system. As is well known, when purchasing goods in this way a clause is usually inserted in the agreement stipulating for the return of the goods in the event of non-payment of the instalments, and the forfeiture of the money already paid.

Now, if, through temporary misfortune, under British law, you are unable to keep up your payments to date an honest firm will invariably come to some arrangement if convinced of your sincerity. But the "sharks" are only too glad to seize the goods at once.

This forcible seizure is entirely illegal.

All you need do when the company's agents call for the goods is simply to stand firm and refuse admission to your house or apartments.

You need not be frightened of the pantechnicon awaiting outside, nor the bluffing of the agent, who knows that he dare not force an entry.

If he were to "break outer doors and enter"—and "breaking" here means no more than turning a door-handle—he would be guilty of the crime of house-breaking. And even if he evaded this, an action would still "lie" for trespass.

The company can only do one of two things—either sue you for the return of the goods, or wait until the last instalment falls due and then sue you for the full amount of the purchase price.

A favorite trick of unscrupulous agents is to contrive, by one of many means, to let the neighbors know that the householder is in debt—e.g., by talking unnecessarily loudly on the door step. This also is illegal.

If the collector acquaints any third person of your indebtedness he lays himself open to an action for slander. If the information is given by writing the offence will be that of libel. And it does not matter how indirectly the information is conveyed. For example if a request for payment were made on a postcard this would be actionable.

Moreover, when applying for credit the company will generally ascertain your place of employment. This may be merely to prove good faith, and, as such, cannot be considered objectionable. But many a collector is not above holding a veiled threat over you on the strength of this.

A Costly Statue.

Thirty-five thousand dollars for a statue, is a steep price these days, but a bronze figure 33 inches high of French 18th century workmanship realized no less than 7,000 guineas at the Sir John Murray Scott sale at Christie's. It is a Cupid on a gilt wood plinth, and is an example of a well known model by Falconet. A set of four panels of Beauvais tapestry was sold for 18,000 guineas.

THIS is a HOME DYE that ANYONE can use.

A MESSAGE FROM A WOMAN TO WOMEN

"Every Woman Should Take "Fruit-a-tives"

LAKELET, ONT., MAY 12th, 1911

"Kindly publish this letter of mine if you think it will benefit other women who might be afflicted with the diseases I have had in the past, but am now, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives", completely cured of. It is my firm belief that every woman should take "Fruit-a-tives" if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as "Nerves" or severe Nervousness. This Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which I was constantly taking doctors' medicine without any permanent relief. Constipation was also a source of great trouble to me and for which the Doctors said "I would have to take medicine all my life", but "Fruit-a-tives" banished all these troubles and now I am a well woman"

PETERBORO INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION OPEN TO-NIGHT

Fair Promises to be Best in History of Association. Vaudeville, Band Concert And Fireworks Will be Feature of Programe.

At 7.30 to-night the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition will be thrown open. As an annual event the Peterborough Fair has been very successful in the past, but the directors and officials in charge announce that the fair this year will be the star of all local fairs in the past. The capable and energetic officials in charge are delighted with the large number of entries that are pouring in.

To-day is a very busy day for the men connected with the Fair. Everybody are busy getting arranging their exhibits and preparing for carrying off the different ribbons.

A steady procession of products for the numerous exhibits have been pouring into the grounds all day, and things certainly look rosy. Some of the oldest Board of Directors say that the Fair will be the best ever held.

The vaudeville in front of the big grandstand will be of the best the directors could secure. Extra attractions in new features will be in evidence in the vaudeville work.

Fireworks alone will be well worth the price of admission.

The midway is a wall of tents from the main entrance over to the race track. The new features in the midway are very numerous.

The poultry exhibit this year will be greater than ever. The other exhibits are equally as well patronized.

Several large dining tents conducted by the different churches of the city are preparing for great activity, an dare anticipating a very busy time.

Program for to-morrow;

SECOND DAY, FRIDAY, SEPT. 12.

8 a.m.—Grounds and buildings open to the public.

10 a.m.—Poultry will be judged in the poultry tent. All poultry must be on the grounds and properly arranged in coops in time for judging promptly at 10 o'clock.

An interesting feature will be the "Rural School Exhibit," which illustrates the Government's new plan of agricultural education. A large tent contains this exhibit, which is open to all.

1 p.m.—Judging of halter horses in classes Nos. 1 to 5, in small ring.

POLICE COURT

"Well, Edward Butler, I'm afraid you will have to winter up on the hill. Will you pay for your board if we send you up for six months?" was the greeting he received at police court this morning. Butler is an old timer.

He protested to the Court he would leave for the woods.

Magistrate—When are you going out?

Edward—In the morning. I have been out with him for sometime. I can pay my fine.

Owing to Edward's generosity he was assessed $2.

"We didn't want your money, but we can't have you coming around here every ...," admonished the Magistrate ... Edward left the room.

One idea of a happy woman is one who can put on as many airs with a near-seal coat as she could with a sealskin.

TO FARMERS OF WEST PETERBORO'

Gentlemen.—The U.S. has put wheat on the free list. That means however, that countries like Canada must pay ten cents per bushel duty on wheat shipped to the U.S. unless the Canadian duty be abolished. If the farmers of this constituency are desirous of having our duty abolished and will officially notify me to that effect, I will be glad to advocate it. I may say however, that in an interview, the Toronto Star (Liberal) points out that the U.S. besides having the advantage of an early ripening, shipped 148 million bushels of wheat abroad last year, and that our market is in Europe, not in the U.S. and also that the market price of the same wheat is considerably higher in Canada. But people are entitled to make up their own minds and I feel that it is my duty to seek the farmer's opinion in this matter accordingly.

I am, gentlemen,

J. H. BURNHAM.

THE JURY ARRIVES AT A VERDICT

lying on the south-east side of the rheostat. I did not go back to the locality until after Jones was in the ambulance.

Crown Attorney—Did you find any pieces of iron?

Mr Dobie—Yes, I found some produced in court.

Mr Moore—I suppose these three large wires are insulated?

Mr Dobie—Yes.

Mr. Moore—With what?

Mr Dobie—With rubber and near the switch with tapes.

Mr Moore—If the wires had been properly insulated would there have been any harm come from it?

Mr Dobie—If the iron cut the insulation that would have caused the trouble.

Mr Moore—Could this not have been removed at the dinner hour?

Mr Dobie—Yes, it is usually the time such things are done.

Mr Hayes—It could have been taken out, using ordinary care?

Mr Dobie—Yes.

Mr. Ritchie, an electrical engineer in the employ of the C.G.E.

Crown Attorney—What marks did you find when you examined the scene of the accident?

Mr Ritchie—I found arc marks on the panel and generator.

Crown Attorney—You could see where the current had been?

Mr Ritchie—Yes, you could trace it through the machine.

Crown Attorney—The bar produced would extend far enough of the machine to touch the wire?

Mr Ritchie—It all depends how they were put in.

Crown Attorney—When were the wires insulated?

Mr Ritchie—I do not remember.

Crown Attorney—I understand it was about 2 years ago.

Mr Ritchie—Yes, if I remember correctly that plant was erected about that time.

Crown Attorney—Was that the best kind of insulation?

Mr Ritchie—Yes, it was recognized as the best for that class of work.

Mr Moore—What portion of machinery would have to have been shut down to take out the rheostat?

Mr Ritchie—A large portion.

Mr Moore—Could not this have been done during the dinner hour?

Mr. Ritchie—I would judge they would have to work very hard to get it out in one hour.

G. B. Wilson, foreman of the Testing Department said the work of removing the rheostat had not been done at his direction. It was 2 years ago when he had the wires insulated.

My thory is that the large bar touched the lead wire and broke the insulation, forming an arc.

Crown Attorney—Would there be any interference with the work to have these wires being boxed in, and make them completely safe?

Mr Wilson—I think there would.

It was not an unusual thing for the men to remove the rheostat while the current was on.

Passing from wire to bar to frame of rheostat ones having his hand on rheostat and then to ground is the way the current travelled.

I do not think Jones could have been to blame.

Mr. H. Fiske and Mr. Fessenden gave evidence along similar lines of former witnesses.

Mr Wilson foreman of the Testing Department, was recalled and described how the rheostat needed repairs.

Crown Attorney—Could more than four men work at it at a time?

Witness—Idon't think so.

W. H. Moore—Have you an idea how the accident occurred?

Witness—I am not an expert, but am of the opinion the wires caused the shock.

Mr. Fiske was recalled and asked if he knew of any other way the shock could have been caused by.

Witness did not know of any other way.

BOARD OF WORKS IN SESSION LAST NIGHT

George Street Church Deputation Request Regarding Side Walk Granted

A deputation from George Street church, composed of Messrs. Dumble, Shortly, Stabler and Ackerman waited on the Board of Works last evening in connection with the side walk on McDonnel street south of the George street church. The deputation asked that the sidewalk be placed on the outside of the tree line. After a lengthy discussion on the matter by the members of the Board the request was granted after being put to a vote.

Magistrate Dumble, who acted as chief spokesman pointed out that the walk placed on the outside of the tree line would add to the great beauty of the corner. As they had torn away the old fence and as the Board intended to lay a concrete walk, they, the deputation, earnestly asked that the Board consider their request, as the walk would prove a great benefit to the town. They were spending about $400 or $500 in fixing the church grounds, and with the sidewalk on the outside of the trees it would certainly present an altered appearance as to the beauty of the corner.

Mayor Bradburn pointed out that the sidewalk on the south side of McDonnel was inside the tree line and if the other new sidewalks were placed outside the tree line, it would make the street lop-sided. It would make it a poor looking street. The street would not be uniform.

Magistrate Dumble—Because you made a mistake by placing the sidewalk on the inside of the tree line on the south side, why repeat the mistake. With the sidewalk on the inside on one side of the street and different on the opposite, it does not spoil the beauty of your street. Trees are far more important than your sidewalks. When you have a forty year old tree you don't want to cut it down.

Magistrate Dumble also pointed out that the roots of the trees would in time force the sidewalks to crack and upraise them.

Chairman Buller remarked that they couldnt build sidewalks all over the streets just to save the trees.

Mayor Bradburn—If the church or residents will pay for the removing of the sidewalk on the south side outside the tree line I would agree to the request of the deputation.

Ald. Anderson thought the request of the deputation should be acceded to.

The deputation here retired. Ald. Buller read City Engineer's previous report that this sidewalk should be laid inside the trees, where the present wooden one is situated.

Ald. Johnston here took exception to the Engineer's report being adopted.

His Worship pointed out that the walk on McDonnel street, south side from Water to George, is inside the tree line ~~and this~~ on same side, east of Water ~~and~~ west of George on the outside. Hence laying the walk petitioned for outside the trees would create several unsightly jogs within a short distance.

Ald. Johnson and McIntyre here moved that the walk alongside the George street church be laid outside the tree line, as petitioned for. This was supported by Ald. Anderson.

The Mayor moved in amendment, that the Engineer's report that the walk should go inside the trees should be adopted. He was seconded by Ald. Gillespie and supported by Ald. Duffus.

This tied the question and it was consequently up to Chairman Ald. Buller to cast his vote and break the deadlock.

Ald. Buller offered that he was convinced that the walk should go inside the tree line as recommended by the Engineer. But as on more than one occasion when he had stood to his guns, according to his convictions in opposition to requests from churches he had been thrown down when the matter came up before Council he was going to give it to the Methodists this time.

The Mayor—"What does that mean do you vote for the motion?"

Ald. Buller—"Yes, but I am convinced the walk should go inside the tree line."

The Mayor—"Then why not vote according to your convictions?"

Ald. Buller—"What's the use? the Board's recommendation would only be turned down by Council, as customary in similar cases. And we might as well settle the question now. I vote with Ald. Johnston."

Accordingly, Ald. Johnston's motion was carried on a vote of 4 to 3, and the walk will go outside the trees, in compliance with the church's request.

A BEGINNING IN SIGHT

Engineer Parsons reported that the Provincial Board of Health will approve of his plans for new outfall sewer and sewage disposal this week. Consequently he would like authority to advertise for tenders for sediment tanks and material so that the work could be started at the earliest possible moment. This authority was voted the Engineer.

In the meantime, until the work is done, temporary sewerage and drainage facilities will be provided for the DeLaval premises.

Action is at last under way to furnish sewerage for the Harvey street district.

TO PAY COST OF RUNNING CAR

The Board will recommend that the maintenance cost of running the city Engineer's car on the city's business be borne by the corporation. This was the motion of Ald. Johnston and Duffus.

STEAM ROLLER CAUSED TROUBLE

Danley Delaney, Lakefield, P.O., rural route No. 4, is asking $25 for damages to himself and buggy on July 20th through his horse shying at the steam roller on Concession street. The Engineer reported Delaney at fault, and the claim was sent along to the Legal Committee for decision.

CROSSING TO MARBLE CO. WORKS

On motion of the Mayor and Ald Anderson, the question of a crossing on Maria street, to the Marble Co.'s works, was left with the City Engineer and Chairman, with power to act.

WATER FOR PRINCE ST.

Council will assure the Water Commissioners that a sewer will be laid on Prince street within one year. On strength of this assurance the Commissioners will lay a main on Prince street.

Miss Ethel M. Steinhoff United in Marriage to Mr. H. C. Campbell Barber at Toronto Yesterday

BARBER—STEINHOFF.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Mary Steinhoff daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Steinhoff, to Mr. Herbert Campbell Barber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barber, took place at the High Park Methodist Church at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Langford assisted by the pastor, the Rev. R. J. Treleaven. Mr. Crane, of Peterborough, presided at the organ, and the bride's sister, Miss Frances Steinhoff, sang the bridal hymn, "Love's Coronation," the decorations throughout the church being carried out with mauve asters and ferns. The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her father, wore a lovely gown of white charmeuse with lace pearls, and tulle veil arranged as a Juliet cap with bandeau of pearls and orange blossoms, and she carried a shower of lilies of the valley. Miss Laura Bain, of Tilsonburg, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaid was Miss Pearl Steinhoff, sister of the bride, both dressed alike in pale green satin, with pleated skirts and bodice, and drapery of shadow lace. They wore black hats of velvet and lace and carried mauve chrysanthemums. Mr. Fred Andrews, of Hamilton, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. F. McCordick, Mr. A. Spence of London, and Mr. W. M. Haverall. After a reception at the home of the bride's father in Evelyn avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Barber left for New York, the bride traveling in a navy blue tailor-made and black velvet hat with plumes.—Toronto Star.

MAY ROBSON

May Robson in a new comedy "Mrs. Mat Plummer" by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady" "The Travelling Salesman," etc., will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, Tuesday, September 16.

Matthew Plummer, a Western man with an iron determination, has become a millionaire, also a power in Wall street. Mr. Plummer has ambitions to becoem socially prominent. Mrs. Plummer is not of the same turn of mind.

Matthew Plummer, Jr., familiarly known as "Junior," has just returned to New York from abroad. He celebrates the occasion, and is arrested for speeding. Mr. Plummer sr., is not pleased, as he does not wish for this sort of newspaper notoriety. To square matters, "Junior" promises his father he will go to work "soon."

Plummer sr., has also made up his mind that his son shall marry a society girl (Charlotte Avery) whose parents, according to her story, have been much mixed up in divorce proceedings, and Miss Avery, herself, admits having no use for anything but money.

Mary Lawrence, Mr. Plummer's secretary, a very pretty young woman, with a business turn of mind, comes to the Plummer apartments to receive instructions from her employer and is met by "Junior." The society marriage that the father wishes for, is all off, so far as "Junior" is concerned after seeing the secretary. He willingly goes to work in his father's office that he may be near the only woman that has ever impressed him.

Miss Lawrence is aware of "Junior's" intentions towards her, and through a sense of duty to his father, refuses to hear of them, though she loves him. After a quarrel with his father refusing to hear of the society marriage, Plummer, sr. has planned young Plummer, by taking his chauffeur's place kidnaps his sweetheart, intending to carry her to his friend the Rev. Budthorp Barrett, but on the way they are arrested by a rube constable for speeding and taken to a country hotel for the night.

Here, the following morning they are found by the Rev. Barrett and Mr. and Mrs. Plummer. The mother has come to help her son marry the girl he loves, and the father has come to stop the marriage if possible; but Cupid wins and Papa Plummer is delighted to accept his ex-secretary as his daughter.

"Mrs. Mat Plummer," moves briskly and with an apparent determination to do nothing but divert and entertain. It accomplishes both to an unusual degree.

MILK PRODUCTION; INTERESTING BULLETIN

Best Breeds of Cattle—Stable Management—Clean Milking—All Dairy Farmers Should Read It.

A very comprehensive bulletin under the above title has just been issued from the press and forms No. 72 of the regular series of Bulletins of the Experimental Farms.

Its author, J. H. Grisdale, Director of Dominion Experimental Farms, has made milk production a subject of special study and experiment for many years, and has embodied in this bulletin the most valuable of the information obtained.

As suggested by the substitute (Crop Rotations, Dairy Barns, Breeding Dairy Cattle, Feeding, Care and Management of Milk Cows) the subject of Milk Production is not as simple as might appear at first glance. A maximum output of milk is dependence upon many factors and the author's endeavor has been to treat of these as fully, clearly and simply as possible, so that the bulletin may be of value to the general farming community, both in aiding them to make a start along correct lines and also as a work of reference on those dairying problems which occur from time to time.

The subject of Milk Production is treated under the following heads:—

(1). The farm chosen, the rotation followed and the crops grows.

(2). The breed of cattle selected and the breeding methods followed.

(3). Stables and care and management of the herd.

(4). Milking and care of milk.

(5). Feeding methods and rations.

Under No. 1, are discussed questions of prime importance, which arise before the would-be dairyman takes up the problems of dairying proper. The location and area of a farm best suited to his purpose, the nature of its soil, the most suitable crops to grow and rotations to follow are treated of. Suitable rotations are given for all parts of Canada, and a diagram is given showing arrangement of fields under a three and four-year rotation. The diagram also shows a good arrangement of the farm buildings, runs and paddocks.

(2) The breed of cattle chosen will be readily admitted to be an essential factor to success. The author is convinced, however from his experience, that there is no "best" breed and says: "Generally speaking, the best breed is the breed the man likes best." Several breeds are mentioned which would be likely to prove suitable where the milk is shipped to a cheese factory or to a city and others given where butter is to be manufactured. The character of the farm and the abundance of forage will also affect the breed chosen.

A brief account of the various breed known to Canadian farmers follows.

The herd having been established the method of keeping it in a high state of efficiency naturally suggests itself. This is discussed from all points of view: pure-breds vs. grades, the bull, the dairy calf and the heifer, with notes on the feeding an care of each. Judging the dairy cow is also treated at some length.

Under (3) stables and care and management of the herd the construction and ventilation of the cow stable is taken up and certain principles of building indicated. The necessity of abundance of air and sunlight are shown and methods of obtaining these essentials indicated. Farther on in the bulletin, a special section on the ventilation of dairy barns, embodies in full the author's findings on the subject.

In milking and the care of milk will be found advice on the economical and cleanly handling of that product, including care of utensils, milking machines, brushing, washing and clipping of cattle, etc.

Under feeding methods and rations the whole subject of feeding the milk cow is taken up, what, when and how to feed being fully discussed. Following this is a section entitled "The Philosophy of Feeding," in which the question is gone into in more detail and in a more scientific way, although so treated as to be readily understood by all. Various "Feeding Standards" that is, the amounts of protein, carbohydrates and fats required for maximum production and the amount of each in various feeds are given along with instructions on the making up of rations from feeds on hand which will conform with these standards.

Many farmers in all parts of Canada were communicated with as to their feeding methods. The replies of a large number are included in the bulletin and also the author gives some rations which he suggests as being suitable for different parts of the Dominion.

In "Some Notes on Feeds" those most commonly used by dairy farmers are taken up as to their palatability, economy and quality.

Stable hygiene and the treatment of some of the more common troubles to which dairy cattle are subject is dealt with in part 6. A list of remedies likely to be required is given and also brief notes on some diseases.

The result of 20 years' experimental work with dairy cattle at the Central Farm follows. These will be found to illustrate and justify the conclusions drawn in former sections.

The publication is profusely illustrated with diagrams and plates, and is provided with a very complete index.

It is now being issued to the Experimental Farm's mailing list. Those not on this list, who desire a copy, may obtain it by addressing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

NOT A TWINGE OF RHEUMATISM SINCE TAKING RHEUMA

"I suffered from Rheumatism for six years; tried different doctors with no relief. I saw your advertisement and decided to try RHEUMA. I have taken three bottles and am entirely free from the disease. I was so bad I could not sleep nights; now I sleep well, and my kidneys work perfectly."—P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Pa.

"For 11 months I was so badly afflicted with Rheumatism that much of the time I was obliged to use a cane. I used one bottle of RHEUMA and THE CANE IS IN THE CORNER NOW. No one could be happier to be rid of the pain swollen knees and badly swollen ankles. I certainly believe there is no remedy for the disease like RHEUMA."—Mrs. Daniel S. Knox, Severance, N.Y., Aug. 8, 1912.

Warne Drug Co. guarantees RHEUMA to cure Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Chronic Neuralgia and Kidney disease, or money back—and only 50 cents a bottle.

The Old Man of Oragua

A Story of Life In the West Indies.

By MARY D. PARKE.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Ralph Freeman tilted back in his chair against the whitewashed wall of the long building and stared at the glory of the setting sun beyond the Caribbean sea. The magazine he had been reading slipped through his listless fingers and clattered to the floor.

It was the close of a hot day in Porto Rico, one of those steaming tropical days that is so like its predecessor in every detail of climate and occupation that all perception of time is lost and one lives in a dreamy haze of unreality.

Ralph Freeman had lived that way for a year, ever since he had fallen heir to a small banana plantation and left the States to carve a fortune for himself. There had come to him abundant health, very little money and less happiness than he had expected. He had left behind him a broken engagement. He had been fiercely jealous of Lillian, and she had appeared to accept the attentions of that rich cotton broker with complacency. When Ralph reproached her matters had come so swiftly to a head that it was not until he was on the steamer bound for Porto Rico that he realized he must in reality begin all over again.

Now he had been reading a magazine story of a man in the tropics, a man who was separated from the girl he loved; how the girl, passing on a yacht, had tossed a bottle overboard, a bottle containing a letter to the man.

It was a pretty story, a clever story, but a very unlikely thing to happen, thought Freeman moodily. He was situated much as that other man was, but there would never be any bottle or message for him. If Lillian had married the cotton broker it would not be strange if she was cruising in the Caribbean waters, but that she cared enough to send him a message of any sort he did not believe. Such things might happen in stories—

"There were giants in the earth in those days," he quoted cynically, just as his eye was arrested by the glitter of sunlight on a bottle dancing on the waves close to the white beach. With a bound he had reached the wooden stairs, raced down them to the water's edge and then, impatient of delay, dashed knee high into the waves and rescued the bobbing bottle.

Empty it was now, and he tossed it down on the pebbles with an angry laugh.

He was tired of his solitary existence; he longed inexpressibly for the haunts of men. Days passed and weeks slipped away in the dreamy existence on this tropic isle. The work of his plantation required little supervision, and the negro hands appeared to idle the long days through, and yet somehow the crops were harvested and shipped by mule team to the nearest port where the fruit steamers touched. His one story office building was a tiny affair, and one hour a day was ample to keep his business correspondence and accounts in perfect order. His field hands lived in scattered huts somewhere about, and in this isolated region he was often called upon to act as physician to the suffering bodies of his childlike neighbors when the voodoo doctors failed to work a cure.

Suddenly he was seized with a desire for home—to see cities full of white men, to feel the hard pavement under his feet, to be hemmed in by cliffs of brick and stone, to hear the din of traffic and to participate in the light and gayety of scenes of pleasure.

By traveling all night he could catch the fruit steamer that in passing might drop him at San Juan. From there he could take a steamer for HOME. Now he thought of home in capital letters. Rodriguez, his Portuguese foreman, might harvest the next crop. He would see to things later. Now he must go home.

He rushed into his bedroom, locked up his books and few personal belongings and tossed some clothing into a bag. Servants rushed hither and thither at his commands. Rodriguez hastened from his abode and received his orders in stolid acquiescence. A mule team clattered before the door in the moonlight, and his traps were bundled into the wagon, and he took his seat beside the driver.

The long whitewashed building gleamed white in the moonlight; the sea was an expanse of molten gold; the sky showed stars dimmed by the full moon riding high in the heavens. There was the heavy scent of luscious fruits and flowers, the rank smell of vegetation, the peace of the land of the palm, but the cold cities of the north were calling to him, and he was going—going home!

Exhilarated, he turned and waved a farewell to his servants. "Adios! Adios!" he called, throwing silver among them. Then there broke from among the palms fringing the plantation a running dark form, a man speeding in haste, and Freeman's heart sank a little, because he knew the signs. This messenger was from one in trouble. Some one sick or dying needed him.

"I will not go," he told himself fiercely, but when the native had thrown himself at his feet and begged him to come to his father Freeman found himself relenting.

"Who is your father?" he asked to gain time, not that it mattered, for there was no caste among his people.

"The old man of Oragua!" cried the man. "If the master comes not he will die!"

"Why, he is the voodoo man! Well, no physician can cure himself. I'll go. Drive on, Dominique, to Oragua!"

They plunged into the forest road, the messenger running beside the cart, one hand resting on the shaft. Freeman sank into moody reflection. He regarded this interruption as an augury that he had best remain behind. Among these superstitious people he was growing to believe in all sorts of signs and presentiments, hardly aware of it. It did not occur to him now to turn away from the sick man. Go he must, if only to use his scanty but practical knowledge of medicine to soothe pain or perhaps effect a cure. His remedies were mostly the simple old fashioned ones he had learned from his mother.

Oragua lay over to the south, a tiny scattering of huts near the beach a few miles away from his plantation. In going there he could not catch the fruit steamer. Missing that, it would be days before he might get another, unless he traversed many miles of rough roads to reach a railroad line. He settled despondently in his seat, his momentary enthusiasm smothered by the pressing necessity of the moment.

He discovered the old man sunk in a state of coma. He had suffered a stroke of apoplexy, and there was nothing the young American could do save to apply simple remedies that would at least satisfy the wailing relatives that he was doing something. In fact, his presence was needless, his sacrifice in vain.

Morning found him closing the eyes of the old man of Oragua, who had after all gone to the Great Physician to be cured spiritually as well as bodily of his ailments. When he had withdrawn from the hut of mourning and Dominique had thrust in the cart a large basket of fruit that the grateful relatives of the old man of Oragua had pressed upon Freeman the latter walked down to a little point of land that jutted into the sea. When he emerged from a grove of palms into the full sunlight he was startled by the sight of a large steamer lying perhaps a quarter of a mile from shore. Two small launches were putting off from her, and another was almost under her very nose at the water's edge.

Wild with excitement, he rushed away and called his servant to bring his luggage. Then he intercepted the first boat, which had just landed a dozen tourists, men and women, who looked at the sun browned American with friendly eyes.

From the sailors Freeman learned that the vessel was the Triposa, a tourist steamer, cruising among the islands. Her steering gear had gone wrong off Oragua, and while it was being repaired those passengers who desired it had gone ashore. The steamer was outward bound from New York and would make San Juan in the course of her trip. They thought it likely that the captain would take Freeman as a passenger.

Delighted at this happy turn of fate which seemed to have been brought about by the old man of Oragua, Ralph found infinite satisfaction in seeing his luggage stowed in the boat. Then he gave final directions to Dominique and bade him farewell.

Now the other launches landed their tourists, and they, too, gazed at Freeman as they streamed past. Suddenly his heart jumped madly and the blood raced through his veins as it had not done since he had last seen Lillian Wade. For there she was, staring back with wondering eyes, starry with happiness at seeing him.

Forgetful of the cotton broker and his possible relationship to Lillian, Ralph Freeman found himself holding her hands and trying to appear conventional before many curious eyes. At a little distance he saw an astonished looking elderly woman who seemed to be waiting for Lillian.

"Oh, Ralph! To think you should be here!" She was breathing quickly.

"I was going to you—I'll tell you all about it later. Then you haven't forgotten me, and you have forgiven me for being such a brute?" he fairly stammered in his haste.

"I've been punished, Ralph, for my perversity," she said humbly. "I did not care a bit for that man, only I was vexed that you should doubt my loyalty in the least. Come and be introduced to Mrs. Ford—I am traveling with her. It is all so wonderful!"

"You can thank the old man of Oragua for this, dear," he said to her as they went along. And to himself he whispered softly, wonderingly, "And you can bet I believe there are giants in these days too!"

THE "DON'T" VICTIM.

No matter what you have to say
Or what you want to do,
There 'pears to be some special "don't"
Thet lies in wait fur you—
"Don't eat nor drink the things you like,"
"Don't give your thoughts away,"
"Don't work too hard," "Don't be a drone,"
"Don't worry," "Don't git gay!"

Whene'er, with energy renewed,
You seek to make a start
Some "don't" bobs up to fit the case
An' leaves you faint o' heart.
So here I be with little gained
In worldly goods or fun.
I've been so busy mindin' "don'ts"
I don't git nuthin' done!

JOKED WITH THE CANON

An Amusing Exchange of Pleasantries Between King and Kaiser.

An account of an amusing conversation between King Edward, the German Emperor, and the Canon is given in "Some Recollections" by Canon Teignmouth Shore. King Edward and the Kaiser were on a brief visit to Prince and Princess Charles of Hesse at Kronberg, and came over to the town one day to unveil a memorial to the Princess Elizabeth of Hesse.

"After the ceremony they expressed a wish to see the memorial in the English church to the late Empress Frederick. I accompanied their Majesties, and on entering the building the Emperor turned to me.

"'Now, Canon,' he said, 'how many does the church hold?'

"'In the season, your Majesty,' I replied, 'there are about three hundred or three hundred and fifty present.'

"'And how many of them are asleep during the sermon?' he asked, with a laugh.

"'I must beg your Majesty,' I said, 'not to think that I preach every Sunday!'

"The King, who seemed amused and pleased at the answer, remarked:—

"'You see, you must get up early to walk round my chaplain.'

"'Yes, and a good walk, too!' said the Emperor, with a glance at my somewhat bulky figure.

"'Yes,' said the King. 'You know, Teignmouth Shore, you are putting on weight.'

"'Well, at all events,' said the Emperor, with a most gracious smile, 'he never needs to do that in the pulpit!'"

A WITTY BISHOP.

Perhaps one of the best definitions of the functions of the Upper House was that given by Bishop Wilberforce when called upon at a dinner of a City Company (the Salters'), of which he was an honorary member, to respond to the toast of "The Lords and Commons." "Gentleman," said he, "I can only compare our two great legislative Chambers to a clock, of which the House of Commons is the mainspring and the House of Lords the pendulum—a pendulum which wags, wags, wags, the while it keeps the mainspring in order, and prevents the clock from running down."

The story is also told of the manner in which the bishop silenced some young men who endeavored to drag him into a controversy at a time when a series of tracts, entitled, "The Road to Heaven," was creating a considerable sensation. The bishop, however, proved too much for them, merely saying: "The best and only road to Heaven I know is to turn to the right and go straight on."

BILL NYE'S COW.

Bill Nye, the humorist, once had a cow to sell, and advertised her as follows:

"Owing to my ill-health, I will sell at my residence, in township nineteen, range eighteen, according to the Government's survey, one plush raspberry cow, aged eight years. She is of undoubted courage, and gives milk frequently. To a man who does not fear death in any form she would be a great boon. She is very much attached to her present home with a stay-chain, but she will be sold to anyone who will agree to treat her right. She is one-fourth shorthorn and three-quarters hyena. I will also throw in a double-barrel shotgun which goes with her. In May she usually goes away for a week or two, and returns with a tall red calf with wobbly legs. Her name is Rose. I would rather sell to a non-resident."

THE OLDEST NEWSPAPER.

The "Tching Pao," which is the official gazette of Peking, and has just celebrated its thousandth anniversary is the oldest newspaper in the world. Ever since its inception, a copy of each issue has been carefully preserved in the archives of the Peking Palace. Accuracy has always been the keynote of this paper, and, in order to maintain its high standard, several journalists on its staff in the past paid the penalty of mistakes with their lives. Dismissal and, at the worst, imprisonment, is the punishment meted out at present.

BY AEROPLANE TO CEMETERY.

An aviator, M. Deneau, who has a brother buried in a cemetery near Chartres, followed the general custom in France of visiting the graves of dead relatives on the eve of All Souls', but he did so in an aeroplane. He landed at a little place outside the burial ground, and went to his brother's grave, where he left some flowers. He then returned to his aeroplane and flew back to the aerodrome.

NO RED CROSS.

Among the nations of Europe Turkey is the only one which flies no Red Cross in time of war. Though a party to the Geneva Convention, Turkey has steadfastly refused to use the emblem of that Convention, the Greek Cross, to protect its sick and wounded in time of war. In place of the Cross, the Turkish Army Medical Corps make use of a red crescent on a white ground.

The death occurred at Wolverhampton of Mr. James Phillips, who was believed to be the oldest vestry clerk in the country. He was eighty years of age and had held the office since 1855. He had been for half a century honorary secretary of the Midland Temperance League, and for sixty years the treasurer of the Wolverhampton Temperance Society.

Chapdelaine, the popular third catcher of the Peterboro team left to-day via C.P.R. for his home in Bedford, Mass. "Chapie" was very popular with the fans all summer and was attached to Peterboro that he hated to leave. Yesterday he received a letter from his father stating that the family were leaving for Florida next week and wanted him with them. But for that, "Chapie" would have stayed a month longer.

He signed a contract with the Peterboro team for next season.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Review
THE JEWEL CASE

Poplar Plains Road,
Toronto, Sept. 10. 13

Sir— A cable from London just received, reads as follows:

"Jewell case dismissed by Judge after hearing medical evidence of prosecution. Prosecution called three doctors, and before evidence of third doctor was complete, judge directed jury to find prisoner not guilty, without calling for evidence of defendant or for that of any witness for defence. Judge stated that it would be clearly too dangerous to convict a man on such evidence, and therefore there was really no cause to go to jury."

Yours,
G. W. ALLAN.

THE PLANET JUPITER.

Startling Changes Are Taking Place Upon Its Surface.

The worlds have been stirred up with strange disorders from the center to the circumference of the solar system during 1909. It has been an extraordinary year astronomically and meteorologically.

The sun, which ought to have quieted down from its last spot maximum several years ago, has broken out again and again during the summer and autumn with huge, mistimed explosions, followed by magnetic storms interrupting the wires and cables all over the earth.

Our planet, responding perhaps to the disorder in the sun, has passed through paroxysms of unseasonable weather and of internal disturbances producing earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in unusual number.

Mars, coming to its opposition at the critical moment, has displayed signs of extraordinary change in its curious web covered face.

And the great planets Jupiter and Saturn have coincidentally shown indications of the play of giant forces sufficiently powerful to distort their vast cloud laden atmospheres, filling them with mysterious balloon shaped masses and flushing them at times with strange red patches, so extensive that the least of them would have enveloped the whole earth as in a mist of blood.

The changes on Jupiter have been of the most startling description. Take a world 1,300 times as large as ours, heat it to incandescence, envelop it in a dense atmosphere a thousand miles or more thick, set it spinning so rapidly that a point on its equator flies round at the rate of 27,500 miles an hour and you have Jupiter.

Stir its heavy atmosphere to a state of the wildest turmoil, where huge dark masses, fiery red outbursts, dazzling white puffs and long, torn streamers are mingled in a confusion indescribable, all eddying onward side by side, colliding, intermingling, dissolving; overlapping, sinking, rising, destroying each other, presenting altogether a picture of chaos incomprehensible, and you have the surface of Jupiter as it has shown itself during its recent progress through our evening skies.

The investigations of Arrhenius and others warrant us in assuming that the seat of the disturbance is in the sun. The sun is a cooling star, and, like all great, intensely heated bodies that are radiating away their heat and concentrating within, it has its recurrent paroxysms, and whenever it has them its dependent planets must take the consequences. A few hundred millions of miles of space will not save them.

From the solar explosions clouds of electrified particles go billowing out, traveling tens of thousands of miles in a second, and when they encounter the earth or another planet they upset the meteorological elements, producing auroras, magnetic storms and other effects that we are not yet in a position even to guess at.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

British Dukes.

Of the dukedoms that exist today the dukedom of Norfolk is the oldest and the dukedom of Fife the youngest. The Duke of Norfolk has the most tragic family history. The Duke of Westminster is the richest duke, although the Duke of Sutherland owns the most land, and the Duke of St. Albans the poorest. Four of the dukes are of the blood royal—Richmond, Grafton, St. Albans and Buccleuch—and are therefore Stuarts. The living dukes have royal wives. Eleven of the twenty-seven have had an ancestor who was beheaded, and one had one who was hanged. Two dukes—of Argyll and Hamilton—are both descended from the most beautiful woman of her day—Elizabeth Gunning. The duke who has the most remarkable coat of arms is the Duke of Leinster. Three of the dukes have married American heiresses, and one—his grace of Sutherland—is the husband of the most beautiful woman of her day.—London Strand Magazine.

Fearlessness of Seagulls.

A Glasgow doctor who was recently touring in the highlands had a somewhat unique experience with seagulls while passing through the Caledonian canal. The birds were, as usual, following the steamer and were being fed by the passengers. To prove how tame or bold they were the doctor fed them by placing pieces of biscuit on his cap. The birds soon displayed much skill in snapping up the food. Then the doctor placed a piece of biscuit in his mouth. The gulls were shy at first, but ultimately one bird bolder than his fellows partook of the morsel, and before long there was brisk competition for the tidbits. The snapshotters on board were kept busily engaged, so that there is now pictorial proof of the incident.—Glasgow News.

Aluminium Paper.

Aluminium paper is intended as a substitute for tin foil. It consists of paper specially prepared to give it a parchment-like consistency and covered with powdered aluminium sprinkled on a thin layer of resin. Pressure is applied when the coating is soft to insure the adhesion of the powder. The metallic surface thus obtained is not affected by moisture or by greasy substances. Aluminium paper is cheaper than tin foil, and in Germany efforts are being made to introduce it extensively.—St. Louis Republic.

PERSONALITY SURVIVES

It Goes on After Death, Declares Sir Oliver Lodge.

Famous Physicist In Eagerly Awaited Pronouncement Tells British Association That Scientific Methods Can Be Applied to Examine Occult Things — We May Hope For Intercourse Across Chasm.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 11.— Speaking on the subject of "Continuity" last night before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, Sir Oliver Lodge, president of the association, touched upon the question of life after death. Published forecasts of the address intimated startling statements and caused the occasion to be anticipated with lively interest, and gained for the speaker profound attention.

He declared his conviction that occurrences now regarded as occult "can be examined and reduced to order by the methods of science carefully and persistently applied," and that "already the facts so examined have convinced me that memory and affection are not limited to that association with matter, by which alone they can manifest themselves here and now, and that personality persists beyond bodily death."

Sir Oliver further declared the "evidence to my mind goes to prove that discarnate intelligence, under certain conditions, may interact with us on the material side," and that "we may hope to attain some understanding of the nature of a larger, perhaps ethereal, existence, and of the conditions regulating intercourse across the chasm."

In psychology, the conflict ranges round vitalism, he said. In chemistry, the debate concerns "atomic structure." In biology, the dispute is on the laws of inheritance. In economic and political science, of sociology what is there that is not under discussion. In the vast group of mathematical and physical "sciences," present day criticism concerns what, if I had to express it in one word, I should call continuity.

Sir Oliver then discussed at length the difficulties that lie in experiments on the other, and the results to date.

"The ether of space," he said, "is at least the great engine of continuity. It may be much more, for without it there could hardly be a material universe at all.

"I hold that science is incompetent to make comprehensive denials, even about the ether and that it goes wrong."

Attacking the school of arbitrary scientists who attempt to account for all things by precise scientific laws, he said:

"But if we have learnt from science that evolution is real, we have learnt a great deal.

"That evolution progress is real is a doctrine of profound significance, and our efforts at social betterment are justified, because we are a part of the scheme, a part that has become conscious, a part that realizes, dimly at any rate, what it is doing, and what it is aiming at.

"Either we are immortal beings, or we are not. We may not know our destiny, but we must have a destiny of some sort. Science may not be able to reveal human destiny, but it certainly should not obscure it. I am one of those who think that the methods of science are not so limited in their scope as has been thought; that they can be applied much more widely, and that the psychic region can be studied and brought under law, too. Allow us, anyhow, to make the attempt."

Sooner or later the man with a swelled head will get what's coming to him.

Hospital Patients

The condition of Mr. Jas. Galvin, who is suffering from the effects of a paralytic stroke, which seized him some time ago, is much improved. He is out of the hospital and is now resting comfortably at his home on Stewart street.

Mr George Henry, who is confined to St. Joseph's hospital with symptoms of typhoid fever, is getting along fairly well, and while the doctors cannot as yet tell much about his condition, they feel certain that he has only a light attack.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

CUNNING SCHEME TO KILL M'NULTY

Mounted Police Looking for Band of Gypsies, Believed to be Connected With Murder

EDMONTON, Sept. 11.—That the killing of James McNulty, formerly of Norwood, Ont., was cunningly contrived, developed yesterday when Detectives Moore and Shaw found two long strings, each having one end tied to the bushes. To one string had been attached two tin cans so arranged that when shaken they would make a sound like a cowbell. This was behind the shack. Arranged so that it could pull the trigger of a gun was the other at the side of the house. The detectives figure that the cans were used to attract the victim from his hut, and when he turned the corner to learn the cause of the ringing the other string was pulled, which was attached to the trigger of a shotgun hidden in the bushes. This is apparent because one end of this string had been broken, while the other was still attached to the bushes.

A band of gypsies who had been camped near the scene of the tragedy moved away yesterday afternoon. The Mounted Police have gone after them. They are believed to be connected with the murder.

IRISH GUARD'S BAND FINE PERFORMANCE

Is Peterboro Musical? Poor Attendance at First-class Band Concert

Peterbreo did not impress the Irish Guards band last night with its great interest in first-class instrumental music. If that interest is to be measured by the number of people who paid to hear them at the Brock street rink, then it cannot be rated very high, for the audience was very poor.

It was not without a great deal of trouble that Mr. Gliddon secured the band for Peterboro, and it is a pity that it was so slightly repaid. The band has had a triumphal progress since it arrived in Canada, and has drawn immense crowds wherever it has visited, smaller cities than Peterboro turning out in great numbers to hear them.

However, whether Peterboro does not care for music, or whether we were too tired after the holidays, those who did not turn out last night, missed a great treat. A fine programme was gone through and those who were frotunate enough, or wise enough to be present, went away satisfied that they had listened to a great band of musicians.

The programme was a varied one. The "Irish Fantasia" was an excellent arrangement of Irish airs. It portrayed the strange composition of the Irish character and temperament, which seems to be one of contrasts. "Oft in the Stilly Night" "the Rakes of Mallow," "Teddy O'Neill" and "Paddy Whack," "Dear little Shamrock" and "St. Patrick Day in the Morning"—all of these are typical Irish ditties and display the two extremes of Irish sentiment.

An Irishman is either very sad even to the verge of melancholia and despair, or he is very riotous and hilarious to the point of madness. Sadness and madness are strangely mixed in the Irishman, if he is to be judged by his music.

"Callar Herrin" was a fine cornet solo, and many would like still more the "Better Land" which was given as an encore.

The classical pieces "Maximilien Robespierre" and Wagner's "Tannhauser" were masterpieces very dramatically rendered. These two overtures alone were well worth a special visit to hear.

The band goes from Peterboro to Montreal to fulfill an engagement and going down the St. Laurence, steps off at Quebec to play at the request of that city, and then proceeds to the old country where they have many engagements awaiting them, the first being at Liverpool Exhibition.

In an interview, last night, Mr. Charles H. Hassell, the conductor of the Irish Guards' Band, told The Review that he had had a very happy time in Canada, and that the people of Toronto had "spoilt" them with kindness. He said he had found the Canadian people very appreciative. He had skimmed the cream off the milk of Canadian kindness. Peterboro did not supply much of the "cream."

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the housewife finds the numerous duties of home a burden, in fact every walk of life suffers from depleted nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. The Tait Optical Co. are expert Opticians, and have a reputation for accuracy and moderate prices. Glasses prescribed only when necessary.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE ON THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS TO-DAY

Entertainment Started Last Night With Vaudeville, Acrobatic Performances and Fireworks --Increased Number of Exhibits Tax Accommodation.

Look! Look! Look! Three balls for a nickel; hit the niggar and you get a cigar.

Hoop-la! Hoop-la! Everybody plays hoop-la; come and win a teddy bear.

See the big forty foot snake, the only one of its kind in the world. Look! They are just feeding it.

Come on boys! Come on boys! The cane you ring is the cane you get; the cane you carry away. Three shots for a nickel.

Everybody young and old, flock to the midway. The grand old midway, where the youngsters struggle with their elders and money lasts like snow in May. The "fair" causes the midway and the midway makes the "fair." The midway of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is bigger and better than ever, and the possibility of winning a prize (that gold watch on No. 99) is just as big as ever.

Last night the Fair opened and despite the fact that dark clouds loitered in the vicinity from sundown, the crowd was fairly large. Those who were on hand fully enjoyed the excellent program that the directors had prepared. All evening the 57th Regimental Band kept up a flow of music that was a great in itself. In front of the grand stand the open air attractions took place and many commented that they were the best ever presented in the city. The big Japanese Troupe of acrobats and jugglers in their four separate acts, including head, band and pole balancing, wire walking, foot juggling and lofty perch acrobatic performances made a big hit, as did the La Tremos, aerial gymnasts. For the first night the acts were exceedingly good, but tonight, since the performers have become acquainted with the platform, look out for some extra fine acrobatic work.

The big display of new, novel and gorgeous fireworks, including illuminated balloons, was well worth the price of admission. Through some mistake a great portion of the fireworks were sent to Preston instead of Peterborough and didn't arrive here till nearly six o'clock, thus the men in charge did not have a chance to present them in their greatest splendor, but to-night there will be a double bill and everything will run like clock work.

From a general standpoint the Exhibition is away ahead of last year or any preceding year.

The main building is, as one director remarked, fifty per cent. better than last year. Everything is arranged in the very best and most attractive order and the exhibits of the various business men are exceedingly fine.

The horticultural department is very large and Mr. Glover remarked that it is the largest exhibit of its kind ever offered in this city. Coming to the live stock one can truly say that a larger exhibit of such fine beasts never took place in any inland town in the province. The sheep, cows, pigs and horses are there in large numbers, and early yesterday the sheds were filled, necessitating the erecting of several tents. This morning before the gates opened, there were men there from the rural districts with cows and pigs and by noon there were many more. If you admire live stock, take in that department ment at the Exhibition.

The poultry tent, which is the first one you meet on entering the eastern gate, is well provided for and the coops are filled. This department is always a big attraction and the directors have something in this line this year that they need not be ashame of.

The various manufacturers' exhibits are found along the south side of the main building and perhaps the most attractive is that of the De Laval; the others, especially the one of the Ford automobile, draws considerable attention. Various churches are supplying meals on the grounds so one can go early and stay late all day. Don't forget tomorrow is the last day.

SATURDAY'S PROGRAM.

SATISFACTION DEMANDE BY JAPAN FROM CHINA

Minimum Is an Apology For Killing Japanese Officials, Punishment of the Culprits and the Payment of an Indemnity—An Apology From General Chang Hsun Is Hard to Secure.

PEKIN, Sept. 12.—President Yuan Shi Kai and his advisers have taken under consideration the demands made by the Japanese Government which are tantamount to an ultimatum, for the killing of three Japanese at Nanking, the maltreatment of a consular messenger, the torture of a Japanese lieutenant at Hankow and the imprisonment for two days of a Japanese lieutenant at Shantung. Japan demands an apology for the insults to the Japanese flag, the punishment of those responsible and the payment of an indemnity, the amount of which is to be arranged later.

The Japanese legation says that the demands represent the minimum to which China must agree without delay; otherwise Japan will take what action is deemed necessary. A member of the legation stated privately yesterday that if the terms were known at Tokio the people would consider that the Government had betrayed its trust and sacrificed the nation's honor.

It is thought here that the Japanese Government is as anxious to settle the matter as the Chinese and has presented minimum demands in consideration of foreign criticism and in order that the Chinese Government could accede quickly and readily.

Nanking reports that Gen. Chang Hsun, commander of the imperial forces there, and his soldiers will not permit the Republican flag to be flown, but only a red flag with Chang Hsun's name inscribed thereon. For many months reports have been current that Chang Hsun held monarchist views, and there were even rumors that he had intended to proclaim himself emperor. His present attitude, however, may be largely due to the rebuke which Yuan Shi Kai administered to him by a public telegram after the looting of Nanking.

It is understood that one of the Japanese demands is for a public apology from Chang Hsun at the [illegible]

London Naval Conference.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Manchester Guardian understands that arrangements are now being made to hold a subsidiary naval defence conference, not at Vancouver, but in London, towards the end of November.

It will be attended by the Premier and other Ministers of the self-governing dominions, and will differ from previous conferences in that the question of accepting assistance from India and the eastern colonies in providing a force for the defence of the Pacific will be considered. This proposal has emanated from the Chamber of Commerce in India.

WAS TIRED OF SCANDAL

Murdered Woman Sent Farewell Notes to Relatives.

WINDSOR, Sept. 12.—The finding of two letters written by Mrs. Mabel Newman of North Ridge, a small hamlet near Essex, by local newspaper men, has cleared up the Oldcastle mystery.

The letters, written by Mrs. Newman on Friday, Aug. 29, to her husband, and a sister in Ohio, were found in a book on a table at the Newman home while the newspaper men were making a search for a photo of the woman whose body was found in a cornfield Tuesday night, and are farewell messages. The one to her sister said: "I have stood slander as long as I can. I am doing this to end it all."

Three hours later by the dim rays of a lantern in the stable yard of an undertaker at Essex the husband gazed upon the remains of his wife. Turning away from the gruesome spectacle he announced that the body was that of Mrs. Newman.

What happened to Mrs. Newman from the time she left her home thirteen days ago until her body was found is mystifying to the authorities. The marks of violence on the body cannot be explained and detectives are still working on [illegible]

SCHOOL METHODS

Prof. Griffiths is High in Praise of Boy Scout Movement.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 12.—A strong attack on modern education was made by Prof. Ernest Howard Griffiths, principal and professor of experimental philosophy at the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, Cardiff, at yesterday's session of the British Association.

He claimed it was difficult to find evidence of improvement in any way commensurate with the amount of money spent on education. The assumption that all children were fitted to profit by more than the rudiments of an academic education was responsible for this.

He denounced the "conspiracy of silence on sexual instruction," and added:

"I believe the boy scout movement is rendering a greater service than our complicated state machinery in preparing boys for their struggle in life. Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell (founder) is the greatest educator of our time."

THE BRITON WINS AGAIN

English Steel Tender Lower Than U.S. Figures.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—A British builder yesterday was awarded the contract for turbine drums for the newest American battleship, No. 39, at a little more than one-third the price offered by the lowest American bidder.

The accepted bid, $57,436, was submitted by New York agents of the Cyclops Steel & Iron Works, Sheffield, Eng.

It is exceptional for the Navy Department to send a contract abroad, but Acting Secretary Roosevelt held that the action was justified by the tremendous difference between the British and American prices. The Sheffield bid includes the payment of duty, and by giving the work to the foreign builder the United States saves more than $100,000.

There were two American bidders, The Bethlehem Steel Co., $169,568, and the Midvale Steel Co., $160,272. The Carnegie Co., the only other domestic concern equipped to build the drums, did not seek the contract.

BOILER IN GAS WORKS EXPLODES CAUSING DEATH

One Man Instantly Killed and Another is not Likely to Recover

Canadian Press Despatch.

OSHAWA, Sept. 12.—A boiler at the Seymour Gas Works, formerly owned by the City of Oshawa, blew up at nine-thirty this morning. Thos. Buckly was instantly killed and Daniel Anderson is at the hospital so seriously injured that recovery is not expected.

Another employe, named White had just stepped outside the building and escaped being injured. A large number of windows were smashed by the concussion, and a tank filled with coal oil on the siding nearby, caught fire, and a pall of thick black smoke covered the town.

The loss is probably twenty thousand dollars. Two gasometers containing sixty thousand and twenty thousand feet of gas fortunately escaped.

Another Polar Expedition.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—J. Foster Stackhouse, who was intimately associated with the late Captain Scott in organizing the fateful expedition to the South Pole, is arranging for another trip to the Antarctic. The plans are for an expedition to start from London in August, 1914, to explore King Edward VII. It is expected that the explorers will be away for nearly two years, sailing in the steam yacht Polaris, specially built for navigation in Polar regions.

TWO ISLANDS DISAPPEAR

Natives and White Men Believed to Have Perished

QUAKE THE CAUSE

Canadian Press Despatch

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12— The steamer "Sonoma" which arrived yesterday from Sydney, via Honolulu reports that trading steamers advised her that Falcon and Hope islands of the Friendly group, have disappeared.

The vessel steamed to the spot on the chart where those islands should be and found the story to be true. It is supposed to be caused by an earthquake, and it is believed that several hundred natives and several white men have perished.

MAYOR OF NEW YORK WAS PICTURESQUE CHARACTER

Has Loomed up Large in the Affairs of the American Metropolis—Was a Passenger on the Baltic and Had Been in Poor Health.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—William J. Gaynor, mayor of New York, died in mid-ocean on the steamer Baltic at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon of heart failure.

News of his death was received here yesterday in a message by wireless and cable to Robert Adamson, his secretary, by Rufus W. Gaynor, his son, who sailed with him.

The message read as follows:

"Father died Wednesday at one o'clock due to heart failure. Notify mother."

Mayor Gaynor sailed away from New York, a fast-failing man, on the morning of Sept. 4. He felt that the tonic effect of the salt air would restore him in some measure to health.

The Baltic was due at Queenstown to-day. The mayor died as she was nearing the other side. The news of his death was sent by wireless to Crookhaven by Rufus W. Gaynor and relayed from Crookhaven to New York by cable.

Mayor Gaynor left New York at a time when the city was seething in one of the strangest municipal political campaigns in its history. The day before his departure he was notified on the City Hall steps by representatives of independent political organizations that they had chosen him as their standard-bearer in the mayoralty campaign. He had prepared a speech of acceptance, but was so weak that he was unable to deliver it, and his secretary read it for him.

Mayor Gaynor's death was indirectly due to the bullet wound inflicted in his neck on Aug. 9, 1910, by a lunatic, James J. Gallagher. The mayor had suffered from throat trouble more or less ever since.

Though at different times lawyer, newspaper reporter and member of the judiciary, Mayor William J. Gaynor was best known to the public through his vigorous campaigns against corrupt politics and politicians.

In the fall of 1875, soon after his admission to the bar, he distinguished himself by clearing up a ring of corrupt politicians in Flatbush, then a small suburb of Brooklyn.

In the years that followed, Mr. Gaynor fought the elevated railroads and compelled the disgorgement of some $1,000,000 in taxes. He unearthed and brought to naught an attempt to rob the city in connection with the Columbian Celebration in 1893—also a venture of certain Brooklyn politicians who had padded the bills the city were asked to pay, and were about to stuff the surplus into their own pockets. Later he became justice of the Supreme Court, and finally, in 1909, consented to run for the New York mayoralty.

The ensuing campaign resulted in a personal victory for the former justice. He was elected by a majority of 75,000, while the rest of his party went down to defeat.

Mr. Gaynor's administration was marked from the first by conspicuous independence. He set to work at once upon the task of renovating the important branches of the city government, devoting special attention to the police department. He was at the height of his energetic and fearless innovations when the lamentable attack was made upon his life by James Gallagher, a discharged dock department watchman, on Aug. 9, 1910.

Mayor Gaynor's upright bearing, quaint personality, and absolute integrity, have won him a host of friends and his pursuit of graft, and campaign for civic purity, won him the respect of millions.

TWO COMPETITORS ARE MISSING

Crew in Two Hundred Mile Race May be Drowned

Canadian Press Despatch

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—Of the seven crews which competed in the two hundred miles tandem canoe race from Ottawa to Lachine, Bulmer and Spicer, of the Riverside Club, Montreal, finished first. Bradford brothers, of the Ramblers' Club, were ahead at Oaka, but they have not been heard from since, and it is feared they have been drowned.

SHE LEARNED IN A DREAM

Deaf, Dumb and Blind Woman Found How to "Talk."

DENVER, Col., Sept. 12.—A revelation which came to her in a dream in answer to prayers that she might not be shut off forever from communication with her fellow-being, gave Mrs. Ella Clark Bennett, deaf, dumb and blind, according to her belief, an idea which not only has kept her in touch with the world, but will bring the same benefits to thousands afflicted like herself.

"When I lay at the county hospital, with my power to see gradually disappearing, and I realized that it would be a matter of a very short time before I would be totally blind, I prayed and prayed that some means might be found by which I would be able to communicate with those about me," said Mrs. Bennett, in telling of her experience.

"One night I had a dream that showed me the way out of the terrible fate in store for me. I dreamed that if I placed letters like those one finds on a typewriter on my hand and I learned the location of these letters, people touching the letters could spell out words for me and thus talk to me.

"The next day I called for an indelible pencil and marked the letters on my hand, and, with a little practice, I learned to communicate with the people in the hospital. The ink was eventually washed off and I had to find a way to make the letters more permanent. Then I hit upon the idea of painting the letters of the alphabet on a glove. The idea worked to perfection and I was assured of keeping in touch with the world."

BOOKMAKERS IN CUSTODY

Young Montrealer is Accused of Killing Girl.

Canadian Press Despatch.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12 — Nathan Sapiro and Henry Dreyfus, bookmakers, have been arrested in connection with the Ottawa trunk mystery.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—The police yesterday afternoon were working on a new clue in the Rubenstein murder mystery. They have learned that on Thursday, Aug. 28, at midnight he was last seen on Queen street with two negresses and that he was followed by three negroes. The theory is that he was lured to the women's room and there murderd for his mony.

A few hours later a negro in a great state of excitement visited a nearby livery stable and hired a transfer wagon to deliver a trunk. He drove the wagon himself and returned in half an hour. This is now thought to have been the trunk with Rubenstein's body. The liveryman went to Montreal with a detective yesterday afternoon in an effort to identify the negro at Blue Bonnets. Rubenstein's parents arrived from New York yesterday and identified the body.

Italian Under Suspicion.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—That they expected to make an arrest soon was the statement made yesterday by Detective McCaskill, who, with Detective Joliet of Ottawa, is working on the local end of the mystery of the death of Abe Rubenstein.

Both detectives yesterday continued their examination of the race track followers attending the Blue Bonnets meeting who also attended the Ottawa race meeting. They are looking for an Italian who is believed to have quarrelled with Rubenstein over a card game at Windsor, Ont. A close watch has been set on all railway stations to prevent the suspect, who is believed to be still in Montreal, from getting away.

The detectives have received information that the negro women supposed to know something about the mystery had gone to Chambly, Que. They will likely get in touch with them there.

CHARGED WITH THE MURDER

Young Montrealer is Accused of Killing Young Girl.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—"Murder in the first degree," was the verdict of the coroner's jury yesterday afternoon against Pierre Valade, arrested in the case of Ida Robinson, aged 13, found dead on the Notre Dame street pavement on Tuesday night directly under the open window of a room occupied by Valade. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the girl had been assaulted, and that as her hands were already cold when her body was picked up, she might have been dead before being thrown to the street.

Valade claimed that he was out of the room at the time of the alleged murder, and declared that another [illegible]

THE ARREST OF JEROME AS GAMBLER BY THE SHERIFF AT COATICOOK

The photographer caught in the picture the act that set the whole world thinking, Harry K. Thaw snickering— the arrest of William Travers Jerome, of New York, in the Thaw case, for gambling at Coaticook.

PRESENCE OF CANADIANS SCARES THAW'S CAPTOR

EXTRA GUARDS AROUND PRISONER

Bitter Partizan Feeling in Favor of Lunatic Which Was so Strong in Coaticooke is Carried Into Colebrooke by Visit of Twenty-Five Men.

COLEBROOK, N.H., Sept. 12.—Twenty-five Canadians, several of them opponents of Wm. Travers Jerome, after his arrest in Coaticook, Que., last week on a charge of gambling, and others from Sherbrooke, where Harry K. Thaw received such an ovation in court, have followed the fugitive across the border into New Hampshire and revived with their coming the intense partisan feeling so evident while Thaw was in the Dominion.

Jerome denounced one of them in public yesterday.

Their presence in Colebrook enlivened what was otherwise a typical Thaw day for those who have been following the erratic course of Stanford White's slayer since his escape from Matteawan on Sunday morning, Aug. 17. There was no court proceeding, Thaw's arraignment being put off by mutual consent until to-day, and Thaw's lawyers apparently thinking him safer in the custody of the sheriff than at large, abandoned their attempt to release him on a writ of habeas corpus.

The guards about Thaw's hotel were increased last night from twelve to twenty. All were armed and under the direction of Chief of Police Chas. Kelley. The chief appointed his first deputies Wednesday after hearing stories that officers from New York might attempt to spirit Thaw away. He augmented them in the face of rumors that the Canadian contingent might essay the same thing with the idea of snatching Thaw from Jerome's hands and at the same time rebuking high Dominion officials responsible for Thaw's sudden deportation Wednesday morning.

Groups of Canadians stood about the hotel corridors and on the street corners throughout the day and closely followed Thaw on the two trips he made from his room. The first of these was to the barber shop, the second to the office of his chief counsel, Thomas Johnson. Two automobiles, engines running, stood at the curb in front of the office all the time Thaw was within. This so alarmed the police chief that he and his men completely surrounded Thaw when he was brought down, and escorted him to the hotel.

Mr. Jerome spoke with a smile last night of the camp followers from across the border, but added that he had heard apparently authentic reports that some of the more emotional of the Thaw sympathisers from Canada had spoken seriously of liberating him.

Jerome's denunciation of the party from Coaticook occurred in the Monadnock House, where Thaw is housed. The man, a partisan who interested himself in working up evidence against Jerome on the gambling charge of which he was accused, asked to be introduced to him. Jerome looked him over coldly, then spoke acridly, bitterly, of his experience in Coaticook, naming the man as ringleader. There was a moment of strained silence, then Jerome turned his back.

Thaw's progress down Main street to his lawyer's office yesterday afternoon drew the entire village and environs to the scene. Every available vehicle in town was pressed into service; windows along the way were black with heads. Thaw, head erect and smiling, walked beside Sheriff Drew. Behind them trailed the small boys of the village; ahead frisked a small yellow dog, yelping delightedly. From a second storey window a small girl tossed Thaw a bouquet of sweet peas, but there was no cheering.

Counsel [illegible] Be Present.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—When the Thaw proceedings are called in court at Montreal on Monday counsel for the Immigration Department will be present to explain why it will be impossible to obey the writ of habeas corpus and produce the prisoner. Interviews with Thaw's counsel, terming the deportation an outrage and threatening prosecution for contempt, are taken very lightly by the immigration officials. It is pointed out that Thaw's lawyers directed their restraining efforts at subordinate officers and took no legal steps to prohibit the higher authorities from sending him out of the country.

Toronto Negro Accused.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 12.—Norman Clarke, colored, was shot in the back in the hallway of Robt. Wilkins' poolroom, 437 May street, by a man said to be M. M. Proctor, a Toronto negro, who was arrested subsequently in Buffalo. The men quarrelled over a game of craps on Tuesday night. Proctor returned to the poolroom Wednesday night with a suit case. On seeing Clarke, he fired. Clarke may die.

In Vitals of Vesuvius.

NAPLES, Italy, Sept. 12.—Prof. Mercalli, director of the observatory of Mount Vesuvius, together with several professors of the University of Munich, accomplished a daring descent into the crater of the volcano Wednesday. The professors remained inside the crater two hours. The trip occupied eight hours.

The scientists consider that a great re-awakening of the volcano is approaching.

Excellent Potato Crop.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 12.—The standing field crops of Algoma, according to a report yesterday received from J. M. Fenton, who is judging the crops in this district, promises to be far in advance of anything that has been experienced here for some years. The potato crop is especially good, running up as high as 600 bushels to the acre, and of excellent quality. It is estimated that the average for the district will be about 300 bushels to the acre.

Carson Gives 'Em Votes.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The draft of the new constitution which Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists and his colleagues are preparing for the Ulster provisional government provides for votes for women. This announcement has been made in the form of a reply to the Women's Social and Political Union which recently sent a letter to Sir Edward Carson practically demanding equal rights for women, especially the suffrage.

SARNIA, Sept. 12.—One of the oldest residents of Sarnia, in the person of James Macklin, passed away yesterday at the advanced age of 87 years, after a brief illness.

TEMPERANCE AND PARTY POLITICS

In this column last week we ventured to advise the Christian Guardian to keep out of party politics. This week's issue of that Methodist official journal contains an article on the subject dealt with, "Party Politics and Temperance."

The Guardian seems to be taking to heart the repeated defeats of Liberals at the bye-elections, and to be reconsidering its attitude towards the Conservative party.

Hitherto the Guardian has been a Liberal paper, sincerely believing that it was its duty to stand by the party which stands for "reform." But it is possibly coming to see that it is little use standing for a "reform" party that has not the power to bring about a reformation of things.

The Guardian, it is to be feared, does not quite grasp the metaphysical deduction of the Daily Telegraph and the Globe that what Liberalism wants is "not office by power." The editor of the Guardian draws his conclusions on that point from his own experience. He knows he can have no power as an editor if he is put out of office, and he naturally applies this reasoning to the political situation.

If Dr. Creighton was not sincere, and was merely trying to bolster up a sick party, he too would coddle the patient by telling it that it was in a robust and healthy condition and only needed to have faith and it could abolish bars or anything else.

However much the Guardian may believe in faith in spiritual things, it knows that bars are not abolished by faith in a party that is out of office and likely to remain so indefinitely, however much it may prate of "power."

The Guardian is a little too ingenuous for a party organ. It is always falling foul of the sophestries of the Globe, and it may now begin to realize that its own power and influence in temperance and moral questions would be put to a more practical and concrete usefulness by making the best use of the best possible officials to whatever party they may belong. In that policy, and not in party politics and among office seekers, will the Guardian find what power there is to be had.

The Guardian says it would be glad to see the temperance question taken out of party politics, but it complains that the politicians will not do this. The Guardian can do a good deal toward that end by declaring that it is non-party and will support any reasonable reform from whatever quarter it may come. We are all hoping for the millenium but some of us do not believe that the accession of office by the Liberal party will bring it about.

THE WILSON TARIFF

It is not easy to foretell the consequences to President Wilson and the Democratic party. Unlike the Liberal party of Canada he has carried out his pledges and greatly emasculated the fiscal system of Republicans. If the country recognizes that the time for lower duties has come and manufacturers strive to adapt themselves to the new conditions instead of committing themselves to the organization of depression and confusion the President and his party may survive. But it is very difficult to abolish or radically alter an established commercial system and, therefore, far too soon to predict the ultimate result of Democratic action.

Admitted the new tariff greatly affects commercial relations between the United States and Canada. It is curious that in the short course of two years every argument advanced by the opponents of reciprocity against adoption of the Fielding agreement has been justified. Wheat prices have ranged higher at Winnipeg than at Minneapolis. American industries continue to remove into Canada and with these a steady stream of American capital. Nearly all the advantages covered by the agreement are obtained under the Wilson tariff. Thus we are left in a position to maintain reasonable protection for Canadian industries and Canadian agriculture. We may raise or lower duties as we believe to be in the national interest without the interference of a foreign Government. In short we control our own tariff as the people of the United States control their own tariff and this relation gives the surest guarantees of mutual respect, of commercial stability and of national independence—Toronto News.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"I am simply paralyzed!" said J N. Greenshields, K.C., the leader of Thaw's band of lawyers, when he realized that his client was gone. "Paralyzed" was doubtless a mild term. It may be safely conjectured that the legal gentleman's feelings were not fully expressed to his interviewer. The full account of what he said on first hearing the news will never be printed. It would be brief, epigramatic and to the point. Mr. Greenshields does not get hold of such a golden client every day.

Mr. Hassell, the Band Master of the Irish Guards, said he had "skimmed the cream of Canadian kindness"; it was well skimmed by the time he got to Peterborough and he had to be content with skimmed milk.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Permit me through your columns to correct a mistaken impression prevalent in regard to the connection of the Peterborough Health Association with the appearance of Madame Labadie, in the Grand Opera House on Monday evening next.

Madame Labadie comes under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the Peterborough Health Association. The Health Association, although it has at present two district nurses actively engaged in the city, is not making any demand on the public for money at the present time, except in trying to increase its membership. The Ladies' Aid of this Association can neither solicit nor distribute funds for the Association; these are in charge of a Finance Committee, of which Mr. W. H. Dunsford is chairman.

During the summer holidays, however, Mr. Finch Miller and the executive of the Aid, decided that it was in the best interests of all concerned to send a deserted and destitute wife with four small children back to her friends in England. The city had been supplying weekly aid to this family and two of the children were under the care of the Health Association, which supplied the family weekly with fresh milk and eggs. Mr. Miller asked the Ladies' Aid to provide half of the price of the passage money, the city to pay the other half. The whole family had to be provided with suitable clothing, and the executive of the Ladies' Aid borrowed a sum of money, sufficient to carry out its part of the contract. The family was sent comfortably and decently away from our city to England, where we hope relatives will help the deserted wife and mother to care for her children.

Madame Labadie, in her extensive tours through Canada and the U.S.A. has given many of her interpretations under the auspices of some benevolent society, and her advance agent met the executive of the L.A. of the P.H.A. and made a most generous offer, which we accepted, believing the citizens of Peterborough would help us in making this interpretation a success. We selected Percy MacKaye's play, "To-Morrow," as its spirit is directly in harmony with all that makes for physical and moral fitness.

The young men and young women of Peterborough should not miss this opportunity of hearing Madame Labadie interpret this great theme of the building of a better race of men and women. So powerfully, yet so chastely, does she portray the various characters in this play, that in at least two instances she was asked to repeat her interpretation from the pulpit of the church the following Sunday evening.

Yours truly,
ELIZABETH KENDREY.
Pres. of Ladies' Aid.

JAMES FARLEY DEAD.

Professional Strike-Breaker Had a Varied Career.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The death of James Farley, known through years of leadership as a strike-breaker in many cities of Canada and the United States, was reported early yesterday from his home in Plattsburg.

From an altar boy at Malone, N.Y., where he was born 39 years ago, Farley turned to a circus runaway, became manager of an upstate hotel and finally entered the service of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. as a coal passer, from which he emerged in 1895 as the leader of the non-union forces that broke the great Brooklyn car strike. His success in Brooklyn won him fame, and to city after city where labor troubles arose he was called to do similar work.

Farley's profit came by a premium of so much per head paid to him for the men whom he furnished and kept in service during the strikes, and in a few years he grew rich at his newly-created business. He was credited with making $300,000 during the Interborough Rapid Transit strike.

Her Protector

An American Wife In Berlin Shows Ability to Take Care of Herself

By SARAH EHRLICH

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Commander Haverslaugh, U. S. N., went to Berlin as naval attache at the imperial court his daughter, Louise, was just nineteen years old. Though so young, she had been a heart smasher among the cadets at the Naval academy, where her father had been stationed for three years, besides having gone through several campaigns at West Point. She could not help flirting—not that she went out of her way to find any one to flirt with; indeed, there was nothing aggressive about her. The trouble was that every young fellow she met found in her something that acted as an incentive for him to make love to her.

Louise being of a marriageable age while her father was at Berlin, she very naturally married one of the young Germans she met at court, Baron Carl von Hilderschoff, a major in the army and connected with the general staff. Before Commander Haverslaugh would consent to the marriage he told the baron that Louise was a natural flirt, but that her flirtations were innocent and he need have no fear of her disgracing him or herself. The commander exacted a promise that the baron would trust her, relying entirely on her sense of honor and self respect to choose the right path.

It was not long after the marriage that Baron von Hilderschoff was ordered away from Berlin on some temporary duty. There was one man in Berlin, Count Gethart, who had been attentive to Louise before her marriage. This man the baron disliked and distrusted. Before leaving the capital he said to his intimate friend, Captain Manteufel:

"I am obliged to leave my young wife for a few weeks here, and I wish to leave her in your charge. You see, I don't wish her to be lonely. There is one man here I don't like. As soon as I am gone he will attempt to be devoted to her. I wish you to be so attentive to her that he will have no opportunity. You understand?"

"Perfectly. And I feel very much flattered at your confidence in me. Who is the man?"

"Count Gethart."

"H'm! You are quite right; he is a dangerous man. Is your wife to know of your placing her in my care?"

"Well, no. I don't suppose there will be any necessity for you to interfere in the matter. It is only in case Gethart becomes aggressive, you know."

"I see. Well, old fellow, I promise to do the best I can in the matter, though I do not expect any action on my part will be necessary."

Von Hilderschoff departed, and Manteufel called upon the baroness. Indeed, he made several calls, and to give an excuse for doing so he told her that her husband, fearing she would be lonely during his absence, had asked him to drop in once in awhile to cheer her up.

Now, Louise, being an American with plenty of American shrewdness, suspected that something had passed between her husband and his friend of which she had not been made aware by the latter. If the captain's good offices were to be confined to keeping her from being lonely her husband would have told her that he had made such a request of his friend. When a woman wishes to get a secret she usually succeeds. It was not long before she had wormed out of Manteufel that he had been commissioned to protect her from Count Gethart.

Commander Haverslaugh's warning had not been heeded.

It so happened that Von Gethart met his old flame at a social function the very evening after Manteufel had "let the cat out of the bag." She was very gracious to him and danced with him. Manteufel saw them together and as soon as the dance was over joined them. Louise straightway dismissed Gethart and walked away on the arm of Manteufel.

Manteufel treated her during the rest of the evening as he would have treated a schoolgirl who had been placed under his orders and had been disobedient. She seemed to be very penitent and promised not to do so any more. Not only this—the next day she wrote a note to her protector expressing more penitence.

That the baroness' penitence was only skin deep was evident from the fact that she saw as much of Von Gethart as of Manteufel. The latter, still insensible to the fact that his interest in his charge was rather for himself than her husband, protested to the baroness against her accepting attentions from a man her husband disliked and distrusted. The baroness claimed that she could not decline them without giving offense. From this moment the bitter feelings that had entered the breast of Manteufel were turned principally against the man instead of the woman.

Meanwhile the baroness was writing loving letters to her husband, in which she never failed to mention the many kind acts of his friend Manteufel. She also wrote that she had met Gethart at a social function and that he had called upon her. This, she said, had seemed to excite the disapprobation of Manteufel. She did not like to repulse Gethart, fearing to make trouble. She longed for the day when her husband would return and relieve her of an embarrassing position. To this the baron replied that he would be at home on a certain date, arriving on a midnight train.

The evening of Von Hilderschoff's expected arrival the baroness wrote a note to her protector and one to the man from whom she was being protected, asking them to call upon her. They met. The scowl that lowered upon Manteufel's brow was like a thunderstorm in the Alps. Believing that he acted in the interest of his friend instead of from the promptings of jealousy, forgetting that he had not been commissioned to pick a quarrel with the man his friend disliked, he walked right into a trap and before he had been in Von Gethart's presence half an hour had in the most gentlemanly manner in the world insulted him. It happened in this wise:

"I do not think," said the baroness, "that your men in Germany have the respect, the reverence, for women our men in America have."

"You are right, baroness," said Manteufel, looking fiercely at Gethart. "We have here in Berlin men who would not hesitate to take advantage of a woman left unprotected by her husband."

A brief silence marked this throwing down the gauntlet, after which the lady turned the conversation into other channels. A few minutes later Gethart bowed himself out, and the baroness indicated to Manteufel that she would prefer to be alone. As soon as he had gone she called in a manservant and said to him:

"Heinrich, I have a very delicate job for you."

"What is it, baroness?"

"Count Gethart and Captain Manteufel are about to fight a duel. I wish you to inform me as to the time and place of the meeting."

"I could not well do that, baroness, except that the valet of Count von Gethart is my friend. This may help me out."

At 12 midnight Baron von Hilderschoff returned and found his wife waiting to greet him.

"Well," he said after exhausting ordinary matters that had occurred during his absence, "how about this Von Gethart? Has he been offensive in his attentions?"

"Not at all, but your friend Captain Manteufel has been more loyal to you during your absence than has been necessary."

"How so?"

"He evidently knows that you don't like the count and has assumed to keep him away from me."

"So?"

"Yes. They met here this evening. Manteufel insulted Von Gethart, and they are going to fight."

"So?" repeated the baron, opening his eyes very wide.

"Yes. The affair will be the talk of Berlin."

"Great heaven!" exclaimed the baron.

"We must interfere."

"How?"

"I have sent Heinrich to discover the time and place. I am expecting him back every moment."

"Himmel, may he be successful!"

It was 2 o'clock when Heinrich returned, and all he knew was that a carriage had been ordered by Count von Gethart to be at his door at 4 o'clock in the morning. But this was not enough. The baron and his wife ordered their own carriage to be ready at half past 3, drove to a point near the count's residence, saw him leave and followed him to a grove near the city, where his carriage stopped and he and a companion alighted. Another carriage had just arrived. The baron and baroness alighted some distance from the others. The day was breaking when they saw two men taking positions for a duel. Then they advanced.

"Gentlemen," cried the baron, "will you kindly inform me as to the cause of this quarrel?"

Both men, astonished, stood mute.

"I have been informed by the baroness," continued Von Hilderschoff, "that there has been trouble between you two. If my wife has anything to do with it I beg you to put up your swords. Neither of you need be concerned about her. I alone assume to defend her."

Both the men addressed looked as if they wished the earth would open and swallow them, but it was Manteufel who seemed especially crushed. He had gone on the field believing that he was protecting his friend's wife but cherished a hope that knowledge of the quarrel might never reach his friend.

"Gentlemen," said the baroness with a certain sweetness that never deserted her, "we should be pleased to see you both at dinner this evening."

"You are very kind, but"— began the count.

"Really, baroness, you must excuse"— began the captain. But the lady simply put them both in the position of being ungallant if they declined, and both gave a reluctant acceptance.

The party left the field in the conveyances by which they had come. After a brief nap the baron, at his wife's request, called upon Gethart and Manteufel and persuaded them to meet as friends at her house.

"Something of this may leak out," he said, "and if you two men meet at dinner under my roof the story will be nipped in the bud."

This was an argument that struck home with both the men addressed, and in the evening they met at the dinner under at least the guise of ordinary friendliness.

The next day the baroness sent Captain Manteufel the letters he had written her during her husband's absence, and, reading them over, he was astonished to see that he had shown every evidence of jealousy and infatuation for his charge.

PRINCE JOHN GLAD.

King's Youngest Son Glories in the Fact That He's a Boy.

Prince John, the youngest son of the King and Queen, recently celebrated his eighth birthday. Prince John is a very, very human little boy. Sometimes when he has been more than usually boyish the name "Demon" has been whispered by relations who regard him as a sort of charming enfant terrible.

Not so long ago he was in deep disgrace. He managed to get hold of Princess Mary's paint-box, and enjoyed himself hugely by decorating his face with brilliant stripes of color. Thus ornamented, he reached the dining-room, where the King and Queen were entertaining a distinguished party to luncheon! Exit the Prince.

Prince John is afraid of no one. His only fear is to displease his mother. "I thought you meant to be good during Lent, John," Her Majesty said. "And so I did, mother; but you never told me when I promised that Lent was going to be so long," was the reply.

On another occasion a young matron was having tea with the Queen. She was very anxious to renew acquaintance with Prince John, and so the Queen sent for him. He was very pleasant and polite when he came, and, his salutations over, he amused himself as he pleased, while the Queen and her guest took no further notice of him.

Meanwhile, the Prince climbed upon an ottoman behind where the guest sat, and was admiring a diamond ornament in the back of her hair. When the guest rose to leave a disconcerting sight met her glance. On her chair were several golden curls, Prince John having employed his time in unfastening the hairpins that had held them.

The little Prince and his nursery governess used to be seen sometimes in Buckingham Palace Road and in the Green Park, his Royal Highness liking to see life beyond the limits of the palace gardens. Near Buckingham Palace was a flower woman, who was an old acquaintance of the Prince.

He always passed the time of day with her as he went by, and as he did so invariably took off his hat. And it was because of this salute that the elastic which his hat was fastened had to be removed so as to give him scope to express his chivalrous intentions.

"Why does Mary wear a hat with a feather winding round it?" he demanded the other day, as his sister and the King and Queen were about to start off from Buckingham Palace. "Girls have to wear queer things; I'm glad I'm a boy."—Daily Mirror.

Knew Nothing of Golf.

Now that ladies have their own golf championships, their own clubs, and even a journal devoted to their doings on the links, it is a little difficult to believe that less than twenty years ago the majority of womankind knew nothing about the game, except that it took their husbands and brothers away from home a good deal.

A correspondent sends the Glasgow Herald some anecdotes of that period. One lady, making sympathetic conversation at dinner, said to a keen golfer: "I often see you in your red coat. Do you need many dogs to play golf?"

A younger lady said she knew exactly how the game was played. "They get what they call caddies to hunt about in the grass till they find a round stone, and then they hit it into a rabbit hole."

A third lady, who had evidently enjoyed a nearer view of the game, said: "It is played by two men. One is a gentleman and the other is a common man. The common man sticks a ball on a lump of dirt, and the gentleman knocks it off."

To Rob Holland of the Rhine.

That their great river should at last dribble to the sea through a number of mouths in foreign territory has long been a cause of sentimental regret to the German people. A society has now been formed at Coblentz to correct this mistake of nature.

It urges that the Rhine, instead of flowing as it does, northwest through the Netherlands, ought to flow from Duisburg, in Rhenish Prussia, northwest of Emden, the most westerly port of the German empire. The distance would be about 150 miles, and no locks would be needed.

A canal that would cost $187,500,000 is asked for and it is said that such a waterway would capture the traffic which now goes to Rotterdam and the Maas, and that in a few years Emden would become a world port.

A year ago the Prussian minister of public works announced that the government regarded the project favorably and had it under consideration. The new society starts under favorable auspices.

"Pussy's" Whiskers.

Because a cat can go about so safely and rapidly in the dark without injury to himself or without running into things, nearly everyone believes it is due entirely to the fact that he sees with his eyes in the dark. That a cat can see, to a certain extent, in the dark is quite true, but it is doubtful if he could go about so rapidly in total darkness were it not for his long whiskers, and you will see they are always as long, generally longer, as his head is wide, and a cat's head is as wide as his body. These delicate hairs that project from the muzzle of the cat family are wonderful mechanisms, says the "Port Elizabeth (South Africa) Observer." Its slightest contact with any obstacle is instantly felt by the animal, though the hair itself may be tough and insensible.

Why Thunder Is So Loud.

Experiments made in the Jefferson physical laboratory by Professor Trowbridge of Harvard university show that the astounding noise of a lightning discharge is largely due to the dissociation of water vapor through the explosion of the hydrogen and oxygen gases produced by such dissociation. In his mimic lightning experiments the authority referred to has produced a torrent of huge electric sparks. The noise of the discharge was so great that the operator had to stop his ears with cotton and then wrap a heavy cloth round them.—Boston Post.

Peterboro's Population Increased by Fair Visitors

Thousands of visitors gathered in the city to-day to attend the exhibition, and with a continuance of the fine weather , Peterborough's big fair should add another big stride along the path of progress.

All the trains brought many people this morning, and the steamers Geneva and Rainbow from Rice Lake points had passengers to the number of 125 and 100 respectively. Another excursion boat from Bobcaygeon and other points was due to arrive at the dock at about 2.30 this afternoon.

MAGISTRATE ORDERS THAT GOODS BE RETURNED

Mr. Gordon Thinks That Attorney Generals Department is Big Joke to Which Mr. Ruddy Retorts 'When People Dont Get What They Want"

Another chapter of the McIlmoyle case was rehearsed in Police Court this morning over the restoration of of the goods that were alleged to have been taken from the complainant husband by the wife while he was confined to the hospital.

McIlmoyle had the police remove the goods from where the wife had them, and store them at the police station. This morning the magistrate made an offer to have these goods restored to Mrs. McIlmoyle.

During the time His Worship was making out an order, a hot dispute arose between G. N. Gordon, counsel for the husband and R. Ruddy, K.C., counsel for the wife.

At the last hearing of the case before the Magistrate, both counsels handed out a few bouquets of rather uncomplimentary nature.

Mr. Ruddy—"I believe my learned friend wrote the Attorney General's department about this case."

Mr. Gordon—"The Attorney General's department is the biggest joke of all."

Mr. Ruddy—"Sometimes when people don't get what they want."

"Mr Gordon—"It's like the rest of the departments."

Mr Ruddy—"I hope the newspapers publish that."

Mr. Gordon—"So do I."

Mr Gordon—"Anyway, I don't try to work my cases through the newspapers as some counsels do."

The dispute was dropped here by Mr. Ruddy leaving the room."

MEN TIPSY IN DRY TOWN

Their Horse Must Have Been Jagged Too

ONE FINE OF $20

NORWOOD, Sept. 12— Two Havelock men, Cephas Munro and Jas. Disper got into a tangle here at the bridge on Victoria street, when returning from Hastings with a quantity of "John Barleycorn." Their horse turned down into the watering place at the creek, and plunged into a thicket of bushes breaking the harness and buggy and getting badly tangled up. Constable Puffer was notified of the disturbance and arrested Munro, who was charged the next morning by License Inspector Williams, with being found in an intoxicated condition, contrary to section 141 of the Liquor License Act. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $20 and costs. In his sworn statement Munro said that he bought a bottle of whiskey at the Spellman House at Hastings. His companion Disper also bought a case of lager from the bartender at the same hotel, which he brought over in his (Munro's) buggy. The liquor was seized here at the time of the arrest by Constable Puffer. Disper also testified to purchasing the lager from the bartender and said he told him he was buying the lager to take home.

It is understood that proceedings against the Hastings hotel for violation of the law will be instituted by the License Department.

FUNERAL OF LATE JAMES McNULTY

Large Number of Friends Pay Their Last Respects

The Norwood Register has the following to say of the funeral on Tuesday, of the late James McNulty who was murdered near Edmonton:

The funeral was very largely attended the cortege extending over half a mile. St Paul's church in this village, where the service was held was filled with sympathetic friends who had assembled to show their respect for the bereaved family and for the young man who had been so cruelly cut down by an unknown assassin.

Requiem High Mass was said by the Rev. Father McNulty, of Owen Sound brother of the deceased. He was assisted by the pastor the Rev. Father Kelly. Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore, an intimate friend of the family and who knew the deceased from his boyhood, preached a very fitting sermon, in which he endeavored to comfort the sorrowing family and at the same time to admonish the living not to put off the time of preparation for the life that is to come.

Rev. Father O'Leary of Bracebridge a cousin of the deceased, was also present.

After the service the remains were conveyed to the R. C. cemetery west of the village, and interred in the family plot.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. M. English, E. Fitzpatrick, Richard Heffernan, Patrick O'Connor, John English and Frank Devlin .

Blind Organist Tells How He Accomplishes His Work

Mr. Herbert C. Treneer, the blind organist at St Andrew's church has been in Toronto for the convention of Canadian organists, which closed yesterday.

The Mail and Empire says Mr Treneer aroused much interest by describing the manner in which he accomplishes his work. Practically all his music has been copied by himself from dictation, and he has to memorize it, learning the parts separately, one hand playing while the other follows the music.

SNAP-SHOTS AT THE EXHIBITION

(From Press Tent)

This is an ideal day for the Fair it is in fact a fair day.

• • •

There are just enough clouds in the sky to save the ladies putting up their sunshades.

• • •

It was predicted by the weather man yesterday that we would have showers to-day; he must have meant showers of blessing.

• • •

Mr Callander, the assistant secretary, said things were going fine. He was being "rushed" all the time and he liked it.

• • •

Mr. Hall, the secretary, was worth robbing this morning, but he had a tight fist on the dollars.

• • •

Everybody seems to want Mr Hall and he seemed to be Hall over the place.

• • •

There was a good discussion in the "Separator" tent this morning on the relative merits of the different machines.

• • •

One good lady asked if they had one that would separate the cream of her husband's pocket.

• • •

One show man insisted on calling attention to his Teddy Bears; "Hay! the great big Teddy bears!"

• • •

There was a scarcity of beef in Peterborough a short time ago; there is no scarcity now in the south-end.

• • •

Some of the bulls looked as if they might pass Mr. Spence, the inspector. He would rather let them pass than try to stop them.

• • •

2 o'clock—still they come! All the world and his wife are out to-day, and the clouds are clearing and the sun has got a broad smile on.

• • •

"Ho! that Teddy Bear!"

• • •

"Come and see the largest snake in the world!"

• • •

"The only big show on the grounds ten cents all the way through!"

• • •

There are some fine cattle, some noble horses this year, but the best part of the show is the display of beautiful ladies and happy children.

• • •

Perhaps the children enjoy the Fair better than anyone else. We are all children on Fair Day.

• • •

The Press man is the proverbial "Dog at the Fair."

• • •

"32 feet long, and around the belly, 48 inches" That was what the show-man said about the snake.

• • •

The Methodists, Anglicans and the Baptists are supplying the loaves and fishes to the hungry thousands and gathering in the "fragments."

• • •

To-night will be the best of it.

• • •

"Everbody loves a Teddy Bear!" is the dogmatic assertion of the man next to the press tent. And the pressman has no time to argue the point with him.

• • •

"This is going to be a record day" said the assistant secretary.

• • •

There is a bigger collection of cattle this year. Another tent has had to be put up to accommodate them.

• • •

If you are fond of bacon, keep your eye open for the "Improved Chester Hogs," they are good for breakfast—sliced and fried.

• • •

These hogs have never appeared at the Peterborough Fair before. William Roberts & Son are introducing them into this district.

• • •

There are more pedigreed heavy horses this year.

• • •

"Have you been to see the cocks and hens?"

"Yes, I took first prize with a game rooster."

"Well don't crow about it."

• • •

Who will appear at The Grand Opera House next Thursday in her famous role "Peter Pan."

DEATH OF MRS. HAROLD JARVIS

The Loss of Her Only Child Hastened the End

Mrs. Harold Jarvis, wife of the well known tenor, died yesterday at the family residence, 39 Atkinson street, Detroit.

Mrs. Jarvis had been ill for over a year and a half, and it is thought that grief on account of the death of her only child, Harold Reginald Jarvis, in Germany three years ago, contributed to her demise.

Mrs. Jarvis was a daughter of Dr. W. B. Geikie, late Dean of the Medical faculty of Trinity College, Toronto, and married Mr. Jarvis in Toronto twenty-one years ago.

Besides her husband, two brothers and one sister survive.

Stanley Gorman, aged 22, son of Mr. Thos. Gorman, 313 Rubidge st., died this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's cemetery.

A little sugar, a pinch of soda and a bit of onion all mixed up with a very little water, added to the water in which string beans are cooked will improve the flavor.

The Voice of Mary Etta

It Proves a Safeguard In Time of Need

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Never mind, Ben," encouraged Mary Etta as her husband shrugged into his overcoat and picked up his hat, "everything will come out all right in the end. All the other farmers in the county have met with the same failure that we have, only you've got the best of most of them. You've got your trade to fall back on."

The sullen expression deepened on Ben Madison's handsome face. "It isn't so easy going back to work under a foreman after being my own boss for five years," he said bitterly.

Mary Etta winced. "I know it, dear. But suppose you didn't have a trade and couldn't make up this winter for your losses of last summer. Mr. Fray has promised you steady work at $2.50—that's $15 a week. Why, it will pay the interest and taxes for a year, besides paying all our living expenses and giving you a splendid start for the spring. You might be able to buy another cow."

"I know all the advantages," said Ben impatiently. "But you don't understand how I feel about it, Mary Etta! It's sort of admitting I've failed on the farm, just as your father said I would."

His wife's eyes flashed strangely. "You don't understand father, dear. He has already admitted he was mistaken in his estimate of you, for you have done splendidly—no one can deny that—and who could prevent the long drought we have suffered? I know he'd think it was splendid of you to pitch in and make the farm pay by doing everything you could this winter."

Ben turned away, a discouraged droop to his shoulders. Of course Mary Etta didn't know that he had gone to her father the night before and asked him for a loan of $500 to tide them over the winter and spring—in fact, until his crops would begin to pay along in May and June, for his market garden and forcing house had proved a very paying branch of the Madison farm.

He reddened resentfully as he remembered how old Peter Lloyd's white eyebrows had lifted incredulously when his son-in-law asked for the loan. "No, Ben," Peter had said slowly; "I'm not saying I ain't got the money, for I have, but I guess I'll keep it awhile longer. If Mary Etta was a widow, now, and needed my help it would be different. You're a strong man, and you've done well so far. It would only weaken you to borrow this money of me. Find a way out yourself. You'll be the better off for it in the end, and I wish you good luck. If you was sick or there was an accident of some kind I'd be the first one on hand to help you out. As it is, you and Mary Etta have started out for yourselves, and you're both capable of fighting it out to the end—same as the rest of us have to do."

Ben Madison thought of this conversation with increasing anger as he trudged down the frosty road that led to Fray's planing mill. The only alternative left to him had been to seek a job at Fray's, where its owner had told him there were sufficient orders ahead to keep a good workman like Ben busy all winter making sashes and blinds for the spring building trade. Now he was going down to tell Fray he would take the job. There were others waiting for the opportunity, but Fray had promised Ben the first chance.

When he reached the road that turned down to the mill he hesitated and then walked slowly on, head down, moodily thinking. At last he came to the railroad station, where a few loungers awaited the passing of the noon train. Ben looked down the shining length of track that led to the city beyond. There might be opportunities for other work than that he had left behind when he married Mary Etta five years ago. He had hated the bench work, the long hours and the carrying of the dinner pail. They chafed his Madison pride. Ben was the last of his family, and all the pride of the Madisons seemed concentrated in this young man with the strong, broad shoulders and the bitterly drooping mouth, who imagined he had made a failure of life.

As the whistle of the approaching train shrieked from some distant crossing Ben Madison seemed to make up his mind to some course of action. He glanced quickly at the loungers congregated about the station stove and stepped out of the station house and walked up the track to the raised platform where there was a little heap of baggage. He pulled his hat down over his eyes and muttered under his breath: "I just can't go back to the bench again. I'll get something to do in the city and send for Mary Etta to come. I can write to her when I get there and tell her how it is. She'll understand."

When he was in the train he tried to persuade himself that Mary Etta would understand just how he felt and look on his decision in exactly the same manner that he did. Mary Etta had pride too. He had taken her from a comfortable home, where as the only daughter of a well to do farmer she had had little hard work and many luxuries. All of these things she had gladly given up to marry the man she loved, and Ben prided himself on the fact that by the work of his hands

Mary Etta had not had to do as much drudgery as many of his neighbors' wives. She had help in her housecleaning, and whenever there was extra work to be done she had a woman to do her washing and ironing and scrubbing. And yet Mary Etta looked very tired this fall. Indeed, there was a faded look about her usually blooming face that Ben did not understand and secretly worried about. And yet his anxiety was not so great as his pride. He could support his wife, but he would do it in his own way. They would board all winter in the city where he could get fine wages, and in the spring they would return to the farm.

Once in the city streets he did not know which way to turn to look for work. By the time he had bought a morning newspaper and hunted its columns in vain for advertisements requiring the especial services he had to offer he was ravenously hungry. When he had appeased his healthy appetite he was troubled at the inroads made upon his little store of money, and this money had been a sum that Mary Etta had produced from some secret hiding place, for their money in the savings bank had been drawn upon to meet necessary expenses.

Mary Etta was a wonderful manager he thought as he left the eating place and walked aimlessly down the street. She had planned and contrived all through the autumn months while the dread of going back to the bench still hung like a dark cloud over him.

He paused in front of a gaudily painted doorway and read the posters of a moving picture show. In a few moments he had yielded to the temptation to enter and found himself seated well down in front in the long, narrow theater. At the moment there were being produced the pictures of a thrilling rescue from flames as a tall tenement house burned.

Ben watched breathlessly and cheered as heartily as the rest when the last picture faded away. He did not look at the card announcing the next production. The theater was warm, and he was removing his overcoat.

When he looked up he heard the faintly familiar sounds of an organ reproduced from a large phonograph on the stage, and there flashed into view on the curtain a scene that took his breath away and left him sitting in stunned silence while it lasted.

Before him was the interior of the village church at home, rows and rows of familiar heads, while up in the pulpit the thin, angular form of the new minister sat stiffly on the red velvet sofa, while the choir grouped on his left were singing.

He saw his own grave face beside young Harry Fray, the tenor. He saw Mrs. Phillips, the pastor's wife, and Mary Etta. Mary Etta, looking very sweet and girlish, was singing, and the others should have been joining in the refrain, for their mouths were opened. But it was only Mary Etta who sang, her sweet, high voice rising like that of an angel to the very roof of the church even now as it was reproduced from the phonograph and floated above the heads of the mixed audience, who hung breathlessly upon every word she sang. Now and then there was a strangled sob as the meaning of the song was borne to the hearts of the hearers and touched some tender chord.

Ben listened, seeming to hear the broken trill of a robin from the churchyard outside, as had happened the last time Mary Etta had sung that old Scotch hymn "My Ain Countrie:"

I am far frae my hame, an' I'm weary aftenwhiles
For the langed for hame bringing an' my Faither's welcome smiles,
An' I'll ne'er be fu' content until mine een do see
The gowden gates o' heav'n an' my ain countrie.

When the last note had died away amid a silence that was more eloquent than the noisiest applause Ben found his way to the management of the theater and was sent to the people from whom the picture films had been purchased. There, after many explanations and some delay, he was informed that the pastor had granted permission for the picture to be taken from the back gallery the spring before and that Mary Etta had been approached and asked to sing the song into a phonograph. This she had at first refused to do, and then, tempted by the money offered, she had consented and had made several trips to the city to sing many other well known songs to be reproduced for the entertainment of the public.

That explained to Ben Madison how it was that in spite of the scant returns from the farm that summer there had always been plenty on his table, while his store bills had been promptly met. The shadow in Mary Etta's face was probably the reflection of her troubled conscience, for her gentle heart must have suffered at deceiving her proud young husband.

Thrilled with self contempt, Ben Madison hurried home on the last train that night and awoke the astonished Mr. Fray from his early sleep. Then he went on to his home, where Mary Etta was waiting anxiously for his return.

"Hurray!" cried Ben joyously. "I got the job all right, Mary Etta. I'm going to work tomorrow morning. You got something for my lunch?"

"Lots," said Mary Etta, smiling through her tears. "Do you mind going back to the bench, dear?" she asked.

Then it was that Ben told her of his day's experience. "Gee, Mary Etta," he said in wonder as he concluded, "I don't see how you stood my foolish pride as long as you did! But you're the stuff. My pride's changed to another kind, and I'll work my fingers off one way or another till we pull out."

"Why, I loved you, Ben," said Mary contentedly. "That's why it was easy to do."

"You'll see how much I love you then," threatened her husband happily.

Kettlewell, in Yorkshire, possesses the most remarkable electric lighting installation in England. The village is only a tiny place, but the River Wharfe provides it with natural water power, and at a cost of less than £600 a lighting plant has been erected, the villagers being the shareholders and directors of the company.

Poor Apple Crop Reported.

GUELPH, Sept. 12.—From reports that have reached the city during the past few days there will be a scarcity of good apples during the coming winter.

Dealers paid a visit to the farms in the townships of Puslinch and Nassagaweya during the week and report the apples a poor crop. There are very few No. 1 apples at all and the No. 2 and No. 3 grades will be light. This applies both to fall and to winter apples. The cause is attributed to a backward spring and exceptionally dry weather.

The Colvert apple, which is usually large, will be small this year with but very little color in it, while the same thing may be said of the spy, the snow and others. The greenings will be the best crop of any, and they will hardly be up to the usual standard.

Mongolia.

In the map of Asia an important change has occurred. The vast region of Mongolia has ceased to be a part of China and is now independent. The Mongols are chiefly famous in the world's history as invaders and conquerors in Asia and eastern Europe. They were vassals of the late Manchu dynasty, but not of the Chinese government, and their separation from China resulted automatically from the proclamation of a republic. Their secession from China was aided by Russia, which thus secures a "buffer state" on its Chinese frontier.

Remained a Commoner.

The fact that Mr. Joseph Chamberlain recently celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday reminds one that although he might have gone to the House of Lords if he had liked, he has preferred, like Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Balfour, to remain a great Commoner. He still remains a member of Parliamentment, although his health has not permitted him to participate in political work for a number of years. He is spending the evening of his days in quiet retirement at his beautiful Highbury residence, tenderly and devotedly cared for by his clever wife.

THERE was a time when people imagined that the so-called bargain hunter was a fit subject for the joke-writer.

THE SPORTING WORLD

TWO CLUBS MAY BE DROPPED FROM CANADIAN LEAGUE

It is probable that a Canadian League meeting will be called within the next two weeks to discuss several important matters dealing with the changes in the circuit.

Since the announcement that the Hamilton franchise was for sale the present owners of the club have been deluged with offers for it. Offers have come from all over Ontario, and several from the States, but an effort is being made to sell it in Hamilton. The leaguers is of the opinion that a stock company of Hamilton capitalists should be formed to take over the club, as a club generally does better under local capital. There will be little trouble in forming such a company, and the Ambitious City will likely have one of the best teams in the circuit next season.

NIAGARA AND ERIE FAVORED.

President Fitzgerald is strongly in favor of dropping Guelph and Berlin and replacing them with Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Erie, Pa. These two cities would likely raise the classification of the league to Class B, and it is probable that the salary limit would also be raised. Niagara Falls is open territory, and the Canadian League can secure it easily, but Erie has a Central League franchise at present and arrangements will have to be made with the Central League club there.

HANDICAP TENNIS TOURNEY

To be Held at Courts of Bowling Association

A handicap bowling tournament for the members of the Peterborough Bowling Association will start to-morrow at the bowling green the prize being donated by Mr. R. M. Waddell, president of the Bowling Association. The draw will be published to-morrow.

When serving greens, put a piece of bread or toast in the bottom of the dish. No matter how well drained the greens, there is apt to be superfluous moisture. The bread or toast will absorb this and so improve the dish.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Philadelphia Sporting Life.

When class A and B managers are making their 1913 draft selections don't overlook that little celebrity Marty Killilea, who has performed so brilliantly at the keystone sack for the Hamilton club. Marty has a think tank chuck full of baseball intelligence, is an excellent fielder, a .300 bludgeon walloper, and is one of the speediest base runners in America. His work against the Detroit Americans spoke volumes of praise for the clever second sacker from Faermville, Mass.

"Jinx" in the London Advertiser, writes an argument for a longer season in the Canadian League. If "Jinx" wrote baseball in Brantford this summer, he would want the season closed at July 12.—Brantford Courier.

FREE USE OF SWIMMING POOL OF THE Y.M.C.A.

In connection with the free use of the swimming bath, accorded by the Young Men's Christian Association of this city, the following from an Ottawa exchange will be interesting:

During May, June, July and August 17,215 persons used the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool, which was thrown open to the public at the request of the city. Of this number 16,552 were boys and 6,663 men.

The expense to the city of taking care of the bath for July and August was $267.50

The Y.M.C.A. officials report that during the entire summer not a single case of theft occurred at the bath, and the promised police protection was not required.

WM. KELLY IS GATHERED IN

He Takes Another Vacation at Castle Nesbitt

Once more, Wm. Kelly, an old timer, fell from grace, and as a result he got drunk yesterday and was on the carpet this morning on the charge of being drunk in a public place.

As Kelly has made a regular appearance at the police station, the Chief had him remanded for a week in order to look up Kelly's past history. Kelly is a backwoodsman and is often arrested for being drunk. He managed to get out of jail on Wednesday after serving a short period for his spree.

Rapture.

He held her hand and pressed it oft,
  As lovers sometimes do.
She made no protest, for she liked
  To have him come to woo.
He spoke with fervent eloquence
  About her beauty rare
And praised in turn her grace, her wit,
  Her eyes, her lips, her hair.

He said no other girl till then
  Had ever touched his heart.
He vowed that she would be to him
  A sacred thing apart
From all the world, that she would hold
  Him always in her thrall,
That no one was so sweet as she—
  And she believed it all!

Tantalum.

Tantalum, regarded as a rare metal, is becoming cheaper and is being tried for razors and surgical instruments. It seems to be superior to fine steel. A thread of tantalum, almost too fine to be seen by the naked eye, supports great weight; also makes fine filament for incandescent lamps and is more economical than carbon.

CHANGES ON IMPERATOR

Biggest Ship to be Rebuilt —Millionaire's Suites Unprofitable

TO BURN OIL

BERLIN, Sept. 12—The "Imperator," which is to be withdrawn from the New York service in October, will have to be partially rebuilt.

Her boilers have proven deficient and the boiler room will be entirely reconstructed. She will also be equipped for oil fuel.

The luxurious millionaire suites have been found unprofitable and will be replaced by a large number of small staterooms.

The day of gigantic liners is declared to be over, and the companies must adopt a policy of moderate sized boats.

OTHER MAN PAID BUT HE DRANK

Blacklister Had Novel Scheme to Quench His Thirst

IT COST HIM $10

Arthur Kennedy, a blacklister, appeared in police court this morning on the charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10.

Kennedy was then called into the witness box to explain how he got drunk while on the Indian list.

Witness gave an elaborate description of how he went into the Palace Hotel yesterday, to get a five dollar bill changed. While in there he met a man who treated him to a cigar. "The man's name was Charlie Rex," said the witness. According to Kennedy's story the other man would order a lager and he (Kennedy) would take a cigar. While While the other man was paying for the lager he would take the lager and drink it. He did this several times.

He also admitted bringing some whiskey home from Toronto on Labor Day, and further that Mr. Clastoran told him to leave the bar which he did.

Chief Thompson—Look here, Kennedy, you don't mean to tell us that you would steal another man's drink?

"He didn't mind, as he knew how it was," replied Kennedy.

"You got in trouble the other time in the Palace Hotel."

"I guess I did."

Kennedy appeared in Court a few weeks ago on the same charge and on his refusal to tell where he got his liquor, was remanded to jail for a few days, after which he came to the conclusion that he had better tell.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE

Killing of Explorers in North to be Probed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—To investigate the facts in connection with the murder at Bathurst Inlet by Eskimos of H. V. Radford, explorer, and his companion, George Street of Ottawa, a special patrol of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, under the direction of F. J. A. Demers, superintendent commanding the Hudson Bay district, has been despatched to the scene of the tragedy under the command of Sergt. Edgerton. The patrol will make the journey via Chesterfield Inlet, Baker Lake, Schultz Lake, Beverly Lake, and thence across country to Bathurst Inlet, Kahmuk, and an Eskimo trader will go as guide.

The patrol which has been sent will be strong enough to make any necessary arrests, which it is expected will be numerous if reports are correct. It is expected that the natives may resist arrest, and it is considered impossible to depend upon local help. It is thought likely that the patrol will remain in the country at least a year, if not two.

Though the primary object of the patrol will be to investigate in connection with the murder of Radford and Street and to make arrests of the guilty persons, it will have other work to do in addition. The tribe which is involved in the murder is known as the Killmonuits, and its members live in the country south of Coronation Gulf and along the Thelon River.

Reports have just been received by Comptroller Fortesque of a sanguinary and murderous battle which is said to have taken place among the Eskimos of the district two winters ago. A statement from H. H. Hall, in charge of the Hudson Bay post at Fort Hall, 200 miles north of Brochet, contains an account of the fight obtained from traveling Eskimos. At a place northwest of the Dubaunt River country every male member of a band of inhabitants of that region engaged in a battle with bows and arrows, spears and knives, during which 28 men fell.

Murder Report Confirmed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—Further confirmation was received at the mounted police department here yesterday of the reported murder by Eskimos of H. V. Radford of New York, and George Street of Ottawa. Two reports agreeing on the main points, with earlier versions, were received one from the mounted police sergeant at Fort Churchill and the other from the head of the Hudson Bay post at Chesterfield Inlet. They relate the stories as told by Eskimos of the death of the two men near Bathurst Inlet. The names of the two Eskimo murderers are also given.

Her Bright New Cook.

Mrs. Blank prided herself on her ability to retain her servants, and she had just been bragging about the treasure she had in her new colored cook when the following dialogue occurred:

"Now, Amaranth, I'll come out and fry the chicken, but I want you to have it all ready for me. Dress it carefully and be sure to singe off every hair."

"Yas'm."

"Then cut it up just as I showed you the other day. Do you remember?"

"Yas'm."

"Wash and drain it well. You understand?"

"Yas'm." Then, as an afterthought, "Shall I kill it?"—Circle Magazine.

Color Cures.

Dr. Ponza, director of the lunatic asylum at Alessandria, Italy, has cured many of his insane patients by confining them in rooms of some uniform color. Patients suffering from acute melancholia have become cheerful after confinement in a red room. But some forms of life are adversely affected by certain colors. It has been observed, for instance, that flies and other insects do not flourish or are killed outright by the light which comes through blue glass or blue gauze.

Merciful Bullets.

Wounding an enemy of war is better than killing him, for unless he is captured it imposes on his side the burden of taking care of him. The Balkan war has again proved that the bullet of the modern high power rifle, with its terrific speed, will go straight through a man, penetrating vital organs without killing him, and it has even been found to go through from four to six men, one behind the other. This puts them out of the fight, but at the same time it is a good thing for the fighter, for it gives him a far better chance for his life.

AFTER ALL
Style is the One Feature

That Really Distinguishes Good From Mediocre Clothes

¶Any tailor can use fine fabrics and put them together with more or less accuracy. But to get real style into them is another proposition.

¶The designer of Society Brand Clothes is an artist, known among clothes makers as the best in his line.

¶The style he imbues in Society Brand Clothes is as essentially a part of them as the fragrance of a flower or the beauty of a woman. It's organic. It stands forth as a consummate expression of harmony and good taste. A Society Brand garment is a creation. In looking at it, you are moved to think of details of style as such, of tailoring, or of fabrics. You behold an effect—a result of an artist's complete plan, from the selection of the fabric down even to the buttons.

¶The final achievement, for the want of a better word, we call Style. But, like the masterpiece, it is the product of a higher artistic instinct, of feeling, genius.

¶And herein lies the secret of the wonderful success and adaptability of Society Brand Clothes to young and young thinking men.

¶Ask us to show you the models illustrated above. If you have never worn these Clothes, it will be a revelation to you to see them and try them on before one of our mirrors.

COMMITTEE OF THREE TO CONFER WITH POWER CO.

Meeting in Toronto To-day —Company Will Not Accept $90,000 Offer

Ald W. J. Johnston, City Clerk S. R. Armstrong and City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall went to Toronto this morning to confer with the president and solicitors of the Electric Power Co. in regard to matters apertaining to the proposed purchase by the city of the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

At a meeting of the Power Committee yesterday afternoon, the committee was appointed, following the reading of correspondence from A. B. Colville, solicitor for the Electric Power Co.

Mr. Colville made it quite clear that the company would not consider $90,000, the price offered by the city for the distribution system of the local company.

He suggested Friday as a date for a conference. If this meeting is not satisfactory to the city, the expropriating by-law will be prepared and put through by Council. The city has retained counsel. Other questions in regard to the hydro electric now under way will also be taken up with resident engineer of the Commission. One of these has to do with street lighting after midnight. It would not be necessary to use all the lights, and while provision was made to meet this situation, it appears that the lights on George street will be some 20 feet or more north and south of Hunter street.

Thus the original scheme to light Hunter street for some distance east and west of George street, after midnight, without using the Hunter street lamps will not be possible.

Were the lamps placed at the four corners they would give sufficient light.

The committee approved the suggestion of Johnston Greer, the hydro foreman, to lay the conduits to Aylmer street, and thus guard against the tearing up of the road pavement after it is once constructed.

MUCH INFORMATION GAINED AT MEETING OF FIRE CHIEFS

Local Delegates to New York Had Fine Trip—No Horse-Drawn Apparatus on Exhibition There

Fire Chief Howard returned Wednesday evening from the Fire Chiefs' Convention, held in New York. He was accompanied on the trip by Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson and Green. To say that they had a fine trip would be only a common way to state it for it was the trip of their lives.

Fire Chief Howard showed a representative of The Review numerous souvenirs, including a Chinese backscratcher, odd coins and chop-suey sticks. These he had gathered on their visit to Chinatown. He also bought a picture frame made of silver, with the New York firemen badge engraved on it. This he got from a cripple fireman who had this plan of making his living.

The party went from here to Toronto and then took the boat to Lewiston, where they took the New York Central for Albany. From Albany they went via boat down the Hudson River to New York City. They stopped at the Hotel Bristol. The next morning, (Sunday) they visited St. Patrick's Cathedral, the largest Catholic Church in America and at eleven o'clock they attended the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, and in the afternoon went sight-seeing. Large touring cars were placed at their disposal for that purpose.

Monday was Labor Day and they saw the great New York Labor Parade, which is world-wide known. At noon the first business session opened. About five minutes after it started, Chief Howard has occasion to go down to the exhibition building Just as he arrived a large tire blew up and nearly killed two men. Their legs were broken and one had his arms broken also. The last word they received of them was that they were still living but with little chance of recovery. The whole party stayed for the first session which was opened by an address of welcome by Fire Commissioner Johnston and Chief Kenlon of New York City. The rest of the session included the usual routine of a Fire Chiefs' Convention.

Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Green and Anderson spent much of their time in the exhibition building, the Grand Central Palace where fire apparatus of every description, but one, were on exhibition. The one that was minus was the horse drawn apparatus. There was every other manner and means for fighting fires there. When manufacturers spoke, they clearly demonstrated the fact that the horse drawn apparatus is a thing of the past, and they had ceased to make them.

The greater portion of each day was taken up with lectures and papers by Fire Chiefs from all over the world. The evenings were spent by visiting Geto, Chinatown and the various slums. Firemen and private detectives were the protectors of the visiting chiefs and delegates. The Chief has a few sights in mind that he will not forget for sometime and says that the word "slums" send a chill over him.

RECREATION DAY.

Thursday was given entirely to recreation. The large ocean liner "Republic" was chartered for the occasion and the fire chiefs and delegates numbering some 6,500 people (1,516 chiefs and 5,000 delegates) were taken out into the bay to view a fireboat drill. This was extremely interesting. The only trouble was that the convention was too large, making it very hard for those in charge. The boat landed at Coney Island and everything pertaining to amusement was thrown open, free to all persons wearing badges.

On Friday afternoon the monster firemen's parade was held and the new monument dedicated by the public to the fire heroes of New York was unveiled. The cities in the surrounding districts were all represented. Apparatuses of all description were in the parade. There were 10,000 firemen in uniform from outside cities, 4,000 from New York City itself, and 150 bands in the march. It took the parade some two hours and a half to pass one point. The men walked 22 abreast.

The convention closed with a grand banquet at the Waldorf Astoria on Saturday night and the great assembly began to disperse.

Two Ontario Chiefs were elected to office, Chief Armstrong, of Kingston, being elected State Vice-Pres. for Ontario, and Chief Teneych, of Hamilton, 2nd Vice-Pres.

The next convention will be held in New Orleans.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

A fairly large audience greeted "The Travelling Salesman" presented at the Grand last night by Perry's Peerless Players.

Miss Corrinne as Beth Elliott, the operator, was exceptionally good, while Dan Malloy in the comic role of the Travelling Salesman, also came in for considerable applause. The rest of the company displayed considerable talent. As usual, the vaudeville features between acts were of the latest and provided numerous laughs.

Although only a repertoire company, it certainly contrasts most favorably with some high priced companies that have visited this city.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Coming of Maude Adams

The management of the Grand has arranged to place on sale the seats for the appearance of Maude Adams in Sir James Barrie's "Peter Pan" on Thursday next, September 18, at the theatre box office next Tuesday morning. There have been so many inquiries regarding the coming of the actress that it is a certainty that the demand for seats is going to be exceedingly heavy. Miss Adams has long been recognized as the most popular actress on the American stage. She has a bigger following than any man or woman who has ever graced the boards in this country. It does not seem to be strange or unwarranted, therefore, that her coming here has been awaited with some suspense, and to venture the assertion that she will be greeted by an audience limited only by the capacity of the theatre. In Sir James Barrie's delightfully imaginative work Miss Adams is the hero, Peter, the boy who wouldn't grow up. The work is a quaint combination of sparkling humor and charming whimsy. While it is about youth and children, it is meant for grown-ups, and it has the power of making the man or woman who comes its magic spell to live again in the days when they knew fairies and goblins and things like that were as real and actual as reality and actuality could possibly be. Mr. Frohman has made a handsome production of the play, and it seems needless to remark, surrounded Miss Adams with a strong and well balanced company. Do not miss seeing this wonderful actress and her excellent company. Performance starts at 8 o'clock sharp. Doors open at 7 23

NEW STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

With Reference to the Advertisement of Messrs Coleman Bros. and The Hooper Store

The Review is advised by Mr. G. N. Gordon that the statement made in the advertisement of Messrs. Coleman Bros. in Thursday's issue was not worded to set forth the true state of facts. The public are asked to understand that Mr. Hooper is still carrying on business at 414 George street, and will do so until his lease terminates, when he will move into the premises next door and will continue his business as a confectioner and caterer. It is also wished understood that Messrs. Coleman Bros have not acquired and are not taking over Mr. Hooper's business as last night's advertisement seemed to indicate.

ROYAL HOTEL IS CLOSED UP

Some Dispute Has Arisen Over the License

PORT HOPE, Sept. 12—There has been a thorough cleaning out at the Royal Hotel. The goods not disposed of at the auction sale yesterday, have been stored in Mr. T. G. Holmes' building, on John street. The hotel to-day is locked up and it is just a question now how long it will remain that way. The purchaser, Mr. J. R. Heard, is without a liquor license and Mr. Perry states that the license for the house is his property until the 1st of May of next year. This of course will likely be decided by the License Commissioners at an early meeting.

Two of the tomatoes weighed 18 1-2 ounces each, and they may be seen at the R. Denne flour and feed store.

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the housewife finds the numerous duties of home a burden, in fact every walk of life suffers from depleted nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. ## WORLD'S GREATEST WOMAN SCIENTIST IS HONORED

Wife and Colleague of Discoverer of Radium Is Among Few Woman Present at an Important Debate at British Association Meeting—Psychology Is Largely In Hands of Fair Sex.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 13—The first event of yesterday's meeting of the British Association was a full-dress debate by all the leading authorities on radium. Madame Curie, described by Sir Oliver Lodge as the greatest of all women scientists, and who was one of the few women attending the debate, has the extreme modesty of genius. She could hardly be persuaded by Sir Oliver to take a front place, or by the others to talk about herself and her work.

The women are making the subsection of psychology their own. The older scientists deny that this is a science at all, and are vexed that it receives so much attention. They have even suggested that the inclusion of this section is a suffragette plot. The promise of a paper asserting intellectual similarity between man and woman in all the higher scale subjects is taken as a corroboration of this unworthy suspicion.

Miss May Smith in the psychology section took precedence over the other lecturers. She has invented a machine which tests fatigue. With this she made a long series of tests on herself with remarkable results. She deprived herself of sleep or greatly curtailed her hours of sleep. The result was that her sight, touch and mind immediately were inproved in force and nicety, but the results were lamentable in the succeeding period of time. Indeed she took fifteen days to recover from her sixteen hours' insufficiency of sleep.

Heredity, especially on the sex side, takes an important place in the discussions. Major Hurst brought out the strange point that it is now more or less established that certain qualities are only passed on by one sex. This is the case in a certain form of short sight in men, but the case announced to-day concerned poultry.

Seized 7,000 Yards of Net.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 13.—The Ontario Government fishery patrol steamer Navarch arrived here Thursday evening, loaded down with full nets, which Capt. Fleming and his crew seized at the gap and Adolphustown. These nets were being used in prohibited waters. The poachers were chased by Capt. Fleming on the Navarch, but their boat proved to be too fast, and after a long chase succeeded in getting away. Some 7,000 yards of net was seized.

Postal Employes Involved.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—That postal employes connived at the theft of the pearl necklace valued at $625,000 which mysteriously disappeared on July 16, after having been mailed in Paris to a London dealer, seems to have been established by evidence presented at the hearing yesterday.

Whether the employes belong to the French or to the English post-office, the authorities decline to divulge.

A GIRL IN BOY'S CLOTHES

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—After having successfully passed as a boy in Toronto for two months and a half, during which time she associated wholly with young men, held a man's position, and even appeared as a male singer in a local theatre, Benedictine Wiseman, a 17-year-old girl, of 891 St. Andre street, Montreal, was recognized by Constable Burney on Yonge street last night as fitting the description of a girl who had been reported to the Toronto police as missing from Montreal, and placed her under arrest on the double charge of vagrancy and impersonation.

With hair close cropped, a coat of blue serge, striped trousers, and gray peaked cap, her make-up was good enough to take her anywhere. Her voice, however, was her main asset in the dual existence she was leading; a beautiful singer, she possesses the rare quality of a double voice, with which she can speak in the musical tones of a girl or the deeper man's voice. Her talent as a singer she willingly displayed to the assembled detectives and sergeant in the detective office.

To Sergt. McKinney the girl at first indignantly denied her sex, exclaiming, "What do you want me for; I've got a job." On further questioning, however, she admitted the fact that she was a girl in boy's clothing, justifying her masquerade by claiming that a girl had no chance to get on in the world. Boys got better pay and weren't tied to their mother's apron strings, so she decided to be a boy. Nonchalantly she told the sergeant that Thursday night she had appeared on the stage of a local theatre, and in a singing competition with a dozen young men, carried off the first prize of $20 in cash.

Although she wears no wedding ring, she claims to have been married in Montreal to James Corsenelli. Where her husband was and why she left him she refused to say.

Strickland, nee Miss Pattie Hall, of Peterborough, will be pleased to hear that she is recovering from her serious illness and has nowleft Grace Hospital, Toronto, where she has been for several weeks. Fight Over Flag Incident.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 13.—While members of a musical society were spending Thursday evening at a summer cottage at Port Dalhousie Beach, young campers cut the light wire, putting the house in darkness. Some newly-arrived Americans were among the disturbers and when a flag was pulled down a fight followed in which several were badly handled.

Huerta Minister Retires.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 13.—Rodolfe Reyes, son of the late Gen. Barnardo Reyes, one of the first victims in the revolt against Madero, resigned yesterday from the Ministry of Justice in the Cabinet of Provisional President Huerta. The reason given was that the "policy of the President demands my separation."

Deck Hand's Fatal Fall.

PORT COLBORNE, Sept. 13—Randolph White, a deck hand, was killed on the steamer John Duncan in Erie by falling into the hold. From letters found on him, it is believed he hails from Greenspond, Newfoundland, and the body is being held at Erie, awaiting the decision of the coroner.

PRETTY WOMEN OF MEXICAN ARMY CAN FIGHT AS WELL AS MEN

CONSTITUTIONALISTS DESTROYING A BRIDGE

TWO WOMEN SOLDIERS

GUARD ON THE DESTRUCTION TRAIN

Mexican women are taking an active part in the present disturbance in Mexico. The woman seen above standing guard on the destruction train travels and fights in the ranks of the constitutionalists, and many of them are known to have fought desperately at their husbands' sides. Another picture shows two Mexican women on horseback. They are also connected with the constitutional army and have won high merit for their bravery. Another view shows the Mexican National Railway bridge near Durango. The abutments were blown up with dynamite by the constitutionalists and the entire woodwork burned.

THREE MEN AND ONE WOMAN SUSPECTED IN MURDER CASE

They Are Believed To Have Been Implicated In the Murder of Abe Rubenstein, the Bookmaker's Clerk—Police Think Tragedy Is an Outcome of the Becker Case In New York.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—Nathan Shapiro, Charles Dreyfuss, Loring Brangman and Bessie Sims, charged with being implicated in the murder of Abe Rubenstein, a bookmaker's clerk, here, were brought to Ottawa from Montreal last night. With them came Robert H. Dirno, who is held as a material witness. They will be arraigned in the morning.

Shapiro has retained A. E. Fripp, K.C., M.P., as leading counsel.

Dirno was arrested at the Blue Bonnets race track at Montreal yesterday afternoon and is said to be the real agent who had the key to the house where the body of Rubenstein was found.

The police are still searching at Montreal for the man who obtained the key from Dirno on the night the mysterious trunk was placed in the basement of the building.

It is rumored here, though not verified, that there is a direct connection between the murder of Abe Rubenstein, the race track sheet writer, and the Becker case in New York. It is stated that Nathan Shapiro, Rubenstein's employer, who was arrested in Montreal yesterday morning, is a brother of Shapiro, the driver of the murder car that figured in the Becker case, and that Rubenstein gave some information at the time for which he was threatened by the New York gangsters.

On Thursday night the police took John Minor, a negro, into custody on a nominal charge of vagrancy, but primarily on the suspicion that he is implicated in the murder of Abe Rubenstein. Minor was held in custody until the morning and then released under bond. He denies that he knows anything at all about the case.

Mrs. McDonald, the woman who keeps the house where Minor rooms, said yesterday that prior to the night of the murder he was without money to pay his rent. The next day he flashed a big roll of money.

The police are centering their efforts to find the man who got the key of the vacant store where Rubenstein's body was found.

Hydro Users Increase.

GALT, Sept. 13.—The number of users of Hydro-electricity for lighting purposes in Galt increases at the rate of an additional consumer a day. Dr. Dakin, chairman of the commission, said yesterday that there were exactly 252 new consumers this year and the calendar shows the 252nd day of the year. Starting with 155 consumers two years ago, the total [illegible]

MEXICAN REBELS VICTORIOUS.

Insurrectos Have Taken Town of Fresnillo.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 13.—The rebel general, Panfilo, is reported to have taken Fresnillo, State of Zacatecas, and to have scattered the Federal garrison of 300, capturing 56 prisoners, two Gatling guns and much ammunition. The rebels have opened telegraphic communications between Durango and Gomz Palacia, a suburb of Torreon, and are operating the railroad to Jiminez and Chihuahua.

Gen. Bravo, the Federal commander at Torreon, while proceeding southward with a portion of the Torreon garrison in an endeavor to open communications, was attacked by rebels at Picardias. The result of the fight is not known.

The British vice-consul at Gomez Palacia has requested permission from his Government to assist Britishers to leave the town, which many of them desire to do, on the strength of President Wilson's recent advice to Americans to get out of the republic.

To Employ German Officers.

PEKIN, Sept. 13.—It is persistently reported here that an agreement has been partly reached whereby China will employ one German lieutenant-general, with a staff of six officers and an interpreter, at Pekin, and also 200 German officers, who are to be distributed throughout the country. The cost of the scheme will be $1,000,000, of which it is said the Krupp Co., the German ordnance manufacturers, will provide $250,000.

MAY NOT STOP MILITANT.

U. S. Commissioner Will Decide on Mrs. Pankhurst's Morals.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The nature of the reception that waits Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, when she arrives here from Europe next month will depend upon the outcome of an investigation of her actions in England now being made by the immigration authorities of the United States. Byron H. Uhl, commissioner of immigration, said yesterday:

"It is not at all certain that Mrs. Pankhurst will be detained at Ellis Island at all. Her actions in England are being investigated and if she is found guilty of moral turpitude she will not be brought here. It will not be known until she reaches this country. If detained she will be treated like any immigrant, for there is only one way of handling people here.

"It is most unfortunate that this is the case, and it is the ground for much justifiable complaint, but nothing can be done about it until congress decides that we need quarters for first-class passengers as well as for third-class."

CHINA YIELDS TO JAPAN

Indications That Demands of Ultimatum Are Met.

PEKIN, China, Sept. 13.—Orders issued yesterday by Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai signify, it is believed by foreign observers in Pekin, that China has complied with the demands of the Japanese Government presented Thursday.

In a clash between Japanese and Chinese soldiers Thursday at Chang-Ti, near Shan Hai-Kwan, where the Japanese guard a section of the railway from Pekin to the sea, one of the Japanese soldiers was killed. The Chinese officer later sent an apology to the Japanese commander.

Punishment Demanded.

TOKIO, Sept. 13.—Among the specific demands contained in the Japanese ultimatum to China is the punishment of Gen. Chang Hsun, commander of the Chinese Government forces at Nanking.

Pending the reply of China to the Japanese note, the newspapers of Tokio are mainly engaged in stiffening the backs of Government officials. One journal declared yesterday that if the assassination of Mortiario Abe, director of the political bureau of the Japanese Foreign Office, results in stimulating the Cabinet to action, he "did not die in vain."

All the men who participated in the assassination of Abe have either committed suicide or are under arrest.

NO CONFERENCE LIKELY.

Lord Loreburn's Suggestion Regarding Home Rule Is Too Late.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The recent appeal of Earl Loreburn, formerly Lord High Chancellor, that both the great political parties confer with a view to a settlement of the Irish question by consent on the ground that the present home rule bill cannot provide a permanent solution, has excited tremendous interest throughout the country, and may have considerable influence in future discussions of the Liberal bill in Parliament. As a practical suggestion, however, it is believed that it will prove unavailing.

The attitude of the Liberals is that the proposal, coming now when the home rule bill is nearing a successful issue in its stormy career, is altogether too late. On the other hand, the Unionists would only be inclined to enter such a conference as Earl Loreburn suggests if the Government first of all consented to drop their bill, which is altogether impossible from the Liberal point of view. John Dillon, on behalf of the Nationalists, says a conference would be utterly useless unless the Unionists first admitted the principle of home rule. Thus, all parties are opposed to a conference and it is believed there is no chance for it to materialise.

THAW'S LAWYERS READY TO START APPEAL TACTICS

KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

One Man Dead and Another Dying After Oshawa Disaster.

OSHAWA, Sept. 13.—The boiler at the gas works recently purchased from the town of Oshawa by the Seymour Gas Co., exploded yesterday morning at 9.30. Thomas Buckley was instantly killed, and Daniel Anderson was so badly injured that at the hospital he is not expected to recover. The only other employe who was in the building just prior to the explosion had stepped outside an instant before and escaped injury.

A tank filled with coal oil, standing on a siding caught fire and the town was enveloped in black smoke. A large number of windows in the neighborhood were broken and the entire town got a bad shaking up. Two large gas tanks, one containing 60,000, the other 20,000 feet, in close proximity to the exploded boiler fortunately escaped damage, or the result would have been much more serious.

The building was a total wreck and the loss will probably reach $20,000.

Two Men Killed.

QUEBEC, Sept. 13.—Two men lost their lives and one wa seriously injured yesterday by falling 60 feet off a scaffold on the new cathedral at Chicoutimi.

Joseph Barrette, a mason of Chicoutimi, and Pierre Lesque of Robertville were both terribly injured, and died a few minutes after the accident. The third man, Joseph Bouchard of Chicoutimi, had a leg broken and suffered grave internal injuries. All the victims were married and fathers of families.

BODY OF GAYNOR AT LIVERPOOL

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 13.—The body of William J. Gaynor lay in state last night at the foot of the grand stairway of the town hall of Liverpool.

It was an unprecedented honor that Liverpool paid the dead executive of the American metropolis, for never before had anyone lain in state in the historic town hall. Covered with the Stars and Stripes and with the Union Jack draped over its foot, the casket rested on a catafalque brought here from Westminster Abbey, London, and on which has reposed the bodies of many of Britain' most famous men. It was last used at the funeral of Field Marshal Lord Wolseley in St. Paul's Cathedral last March.

Candles in the great golden candelabra from Westminster Abbey cast a subdued light up the wide stairway and over the detail of picked men from the Liverpool police force, who stood guard all night about the catafalque. John Sutherland Harmood-Banner, lord mayor of the city, who is absent on vacation, had telegraphed the city officials to do everything in their power in honor of the dead mayor of New York, and they carried out their instructions in minute detail.

The secretary to the lord mayor of Liverpool, assisted by a delegation of civic dignitaries, received the body at the town hall. When the coffin was placed on the catafalque one end of it was covered by a beautiful wreath of lilies of the valley, bearing the inscription: "Deepest sympathy from the lord mayor and citizens of Liverpool." Shortly afterwards another wreath, composed of Easter lilies, was placed on the coffin. On the card attached to it was inscribed: "The condolences of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lee Washington."

The hall where the body lay was then cleared and Rufus Gaynor was left alone for a few minutes with his dead father. He was then accompanied to a hotel by Mr. Washington.

Start For Sarnia Zoo.

SARNIA, Sept. 13.—Miracle, a calf moose from Rainy River district, arrived in Sarnia yesterday morning on board the steamer Hamonic, and will be the start for a zoo at Bayview Park. The Government has promised the town a number of deer from the park at Rondeau, and they will be put into an enclosure that is being built at the park.

To Control Hog Cholera.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The inauguration of a country-wide campaign to eliminate or control long cholera is urged in a special report yesterday by Marion Dorset, of the bureau of animal industry, who estimates that during the past year, about $60,000,000 worth of hogs died of the disease.

Accidental Death.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—A verdict of accidental death was returned by the coroner's jury in the case of Albert Diestelmeyer, who was killed Tuesday night by an automobile. The driver of the motor was exonerated.

Aeroplane Heavy Toll.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—Death yesterday claimed a fifth victim of the aeroplane accident at Buechenbeuron, Thursday, when a military machine, piloted by Lieut. Schneider, crashed into a group of spectators, four of whom were decapitated by the propellers, and two others badly injured.

Yesterday's fatality makes the 24th death due to air craft disasters in this country in five days.

Legal Battle Which Millionaire's Lawyers Had Intended to Wage In Canada Will Be Brought Out In New Hampshire — Ten Guards Surround Thaw To Prevent Canadian Rescuing Him.

COLEBROOK, N.H., Sept. 13—The protracted court battle denied Harry K. Thaw in Canada by his sudden deportation on Wednesday, promises to be waged in the state of New Hampshire. His newly-retained counsel hope to have a personal hearing before Governor Felker on the matter of extradition and should extradition be granted, to carry the matter to the State Supreme Court on a writ of habeas corpus. Three of these attorneys—N. E. Martin of Concord, W. H. Olmstead of New York and Merrill Shurtleff of Colebrook, hurried off to the capital yesterday.

Sheriff Hornbeck of Duchess county, N.Y., wherein is located the Matteawan asylum from which Thaw made his sensational escape nearly a month ago, was en route here last night with the requisition warrant signed by Acting Governor Glynn. As the document must first be laid before Governor Felker, the New York lawyers were chagrined at the sheriff's mistake in heading for Colebrook. Upon his arrival, he, or some other representative of the state will be turned back to Concord. Why Hornbeck started for this place was a mystery to Wm. Travers Jerome, who has been for three weeks been trying to get Thaw back to the asylum.

Thaw left his hotel room for out of doors but once yesterday, to go to the barber shop. The sheriff and ten special guards accompanied him. Rumors of kidnapping would not down. The citizen of Coaticook, Que., who was denounced Thursday by Jerome as the leader of the anti-Jerome movement which resulted in his arrest on a charge of gambling, remained in Colebrook yesterday in spite of the ill-feeling his presence has engendered. He whizzed around in a motor car a good part of the day, and this fact prevented Thaw from being taken for an airing yesterday afternoon.

They Will "Wise Up."

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 13.—The recent arrest in Canada of Harry K. Thaw and the complications which followed, including the arrest of Special Deputy Attorney-General William Travers Jerome, has prompted Attorney-General Carmody to take steps to meet such conditions should they arise in the future.

The Attorney-General has instructed his librarian to secure copies of the Canadian immigration laws and the Canadian laws affecting gambling. Each deputy attorney-general will be requested to acquaint himself with these statutes, so that he will be familiar with the legal procedure in that country.

Should Lose Their Jobs.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Under the caption "Canadian Pin Pricks," The Star comments on W. T. Jerome's discharge at Coaticook, Que., and says:

"We cannot but recognize that it is these stupid, spiteful acts committed by one nation against another which are often remembered when more gracious passages are forgotten. It is the duty of administrators of law to guard against such incidents, and it is evident there are some Canadian officials in the public service at Coaticook who need cashiering. Such men are public dangers."

ANOTHER SUICIDE AT FALLS.

Young Man Walks Into Horse Shoe Falls in Presence of Ladies.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 13.—A young man, about 20 years of age, slightly built, medium height, smooth face, dressed in dark blue suit, deliberately suicided last evening about five o'clock, at Table Rock, at the brink of the Horse Shoe Falls, in the presence of two young ladies, giving their names as the Misses Porter of Sarnia, who were standing viewing the falls, a few yards away. The young man waded out in the shallow water, hesitated a few moments, threw off his hat, cast a purse towards the shore, and plunged into the deep water, being immediately swept over the falls.

The young ladies were horrifid, and almost overcome with the sight. They reported the occurrence, and the park police found the black leather pocket book, which contained eight dollars in American money and nine cents in Canadian, also a note written in pencil, "Father, don't fret," but no signature. These and a parcel check of the M.C.R. from Detroit depot, are the only clues to lead to his identity. He apparently came to the city yesterday afternoon, as no one had seen such a person previously.

Gibson's Fate Not Settled.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—No action will be taken on the request for a new trial on behalf of Charles Gibson until the return of Premier Borden. Gibson's counsel, T. H. Lennox, K.C., conferred with Hon. C. J. Doherty yesterday.

Gibson, sentenced to death last spring for the murder of Rosenthal in Toronto, was last July given a reprieve until Oct. 9.

Meighen In New Quarters.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13—The new wing to the East Block, which has been in course of construction since 1910, is sufficiently near completion to provide a spacious private office for the Prime Minister, which he took over before his departure, and also a room for Solicitor-General Meighen is provided. Hon. Mr. Meighen yesterday took possession of his new [illegible]

THE CONFUSION OF TONGUES

When God wanted to confound and scatter the builders of Babel He sent down upon them a confusion of tongues. And it is the surest method to bring about the disintegration of any race or nation.

The air just now is full of talk of Canada's nationhood, and the people who are most loud in claiming nationhood for Canada seem to make light of one of the chief things which holds a nation together, viz., language.

No two languages ever survived along side of each other in a country whose people mingled and worked harmoniously together. One must go, or at least take a very subordinate place. You may live next door to a Frenchman and may have a sort of nodding acquaintance with him, but it will never go any further than a nod while you refuse to learn French or your neighbor refuses to speak English.

There is nothing which separates like a diversity of language in local and national life, and Canada can never be a nation on these conditions.

All this leads us to say that this tendency to establish bilingualism in our schools is the surest road to the disintegration, not of the Empire only, but of the Dominion itself.

The latest move in this direction is the change in the new regulations for bilingual schools of Ontario. The thin end of the wedge was already inserted and the initial knock has been applied.

The new regulation allowed for the teaching of a French-speaking child in the French language, until it should reach form I, and it was restricted within a certain period. But the amendment of this regulation has abolished all these restrictions and invested the power of veto in the local school inspector, who is to use his own judgment as to the necessity of a scholar being taught in the French language.

As school inspectors are only human the fear is that they will be wholly in the hands of local authorities, and thus in many cases the French language will predominate in these schools.

OVER A BUCK-SAW

Sir Oliver Lodge says: 'I hold that science is incompetent to make comprehensive denials about the ether.' This sounds very like the declaration of the American lady who once said: "I accept the Universe!" and Carlyle responded, "She had better!"

* * *

We have been used in times past to denials about matter, and there are "scientists" who do deny matter; but this is the first time we have heard of a denial of ether. The next thing will be some one will get up and deny that either exists. (This is not a pun for we pronounce the i in either.)

* * *

Someone was said to have 'spoken disrespectfully of the equator.' It was not reported what the equator thought about the slight. Astronomers did not observe any signs of agitation on the part of the 'imaginary line,' and the only remark of the Pole was that "all such insinuations leave him cold."

* * *

The moral of which is that the Universe, both solid and etherial, is no respecter of theories—not to speak of the persons who make those theories. Sir Oliver Lodge is one of our finest intellects, but on these blinding subjects we are all like a crowd of night-moths, battering our brains against one of God's arc lamps.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is to be a 'Naval Defence Conference in London in November, says the "Manchester Guardian," which is to be attended by the Premier and other representatives of the self governing colonies.

One of the professors at the British Association advised people to laugh at the woes of others: he says laughter is a good stimulant. He does not seem to have told us what we should do with our own woes.

A journalist, writing in the Westminster Gazette says that many a writer on the subject of cycling does not get enough salary to enable him to buy a wheel for himself, and many a sporting editor could not put a dollar on a horse if he was positive of winning.

The City of London, Ont., set up an Industrial Commissioner. One of its functions is to boom the city. He prepares, weekly, a couple of columns of boom matter, which is put in type and copies sent out to the newspapers of the Dominion. The conception is that all these papers will take hold with avidity and print these screeds. It is fair assumption that the commissioner is a man of parts and intelligence, but he gets most confoundedly mistaken if he is leading his employers to believe that the city of London is getting thousands of dollars worth of advertising publicity for nothing. Newspapers are not paying men to put in type the glories of London "just for fun." The columns of copy go into the waste basket, where just such things go unless accompanied by funds to pay for insertion.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

—September 14.—Exodus 20:12-21.—

"Thou shalt love . . . thy neighbor as thyself."—Luke 10: 7.

THE Ten Commandments were written upon two stone tablets. One bore the first four commandments, appertaining to God; the other, the remaining six, appertaining to humanity. The essence of these last six were expressed in Jesus' words, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Whoever loves his neighbor will not intentionally injure him in word, act or thought. Hence, Love expresses the full measure of the requirements of the Law. (Romans 13:10.). Love is at liberty to do more than the Law requires, but cannot do less.

While only Christians are credited by the Lord with fulfilling the requirements of the Law—because of the allowance made for their weaknesses on account of their relationship with Christ—nevertheless, the Jews and many others have been blessed in proportion as they endeavored to fulfil the Law. Hence it is wise and proper to lift high the Divine standards.

Honor Father and Mother.

All parents are deserving of consideration from their children. Yet, of course, the degree of respect must depend upon the character of the parent, to some extent. With disobedience to parents rank and rabid everywhere, it may seem a hard saying, but we believe it true, that the child's disobedience is due to the parent or the guardian.

The child may have been ill-born. Discontent and rebellion in the mother's mind during the period of gestation may have so marked the child that no amount of training may fully recover it. In such a case, the parents may well be patient and long-suffering with such unhappy, disobedient dispositions in their children.

Perhaps the parents were only partially to blame. Perhaps their minister did not preach the laws of God, their human operation and the penalties of their violation, but gave flowery essays and anecdotes containing neither food for the spiritual nature nor assistance in understanding and combating the human weaknesses. Perhaps the fault was not wholly the mother's. Perhaps the father forgot that he had a duty toward his offspring, chiefly served by assisting his wife to thoughts of kindness, gentleness, nobility, etc.

EMPLOYERS SHOULD SAFE-GUARD AGAINST ACCIDENTS

"Thou shalt do no murder."

The Effect of Sunday Schools.

A modern writer of force and influence holds that Sunday Schools, while accomplishing good in one direction, may have done harm in another—by weakening the respect of children for their parents, and by releasing parents from an appreciation of their responsibilities toward their children. To whatever extent parents shirk their responsibilities, their influence over the child is lost. One hour per week in a Sunday School class cannot take the place of a continual parental supervision.

Statistics show that boys from sixteen to twenty years old constitute about one-third of all dangerous criminals, and that their proportionate number is increasing. Hence benevolent people should especially co-operate with the Divine command by encouraging obedience to parental authority.

"Thou Shalt Do No Murder."

Nothing in this command forbids the killing of animals. Neither does it forbid the execution of criminals; for thus it would conflict with the Divine Law elsewhere expressed, and practiced under the guidance of Moses by Divine direction.

This command teaches that life is to be prized, not jeopardized. Its spirit, Jesus declared, forbids an angry spirit of murder, restrained merely by fear of consequences. This commandment makes it incumbent upon those employing labor or having supervision of others to take all reasonable precautions for safeguarding against accidents. To allow self-interest or love of money to perpetuate dangerous conditions would be to violate this commandment.

Commit Not Adultery.

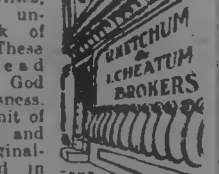
One result of man's fall has been a depravity of the sexual appetites, leading to unchastity, lack of self-control. These tendencies lead away from God and righteousness. The family unit of one husband and one wife, originally established in Eden, seems to be a corner stone of righteousness in both family and national life.



"Thou shalt not steal."

"Thou Shalt Not Steal."

Had not inventions along the line of electricity and steam kept pace with increase of knowledge, the world to-day would be a thieves' paradise. But while piracy and robbery are reprobated, there is a more subtle form of stealing through stock speculations, fake companies organized to take advantage of others, etc.

Making false returns to the tax assessor is stealing. Smuggling is stealing. Failure to give agreed upon services for wages received is stealing. But the worst form of theft is that of stealing another's good name, in violation of the Scriptural instruction, "Speak evil of no man."

Wives and Wings.

Some men begin by wondering why their wives haven't wings and end by wishing they had.

The course of true love often leads to matrimony.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So. Wellington, B.C.—"For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and praise your medicine. I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish." Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Lightning and Balloons.

The rapid progress of aviation has caused attention to be drawn from a new direction to the dangers of atmospheric electricity. In an article in the Elektrotechniche Zeitschrift Mr. I. Zehnder discusses the danger to balloons and aeroplanes of electrical disturbances and the methods of avoiding disastrous effects. He points out that the electrical conditions of the air are subject to great variations during thunderstorms and that the atmospheric charges may change suddenly in sign. In clear weather an ordinary balloon without metal parts is not exposed to any danger so long as it floats in the air, but in the modern dirigibles much of the framework consists of conducting materials, which add to the danger; also a balloon may be charged with electricity and a spark produced when contact with the ground is made, setting fire to the gas.—Scientific American.

A Prison of Silence.

Entombed in a grim castle on the outskirts of Lisbon are some of the most miserable men on earth. These are inmates of Portugal's "prison of silence." In this building everything that human ingenuity can suggest to render the lives of its prisoners a horrible, maddening torture is done. The corridors, piled tier on tier five storeys high, extend from a common centre like the spokes of a huge wheel.

The cells are narrow, tomb-like and within each stands a coffin. The attendants creep about in felt slippers. No one is allowed to utter a word. The silence is that of the grave. Once a day the cell doors are unlocked and the wretches march out, clothed in shrouds and with faces covered by masks, for it is part of this hideous punishment that none may look upon the countenances of his fellow prisoners. Few of them endure this torture for more than 10 years.

Batons for Admirals.

There is a rumor that the King is about to revive an interesting naval custom which existed in former days. At one time Admirals of the Fleet had batons handed by the Sovereign upon their appointment, just as Field Marshals have to-day. If the King revives this custom, each of the nine Admirals of the Fleet will receive a baton. One of the old-time admirals' batons may be seen in the Royal United Service Institution museum.

He Had Just Time to Serve Before Taking a Train

By ELLSWORTH TOWNSEND

I like to talk with John Atherton, a retired detective friend of mine, for he has a fund of incidents that occurred during the days of his active service that I find interesting. Some of them happened to him personally, and some were told him by his fellow craftsmen during idle hours. This is one of Atherton's stories that especially pleased me from the ingenuity and assurance perpetrated by a rogue:

There are two ways by which crooks work, the one with, the other without confederates. Both ways have their advantages. A man who works alone doesn't have the fear of being betrayed by his pal, for where one is offered an easy letting off from a hard sentence if he will squeal he is pretty liable to squeal. But a man who has a confederate can do what one man can't do alone.

In one way crook pals will usually stand by each other. When one is in danger the other will do all in his power and take considerable risks to help him out. I was once put on a job to track down a man called Jerry Wilson, who was in the confidence department of roguery. Wilson usually worked countrymen. He was one of the most accomplished swindlers I ever met. He had been an actor and was proficient in the art of making up. We would hear of him one day passing as a stockbroker, at another as a clergyman and again as a cotton planter with a perfect southern dialect. Of course we didn't know at the time that these were one and the same man, but we often suspected it and in time learned it from Wilson himself.

One day a countryman reported at police headquarters that he had been victimized by a man who passed himself off for an Englishman. The countryman had come from England twenty years before and had never become Americanized. Englishmen seldom become naturalized. You will find thousands of them in this country, and other countries for that matter, who have become old men and not seen England since they were children and are still British subjects.

The man who picked him up doubtless heard him speak with his British lingo, had stepped up to him and hailed him as a fellow countryman. One born, he said, under the British flag and once accustomed to the home accent could always be placed as an Englishman. Then he launched out on the demerits of this "bloody country" and won the farmer's heart completely.

A confidence man becomes very expert in drawing out information from a greenhorn, and the new acquaintance—Henderson he called himself—was evidently an adept at this work, for the farmer soon learned that they both came from the same county in England and from the same town and knew the same persons. Henderson, being a later arrival, gave his former fellow townsman lots of information as to what had become of many of his old friends—who were living and who were dead and who had married. The result was a friendly drink at a "public," as they call a saloon in England, followed by a friendly game, with the consequent transfer of several hundred dollars of the farmer's money to the pockets of Mr. Henderson, who, when he had drained his fellow countryman's resources, slipped out through a back door.

Well, we got on to Mr. Henderson, but were deficient in proof. The farmer's testimony might have been met by an alibi and other subterfuges, and I decided to capture him at his own game. Having located him, I stood near him and, adopting the British accent, began to talk about dear old Merrie England. The fellow chimed in, and we were soon hobnobbing together. I had my pocketbook stuffed with marked bills, which passed into my countryman's possession. Then I tipped a confederate the wink, and together we took him in.

There couldn't have been a surer case against a man than that, could there? From facts I gathered and the man's ability to personate different characters I believed I had got the slippery Wilson, and I intended to put him where he would trouble the public no longer. In making up a jury to try him we got nine good men, when somehow we couldn't get any further. Some were exempt and some had sufficient excuses. When we got the eleventh man so much time had been lost that the judge was getting impatient. A gentlemanly looking man in the courtroom said that if the trial would not occupy much time he would help us out. He was immediately served with a summons, accepted and sworn in.

The trial didn't require or it was not given a long time. The evidence was perfect, and the conviction was considered a mere matter of form. Besides, there was the gentleman who had volunteered to serve on the case provided he would not be long detained. After he had been sworn in he told the judge that he was really exempt, but would not claim exemption provided he was assured that he would in every probability be discharged within a couple of hours since he was waiting for a train that would leave at the expiration of that time. I think the judge must have had an engagement himself, for he seemed to be in a hurry. He held a consultation with the prisoner's attorney—whom he had assigned to defend him—who said that he had little or no evidence for the prisoner and did not think what he had would require ten minutes to bring it out. Upon this the judge told the obliging juryman that he was very sure he would have plenty of time to make his train.

"I'm glad of that, your honor," said the gentleman. "There's nothing I dread so much as waiting for anything, especially for a train."

The judge's opinion as to the period of the trial proved quite correct. For awhile it seemed that it would be put through at railroad speed. The charge was read to the prisoner, and he was asked to plead. He said he was a British subject and asked if that would make any difference. When told that it would not he pleaded not guilty.

I gave my account of how I had trapped him, and his victim testified against him. The accused declared that he was a British subject from Australia and if his home were not so far away he could easily prove his respectability. The twelfth juryman impaneled asked him a few questions about Australia, which he answered evidently to the juryman's satisfaction. But this didn't cut any figure because it didn't matter where he came from. We had the deadwood on him.

We expected the jury to convict him without leaving their seats, but they didn't. Then we thought they might be half an hour, but the half hour passed, and they didn't come back. The judge went home to dinner, leaving instructions to be called when a verdict was reached. He wasn't called.

The jury remained out the rest of the day and all night. In the morning they sent word that they would like to be discharged since they couldn't agree. This made the judge angry, and he sent back word that the evidence was absolutely convincing and they must agree. Indeed, they were given to understand that they must bring in a verdict or they would be kept where they were till the crack of doom. They stood out till about 10 o'clock the second night, then sent word that they had come to an agreement. The judge was summoned, and they filed into court. The judge asked the customary questions.

"Have you arrived at a verdict?"

"We have, your honor."

"Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty of the charge?"

"Not guilty."

"What!"

"Not guilty, your honor."

There was nothing to do in accordance with the law except to discharge them. Convinced that there had been some rascality practiced, I stationed myself at the door and scrutinized every man as he went out. I noticed that the twelfth juryman, who had volunteered, led the rest out of the courtroom, and I heard him descending the stairs three steps at a time.

I was convinced that he had imposed on us all with a view to getting on the jury, then standing out for an acquittal. I learned that he had told his fellow jurymen that he had lived in Australia and had known the prisoner there and could vouch for his being a respected citizen of Melbourne. He was sure that he had been mistaken for some one else and would not on any account vote for a conviction. Not until the others became convinced that the man was not to be moved did they conclude to bring in a verdict of not guilty rather than disagree and subject the state to the expense of another trial.

There was no way of holding the man who had been tried. He had been acquitted of the charge of which he was accused and could not be tried again for that crime. So we made a virtue of necessity and let him go.

Six months after this two men were arrested for confidence work. I went to the trial for information and a look at the prisoners, since it was my custom to keep track of the rogues brought in. The moment I looked at the prisoners I recognized both of them. One was the man who had swindled the farmer and whom I had supposed to be Jerry Wilson. The other—would you believe it?—was the twelfth juryman who had forced his acquittal.

But this was not all of my surprise. At the trial of the two men it came out that this twelfth juryman, who was willing to help us out if it didn't take too long, was none other than Jerry Wilson. He and the other man, Tom Murphy (and other names), had long worked confidence games together, and when his pal was in trouble Wilson had made himself up for a gentleman, had gone into the courtroom to watch the impaneling of the jury and in the nick of time had offered himself to help us out.

I confess that in all my experience I never knew a clearer case of one rogue standing by another. Wilson ran an awful risk. Had I known when he left the courtroom that he had single handed "hung" the jury I should have kept him in sight, trumped up a charge against him and held him till I could find out who he was. That he feared something of the kind was evident from the haste with which he got away.

After the conviction of the two men (they were sent up for twenty years) I visited Wilson in jail, and he told me much about his operations. He said that when he played the twelfth juryman trick he was more afraid of my getting on to it than any one else, for I had completely outwitted his pal with my marked bills. When he saw me station myself at the courtroom door to watch the outgoing of the jurymen he thought it was all up with him. The moment he reached the street he ran like a deer, entered an alley and was soon beyond capture.

A LOVELY BABY BOY

This Mother is quite Enthusiastic over a well Known Food.

Mrs. J. W. Pateman, 34 Harriet St., Toronto, in writing about Neave's Food says "When I first knew one of my friends, her baby Jack was eight months old and dying by inches. She had tried three foods because her Jack could not digest milk. At last, I fetched her a tin of Neave's Food. At the end of a month, Jack was rapidly gaining flesh and was bright and happy. He is a lovely boy now and she declares Neave's Food saved his life. And it did.

Then I recommended it to a friend on Victoria Avenue. She had a baby 6 months old that was not thriving a bit. She put the baby on Neave's Food and at the end of three months, the baby was twice the size.

I have never seen two bigger, stronger boys than mine for their ages and we owe it all to Neave's Food. I have the utmost faith in Neave's Food."

Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book "Hints About Baby" by writing Edwin Utley, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, who is the Canadian agent. (Mention this paper.) For sale by all druggists. 24A

THE MATCHES USED.

Three Millions of Them Struck Every Minute of Each Day.

By the end of the brief minute taken to read these paragraphs the nations of the civilized world will have struck 3,000,000 matches. This is the average for every minute of the twenty four hours of the day. Fifteen hundred billion is the enormous number for the year, and those living under the American flag are said to be responsible for the consumption of one-half of the amount.

The importance of the industry which turns out the little splinters of wood tipped with sulphur or some other material ignited by friction is only recognized when the average smoker tries to contemplate his predicament if he had to go back to the time when he had to coax a spark from a tinder box. Of course, the answer is, he would smoke a great deal less because of the difficulty in getting a light or else, on the other hand, smoke continuously in order to keep alive the fire at the end of his stogie or Havana, pipe or cigarette, as the case might be.

Small and insignificant as it is, the match demands perhaps as much attention in the choice of the wood going into its manufacture as any other forest product. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable. Sapwood, knotty or cross grained timber will not do. Instead of being a byproduct of other articles of manufacture, the little match is turned out at hundreds of mills over the country where the byproducts are bulky objects, like doors, sash, shingles, siding, posts and cord wood. The pines, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow are the most suitable match timbers.

The matchmakers—not the matrimonial kind—are already finding that the amount of choice timber available is dwindling. Forest conservation if applied to the holdings of the match companies, like it is on Uncle Sam's national forests in the west, will do much to make the supply sufficient for a longer number of years than would be the case if the old time wasteful lumbering methods of a few years ago should continue. The rapid increase in stumpage prices is one of the chief factors in encouraging the wise use of the forests where suitable match timber is available.

Does Radium Exist?

This rather surprising question is raised by Dr. Gustav Le Bon, who calls upon the friends of science to contribute $10,000, the sum which he estimates as probably necessary to cover the cost of experiments to prove whether radium really exists. His own idea is that there is no such metal and that the phenomena from which its existence has been inferred are due to unknown combinations analogous to those which impart the property of phosphorescence to certain sulphides. He calls attention to the fact that what we usually call radium is simply the chloride or bromide of an unknown substance. A pure chloride, he says, is never phosphorescent, but becomes so when mixed with traces of certain other substances. He predicts that the result of the research that he proposes would be to derive from the so called chloride of radium nothing more than the well known metal barium and holds that the observed radio activity results simply from certain now unknown chemical combinations.—Youth's Companion.

Overtime.

"Richard," said the letter carrier's wife, "will you walk the floor with baby awhile?"

"Oh, I suppose so," grumbled the man, "but this night male carrying is fierce."

"Never mind, dear," was the comforting response; "it's a short route, you know."—Boston Transcript.

UNCLEANLY MILKMEN DENOUNCED

Nothing Less Than Murdering People Says Recorder

FINES OF $40

MONTREAL, Sept. 12— "You are doing nothing less than murdering people by using such filthy milk cans as those just shown to the court. Such persons as you ought not to be allowed to keep a store for the sale of food to the public. You are a disgrace to your business and you must expect no mercy when brough before me."

This was the scathing comment passed by Mr. Recorder Semple in the Recorder's Court yesterday morning, when James Charette, of 2119 St. Catherine street East, and Leandre Choquette, of 84 Stadcona street were charged with having filthy milk cans in use, the same being dangerous to the public health. Both the accused pleaded guilty.

Inspector Emard, inspector under the Food and Drugs Act, in his evidence, said he visited the premises of the accused Charette, and found a two gallon can in use. He had never, in all his experience, picked up a more filthy can. The inside of the can was thickly corroded with filth, and congealed stinking fluid, and which gave off a most offensive stench.

Charette, who seemed to take the evidence as a huge joke, leaned across the prisoner's bar and laughed loudly at intervals.

Mr. Recorder Semple, noticing the accused in his attitude, sternly ordered Charette to stand up, and then called the accused down in no half-hearted manner, one of the passages being as above stated.

Choquette said he did not know that his cans were in the condition they were found in by the inspector, He had cleaned them the previous week!

Inspector Saquin said, when he examined the cans, they were in a filthy state, one of them being very rusty inside, and thickly coated with green filth.

The Recorder fined the accused, both of whom keep small grocery stores, $40, or three months each, and ordered the cans to be confiscated.

...gs on Troubles which are Best Corrected by

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Sedentary Habits Beget Constipation

Man was intended to live an active, outdoor life, and his digestive system was modelled accordingly. Indoor work with hands or head, long hours sitting or standing still, especially in air that's none too good, slow down the healthy activities of stomach, liver, kidneys and the millions of tiny skin glands.

Constipation, headaches, indigestion, biliousness, rheumatism and similar troubles follow.

Then the worth of that good old reliable family medicine, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, is appreciated. Though it has been in use for over half a century, modern science has not been able to devise a safer or better cleanser for the whole system.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are largely vegetable in composition, free from any harmful drug, and mild yet most effective in their action. They are "Mother's standby" in hundreds of homes because they nip in the bud so many of the common ailments.

ALGONQUIN PARK IN SEPTEMBER

In the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, the month of September is one of the most beautiful of the year. The "Highland Inn" situated on Cache Lake 2,000 feet above sea level, offers all the comforts one may desire at reasonable rates. The region is a natural playground of over 2,500,000 acres, only 168 miles west of Ottawa and 200 miles north of Toronto, and those who love nature and the wild things that live in her confines can enjoy themselves there to their heart's content. For anyone whose nerves are troublesome, or through over-work needs a rest, or whose health is run down, there is not a more beneficial place in America.

Write to J. E. Coleson, Manager, "Highland Inn," Algonquin Park, Ont., for all particulars and illustrated booklet.

Left Several Millions.

MINEOLA, N.Y., Sept. 12.—The will of the late Dr. Oliver Livingstone Jones, father of "General" Rosalie Jones, the suffragette leader, leaves an estate valued from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 to his widow. Dr. Jones shot himself with a pistol at his home in New York and died Aug. 9. Whether his death was due to an accident or suicide, has not been ascertained. The will was filed and probated yesterday.

SOME MILLINERY DISPLAYS

The millinery show rooms of the local stores are the objective points of hundreds of exhibition visitors as the millinery displays are now on.

As usual the beautiful dressings of the windows, and the store displays are up to the high standard attained by those in charge.

AT ELLIOT'S.

The show room at Elliot's is beautifully decorated with palms and flowers for the millinery opening. The prominent colors are midnight blue, Madonna blue, cog de ruche, taupe, tate de nigar, black and white. There seems to be an abundance of tulle an diace trimmings.

Among the prettiest showings is a large picture hat with black tulle trimmings, soft crown and cog ruche mount.

Another is a pretty electric blue sailor trimmed with verise feather mount and moire ribbon. There is also a very handsome French model, long in shape with lace falling softly around the face. It is finished with a French feather mount.

One big feature is the smart tailored hats in various shapes. The buyer has just returned from the big purchasing centres, and has brought with her the very latest styles, and

AT CRESSMAN'S

One does not need to look far over the models shown in Cressman's to note the tendency towards velvets, velours and hatters' plush, in colors of blue, black, purple and Nigger brown. Ostrich feathers in various graceful mounts are a favored decoration, while ribbons and large bows are to be seen on every hand. Felt hats, as usual, may be found in smart shapes, trimmed with perfectly good taste in the correct Autumn styles.

The prominent shades in trimmings, are orange, purple, cerise, black and white. The large display windows, dressed by Mr. Edds, show taste and cleverness, and altogether the display is one of the best ever seen at Cressman's.

RICHARD HALL & SON.

The warm autumn designs displayed in the show windows of Richard Hall & Son strikes the passerby with amazement. The designs are c out in simple lines so as to sh the beauty of the season's newest merchandise displayed as, it is in realty. The color scheme is carried out in warm autumn tones of mauve and purple with the illumination exceptionally unique and artistic.

A very striking display of beautiful French afternoon reception fabrics is now on view.

As one enters the store the eye is met with the unusual interior decorations that surround the store. On each pillar is a lattice-work in beautiful scroll design handsomely arranged with beautiful autumn tints with foliage.

Through the store on every counter displayed are the numerous what-nots, so important to the milady of fashion.

The millinery room dressed in its grandeur, reveals to the discriminating woman of fashion, conceptions supreme of exclusive models and Fifth avenue and Parisian styles. The firm this season has one of the best millinery departments of any season yet.

The ready to wear department is not to be overlooked.

A number of the foremost styles and coats, suits, dresses, waists and numerous accessories are to be found in comprehensive variety.

The home furnishings department is also specially arranged in newest artistic designs, imported rugs, draperies for the home.

Great credit is due to Mr. J. McNabb, the efficient window dresser and advertising manager of the firm for his artistic work and remarkable ability.

POLICE ARE PUZZLED

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—Montreal police officials have a complete enigma on their hands just now in the person of a man in a trance, who was first arrested Wednesday for loitering. Since then the prisoner has been unable to utter a single word but continues to stare in front of him with his eyes bulging out of his head. Far from knowing his name, the police do not even know his nationality.

Is This Babel?

The latest archaeological discovery in proof of tradition, if not of history, is that of the Tower of Babel, according to a report submitted by the Abbe Henri de Genouillac before the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres of Paris.

The Abbe was sent out by the French Institute on a mission of research to El Abymer, 80 miles south of Bagdad, not far from the Euphrates, where he uncovered the remains of the city of Kiss, one of the earliest capitals of Babylonia, and even antedating Babylon itself. Here he unearthed an immense palace, similar in construction to other early royal buildings, already discovered in other sections of the country.

Among other relics of the distant past which he found in the coutryard of this palace, were the ruins of an immensely high tower, which he believes to have been the original of the Bible story of the Tower of Babel, the name inscribed on the wall being: "The Temple of the Foundation of Heaven and Earth," which was erected to the memory of the National god, Zamama.

GOLD LOCKET IS PRESENTED

To Mr. Wm. Fleming Who Leaves Auburn Woolen Mill After Thirty Years

Mr. Wm. Fleming, 785 Water street, who for some thirty years has been connected with the Auburn Woollen Mills, was presented with an address and gold locket last evening by his fellow-employes at the mills. Mr. Fleming has severed his connection with the Woollen Company, but will not leave the city.

The address was read as follows:

Mr. Wm. Fleming,

Dear Sir,—We, who have been with you in work, in years of labor, and the success of your mechanical ideas, learn with regret that you are to sever your connection with us for a new venture in business and a different field of labor.

Our various experiences of your constant devotion to our interests manifest much good feeling. Your work was cheerfully and energetically executed to a finish in the long years with us.

We extend a general wish that you climb to the highest rung in the ladder of success when apart from one of Peterborough's most flourishing industries. In all departments of life, in society and public, in our trials of life, as in joys, you have discharged your duties with large credit. We appreciate all this; we are glad to remember.

We wish you to further receive another slight token of your service in the acceptance of this locket.

We all join you in wishing you success and happiness for many years to come. We say good-bye.

Signed on behalf of the Weaving department.

YOUNG URCHIN ASKED FOR BREAD

He Said His Mother Sent Him for Some Pieces

A young urchin of not more than ten years of age, sauntered up to the lunch counter at the Boston Cafe last evening and asked one of the waiters for some pieces of bread.

The lad's clothes were in tatters, and his face was badly in need of scrubbing.

He said his mother sent him for the bread, but he would not give his name nor tell where he lived.

His game was successful, and he left the cafe with a dozen or more slices and crusts of bread.

MORE MONEY FOR MISSIONS

Funds of Methodest Church Show Great Gain

The total amount paid to Missions in the Methodist Church for the past year has reached the splendid total of $637,216,30. With one exception, British Columbia, there has been an increase in the amount given by every Conference in the Dominion. Adding the amounts received from interest on legacies and from legacies and donations the total reaches the sum of $758,577,95.

The returns of the various Conferences are as follows: Toronto $158,708.48, London, 79,290.14; Hamilton, $88,820.90; Bay of Quinte, $59,985.79; Montreal, $76,778.70, Nova Scotia, $18,285,07; N. B. and P. E. I., $14,238.13; Newfoundland, $18,116,85; Manitoba, $46,944.51; Saskatchewan, $31-953.94, Alberta, $25,206.51; British Columbia, $27,802.24— total $637,216-30.

The greatest increase are in Toronto, $19,188.45; and Montreal, $11-702.85.

THE NEW WEST WARD SCHOOL

Four Rooms Seated With Desks Will Open Monday

Four rooms of the new school have been seated with desks from the old West Ward School, and these rooms will be opened on Monday morning.

The other rooms will not be ready for a week, as the new desks have not yet arrived.

The pupils who have been attending the old West Ward School will report at the new school on Monday morning, but the other pupils will have to wait another week before they can be admitted.

Amusing Errors in Official Reports.

To the list of misprints in official documents must be added the delicious sentence which appeared in the final report of the Vivisection Commission issued last year: "We now see a marmot, the spinal cord of which had previously been divided by a vivisector." This should have read, according to a Parliamentary paper circulated subsequently: "We once saw a marmot, the spinal cord of which had previously been divided, bite a vivisector."

A little slip in the 1907 edition of the Royal Warrant detailing the various Army rates of pay also necessitated the printing and promulgation of an official correction. In that warrant, under the heading, "Daily Rates of Pay," appeared: "Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, Mediterranean, £5,000." This gave to the Duke of Connaught the generous remuneration of nearly £2,000,000 a year until the correction explained that "daily rate" in this case should have been "yearly rate."

HOW TO TREAT ALL SKIN TROUBLE

Greasy Ointments No Use---Must Be Cured Through the Blood

It is not a good thing for people with a tendency to have pimples and a blotchy complexion to smear themselves with greasy ointments. In fact they couldn't do anything worse, because the grease clogs the pores of the skin, making the disease worse. When there is an irritating rash a soothing boracic wash may help allay the pain or itching but of course it doesn't cure the trouble. Skin complaints arise from an impure condition of the blood and will persist until the blood is purified. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many cases of eczema and skin diseases because they make new, rich blood that drives out the impurities, clears the skin and imparts a glow of health. The following proof is offered. Mrs. Fred Tremble, Gunter, Ont., says: "For more than a year I was steadily afflicted with salt rheum or eczema. My hands were so sore that I could not put them in water without the skin cracking open. I tried all sorts of ointments recommended for the trouble, but they did not do me a particle of good. I was told Dr. Williams' Pink Pills would cure the trouble, and began taking them. I took the pills steadily for six or eight weeks and they completely cured the trouble. This was several years ago and I have never been bothered with it since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HARDLY had the first straw hat made its appearance last spring than a few velvet shapes appeared, and by the time that the season was in full swing in Paris the velvet hat was a summer instead of a winter fashion. The early importations from Paris for autumn show, above all, velvet hats that are very much on the same lines as those being worn at the races and at the Deauville and other fashionable European resorts. They are adorned with tulle butterflies, standing wired lace ruffles, aigrettes, paradise ornaments and fantasies made of feathers or birds' plumes.

All the velvet hats are not of the same shape by any means. Some, strictly along Tam o' Shanter lines, range from Rembrandt shapes to curious little forms that look like bakers' caps, but on closer inspection are found to be small, round caplike hats of velvet with an upstanding double ruffle about the brim that from some views makes it look beret shaped when the crown is hidden out of sight behind the ruffle. The Directoire poke hat and bonnet make another style of velvet hat.

They cap the head closely and have tall plume and aigrette ornaments that are startlingly high and a strand of velvet or fur that goes under the chin. These make delightfully quaint frames for the face. A few hair strands are drawn down over the forehead to soften the trying line of the close brim. Besides the plain velvet hats, those with the gathered ruffled brims, smooth crown sides and soft tops are very becoming, for they can be bent into becoming lines about the face, especially where the ultra fashionable style of hairdressing is followed. Gathered lace brims are also used with velvet crowns. A very extreme shape is a cap such as was worn by pages in mediaeval times, a soft, rather pointed crown of velvet with a band of fur about the brim. This is set rather well forward on the head.

Birds' plumes are to have an unusual vogue. They are a feature of the millinery season, and the hats covered by them are more carefully designed and have less of the ready made look than formerly. All sorts of fanciful ornaments, tall, straight and slender, are made from these birds' plumes, to replace the aigrette and paradise, and some of them are so artistic that they deserve instant success.

The sizes of the hats are often disproportionate to their trimming and in the figures on this page only the artistic placing of the uncurled paradise ornament saves it from being bizarre. The tiny hat is of white satin, the top of the crown is soft, the sides are banded by the folded [illegible] and the tiny [illegible] is finished with a wide double fold. A very smart one piece dress model is worn with this hat, [illegible] shaped skirt folded over in front. The waist fastens down the front with [illegible] ivory buttons, the buttonholes [illegible]. The front fulness of the blouse is shaped by being drawn into a [illegible] piping. The sleeves are of [illegible] shortness, stopping above the elbow. A wide black velvet belt folds into two wide loops in front.

A small close hat, almost caplike, though it has a narrow rolling brim that lays flat against the crown sides, is so swathed with black satin folds as to look like an Arab's turban. The short, curled aigrettes are stuck into these folds so that they form a sort of halo around the turban top, longer ones being placed at one side.

Some of the new beret shapes of velvet are tiptilted in a manner not unlike that of the [illegible] shapes. One of these hat- in black velvet is trimmed on the turned up side with loops and a paradise ornament. A hat covered with white birds' plumes is faced with white velvet banded with white satin ribbon and has a winged ornament in front.

The pretty modish ruffle that adorns the autumn hat is a welcome change from the other severe shapes. These ruffles are generally of Chantilly lace, though sometimes of taffeta or velvet, and are posed on the upper brim somewhere without any reference to the brim itself. A wired edge and a few cross wires give it the necessary support so that it does not lose its light and airy look after a few wearings. In the model here the hat is on the poke shaped order and the brim is covered with jetted net. The crown is a cap like one of black velvet and the lower edge of the ruffle is gartered with a moire ribbon. Three large bunches of aigrettes are posed at the back, and baroque pearl hatpins, held by filigree setting, add to the decorative quality of the hat.

A very small and smart hat in Directoire shape, covered with white taffeta, is [illegible] and faced with black satin. The white taffeta makes lovely large tailored loops, which are caught with a white taffeta buckle.

Some of the tulle ruffles that adorn hats are very scant and transparent. One model, a small black taffeta hat with a very tiny brim and a crown with the new soft top, has two large ruffles of pale pink tulle tucked into the brim.

PICK-UP SEWING.

Keep some sewing downstairs, so that if one of the family offers to read aloud in the evening or some one comes in during the day to make a long call you will find something ready to do while listening or talking. To make this plan work in the best way put with the bit of hand sewing everything you will need to finish it; then you will not have to interrupt the reading or conversation to get something that has been forgotten.

THE SPORTING WORLD

HOBEY BAKER
(PRINCETON)

Football practice at Princeton has already started and the coaches are facing a problem as serious as ever presented itself in the work of evolving what all Princeton men hope will be a championship team. It will be necessary to develop almost an entirely new team, as graduation deprived the squad of the best men.
"Hobey" Baker, last year's sensational player and this year's captain, is the only star left, and around him the team will be built.

SPORT WRITERS CLAIM FIGHT WAS ON THE LEVEL

CALGARY, ALB., Sept. 13.—Tommy Burns' emphatic denial that there was ever any frame-up with Pelky for their six round bout is confirmed by local newspaper men who were with Pelky until he retired every night before the fight, and the opinion prevails here that Pelky is making a grandstand play for the limelight. The opinion is being expressed that the nervous strain of the trial for manslaughter in the McCarthy case has proven too much for the mind of the fighter, and anyone who saw the Burns-Pelky fight does not believe it was a frame-up.

"Pelky owes me money, and a great deal of it. I had to finance his trial and that cost several thousand dollars, and now that Pelky threatens legal action, he will have plenty of it. He owes me much more than he claims I owe him," said Burns.

THE BOUT IS OFF.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—There will be no bout between Gunboat Smith and Sam Langford, as proposed, at Madison Square Garden on September 19, nor at any other time as long as the New York State Athletic Commission as now constituted exists. At a special meeting of the Commissioners here yesterday, Jim Buckley and Joe Woodman, respective managers of Smith and Langford, requested that the rule adopted last year prohibiting bouts between white and negro pugilists be rescinded. After a few minutes' deliberation the Commissioners refused to change the rules, at the same time giving the applicants to understand that for the best interests of the sport the prohibition of such bouts had worked well in this city.

Attempts to interfere with non-federation men going to work and disturbing the peace were charged against the women and two of the men.

NOGGIN COULDN'T HEAR TILL MAGISTRATE SAID 30 DAYS

Fines in Police Court Cases To-day

Bedecked in his holiday attire, with a huge flaming red tie, Wm. Noggin, a treaty Indian from Rice Lake appeared in Police Court this morning, on the charge of being drunk. He was assessed $8.75 to be paid forthwith.

"Billy" appeared to be rather hard of hearing, but when the Magistrate told him that he would have to take thirty days unless he could pay his fine, Billy popped up from his post in the dock and advised the court that he thought he could get somebody to pay his fine if they would give him time.

Leonard Clark, a local man, charged with being drunk, was fined $5.75 to be paid forthwith.

Wm. Kelly was fined $5.75 on a drunk charge.

FINE OF $13.75

Robert Irwin, a blacklister was fined $13.75 to be paid forthwith.

THE LOCAL MARKET

Peterboro, Sept. 13th—With the Exhibition as a magnet, the farmers poured into the city this morning, and the market was very largely attended. The outside section was particularly large.

From a general look, one could see tomatoes very prominent, and would be tempted to consider the crop of that particular fruit plentiful. On asking a few questions, however, that idea would be changed. The dry spell that swept through the province about a month ago put a crimp into the tomatoes' growth, and then the frost last Monday night helped to diminish them. They are selling from $1.60 to $1.75 per bushel and will probably go higher.

The other crops, such as potatoes, apples and pears, are considered fair. One man stated to The Review that he had 200 barrels of apples last year, and this year he has a little over 100.

There is no change in dairy and poultry. The quotations:

THE LIFE OF A MARTYR

Was In Agony For Years And Nothing Gave Him Relief Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives" The Famous Medicine Made From Fruit.

ALFRED FERRIS, ESQ.

PENETANGUISHENE, ONT., March 4th, 1913

"I want to inform you of what your remedy "Fruit-a-tives" did for me.

"For years, I was a martyr to Dyspepsia and Constipation, often having to leave work from the agonizing pains of Acute Indigestion. Doctors treated me continually, but without satisfactory results. It seemed to me that I tried every advertised medicine on the market, and got no relief.

"On one of the days that I was compelled to absent myself from work, a neighbor came to my house to whom I told of my suffering, and he said to me that all I had to do, if I had Dyspepsia, was to take "Fruit-a-tives". They would cure me. He had cured himself. I immediately procured a 50c box and continued taking them until cured. I suppose I took in all, about eleven boxes and I am glad to be able to say that I have been free of Indigestion for nearly two years. They cured the Constipation also. They were worth their weight in gold to me and I will be glad to have you publish this letter, along with my photo, if it will induce another dyspeptic to take the right road to a permanent cure."

Yours truly, ALFRED FERRIS.

Don't suffer any longer. To-day—right now—get "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. "Fruit-a-tives" will sweeten the stomach—strengthen the stomach muscles, increase the quantity of digestive juices, regulate Kidneys and Bowels, and make the digestion as sound as a bell. "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Belching Gas, Bloated Feeling after eating, and all other disorders of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MAY ROBSON

In James Forbes Latest Comedy Success

Miss May Robson comes to the Grand Opera House, Tuesday, Sept. 16th, for one night, in the latest comedy success, "Mrs. Mat Plummer," by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady," "The Traveling Salesman," Etc. Miss Robson is so universally well-known, and as James Forbes' name is a meritable trade mark, it is needless to say that the theatre-loving public will have an opportunity to witness the comedy treat of the season, as "Mrs. Mat Plummer," has been highly spoken of wherever it has appeared.

Miss Robson has secured a most excellent cast for this season's tour, chief of whom are the following, Mr. Paul Decker, Mr. Hamilton Christy, Mr. Lewis Parmemeur, Mr Walter Turner, Mr. Eddie Leaman, Mr. Edmund Pardy, Mr. Roy Zabriskie, ZMiss Evelyn Varden, Miss Evelyn Carpentier, Miss Edith Conrad, Miss Geraldine Griffith and several others of note and reputation. 25

MAUDE ADAMS

Coming to the Grand on Thursday Sept. 18th in Her Most Famous Success Peter Pan

The coming of Maude Adams to the Grand Opera House, one night only, Thursday, Sept. 18th, when Charles Frohman is to present her in Barrie's fairy play, "Peter Pan," is one of the bright and cheerful events of the theatrical year. Few plays have been given to the stage that succeeded in taking so strong a hold on the public as has this fantasy by the Scotch dramatist. As last Christmas time it had its ninth revival in London and in New York its fourth. The play was also given at holiday time in Berlin, where it promises to be all of the success that it has been in England and in this country. "Peter Pan" will always remain young and it has endeared itself to many Americans through the fact that it presents their favorite actress in a role, that of the boy who wouldn't grow up, in which she is seen at her best. The beautiful eternal youth which Barrie personifies in "Peter Pan" is suggested in every motion by Miss Adams. The play itself is a fairy story written for grown-ups. It transports one to the Never-Never, Never Land. One leaves his cares and his years behind and he sees again the bright, glittering dreams of childhood, where the forces of evil are contending against the good, and where, as in our one time idea of life and things, the pure and the true, though, oft times almost vanquished, are always eventually the protagonists prevailing against the powers of darkness. It is claimed that there is nothing in all current literature that makes children of us again for a night as does this play. That Miss Adams will be welcomed in Barrie's classic is a certainty. Mr Frohman has surrounded the actress with a strong company and given the play a series of elaborate settings.

THE LADY OF OSTEND

Mr. Lawrence Brough's All-Canadian Tour 1913-1914.

Sir Francis Burnand's farcical comedy "The Lady of Ostend" which will be Mr. Brough's vehicle for his outward journey, is said to be written in the happiest vein of the famous editor of "Punch" not only from the viewpoint of dialogue but also as regards the wealth of amusing situations. From start to finish "The Lady of Ostend" is reputed to grotesquely amusing after the style of Charley's Aunt and The Private Secretary, and welded together in such way as to compel the merriment of its audiences. Although the lady gives the piece its title there is yet another even more prominent role; it is that of her victim who is the head and front of the comedy. He is a young man of impressionable temperament, and the lady, who has been commissioned by an enterprising film firm to secure ludicrous subjects, easily makes him her prey. At the Belgian watering place she plays her part so well that he is unwittingly captured by the camera and is later turned into a moving picture subject in circumstances that prove only too well and conclusively that he is in holiday mood and not averse from participating in the gaieties, not to say frivolities of Ostend. The chance view of the "movies" as seen by the young holiday maker's wife subsequently is said to lead to situations of merriment for the audience and embarrassment for the husband-subject. The cast supporting Mr. Brough is all English. Miss Olga Esme is the leading woman. Grand Opera Huose, Saturday, Sept. 20th, matinee and night. 25

DRAMATIC RECITAL

Monday Next

On Sept. 15, at the Grand Opera House, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Peterborough Health Association, a presentation of "To-Morrow" will be given by Mme. Labadie whi is recognized as the foremost dramatic interpreter of the present day, leading and upholding the art of interpretation—a dominant personality as Scott Siddons and Charlotte Cushman in their time.

For three years Mme. Labadie has been making an extensive tour of the United States and Canada with many return trips through various sections to appear again in new plays and repeat former successes before her delighted audiences. In all parts even unto Nome in the farthest recesse sof Alaska, whither she journeyed through the Yukon one summer to escape the noise of the cities and to breathe the wonderful air from the jagged ice crowned mountains she has given only the best dramas from the pen of leading European and American authors of the day—plays that live and will be remembered long afterwards by all who have ever heard them, because they all treat of some fact in life, some problem now before us, each opening up avenues of thought that lead to some new vista of the future.

Of her methods of presentation, Clarence Urmy, a well known California poet and critic, wrote recently in part:

"A perfect entertainment; that is the one phrase which exactly describes the reading last even given by Madame Harriet Labadie at the Victory.

As a dramatic interpreter of plays Mme Labadie is certainly unique. Never in the history of the San Jose stage, at least, not in the past quarter of a century, has an entertainment like that of last evening been attempted, and it may be that another 25 years may go by without our experiencing anything in the line of solo dramatic interpretation which will at all compare with last evening's perfect joy Perhaps Mme. Labadie will come back to us some day. Heaven grant it, for we need just such leaven in these days when so much of the work on the stage is devoted to aimless piffle, egregious folly and ragtime sigmarole.

Mme. Labadie is a genius who makes you see and hear with the eyes and ears of a soul a prophetess, crying in the wilderness: "Make straight the path of dramatic righteousness."

HEAVY ATTENDANCE AT FAIR TOTALS OVER 15,000 PEOPLE

Increased Receipts From All Departments Will Assist Directors In Their Proposal To Erect New Buildings---Programme This Afternoon and Evening

The attendance at the Exhibition Grounds on Friday went over the 15,000 mark, which was attained last year on the first big day.

Another bumper crowd is expected to-day and the aggregate attendance should show a slight increase over the 1912 Exhibition.

This is very satisfactory to the directors. It has been stated some time ago to The Review that with continued success this year, the proposal to erect new buildings would possibly become a certainty. Most assuredly, the receipts will show a big gain and money is a very talkative item with the Fair Directors. The increased number of exhibits means increased funds and when the finances of the fair reach a final settlement, there should be a goodly balance on the right side.

"If we have good weather" has been the pass word among the fair directors this past month, and they promised that if such were the case the Exhibition would be the largest in history. Last night the weather was ideal and the directors surely kept their promise. From early in the evening the crowds poured in, and long ere the main program began the exhibition ground fences were containing a larger crowd than they ever did before.

The live stock department drew a large amount of attention and everybody agreed that a finer lot of beasts could not be found on the continent. Surely, this part of Ontario should be proud. In the poultry tent there was a continual stream of people, and many commented on the class and quality of the hens, roosters, ducks and geese that were on exhibition. One need not leave this section to receive the worth of the price of admission Not only is it interesting but it is also very educative, for the various breeds are marked, and it is very easy to become acquainted with them.

The main building was thronged all evening, and the various divisions, especially the ones fitted by the local business men. The famous Hunt Carpet exhibited by Richard Hall & Son is a great attraction.

The grandstand was crowded, and those who were lucky enough to obtain a seat received ample reward. The vaudeville put on in front of the stand was first class. The performers had become used to the platform and were more at home. Their acrobatic stunts and aerial gymnasts were well received. The directors are to be complimented on obtaining such a fine lot of performers.

The 57th Regimental band once more enlivened the vast crowd with their welcome music, and added greatly toward the entertainment.

The evening was brought to a close with a grand display of fireworks the equal of which was never seen in this or any other inland town in the province.

To-night will be the last and big night. The directors have ordered that nothing is to be removed till after the fireworks is over, so if you want to spend a good evening in a sociable and profitable way, take in the Fair.

Her young man said that he did not know as he had never tried it.

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the housewife finds the numerous duties of house a burden, in fact every walk of life suffers from depleted nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. ## HUERTA'S MESSAGE TO-DAY AWAITED WITH ANXIETY

United States Officials Fear He May Announce His Candidacy in Coming Presidential Elections—Huerta Government is Planning an Ovation For Ruler as Parade of Strength.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Important developments in the Mexican situation are expected here in the next two days. To-day the Mexican Congress assembles and there is a hopeful feeling in Washington that President Huerta in his address to that body will make known that he will not become a candidate for the Presidency in the constitutional elections. There are fears that patriotic fervor may lead to demonstrations against the United States.

However, advices to the State Department are to the effect that efforts of the Huerta Government to make the celebration the occasion for a great patriotic outburst with the object of showing how strongly Gen. Huerta and his Administration are entrenched in the hearts of the people have not met with success. This lethargy is interpreted to mean that the Mexican people are tired of the continual warfare and will welcome peace. Should the celebration of the holiday take on an aspect of silent disapproval of the Government's course, officials here will be encouraged to believe that the end of the Mexican troubles are in sight and that overtures for a restoration of normal conditions will be welcomed shortly by all factions in the republic.

Should Gen. Huerta publicly announce that he will not be a candidate for President in next month's elections this Government will follow out its course in asking Gen. Huerta to give assurances along the line that has been indicated, and that the mission on which ex-Governor John Lind was sent to Mexico by President Wilson has been successful in the main. With Huerta out of the Presidential race, the U. S. Government will be willing to accept the result of the elections.

IS MADE PROFESSOR.

New Associate in Animal Husbandry at O. A. C Is Wm. Reek.

GUELPH, Sept. 15.—Wm. Reek, B. S. A., has been secured by the Ontario Agricultural College as successor to Mr. R. W. Wade in the associate professorship of animal husbandry, the latter having been appointed to a directorship of the Ontario live stock branch and secretary of the Provincial Winter Fair.

Mr. Reek is a native of Kent County. He graduated from the O. A. C. in the year 1900, and after graduation was secured by the college as demonstrator in physics, applying himself particularly to drainage. From this position he went as private secretary to Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and when the latter was taken up by the Dominion Government Mr. Reek resigned to become an assistant in the immigration department at London, England.

REMARKABLE CURES AT LOURDES

Woman Throws Away Her Crutches—Children Get Well.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The Daily Mail's medical correspondent who has gone to Lourdes, where some 10,000 pilgrims have gathered for the purpose of investigating miraculous "cures," telegraphs a description of three new cures, over which he says all Lourdes is palpitating with excitement. The first case is that of a woman fifty-one years of age, who for four years was completely crippled by rheumatism in her leg. She was only able to crawl with great difficulty and with crutches. Returning from a visit to the shrine she suddenly felt power returning to her leg, threw away the crutches and walked easily and painlessly for the first time in four years.

The second case is that of a little girl nine years old, and deaf and dumb, who was afflicted with St. Vitus' dance from an attack of scarlet fever three years ago. Saturday morning while dressing she surprised her mother, saying "I have lost my shoe." Afterwards when medically examined she was able to speak and showed none of the typical twitching of St. Vitus' dance. Her hearing, though still somewhat defective in the right ear, is apparently normal.

The third is that of a boy of seven years, who suffered from advanced tubercular disease in the hip. He could barely hobble with crutches. After a visit to the shrine he suddenly declared that he no longer needed crutches, and walked by himself.

All the cases previously described continue to show further improvement.

Grace Maloney on Friday suddenly regained the power of her knee, which was deformed and useless for nine years through paralysis. She joined all the processions, walking unaided by crutches and without any limp.

THE BENEVOLENCE OF UNCLE SAM

The putting of grains on the free list by the United States only emphasizes the fact, as the markets show from day to day, that free wheat is vastly more to the advantage of the United States than to Canada. Why did the United States make wheat free? For Canada's benefit?

BOTHA SIGNED UNDER THREAT.

Rumor Says South African Ministers Were Forced.

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 15.—Sensational stories are current regarding the conference between the Government officials and the mine leaders, which resulted in a settlement of the gold strike on July 5 last. Some of the labor leaders assert that Gen. Botha, ex-Premier of the Union of South Africa, and Gen. Smuts, Minister of the Interior, Mines and Defence, were compelled at the point of a revolver to sign the agreement.

Gn. Smuts has issued a denial of this.

After the settlement was signed at the Carlton Hotel, according to Secretary Bain of the trades federation, and Secretary Mathews, of the Miners' Association, all the conferees stood on the balcony of the hotel and observed soldiers with rifles levelled ready to fire at the crowd of demonstrators in the street. Two of the labor leaders again covered Gen. Botha and Gen. Smuts with revolvers.

"One more shot and you are dead," said one of them. The Ministers thereupon commanded the soldiers not to shoot.

Explorers' Ship Ice Bound.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 15.—A special cable to The Post Intelligencer from Nome, Alaska, says that the schooner Polar Bear, commanded by Capt. Louis Lane, which has on board eastern scientists, big game hunters and photographers, was imprisoned when she left Nome, so that she will have to winter in the Arctic.

The likelihood that the vessel would be caught in the ice has been considered before the ship entered the Arctic Ocean. No alarm for the boat is felt in Seattle.

Driven Ashore by Bush Fires.

QUEBEC, Sept. 15.—The steamer Whakatane, bound from New Zealand ports to Montreal, ran ashore Saturday morning at Indian Cove, a few miles east of this port.

A bush fire was raging on the south shore of the St. Lawrence Saturday night and the smoke from it covered the river like a fog. It is supposed that this caused the helmsman of the Whakatane to lose his bearings, for the ship was steered straight into the cove, apparently at full speed.

The Whakatane, curiously enough ran clear over the submerged portion of the old Allan Line Bavarian, which was beached in Indian Cove, and it is feared that her bottom plates were badly ripped. Her nose is twenty feet on the rocks.

Mill Is Blown Up.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Sept. 15—A score of men were burned, six of them seriously, in a series of explosions that shattered the walls of the Clover Leaf Milling Co.'s plant on Babcock street near Seneca street, early Saturday. Fire followed the explosions, and the elevator, flour mill and storehouse were destroyed, causing a loss of over $200,000.

In the first hour's excitement many of the workmen suffering from slight burns hurried away to their homes, and for a time it was believed that five men had lost their lives.

NOTED POLITICIAN MISSING

T. D. SULLIVAN.

"Big Tim" Sullivan, of New York, the well known Tammany Hall politician and member of the present Congress, has been missing from the house of his brother, where he has been living. All his friends have been searching for him without avail. Since he is suffering from a mental and physical breakdown fear is entertained that he has met with foul play.

POLICE TRACE CULPRIT IN DISMEMBERED BODY CASE

Rev. Hans Schmidt, Assistant Rector of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church is Reported to Have Confessed to the Crime.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—With the arrest early yesterday of the Rev. Hans Schmidt, assistant rector of the St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, charged with the murder of Anna Aumuller, a domestic, the mystery surrounding the finding twelve days ago of parts of the dismembered body of a girl, in the Hudson River, was solved. Schmidt, according to the police reports of his arrest, has confessed, and at the time of his arrest, attempted to commit suicide, by cutting his throat with a safety razor blade.

"I killed her because I loved her so much," Schmidt is alleged to have told his captors, but the police version of the motive for the crime is that the young woman was about to become a mother. He had married her through a ceremony of his own performing, without witnesses.

According to the police and the district attorney's office, Schmidt's confession was full and complete. In it he is quoted as saying that he killed his companion with a butcher knife, and cut up the body with a knife and saw. The deed was committed, the police say, while the woman slept, shortly after midnight on Sept. 2, in an apartment at No. 68 Bradhurst avenue, where the priest had placed her five days before.

Five bundles wrapped in bedclothes and papers were made of the six parts. Five times Schmidt left the apartment house with a bundle to cross the Hudson River to the Jersey shore. Five times he leaned over the ferryboat in midstream and gently gave the river his burden. Then he returned to his church.

The stains of the girl's blood still discolored the bathtub when detectives searched the Bradhurst avenue apartment yesterday. Schmidt told the police he had taken the mattress on which she lay when dealt the death blow under cover of darkness, to a vacant lot nearby and burned it.

Police found in the apartment, among other things, a marriage license issued in New York last February and bearing the names of the priest and the married woman. This license had been used. According to Schmidt's confession, he went through a marriage ceremony with the girl. In this ceremony Schmidt was both priest and bridegroom; there were no witnesses.

A gayly-colored pillow of unusual pattern led to Schmidt's apprehension. This pillow, stained with blood, and soiled with the filth of the river was wrapped around a portion of the torso. The detectives traced the pillow to its manufacturers; the manufacturers traced it to the dealer, the dealer traced it to Schmidt. And the police, tracing Schmidt and the girl, knew all about them hours before they arrested him.

Schmidt was arrested by Inspector Faurot in charge of the detective bureau. The priest was dressed in full clerical garb when the detective entered his rooms in the parish house of his church at 405 West 125th street. The inspector had produced a photograph of Miss Aumuller and asked Schmidt if he knew the girl. The priest, after a moment of hesitation, inquired if his visitors were police officers. His action indicated that he was expecting arrest. He then asked permission to change his clothes and it was when he left the room that Inspector Faurot declared that he attempted to cut his throat with a small safety razor blade.

While not denying that the Rev. Hans Schmidt had been ordained and had been permitted to officiate at services in this city, an authoritative statement issued yesterday after his arrest from the head of the New York diocese characterized him as a "wanderer" and not a priest of the diocese, and was not so recognized, although he was assigned to assist the rectors of its churches.

CARRIED THROUGH WINDOW.

Montreal Motorist Forgot To Leave Clutch Out.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—W. B. Chambers was carried sixty feet across St. Catharine street yesterday on the tonneau of his automobile and forced through a heavy plate glass window, receiving serious injuries. Chambers attempted to crank his machine with the gear cut in and clung to the tonneau to save himself from being crushed beneath its wheels.

Almost at the same hour a machine ran wild in St. Paul street and crashed into the front door of old Bonsecours church, startling a small-sized congregation.

In both instances the machines were wrecked, but Mr. Chambers was the only one to sustain injuries.

Charged With Arson.

KINGSTON, Sept. 15.—Frederick Gabriel and Alexander C. Mains, former members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, were placed under arrest on Saturday by the local police, charged with arson in connection with the burning of the riding school and stores at the Royal Military College on June 10.

The men were held on suspicion for several weeks at Tete do Pont barracks. Both entered the plea of not guilty, and the case is set for next Thursday. Mains and Gabriel were employed in the riding school, which was badly gutted by fire.

THAW COULDN'T GO TO CHURCH

Sheriff Didn't Want to Parade Him on Sunday.

COLEBROOK, N.H., Sept. 15.—The protection of the U. S. courts had not actually come to Harry K. Thaw last night. Though his council obtained a writ of habeas corpus Saturday from Federal Judge Aldrich at Concord, the writ was not served on Sheriff Drew yesterday, and the Thaw lawyers said last night that it probably would not be served until this afternoon. On Tuesday morning, Thaw will be taken before Judge Aldrich at Littleton, when arguments on the writ will be heard.

Thaw spent a quiet Sunday, his fifth away from Matteawan. He did not even go out for a walk. He expressed a desire to attend the Methodist Church, but the sheriff said that he (the sheriff) had not been going to church much of late, and feared if he went it might establish a precedent under which his wife would compel him to attend regularly hereafter.

He made this explanation with a smile, and said later that his real reason for not taking Thaw out was that Colebrook had been upset enough already over the fugitive and he thought it best not to parade him on the quiet of the Sabbath.

As it was the corridors of the Monadnock House, where Thaw is held, was crowded with country folk throughout the day. They had driven or motored in from their homes in the hope of getting a glimpse of Thaw. But only those who were willing to pay for a meal and see Thaw at a table had their curiosity satisfied.

First Full Cargo of Wheat.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Sept. 15.—The first full cargo of 1913 wheat to go down the lakes was taken out by the steamer Yorktown Saturday. She carried 18,000 bushels, having loaded at Thunder Bay and Port Arthur elevators for Montreal.

Other shipments were by the Hamiltonian for Montreal, 10,980 bushels of barley. Vessels now loading are the Donnacona, King Mount and Gordon.

On Charge of Theft of Hides.

GUELPH, Sept. 15.—Warrants are out for the arrest of Victor De Quett and Charles Plunkett, two young men recently discharged from the Provincial Prison Farm, on a charge of theft of two beef hides from the farm. The hides were bought by a firm in the city for $5.80 and subsequently sold for $15. It is known that the men purchased tickets for Hamilton, and every effort will be made to locate them.

Gold Rush In British Columbia.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 15—Confirmation of the recent gold strike on Saybola Creek, near Telkay, B.C., has been brought to the latter point by prospectors. Bedrock has not yet been reached. Panning in the creek shows coarse gold in every case. There is a big rush for Aldermere and Telkey.

CARSON SAYS ULSTER WILL NEVER ABANDON POSITION

CONFERENCE SAID TO BE USELESS

Leader of Ulster Unionists Declares That Lord Loreburn's Suggestion of a Meeting Between Opposing Forces For Settlement of Home Rule Question is Impossible.

DURHAM, Eng., Sept. 15.—Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists, in a speech here Saturday night, declared that Ulster never would abandon the principle for which she had fought, of being governed by an Imperial Parliament, with an executive responsible to that Parliament.

This declaration was made with reference to the recent proposal of Earl Loreburn, former Lord High Chancellor, that there should be a conference between the great political parties, with a view to settlement of the Irish question by consent. Sir Edward said that the very proposal showed that thinking men were beginning to realize the gravity of the situation. But, he added, between those he represented and Redmond's party, there was a gulf no conference could bridge.

With Mr. Redmond, it was not a question of good government, but of separate nationality; with Ulster it was government by the Imperial Parliament. These two views were irreconcilable, here was not the slightest use of pretending to hold a conference which must prove abortive.

"I would be false to my people," said the Ulster leader, "if I gave the slightest encouragement to the idea that any local man of Ulster was prepared to give up even to the slightest degree, the protection of the Imperial Parliament and executive which now govern us."

Wants King To Intervene.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Wm. O'Brien, Irish Nationalist member of Parliament for Cork City, suggests that King George participate in the scheme of Earl Loreburn, ex-Lord High Chancellor, who recently appealed to the great political parties to confer with a view to reaching a settlement of the Irish question by consent, on the ground that the present home rule bill could not provide a permanent solution.

"Neither the Liberal, the Unionist nor the Redmonite party can or will refuse to join in the conference if invited by the King," is Mr. O'Brien's comment on the widespread opposition to the proposal.

The Earl of Aberdeen, whose resignation as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was sent as an unconfirmed rumor Friday to The Daily Citizen by a Dublin correspondent, replied to a telegraphic enquiry Saturday that the rumor of his resignation was unfounded.

Leaders In Conference.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The presence of two of the most prominent Conservatives of the two Houses of Parliament at Balmoral, as the King's guests, Andrew Bonar Law, who is the titular leader of the Opposition, and Lord Curzon of Kedleston, who recently declared in the House of Lords, that the Irish question could never be settled except by the consent of both parties, is keeping the discussion of the possibility of an attempt to compromise at a fever heat

Before going to Balmoral Mr. Law had a conference with Lord Lansdowne and Arthur J. Balfour, the former leader of the Opposition, who are spending the week in Scotland. It is therefore evident that the Conservative leaders are in consultation.

WATCH RUTHERFORD!

Canadian Is To Confer Boon on Mankind, Says Mme. Curie.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Mme. Curie shrinks from publicity to such an extent that even members are unable to distinguish her from the ordinary woman visitors at the meetings of the British Association. "Please do not write so much about me in your paper," she said to a reporter who sought an interview. "Why should you want to? Yes, I discovered radium, but you are in too much of a hurry to wait and see what the next ten years have in store."

She spends a good deal of her time with Dr. Rutherford, professor of physics in Liverpool University. She told a reporter that Dr. Rutherford was the one man living who promises to confer some inestimable boon to mankind as a result of her own discovery of radium. "I would advise Britain to watch Dr. Rutherford," she said. "His work in radioactivity has surprised me greatly. Great developments are likely to transpire shortly, to which the discovery of radium was only a preliminary."

CONFERENCE PROGRESSES.

U. S. Tariff Bill May Be Concluded This Week.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15—The tariff conferees got along so well Saturday that Chairman Simmons, of the Senate finance committee, predicted that their report will be made to the two Houses of Congress this week.

The conferees yesterday practically finished the cotton schedule and the flax and hemp schedule. A few paragraphs in each were left for further consideration. In the cotton schedule the Senate changes were largely agreed to. The classification of stockings was changed and a slightly higher rate placed upon them.

Flax and hemp were allowed to remain on the free list where the Senate put them. The paragraphs relating to bagging and burlap, which caused much debate in the Senate was not acted upon. House leaders insist the Senate rates on these articles would mean a decrease in revenue of seven million dollars annually. The difficulty over free listing ferro-manganese and pig iron in the steel schedule, the only serious disagreement that so far has developed, was not taken up Saturday, but it was believed a settlement would be reached today.

SUSPECTS REMANDED

Five Track Followers Accused of Murder Held Without Bail.

OTTAWA, Sept. 15.—Four of the five prisoners who were arrested in Montreal Friday on a charge of murder in connection with the mysterious death of Abe Rubenstein here on Aug. 28 were arraigned in the police court Saturday, and, without being asked to plead, were remanded until next Saturday.

The four prisoners are Nathan Shapiro, who employed Rubenstein; Charles Dreyfus, who was in the dead man's company on the night he disappeared; Bessie Simms and Lottie Bringman, colored women, who were also seen in company with Rubenstein on the night he was murdered.

The fifth prisoner, R. H. Derno, of Toronto, held as a material witness, was arraigned on a nominal charge of vagrancy. He, too, was remanded for a week. Detectives found a key of the vacant store where Rubenstein's body was found, in Derno's possession. He is an employe of a former tenant of the place and claims that when they gave up the store he retained the key by mistake.

A. E. Fripp, K.C., M.P., counsel for Shapiro and Dreyfus, asked for bail and was refused.

Performers Arrested.

conclusion of their act at the Temple Theatre on Saturday night, the colored comedians, Jas. Stevens and Samuel Cook, were arrested in connection with the mysterious death of the bookmaker's clerk, Abe Rubenstein, at Ottawa on Aug. 28. The local police received a telegram from Chief A. M. Ross at the capital, asking for their immediate apprehension as material witnesses.

Detectives Sayers, Smith and Goodman arrested Cook at his boarding-house on Mulberry street, and Stevens was secured at the theatre. The men did not resist the officers, and said they were quite willing to go along, as they knew nothing whatever of the case. They added, however, that they had met one of the women at present under arrest at Ottawa, while filling an engagement there during the week of Rubenstein's death. They said she roomed at their boarding-house.

BACK TO THE FARM

Mr. John MacDougal has written a book on "Rural Life in Canada" in which he deals with the decline of the farming population from ... to 51 per cent of the population of the Quebec Province. The race problem is becoming a very serious one. Districts that were once populated wholly by English farmers are being invaded and taken up entirely by the French. How to stem this exodus of English-speaking people is a question which ought to receive the immediate attention of all who desire to establish Canada as a united English-speaking country. Mr. MacDougall says:

> "Quebec, apart from any question of population, holds the future of the Dominion in her hands. By the incorporation of Ungava she is rendered permanently our premier province in extent."

The same may be said of old Glengarry, Muskoka, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

But the most serious aspect of this French movement is that it is spreading into Ontario. Mr. MacDougal gives some striking figures, showing the number of farms abandoned in Ontario and of households weakened by the desertion of the young people, who do not care for farm life, and who leave their parents to carry on the farms alone.

BILINGUALISM.

The bilingual question is merely a reflex of a far more important problem; and if Eastern Ontario is to remain English-speaking this outflow of British farmers from the Eastern counties must be stopped.

Anyone who has lived in and around Hastings County knows for a positive fact that what Mr. MacDougal says is only too true. Farms which have been made by years of toil from a wild country and are only now yielding their best results, are being sold every day to French people.

This would not be so serious a problem if the French people mingled freely with the British; but either on account of religion or language, the French keep aloof from their British fellow-Canadians and while they "make good neighbors," they do not form a "community."

"TOO TONY."

There is of course no need for panic. If a portion of Ontario is to become French nothing can stop the tide but the English speaking people themselves, and it seems impossible to impress the rising generation with the importance of their remaining upon the farm.

The young man or woman who has had a course at a business college "just to tone him up a little," gets too "tony" for farm-work, or else he sees the world is much bigger than the village, he hears the call of the West and obeys its call to wealth and a larger life.

THE WEST AND THE CITY.

The French people are of a more pastoral nature, and would rather enter into the heritage of the pioneer work of the Britisher than to go out West and live a wild strenuous life on the prairie, however promising it might be.

But the West fever is not wholly responsible for the depletion of these English-speaking districts, the call of the city is the most insistent and alluring, and it is not always the Canadian city that calls the youth of Canada from the farm. Many of the cities over the line are largely made up of the Canadian-born.

Before the last census was taken it was expected that the new census would show a much large population than was realized. It was calculated, with the natural increase in population and influx of immigrants that Canada must have over eight million people. Whereas there proved to be only seven million.

BOSTON OR WINNIPEG?

Mr. MacDougall says that Boston and not Winnipeg, is the third Canadian city, because 200,000 of the people of Boston were born in Canada, and in some of the American cities the majority of the people are Canadian born.

The problem of the future of Canada is the problem of the future of Canadians, and that is one of the first importance. It is a problem which the French, as well as the British, will have to consider for their own national welfare and existence.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—A Wellington street car conductor had a thrilling encounter with thieves on board his car at an early hour yesterday morning.

He was running through Verdun when two men leaped on the car between stops. One of them produced a quarter and asked for change. As the conductor put his hand into his pocket to get it, the thief caught up the fare box and gave the carman a horrible smash over the head. Then they leaped off the car with the box and raced down a side street into the darkness. The car crew gave chase, but soon lost the trail.

So far the detectives at work on the case have failed to find any trace of the culprits. The fare box contained about seven dollars.

Fatal Ending To Auto Race.

BURDENSOME NAMES.

Awful Appelations Which Men Have Had to Bear.

The most burdensome name ever bestowed on a child was that given by Arthur Pepper, a laundryman of West Derby, Liverpool, to his daughter, born in December, 1882. It comprised one name for every letter of the alphabet, and was certainly ingenious in its way, running: Anna Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louise Maud Nora Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysis Venus Winifred Xenophon Yetty Zeno. P, of course, was provided in the surname, Pepper.

Hundreds of examples of this poor form of parental wit occur in the entries for the past few years. Noah's Ark Smith, Sardine Box, Jolly, Death, Judas Iscariot Brown, One too Many Johnson, Not Wanted Smith, Bovril Simpson, Merry Christmas Figgett, Odious Heaton, Anno Domini Davis, are the names of children probably living who will have to bear them through life unless they wash themselves clear with subterfuge. How can such children observe the Fifth Commandment!

There was for a long time a curiosity in nomenclature on the Australian pension list. His name was "Through - much - tribulation - we - enter - the - Kingdom - of - Heaven Smith." The officials of the Pension Department very pardonably abbreviated him into "Tribby Smith." Has any diligent student of our pension list discovered anything that caps this?

It is not surprising that the names of Dickens' characters — odd though they are—should be found in real life, for it was from life that many of them were taken. Some, as we know, were copied from the names over shop doors, etc., but this was not the novelist's only source of selection. Among his papers John Forster found carefully-drawn-up lists of names, with the source from which he obtained them, and the longest lists were those drawn from the "Privy Council Education Lists." Some of the names thus noted are too extravagant for anything but reality—Jolly Stick, Bill Marigold, George Muzzle, William Wey, Robert Gospel, Robin Scrubbam, Sarah Goldsacks, Catherine Two, Sophia Doomsday, Rosetta Dust, Sally Gimblet.

For quaint surnames one should search the records of Northumberland. Mr. A. G. Bradley has made a collection of some of these Northumbrian patronymics. He is writing of the times of the Border raids, and there was a Robert Unthank in those days. Among others, too, we find the name of Adam Aydrunken, who "upset his boat in the Tyne, and accidentally drowned his wife, Beatrice." "Cecilia, the wife of John Unkuthman (uncouthman), cut her throat with a razor." The incident requires no explanation. "Another unfortunate person figures as Adam with the nose."

A Self Confessed Criminal

Showing How Superior the Detective Is to the Open Court Method.

By EDWARD BLAKE.

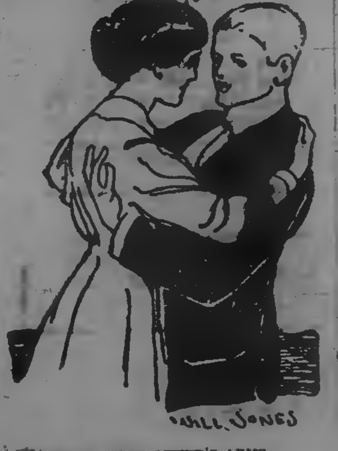
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A lawyer, especially a criminal lawyer, has often great difficulty in learning from his client the true facts in a case for which he is retained. The lawyer should know whether or no his client, if accused of a crime, is guilty or innocent. Soon after I began to practice my profession I was retained by a woman accused of forgery. I asked her if she was innocent, and she confessed that she was guilty. I submitted a similar hypothetical case to the judge before whom the woman was to be tried and asked him whether it was my duty, knowing her to be guilty, to defend her or refuse to do so.

His reply was that it was my duty to defend her; that it was the business of the jury, not the attorney nor the judge, to determine the matter of guilt or innocence.

Mrs. Rebecca Irwin, my self confessed client, was a very feminine person, but back of her femininity was evidently a certain peculiar strength. I would take her rather for one to give away what she had than to take money from another, especially dishonestly. She was somewhere between thirty and forty years old and a very pretty woman—that is, as beauty is in a woman of that age. Above all, she possessed a very melodious voice, something in a woman always very attractive to me. In short, I became interested in my client at once.

The crime was forging a check of Edgar Jones, payable to himself. His name was also forged on the back of the check. The paying teller at the bank had no remembrance to whom the money was paid. When the forgery was discovered and reported the officers of the bank, suspecting that some one of the bank's clerks had something to do with the fraud, employed a detective to investigate the matter. He was at work on the case when my client went to the president of the bank and confessed that she had made the forged check and had drawn the money. When asked her reason for her voluntary confession she said she was induced to make it on account of a guilty conscience.



INTO EACH OTHER'S ARMS.

I entered a plea of not guilty for my client and called in two experts in chirography to pass upon the writing. The body of the check was in one hand, while the signatures were in another. My experts stated that the writing in the body was something similar to that of my client, but they pronounced the signatures to have been made by another person from the filler of the paper and certainly not that of my client. The prosecuting attorney's experts declared that my client had both filled in the check and written the signatures.

What puzzled me was that Mrs. Irwin manifested no interest in securing an acquittal. She said she felt that she had committed a sin and could never hope to obtain any mental comfort in the matter till she had paid the penalty. Her actions were so strangely at variance with her confession that I was forced to the conclusion that she was laboring under a hallucination. Without intimating to her my object I asked her for information as to her family record, thinking I might discover that there was insanity in her family which had cropped out in her. She resolutely declined to assist me in the matter, but I hunted up a cousin of hers, who informed me that a maternal grandmother of his own and Mrs. Irwin's had in her old age fancied herself to be troubled with malignant spirits.

Acting upon this, I called in alienists hoping to prove by them an abnormal mental condition on the part of my client. The first alienist who examined her pronounced her in perfect health in every respect, including her mind. The second, after a great deal of cross questioning, in which he was endeavoring to fulfill a theory, gave it as his opinion that she had received at some time a severe shock which might have produced mental aberration.

Never did an attorney get hold of a more puzzling case, and both judge and jury were similarly affected. As for me, my sympathies were so far enlisted for my client that I could not fix my mind on any other subject. If she were of sound mind and guilty of the crime there was something unusual, something noble, in her desire to expiate it. If she were not of sound mind and not guilty the mystery of the case was sufficient to enlist one's deepest interest.

The result of all this was that I fell in love with my client. She was fully ten years my senior, a widow, and living on the slenderest income. None of these considerations was in itself sufficient to prevent my loving her or marrying her, but to feel that my happiness was dependent upon a union with a self confessed forger was sufficient to drive me to insanity.

The theory of justice is that an accused person is either innocent or guilty—that he must be proved guilty to be punished. Nevertheless compromise, which enters into all other matters of life, enters into law as well. The jury was obliged to bring in a verdict of guilty, but recommended the culprit to mercy. The consequence was that in sentencing her the judge gave her the lightest sentence possible within the law. He condemned her to serve a term of six months in the state penitentiary.

That a woman I had come to love should spend one minute behind bars was not only abhorrent to me, but it unbalanced my equanimity. I at once moved for a new trial, then when alone with my client confessed my love for her.

She was strangely moved by my confession. It seemed to give her both happiness and misery. When I asked her as to her feelings toward me she broke down, weeping profusely, but gave no answer. When she had quieted she begged me to let the sentence of the court stand. She would serve her term and the suspense would be ended.

I would not agree to this. I obtained a new trial, which could not be brought to pass for several months, but the judge was willing to accept bail, and I furnished the necessary amount myself, so that my client's liberty until the case was finally closed was not in question.

One morning the president of the bank on which the forged check had been drawn sent for me. I went at once to see him. He took me into his private office and said to me:

"This case of yours in the matter of the state against Mrs. Rebecca Irwin is a very singular one. Do you know that your client is not guilty?"

"I believe it, but I can't prove it. And this fact is driving me mad."

"You don't need to prove it. We have the proof here in the bank."

"What do you mean?"

"Listen. From the first we have had a detective working on the case. When Mrs. Irwin confessed I told him that there was no further use for his services. He replied that the case would prove to be a mystery and that he had got hold of a clew which might lead to its solution. Of course I told him to go ahead. He claimed that Mrs. Irwin's confession, turning suspicion from the real culprit, would aid him (the detective) greatly in prosecuting his investigations.

"Well, he has just made a report. It is this: One of our clerks named Dixon, a youngster of twenty, is the forger. He has been intimate with Julian Irwin, aged sixteen, the son of the self accused woman."

"What!" I interrupted. "She never told me she had a son."

"Young Irwin was one day scribbling on some blank checks. Dixon got hold of one of those checks, the body of which was filled in, the name of the drawer of the check and the person to whom it was made payable alone being wanting. Dixon filled in the name and made the indorsement and a long while afterward asked Irwin as a favor to draw the money.

"When Irwin, though innocent, found himself implicated in the matter he went to his mother and told her the circumstances. An attorney was consulted, who told the mother and son that if Dixon was prosecuted Irwin must stand trial for forgery, with the probability of conviction, for Dixon would doubtless try to throw the whole responsibility on the boy he had made his tool."

"I see it all. But go on."

"To hush the matter up, thus saving her son from a blighted life, his mother confessed herself a forger."

"God bless her!" I exclaimed. "She tried to conceal her nobility from me, but failed."

"The experts were all at sea," remarked the president.

"Mine were not. They pronounced the writing in the body different from that of the signatures."

"My client has not yet been informed of this discovery?" I asked presently.

"No. You are the only person thus far, besides myself, to know it."

Getting from him the address of young Irwin, I called a carriage and drove to where he was employed and told him I wished him to go with me to his mother. He did so, and I announced to both that there was no necessity for further mystery, since the case had been worked out to a finish. Their first act after the announcement was to spring into each other's arms. Mrs. Irwin had persuaded her son to make no opposition to her course, assuring him that she would never have to go to prison.

And so it was that I fell in love with a confessed forger and married a noble woman. The case which comes so near to me has given me a realization of the imperfection of human justice. While I, in open court, was working upon the surface with experts, judge and jury, another, having no connection whatever with the court, was silently pulling upon a thread that led him to the truth.

It is not every man who is given the opportunity to win such a woman as I won, she being under the guise of a criminal.

Sulzer Trial Goes On.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 15.—Justice Chever of the Supreme Court on Saturday refused to grant a writ of prohibition against the assembling of the court of impeachment for the trial of Governor Sulzer next week. Application for the writ to prevent the trial was made by Samuel A. Fowler of Troy, who appeared as a taxpayer protesting against the expenditure of the money necessary to carry on the trial.

Why Children Need Play.

It is as natural for a child to play as to breathe. It is a necessity, not a luxury. It is a part of his education and an expression of his self development and of the law of his being. Left to his own amusement with proper condition, his whole attitude of mind and body is one of absorbing interest and concentration, and he often displays initiative and activity really surprising. The play instinct is so universal it might be regarded as self satisfying. But conditions of life are so congested that space is prohibited and children are simply starved for play. The play experience of my childhood was a delight, but we had the canal and the old mill, the woods and fields, the hayloft, the woodshed and the carpenter shop in the neighbor's back yard. The carpenter's wooden horse hitched to the wheelbarrow provided a "joy ride" never dreamed of in the costliest automobile. Such play and such fun are not in the experience of the average child today.—Suburban Life.

Pen Written Letters.

It is pleasant to receive a pen written letter nowadays, in the writer's well remembered handwriting, for it is becoming a somewhat rare experience. That is one reason why it is pleasanter to have a woman for a correspondent than a man. Women, unless they are professional writers, seldom use the typewriter for personal letters. Some people maintain that no real letter, nothing really worthy of the epistolary name, was ever dictated or written on a machine, but that is a mistake. Something, however, is always wanting in such correspondence. One's individual way of crossing a "t" or dotting an "i" or of dropping off the loops in letters that go below the line carries with it a suggestion of that sort of personality that ought to get in a letter, and the written message therefore possesses double the value of the typwritten one, even though the writer may have the knack of expressing himself freely and originally with a typewriter.—New York Mail.

THE CAMERA HUNT

An Incident and a Discovery Not on the Program.

By HONORE WILLSIE.

Penelope took a long breath and started on after her brother and his wife, who were chatting with the guide. After the rough climbing of the morning the little plateau seemed heavenly. But even this respite did not ease Penelope's sense of irritation.

Arthur's and Alice's fad had seemed so amusing at first that she had readily accepted their invitation to join them. To hunt the wild game of the Rockies with a camera was unique enough to be interesting, but the hunt of the long tailed deer, so high among the peaks that rapid work was misery, had been very bad. The three days' chase for a snap at the black wolf had been worse, and it ended in failure. But this chase for a mountain sheep was trying Penelope beyond endurance.

"It's easy for Alice," thought poor Penelope, digging her staff viciously into a crevice. "She's like a bundle of steel wires. She loves to get up before daylight and crawl half a mile on her hands and knees to wait at a spring for some silly beast to come for a drink. But I'm just worn out. Alice! Arthur!"

The three enthusiasts ahead turned back. "You three leave me here in the shade of this rock and come back for me when you are finished. I am worn out."

Arthur looked at Penelope in dismay. "But don't you want to see a mountain sheep?" he coaxed. "Since the black tailed deer were in the river bottom this morning the sheep are sure to be up here. Just think, Penelope, one of those curious, rare mountain sheep!"

But even this vision failed to move his sister. She shook her head. Alice gave a resigned little sigh.

"I'll stay with you, Penelope," she said.

"No, you won't," said Arthur hastily. "It's not safe. Two women are no better than one here."

Here the guide interposed. He had been with them but a day, but already, besides being their guide, he was their counselor and friend. He was too well bred to be treated otherwise. Penelope looked at the stalwart, heavily bearded fellow in a troubled way. His resemblance to Dick in spite of the beard was startling.

"Now, I tell you, Mr. Seymour," he said, "you know as much about this business as I do, and you tell me you have been up this trail half a dozen times before. Why can't I stay here with your sister, fix up camp for the night and let Mr. and Mrs. Seymore go on and locate the sheep?"

"Good, good!" exclaimed Seymore.

Mrs. Seymore looked a little dubious, but Penelope spoke eagerly. Here was a chance for an hour or two of rest that was not to be foregone.

"It will only be a couple of hours," she said pleadingly. "You will be back before dark, and I am so tired, and," she added artfully, "you may miss your only chance at the mountain sheep."

"Come on, Arthur," said Mrs. Seymore, and the two started off up the mountain.

The little plateau on which the colloquy had taken place was smooth and wide, with a little spring trickling out of the great wall of the mountain. Penelope sat quietly watching the distant peaks in the afternoon light while the guide set about his preparation for the night's camp, watching Penelope surreptitiously the while. Very lovely was the sunlight on the masses of her hair, the quick glow of color in her cheeks, the delight in her eyes as she looked at the distant glory of the canyon walls.

Finally her gaze wandered to the guide as his work brought him close beside her, and again the troubled look came to her eyes.

"Do you know," she said abruptly, "you have a resemblance to some one I used to know that is startling."

The guide straightened himself and looked at her keenly. "Is that so?" he said in his quiet way.

Without knowing why, she added, "It was some one who was very dear to me."

"And now?" said the guide tentatively.

"There is no now," said Penelope, rising and walking toward the edge of the plateau.

The guide watched her anxiously. "Not too near the edge, please," he called.

Penelope did not answer. Far, far below curled the silvery line that was the river, then up and up chaos of color in the rock masses, and silence, silence so intense that, though every sense was keen to catch the brilliancy of the canyon coloring, Penelope stood counting her own heart beats. She leaned over a little to look at the ledge below her.

And then the thing happened—a sudden vertigo, a hoarse cry from behind her, a sense of endless falling, then unconsciousness.

After ages of nothingness she opened her eyes—far above, the sky with a glory of sun and snow, a grandeur of distant peaks and far horizon, then a sense of pain and with it a man's voice calling:

"Penelope! Penelope!" And above the brush grown ledge on which she lay a man's face looked down upon her.

"Here I am! I'm all right!" she called back weakly.

"Will you lie perfectly still while I get the rope?" called the guide. "For heaven's sake, don't move!" And the face disappeared, leaving Penelope alone with the blue above and the far circling of an eagle about the crags.

Then a rope with a carefully adjusted slip noose dangled beside her. "Can you put it over your head and under your arms?" the guide called. "For my sake, Penelope, be careful! And look up at me all the time. Don't look down into the canyon."

Too bruised and shaken to be surprised, Penelope took the noose with trembling fingers and tried to disentangle herself from the brush which had broken her fall. Slowly, inch by inch, with pain at every motion, she raised herself to a sitting position, then little by little adjusted the noose under her arms to the guide's satisfaction.

"Now," he called, "I'm going to lower your staff to you, and you must keep yourself from brushing the wall by means of it as I pull you up."

The fear and misery of that trip back to the plateau Penelope was never to forget. The rope cut into her chest until she would have fainted with the pain had not the difficulty of warding herself from the wall with her alpenstock forced her to keep her senses alert. Now, with a quick jerk, she was pulled upward for a few feet; then a pause, while the rope twisted her dizzily, with now a view of the serenity of the opposite canyon wall in the afternoon sun; now the yellow dampness of stone within an inch of her face, then another violent jerk upward.

As she paused within a foot or so of the plateau level she closed her eyes and dropped her staff. Then a pair of arms lifted her slowly, tenderly, and laid her on the ground, then carefully removed the rope.

Penelope opened her eyes. "Dick!" she said hesitatingly. "Dick!"

"Are you hurt?" asked the guide unheedingly. "What shall I do? Shall I go after your sister?"

"I think there are no bones broken," said Penelope weakly. "I am only terribly bruised and shaken. How I am to get down the mountain again I don't know."

"Oh, we can arrange that easily," answered the guide eagerly as he adjusted the steamer rug on which she lay.

Again Penelope's senses dimmed. "You do look so like Dick," she murmured. "Aren't you Dick? Only Dick was not so strong"—

"Tell me about Dick," said the guide, with a hand that trembled so that a cup of water he had brought sprinkled her gown.

Penelope looked at him with puzzled, half delirious eyes. "Dick? Why, Dick was my husband, and after we had our silly quarrel he went to Europe. That was three years ago."

The guide threw aside the cup. "Do you think it was a silly quarrel?" he cried. "Would you forgive Dick?"

"Yes," answered Penelope, "if only I could find him."

The guide stooped and lifted the slender, aching body into his arms. "Here I am, dear," he said. "Here is Dick! It was never Europe, after all. I came here, where I could work and be forgotten."

Penelope looked into his face, forgetting her pain in the wonder of it all. "I must have known it," she said, "in spite of the beard."

Then she closed her eyes on his shoulder. "Sheep hunting is not bad, after all," she said. And Dick held her close.

DEPUTATION ASKS AID

Towards Erection of Another Bridge Across Otonabee River

A deputation consisting of Deputy Reeve Deyell, of Otonabee, and a number of others interviewed the Mayor on Friday to see if the city would grant aid to a bridge to span the river about Rye's boathouse. The Mayor is of the opinion that the city has about all on its hands for the immediate future it can very well attend to, but of course is always open to suggestions. It is doubtful if the Government would consent to three swings on the canal within a half mile, viz., the G.T.R., the Locks and the proposed bridge. There is, however, an urgent need of better roads in all directions leading into the city, and it is to be hoped that they will soon be all that can be desired.

EPWORTH LEAGUE RALLY AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH

A Successful Day

The Epworth League Rally Day was observed at George Street Methodist Church yesterday. Rev. S. T. Bartlett was announced to preach both morning and evening, but was unable to be present owing to illness.

Rev. Mr. Doyle, of Manitoba, Assistant General Secretary of the League, took the place of Mr. Bartlett, and while there was a feeling of disappointment at the absence of the General Secretary, yet the rally was a very successful one.

The interior of the church was decorated; in front of the pulpit was a large Maltese cross with the League motto painted on it—"Look Up, and Lift Up." This was flanked with Union Jacks, and colored streamers were thrown across the choir and about the organ.

At the evening service there was a large attendance. Mr. Thompson took charge of the service and spoke briefly on the value of the League in the life of the Church and the community.

Mr. Doyle gave a very bright and inspiring address. He said the young people of to-day are the masters of to-morrow. They were a great army advancing againt Canada, and they were going to take all before them. He pleaded for young men of conviction, who believed something.

The choir rendered two anthems, and solos were sung. The choir of George street Church is an exceptionally well trained one and the unison and effectiveness of their singing is to be highly commended.

The Rally meetings are continued this evening when a social will be held, to which all interested in League work are invited.

ONE BOARDING MISTRESS WHO IS PLEASED

With Change in Law, Which Protects Poor Women

AGAINST ROGUES

Exhibition Performer Left Without Paying His Board

There is one poor woman who is glad to know that the law now provides punishment for persons who leave boarding houses and fail to settle their board bills.

Last year when the exhibition was in progress, one of the performers boarded at this woman's house. He departed without making payment, and also left a sick sister to be cared for. Altogether, it was quite a large item of expense to be borne by the boarding mistress.

She endeavored to learn of his whereabouts, but without success, and he failed to appear at the exhibition just closed. The directors were informed of the man's actions, but have been unable to locate him.

Now the law as amended provides that a fine of $100 or a sentence of three months in jail may be imposed on conviction of such a case. Heretofore the only redress was to be found in Division Court.

RING WOULD NOT GO ON THE BLOCK

Italian Failed at Hoop-La So He Told the Police

In police court this morning John Revoy was charged with running a game of chance. He pleaded not guilty.

An Italian who resides on Gilchrist street, said he was playing the game called "hoop-la" owned by John Revoy and one hoop wouldn't go on the block, as it was too small. He showed the man who was running the stand for Revoy that it wouldn't go on but he refused to listen to him. He (the Italian) told his friend Vincent Crebar to stand there while he went for an officer. He came back with P. C. Brown and the latter tried the ring on the block but force had to be used before it went on.

Vincent Crebar testified that while the first Italian was away the defendant and his man were sorting rings. He thought they were picking out the ones that were too small.

Provincial Detective Brodie said the game was owned by Revoy.

The defendant swore that no assortment of the rings took place and and His Worship decided to get the rings and blocks and try them all. Detective Meagher went with Revoy to get the articles and the court adjourned till 2 o'clock.

After evidence had been heard this afternoon, judgment was reserved.

LAND AND APPLE SHOW AT WINNIPEG OCT. 10 TO 18

With an all Canadian working committee and the enthusiastic cooperation of the two greatest factors—the people and the Press—Canada's first Land and Apple Show to be held in Winnipeg, October 10 to 18 is growing larger and larger and will surpass in excellence the anticipations of those who were most optimistic when the project was started. The Advisory Board of the Land and Apple Show is now complete and comprises thirty-five names, fifteen of whom are Winnipeg business men acting as a Central Committee with outside representatives on the Board from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario. The general secretary of the Show is Chas. F. Roland, whose offices are in the Exposition Building, Winnipeg.

NATIONAL IN SCOPE

At the Show, visitors will have the opportunity of seeing the products of all agricultural sections. Visitors will be able to talk with people who know the possibilities of their particular districts. The people will hear lectures by experts on agriculture and fruit-growing, while entertainments, band competitions, taking place during the nine big days and nine big nights of the Show, will make up an interesting educational and entertaining programme.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

The regulations and conditions set forth in the official folder issued calls for the occupation of about 25,000 square feet of floor space, the total cost being sub-divided pro-rata among governments, railways boards of trade and other exhibitors and in the case of governments and railways does not exceed fifty cents per square foot, and that of boards of trade and agricultural societies twenty-five cents per square foot. Exhibits of governments, railways, baords of trade and agricultural societies remain the property of the exhibitors after the Show, while on the other hand growers competing for the big cash prizes must comply with the rules and regulations in which it is intended that the Canada Land and Apple Show pay all freight to Winnipeg on all exhibits for competition, arranging same in space provided free of cost to the grower and for which the exhibitor assigns to the Canada Land and Apple Show their exhibits, the proceeds for sale which is to go to the general prize and expense fund of the Show.

ALGONQUIN PARK IN SEPTEMBER

In the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, the month of September is one of the most beautiful of the year. The "Highland Inn" situated on Cache Lake 2,000 feet above sea level, offers all the comforts one may desire at reasonable rates. The region is a natural playground of over 2,500,000 acres, only 168 miles west of Ottawa and 200 miles north of Toronto, and those who love nature and the wild things that live in her confines can enjoy themselves there to their heart's content. For anyone whose nerves are troublesome, or through over-work needs a rest, or whose health is run down, there is not a more beneficial place in America.

MORMAN INVASION

Of Canada, Big Treck Into Alberta

This fall is expected to see a big Mormon trek into Western Canada from Utah and Idaho, according to the prediction of R. J. Fitzgerald, of Salt Lake City, who has been to Calgary on a business trip. Mr. Fitzgerald says that the United States is going to lose many Mormon citizens within the next few years if the plans now laid out for settlement of Southern Alberta by the Latter Day Saints are materialised. The Church owns enormous tracts of land in Southern Alberta, adn is planning to buy more. Although this land was bought ten years ago, and has increased enormously in price since then, the Church sells it to members of the faith at the cost price to encourage them to settle and colonise in Alberta.—Westminster Gazette.

PETERBORO MAN IN ACCIDENT

Harold Leal Fell Out of Rig When Horse Frightened

A NARROW ESCAPE

Harold Leal, about thirty years of age, a visitor in the city, from Peterboro' was injured in an accident which occurred shortly before one o'clock on Friday afternoon, says the Kingston Whig.

Leal was driving on Quebec street, with another man. He was standing up in the vehicle, when an automobile came up behind him. The animal became frightened, and made a bolt, throwing Leal out of the rig, and he struck the ground with terrible force. It was feared that his neck had been broken. The other man in the rig managed to bring the horse to a standstill.

The injured young man was rushed to the Hotel Dieu, where he was attended by Dr. W. A. McCarthy.

It was found that he had suffered some bad cuts on the head and that his ear had also been lacerated. It is stated that he had a miraculous escape from being killed, as the way in which he fell was sufficient to break his neck.

It was expected that the patient would be able to leave the Hotel Dieu in a very short time.

Milady's Mirror

To Keep Young and Attractive.

Summer is beauty's trying time, says Lillian Young. It takes art to be beautiful when the mercury is climbing high and to persist in sweet amiability, which keeps one young and attractive, when the sun seems bent upon burning one to a crisp. The summer girl, however, manages it.

In fact, it is because she does manage it so successfully that she is a "summer girl," the one who walks away with all the beaus and is at once the envy and delight of the women with whom she comes in contact. But let me tell you that, besides being real art, being a summer girl entails real work. One must be the acme of tidiness, yet always suggest having bustled through one's toilet, and one must be, as already intimated, cheerful and healthful. Hooks and eyes must be always in place on clothes, and there should be plenty of them.

Needless to say, there must be numbers of pretty frocks, for the summer girl is on parade all the time, day and evening. The frocks need not be expensive, but they must be distinctive and appropriate for the moment. Commonplaces have no part with the summer girl. Frills, collars, handkerchiefs—everything of the sort must be immaculate. In short, absolute cleanliness and perfect gowning to the least detail are the first of the summer girl's laws unto herself. No matter how insouciant, how ready for anything, how fancy she seems, she is never frowsy or messy looking.

Her complexion she is careful of, although no one knows it except by its inevitable freshness, which could be only through care and attention. No matter how sleepy she is after the dance at night or the stroll in the moonlight, she anoints her face, neck and arms with a cleansing cream, allowing it to remain on while she takes down her hair and plaits it loosely in two braids. Then the cleansing cream is removed with a soft cloth, the face doused with very hot water and a skin food rubbed gently in while the face is still wet. Only the mildest of skin foods and creams are used, preferably those in which there is neither glycerin nor any other strong astringent, for summer suns and winds tend to make the skin tender, and any but the most soothing lotions will increase that tendency rather than have any healing effect.

The hands are kept thoroughly washed, scrubbed with the flesh brush and pumiced, if need be, partially dried, and then vaseline should be rubbed briskly in and large gloves drawn on. Oh, yes, and she doesn't neglect her elbows. They are properly pumiced and cleansed also.

In the morning the face is washed in hot water, which opens the pores, followed by a dousing of cold water, which closes them. Then there is a dusting powder to protect the skin; the hands are washed with soap and water, rinsed in lukewarm water, not hot; dusted with the protecting powder, and the summer girl is ready to sally forth for the day.

While she exercises a-plenty, golfing, playing tennis, walking, she rarely allows herself to be overfatigued—the summer girl—and she insists, in spite of everything, upon having a tiny nap every day, even if it be only for twenty minutes.

Rubber Complexion Brushes.

There has been a marked improvement in the rubber brushes for the complexion, the body and the teeth. To begin with, the newest styles have flexible backs of perforated rubber and are oval in shape. The brush portion, instead of having a series of rubber teeth, has irregular knife-like ridges. These brushes can be bought without the handle, or a handle of imitation ivory can be attached, which will add greatly to the comfort and convenience of the user. There is quite as much demand for the bath size, to be used in rubbing the body, as for the smaller face size, which brings the blood to the tissues of the skin in such a satisfactory way. Women who are particularly fastidious in regard to hygiene like these brushes because they can be easily and quickly sterilized by dipping them into a solution of carbolic acid. The smaller brushes sell for 75 cents and a dollar, and the larger bath brush with the removable handle retails for $2. The toothbrushes made in the same general style are no more expensive than the regulation product, which sells for 35 cents.

Murky Appearance.

At this season of the year the neck begins to show the effects of high collars, dark furs and other mediums that give the skin a murky appearance. Always extend the use of the cleansing cream used to keep the face smooth and clear to the neck and well up into the hair at the back.

To eradicate discolorations caused by high or dark collars there is no remedy more effective than the common or garden variety of lemon juice. Select firm, juicy lemons and apply the juice to the skin after all traces of dust or grime have been removed either with soap and water or with cleansing cream. The cucumber remedies are also used with much success, although one must be sure they are as represented, else it will be a case of wasting time and money.

To get rid of ants' nests pour petroleum over them.

REV. R. S. FORNERI BUILT CHURCH TO THEIR MEMORY.

Beautiful Edifice of St. Alban the Martyr at Adolphustown Was Erected Through the Efforts of Well Loved Pastor of the Parish—Is a Brilliant Scholar, but Has a Retiring Disposition.

With the right to sign his name as the nobles do, there lives in Kingston, Ont., in a humility which is almost weakness, a clergyman who has brains far beyond the average scholarship, and a charm of manner which this generation calls "the charm of the old school." He is known as the Rev Richard Sykes Forneri, M.A., B.D., and he has never risen to a high place in the church because he has persisted in remaining in the background, content with the adoring affection of parishioners who, rightly call him "saintly."

Mr. Forneri is the son of the late Dr Forneri, an Italian of high birth, who held the chair of Moderns at Varsity in the days of Dr. McCaul, and college contemporaries tell us that "Forneri never saw the outside of a Greek grammar till six months before his matric but he headed the honor list." After his graduation he went in for Divinity at Trinity, and it was his good pleasure to champion the late Provost Whittaker, when controversy raged round that cleric's High Churchmanship. "On my reputation as a Low Churchman," Mr. Forneri has often declared, "I never saw the cloven hoof of the Scarlet Woman any where near the Provost in all my days at Trinity." And he declares it with the slight foreign accent, which, mingling with a touch of the brogue he got through an Irish strain, makes his speech delightful.

As an instance of the way the man who does not advertise is often allowed to blush unseen it has been noticeable that amid all the freshly roused interest in the U. E. Loyalists there has been no mention of the work done by Mr Forneri in Adolphustown. Fairly pushed by his Bishop into that parish, which though in the country, is an endowed rectory, Mr. Forneri found little heed being paid to the place where so many of the Loyalists settled and his sensitive soul was greatly troubled over the neglect of the Loyalists' burying ground. Inaction was impossible and this priest, who looks so absurdly like a Roman "father" that the little R. C. boys invariably cap him, talked and wrote and worked, with the result that the beautiful church of St. Alban the Martyr, full of memorials of the dead, stands near Quinte's shore, overlooking the landing place of those who fled from the flag of Revolution to the flag of Liberty; and the churchyard, with its monuments, shows signs of reverent care.

Yorkshire's Chimney.

Halifax has a famous mill chimney built by a gentleman keenly interested in architecture. It was a Mr. Wainhouse who built this huge stone octagon chimney and provided it with a handsome stone top. A staircase twined round the shaft and inside the stone tower, and came out on a balcony at the top. Above the balcony a colonnade supported a massive domed top. The chimney was never used, for Mr. Wainhouse sold his dyeworks before it was completed. This Octagon Tower stands on the edge of the Calder Valley, and is a striking landmark for miles.

West Riding folk called it "Wainhouse's Folly." They could not understand anyone spending money to make a mill chimney handsome. Mr. Wainhouse also spent a huge amount in adding to his cottage property handsome railings, good porches, and well designed chimneys. One row of humble houses has a gallery, towers, and bridges worthy of a college. The Octagon Tower is considered by some judges to be the finest piece of architecture in the town.

Wonderful Feat of Navigation.

A remarkable feat of navigation has been accomplished by Captain Charles Charleton, who sailed the Liverpool ship Harold, a vessel of 1,290 tons, laden with wheat, into Queenstown Harbor a few days ago. Captain Charleton had brought his ship from Australia, a distance of 15,000 miles, without the aid of a single officer. Efforts to find officers at Adelaide, Melbourne, and Sydney all failed, and the captain had no alternative but to set out for England with a crew—all but two of whom are foreigners—ignorant of navigation.

The voyage lasted 108 days. For one period of six weeks the captain did not remove his clothes, and during most of the voyage he could only obtain snatches of sleep in a deck-chair on the poop of the ship.

Engagement Popular.

The engagement of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife is an extremely popular one in Britain. Both are great favorites with all sections of society. Prince Arthur easily takes the palm as the handsomest member of the Royal Family, with the exception perhaps of his father, the Duke of Connaught, whom he closely resembles. As representative of the King he has played many parts and has made himself persona grata in nearly all the chief capitals of the world.

To keep the hands white, wash them with oatmeal water.

RESIDENTS OF ELM STREET HAD STORMY TIME

Trouble Was Over Youngster Who Threw Stones

Mrs. Burfield and Mrs. Calladine were the principals in an assault case heard at Police Court this morning.

The Magistrate dismissed the case and gave the two women some advice on the question of keeping the peace.

Mrs. Burfield, the complainant, said that Mrs. Calladine's boy was throwing stones at her young son and hit him on the leg. She went out to stop him and young Calladine out to stop him and young Calladine threw a stone and broke one of the windows. She went out to get her boy and Mrs. Calladine met her, called her a foul name and struck her once across the face.

Questioned by Mr. Gordon, who appeared for Mrs. Calladine, she admitted saying she would pull young Calladine's liver out, but she never called her any foul names.

Mrs Lock, an eye-witness, said that Mrs. Calladine was talking in her (Mrs. Lock's) home. They heard the row and went out and saw Mrs. Burfield cuffing Mrs. Calladine's boy's ears. Mrs. Calladine ran out and took her son from Mrs. Burfield and returned home. She did not strike Mrs. Burfield. Mrs. Lock also stated that Mrs. Burfield called Mrs. Calladine some very bad names.

At this point Mrs. Burfield jumped up and things looked like a free for all" in the court room.

Bert Lock, a little six-year-old boy then took the stand and corroborated his mother's story.

Unmannerly Tourists.

The Laplander is annoyed with the tourist who visits him. The nature of his complaint may be gathered from the notice posted in the districts of Lapland most visited by travelers, which in several languages runs as follows:

"Dear Tourist: What would you say if an unknown individual without asking your permission or even knocking at your door pushed his way into your home, made himself comfortable on your sofa, peered at everything, rummaged everywhere, laughed at your domestic arrangements, asked how much money you have, wished to interest himself in your love affairs and seized hold of your children to photograph them?

"What would you do with such an unmannerly intruder?"

RHEUMATISM

After 25 Years of Misery, this Man Walks, Works and Feels Fine Again

Right away—the first day you start to take RHEUMA—the Uric Acid poison begins to dissolve and leave the sore joints and muscles. Its action is little less than magical.

RHEUMA works so speedily you actually can feel the Rheumatism leaving the body. A bottle costs but 50 cents, and if you are not satisfied Warne Drug Co. will return your money. Read this:

"I wish to state to you the facts and nothing but the facts. I bless the day a friend brought me a 50-cent bottle of RHEUMA. I used one-half of it, and it did me more good than all the other medicines I ever tried. I had been afflicted with Rheumatism all over my body for more than 25 years; I could not walk, and was a broken down man. During that time I spent a small fortune trying to be rid of the horrible disease, but without help. However, Rheuma reached my case, and I thank God I can again use my feet and do my work.

"Before taking your medicine I was staying with a daughter on her farm, and despite her loving efforts to tempt my appetite, I could not eat. After I had taken RHEUMA two days my appetite returned. Yours for prosperity."—Prof. H. H. Kolling, 8 Ninth St., Richmond, Ind., Oct. 10, 1912.

A QUICK RECOVERY

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I had just entered society at the age of nineteen when my father died insolvent and from affluence we were reduced to poverty.

I found a position as governess in the family of a Mrs. Woodward, a widow with several children. Lucy, a girl nearly my age, was the oldest daughter and, of course, I had nothing to do with her education. Then there was a son, Harry, absent attending lectures. He came home during vacations, but paid me no attention whatever during these visits. He was interested in young ladies occupying the social world in which I had just made my debut and disappeared. He used to talk a great deal about them, and I thought that had it not been for my misfortune had he met me in the gay world he would have spoken of me in the same way.

My duties were to take care of the little children who had only begun to learn. I was something, but not much better than a nurse.

Mrs. Woodward was taken down with typhoid fever. The doctor ordered a trained nurse, but when she came the invalid directed that I be with her constantly while the nurse should only attend her when necessary. This threw upon me the brunt of the nursing, the trained nurse only carrying out such work as the doctor's assistant. And just when she was most needed she took herself off to accept a permanent position.

The night the nurse left the patient had had a hemorrhage, and the doctor dreaded her having another. He told me to keep her in the utmost quiet, for she was in a dangerous condition. Her life depended on this.

In the middle of the night my mistress asked me feebly for some gruel. I stepped into the hall and was surprised to find the lights that had been left burning below were out and all was in darkness. I returned for matches and went down the staircase. At the bottom a light was flashed in my face and a man's voice called gruffly:

"I want the valuables!"

I was always a timid girl, but in this case my mistress' condition conquered fear. I told the man that there was an invalid upstairs and if she knew he was in the house it would kill her. He evidently did not believe me, for he spoke very harshly to me, holding a revolver right in front of my face and ordering me to tell him where the valuables were kept.

Now, there was not a bit of silver plate or jewelry in the house that was not in the sickroom. My mistress had always kept them there in health and insisted on the silver being carried there every evening after dinner. They were nothing to me beside her life. I begged the man so hard to believe me, at the same time telling him that I would bring him everything of value, that he permitted me to go for them.

But how was I to excuse myself to my mistress for carrying the things out? If I told her nothing of what had occurred would she not believe that I was robbing her when she was too ill to stop me? Her son and daughter were both in the house, but to awaken either one of them would be death to their mother. I must think quickly. What put the plan I adopted into my head I know not. It came like a flash.

Going back into my mistress' room, I began to turn the gas up and down, finally turning it out as if by mistake.

"Oh, dear," I said, "how unlucky! And I don't know where there are matches."

While I pretended to be hunting for the matches I was gathering some valuable jewels that I knew were kept in a drawer of the bureau. Taking them and picking up the box in which the silver was kept, I went downstairs. The burglar was waiting for me. He turned his light on what I brought him and remarked that there was a good lot of swag. Then he ordered me into the kitchen and, taking a clothesline hanging against the wall tied me to a heavy table. In vain I begged him to let me go to my mistress. "Oh, no!" he said. "You'd call the police."

He went away, and I began at once trying to free myself. My joints were very supple, and I soon slipped my hands out of the rope, after which it was no great work to free myself. Taking up the gruel that was on the range, I went back to my mistress and relighting the gas, gave her what she would take of it. Then, telling her to try to get some sleep, I went downstairs to the telephone and reported the robbery to the police. Fortunately the burglar had not had time to get to a place of safety with his swag, and by communicating quickly with all the policemen within range he was captured.

The next morning when I told Harry and Lucy what had occurred they were beside themselves with terror till I reached the end, when Lucy sank down into a chair and Harry—well, I shall never forget the look Harry gave me. Just then there was a ring at the telephone, and the police reported that the robber had been taken with jewels and silverware.

Mrs. Woodward recovered, and the doctor said that I had certainly saved her life. Harry Woodward had nothing more to say about the girls he met in society. When he entered upon his profession he married me, and I was once more in the circle to which I belonged and from that day to this have lived a happy life.

COST OF LIVING

IS A PROBLEM that affects, in a greater or less degree, every member of the community. It presses hard on some, and on a few its effect is a negligible quantity

THE enterprising merchant is thoroughly alive to the fact that the high cost of living is in many ways an oppressive burden. He knows that the margin between income and expenditure is often a very narrow one. He buys newspaper space to let people know that he knows. In short, he advertises.

The merchant who advertises has something worth while to tell. That stands to reason, don't it, because newspaper space costs money? It will pay you, therefore, to watch carefully the announcements of the stores that advertise. You'll find all the good stores advertising in

The Daily Review

THE persistent reader of newspaper advertisements has discovered the best way to combat the high cost of living. His dollar has a greater buying power than that of the non-reader—or spasmodic reader—of ads because he employs it with more knowledge and more discrimination. It is an easy matter to cut down your living expenses by fifteen, twenty or twenty-five per cent—and even more—by being a careful student of the daily store ads. In this way you will get "wise" to the values. You will ask for the advertised article at the advertised price and you will know before you go shopping what you are going to pay.

GEO. POWELL'S MANELLA IN STRAIGHT HEATS

Bellevillo Horse Ahead in Free for All at Fair—Spill in Second Race and Money Was Equally Divided

The three heats in the Free For All and the three heats in the 2.30 Class were watched by a half frozen crowd. The grandstand was packed and thousands lined each fence. The very cold wind that was blowing over the grounds somewhat lessened the interest, but the majority stayed till the last heat was over.

The entries in the Free For All were:

Furioso, owned by G. Larks, Toronto.

Mannella, owned by G. Powell, Belleville.

Susie Hal, owned by Dr. Johnson, Peterborough.

The first two heats of the 2.30 class was won by Clara, with Mount Calvil second, and Oro Tariff third. The time was 2.25 and 2.24 1-2 respectively.

In the last heat Clara and Mount Calvil were running neck and neck at the last turn when Clara lost her footing and fell. Mount Calvil finished first, with Oro Tariff second.

When the horse fell "Old George" Powell, the owner, who was driving her, was thrown in the air but he landed on his feet. The crowds gathered around and it was with some difficulty that the mare was unharnessed from the demolished gig. When they got her up she was uninjured but the gig was smashed and they had to call the race off, dividing the money equally between the three.

The judges were Messrs. John Carew, Lindsay; H. O Winch and R. J. Munro.

Starter—Dr. Sinclair, of Cannington.

THE STORY OF SUGAR

USEFUL COMMODITY HAS HAD A ROMANTIC PAST.

Its Origin Goes Back Into the Most Obscure Antiquity—Chinese Made it Many Centuries Before the Christian Era—Plantations Moved Westward With Civilization—Process of Manufacture.

There are few articles of commerce better known than sugar, and few, if any, have such a universal range of utility. Taking the word in its widest sense, sugar is more or less known in all countries, whether civilized or uncivilized, for it can be obtained from more than one source. Sugar is such a familiar household word that we seldom think of it in any other way than as sugar. We know its uses and its powers of pleasing our palates, and there we rest—content that we have it, but seldom thinking of its value or its source.

As a matter of fact, however, this valuable commodity is not only a food necessary for every person, and an important item in several forms in every household, but it is also an indispensable raw material in many industries. It forms the raw material for the preparation of lactic and formic acids, of certain cements, soaps, inks, shoe blacking, etc.

There are many other industrial purposes for which sugar is used, and as a food product which is universally consumed, it is not too much to say that, next to wheat, it is perhaps the most important single item of international and national commerce in the world. It has tested the fate as well as attested the wealth of nations, and has wrecked Ministries as well as financiers, though to the average man—and woman—it figures only as a somewhat insignificant if not contemptible item in the grocery bills.

The history of the sugar cane may be traced back till it is almost lost in the depths of obscurity. Humboldt considered the manufacture of sugar to be of the greatest antiquity amongst the Chinese. It was certainly known to the Greeks and Romans, and Herodotus probably alludes to sugar when he speaks of "honey made by the hand of confectioners."

There is some doubt attending its native country, though it is probable that it originally came from Southern China and India. The Chinese themselves admit that they first gained their knowledge of the art of making sugar from India somewhere about 766 to 780 B. C.

We have evidence that at a later period, the Ninth Century of our era, sugar was grown in Persia, and the Persian physicians of the tenth and eleventh centuries first introduced it into medicine. The Arabs cultivated the cane in many parts of their Mediterranean settlements, and as early as 961 A. D. the plant flourished in the Iberian Peninsula. It was about this period that the sugar manufacture was introduced into Europe, being brought from the East into Sicily by the Saracens. We are told by Venetian historians that the twelfth century sugar could be imported from Sicily to Venice at a cheaper rate than it could be brought from Egypt, where extensive plantations then existed.

In Sicily, then, and in Valentia, were the first European plantations, but in the early part of the fifteenth century they were gradually extended to Granada, Portugal, Madeira, and the Canary Islands. Soon afterwards sugar of Egyptian origin formed a staple trade between the merchants of Venice and of London, wool, which then constituted the great wealth of England, being largely exported in exchange for it. In the Middle Ages Venice was the great European centre of the sugar trade, and towards the end of the fifteenth century a Venetian citizen received a reward of 100,000 crowns for the invention of the art of making loaf sugar.

One of the earliest references to sugar in Great Britain is that of 100,000 pounds of sugar being shipped to London in 1319 by a Venetian merchant in exchange for wool. In the same year there appears in the accounts of the Chamberlain of Scotland a payment at the rate of 40 cents per pound of sugar. Throughout Europe it continued to be a costly luxury and article of medicine only, till the increasing use of tea and coffee in the eighteenth century brought it into the list of food staples. So recently as 1850 it cost from 14 to 16 cents per pound.

Regarding the manufacture of sugar—sugar from canes and sugar from beetroot—the details differ, but there are five operations in the production of the sugar of commerce from either material which are common in both processes. These are: The extraction of the juice; the purification or defecation of the juice; the evaporation of the juice to syrup point; the concentration or crystallization of the syrup; the curing or preparation of the crystals for the market by separating the molasses from them.

It is impossible in the space at our disposal to give a detailed account of the various processes followed in the making of sugar. Suffice it to say that there is a general resemblance in the methods adopted at all refineries for extracting from the raw sugar the first crop of crystals, which is sugar of the highest quality and polarization. The combined processes of melting, filtration, decolorization, crystallization in the vacuum pans, spinning in the centrifugal machines, drying and sacking, occupy from twenty-four to thirty-six hours when the product is granulated sugar, and from thirty-six hours to four days when first-grade cubes are produced. The process of "spinning" alluded to is for the purpose of separating the syrup from the crystallized sugar, and it is in the subsequent treatment of this syrup for the extraction of the lower grades of sugar, including "pieces," that the processes employed at the various refineries differ essentially.

An aeroplane is to be given to Great Britain by British East Africa. The sum of $5,000 has been subscribed.

War Reduces Men's Stature.

It may be stated with confidence that the average height of the men of France began notably to decrease with the coming of age, in 1813 and after, of the young men born in the years of the revolutionary wars (1792-1802), and that it continued to decrease in the following years with the coming of age of the youths born during the wars of the empire.

Soon after the cessation of these terrible man-draining wars, for the maintenance of which a great part of the able-bodied male population of France had been withdrawn from their families and the duties of reproduction, and much of this part actually sacrificed, a new type of boys began to be born. These boys indeed had in them an inheritance of stature that carried them by the time of their coming of age in the 1830s and 1840s to height one inch greater than that of the earlier generations born in war time.

FORTUNES FROM WASTE.

What Manufacturers Owe to the Careless Public.

Manufacturers who deal in stationery ought to be happy men, for they make big fortunes out of the careless public who waste their wares.

Take the ordinary bunch of envelopes. It is perfectly true that not twenty envelopes in a twenty-five bunch are properly used. An envelope is improperly addressed—it is destroyed. A big blot of ink falls on an addressed envelope — the envelope is burned. With writing paper the same holds good—how often one begins a letter only to tear the sheet of paper to fragments and start afresh. In this way countless thousands of sheets of paper are wasted every day of the week, of course to the merchant's profit.

The mustard manufacturer makes little out of the mustard that is consumed; his profit comes from the mustard left at the sides of plates, or that put in cruets, only to be thrown out afterwards. A good cigarette costs one penny—how often is a cigarette smoked to the end? Usually there is a good bit left over, and it is thrown away. That represents profit for the tobacco manufacturer. Take the cigarettes smoked by the individual during one year—could that individual save all the tobacco in his "fags" for one year he would have a few nice boxes of fresh cigarettes! As things are, the merchant benefits!

Cigars go in the same way, and the tobacco knocked out of pipes after smoking totals up to a deal in the course of a year—all the profit goes to the tobacco firms.

A bit of linoleum is to be laid down—the householder sends for a box of tacks. A tenth of the boxful is used—the box is put away. A few weeks after tacks are again required—where is the box? It cannot be found—other tacks are procured, and so it goes on. The same with screw nails, pots of paint and similar things.

Seed merchants and nurserymen make a good bit out of the public.

A man buys many packets of seeds during spring for sowing in his garden, but he only uses one quarter of each packet—the rest of the seeds are useless, and are eventually thrown out, and fresh seeds have to be bought next spring. The seedsman gets the benefit. The man who plants cabbages, etc., in his garden buys many young plants each spring, but he uses only a percentage of his purchases; the rest are cast aside as useless.

Decidedly Serious.

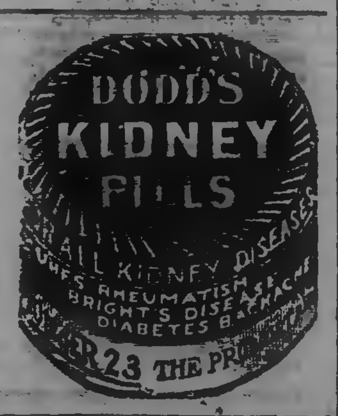
Jones—Are you serious in your attentions to Miss Hulks?

Bones—Rather! Her father did me out of $40,000 on the stock exchange last month and I'll get that back if I have to marry the whole family for it



EVEN IF ROCKEFELLER CAN RAISE $10,000,000.00 ON HIS CHECK ANY MINUTE, HE ISN'T THE FINANCIER THAT THE FELLOW IS WHO RAISES A FAMILY ON NINE DOLLARS A WEEK

But no matter whether you earn $9.00 or $50.00 you'll find several reasons why you'll be best satisfied if you get your Clothing and Furnishings at H. LeBrun & Co.'s.

The man who doesn't have to care about the high cost of living can get perfect satisfaction at many stores, but the fellow who wants to spend his money carefully had better come here. He will get that "something" in his Clothes and furnishings that makes for a better personal appearance and at a price he can easily afford.

Honestly, we don't believe there is a store anywhere where you can get so much style-value, wear-value and satisfaction-value at ordinary prices.

BUT DON'T TAKE OUR WORD FOR IT—ASK SOME OF YOUR FRIENDS. BETTER STILL COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF.

EASTWOOD BUILDING IS AGAIN IN LIMELIGHT

Case is Brought to Police Court and Enlarged Till Next Monday

Isaac Eastwood was charged in police court this morning with erecting a building inside the fire limits contrary to the city by-law.

City Solicitor Hall was not ready to go on with the case, neither was G. N. Gordon, counsel for Mr. Eastwood, so the case was enlarged till next Monday.

The building complained of is an addition to the building, formerly known as Noble's Hotel, on Hunter street. Mr. Eastwood made some improvements to the property at the rear, some time ago, and considerable discussion took place at council meetings. It was decided that the work should not proceed unless the changes conformed with the by-law, but no further action was taken.

The recent disaster at the corner of Simcoe and George streets has led to the case being re-opened.

EXTRA ATTRACTION ON THE MIDWAY; FINE OF $13.75

Trouble with the owners of the midway attractions were aired in Police Court this morning. The first case was that of Philip Revoy, charged with assaulting Sam Curry. He pleaded guilty.

Evidence went to show that Curry was at the Fair on Friday, and Revoy was running a "Hoop-law" game. He won a teddy bear but Revoy wouldn't give it to him. They got into an argument and Revoy wanted to shake hands. Curry was willing but as they were shaking hands Revoy struck him on the eye, cutting the skin and causing bloodshed.

Detective Newhall said he saw Curry bleeding and started to ask questions. Revoy commenced swearing and struck at Curry a couple of times. One of the blows fell on him. He and Detective Meagher then arrested him.

The magistrate fined Revoy $10 and costs, amounting to $13.75. He paid.

MAY ROBSON IN A NEW COMEDY

The sense of humor is strongly developed in May Robson as evidenced by her wonderful action of eccentric characters. Her appearance here will be at the Grand Opera House for one night, to-morrow Tuesday, September 16th, in a new play by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady," "The Traveling Salesman," etc., etc., in which she will assume the character of "Mrs. Mat Plummer," and her impersonation of a very young old lady is irresistibly funny—her own identity is so completely immersed in the character of the mother as she presents it with such clearness and fidelity— even in the serious moments— that one looses for the time the very name of May Robson, and is recognized only as the eccentric mother, so whimsical, so earnest and yet so very, very funny.

"Mrs. Mat Plummer," is a clear cut and clean and wholesome comedy, never for a moment insipid or dull. The plot of the play is said to be a novel and up to the minute.

THE PRESENT TOUR OF "PETER PAN"

The revival of "Peter Pan" by Maude Adams brings to mind J. M. Berrie, the author of the work and numerous others which have had a great deal of success in this country. Barrie is a Scotchman and is undoubtedly the best loved British dramatist of modern times. He is a little man with big eyes behind large, rimmed spectacles. The variety and imagery of the plots of his many plays shows that he is a dreamer. These same plots prove that there is nothing sour or rancid in his disposition. He would have you think that this old world is a pretty good place after all. The view of life that he gets through those spectacles is a pleasant one and he would much rather cause the world to smile a little than to call to its attention many of its imaginary ills. Barrie is an exceptionally dry humorist. The latest story going the rounds in London about the dramatist has to do with a star actress whose ability has been open to question. This young woman wearied him. She was constantly importuning him for the coveted "and" before her name at the end of the cast. Bringing up the subject again Barrie turned to her and answered sadly, "very well, but why not 'but'?" Barrie is a great admirer of Maude Adams, who has been seen in all of his important works in this country. During the time that he was writing "Peter Pan" he always referred to the chief character as Peter Adams. The present tour of "Peter Pan" with Miss Adams in it gives promise of being a record-breaking one in the point of success. Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Thursday, Sept. 18th

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS

"Brewster's Millions" was presented before two delighted audiences at the Grand on Saturday.

Louis Nilsen as the "reckless Monty" is by far the best actor that ever appeared in this city in that role. He has the style that appeals and had the audience with him all the time. He was summoned for curtain calls at the end of every act. The rest of the company especially Earl Christie as "Mac" and Miss Katherine Francis as "Peggy" were exceedingly good.

The scenery is of the finest, and the storm scene in the third act is very fine indeed.

BELMONT CLUB

The Belmont Club wish to announce that the dance arranged for to-night will not be held at the club house, but will take place at the club rooms.

A DRAMATIC RECITAL

Much interest has been aroused in the forthcoming appearance in this city of Mme. Harriet Labadie, who will give a dramatic interpretation of "To-morrow," on Sept. 15th, at the Grand Opera House, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the Peterborough Health Association.

Mme. Labadie is a woman of culture and high ideals, and in addition possesses distinction, beauty and a magnetic force that attracts and holds her audience. As a dramatic interpreter of plays, she is acknowledged by critics to be without an equal. The critic of the Rochester Herald, (New York,) writes:—

"Merely as as entertainment, Mme. Labadie gave her audience a genuine and memorable treat, while as an artistic exposition of the possibilities of dramatic reading, it amounted to a veritable triumph.

"The elements of Mme. Labadie's art are somewhat difficult to analyze. She presents real living characters. Just how she does it is hard to say. In ordinary evening dress, without the assistance of effects of any kind, and without at any time moving a dozen steps from the centre of the stage, she yet succeeds in placing before her hearerrs the separate and widely varying figures of of the play. And these characters are all distinct and sharply defined. By the modulations of an exquisite voice, by an indefinable something which amounts scarcely to more than suggestions the effect is produced, and the audience sees and recognizes the characters which she herself perfectly visualizes.

"Mme Labadie's visit was a real privilege to Rochester and it is to be regretted that she saw fit to give only one performance here."

ST. GEORGE'S CHORAL SOCIETY

At the opening session of the St. George's Choral Society, to-morrow night (Tuesday) at 8 o'clock, several interesting presentations will be made by Mr. John Crane, who had been connected so intimately with musical productions in this city for many years. It will be a grand opportunity for old and new members to become acquainted in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, by permission of the Board of Education.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

The members of the Peterborough Club are invited to be the guests of Mr. Burnham, M.P., on Wednesday evening next, at the club rooms.

Substitution is attended by so many dangers, that, to be safe, you must insist upon getting what you ask for, and what you know is good. This applies as strongly in the case of tea as of anything else. Ask for "Salada" and accept no other tea.

HEALTH OF EMPRESS WORRIES THE KAISER

THE ATTRACTIVE WINDOW DISPLAY OF ROBERT FAIR&CO.

The pretty designs and fashions of autumn millinery displayed in the window of Robert Fair & Co. attracted thousands of Exhibition visitors during the three Exhibition days. Never before has such a display of beautiful and becoming millinery been shown by this store. Dame Fashion was never so lavish in designing such millinery for autumn wear, large picture shapes and medium hats galore, all correct, provided the little important details of trimming, color scheme and so on are in harmony with fashion's dictates. And as for these essential features their millinery stock of past seasons are evidence sufficient that their display of models for the forthcoming season will be all and more than is expected by the discriminating women of this city. The millinery department and show windows alone deserves a special visit to this store.

VISIT OF PAPAL DELEGATE TO PETERBORO FOR CONSECRATION

Next Sunday the Last as Pastor of Church of the Sacred Heart for the Bishop-Elect—Presentations to be Made

Next Sunday, September 21st, Rev M. J. O'Brien D.D., will sever his connection with the Parish of the Sacred Heart and will hand over the parochial reins to his successor, whose name has not yet been made known. At 3.30 in the afternoon the bishop-elect will give Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, at the conclusion of which he will say a few words of farewell to his parishioners, whom he has guided with a tender and loving hand for the past four years. After this a presentation will be made to him and an address read.

On Sunday evening at 7 o'clock he will give benediction in St. Peter's Cathedral, after which a presentation will be made to him by the St. Peter's branch, and an address will also be read.

On Tuesday evening the Papal Dele- 22nd. he will be made the recipient of a presentation and an address by the Knights of Columbus.

On Tuesday evening, the Papal Delegate, Mgr. P. E. Stagne, will arrive by a special C.P.R. train from the east at 7.30, and the Catholic laity and clergy will form a procession to escort him from the depot to St. Peter's Cathedral, where addresses will be tendered him by the clergy and laity, and he will give the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. It is expected that over 2,000 people will be in the procession.

On Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., will be consecrated Bishop of Peterborough. That evening a public reception will be held on the lawn of St. Peter's Cathedral (if the weather is bad a hall will be used) for the Papal Delegate. This will afford the people of Peterborough an opportunity to meet the Pope's representative to Canada.

On Thursday the ceremonies will close by the Papal Delegate giving Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at the Church of the Sacred Heart at 7.30 in the evening.

BIG FAIR IS OVER AND DIRECTORS MET SUCCESS

Attendance up to Record Reached Last Year—Entries Were Far in Excess

The 1913 exhibition of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is over and considerable satisfaction is expressed at the results.

While the attendance on Friday was hardly as good as the same day of last year, the attendance for Saturday morning and afternoon of this year was in advance, so that altogether the total attendance was about the same as last year, when the directors set up a new record.

The list of entries was far in advance of any mark made by the exhibition and this is what might be termed the cream of the fair. A big increase in entries means real success, far more so than increase in attendance, or even finances for that matter.

Another feature impressed upon the Review this morning was that the midway was of a higher standard than last year. It was possible for women and children to pass along without hearing and seeing anything out of the way.

One of the officials in conversation with the Review this morning said that it was imperative that increased grand stand accommodation be provided. On both the big days of last year and this year the grand stand was packed and many people could not gain admission. In several cases money had to be refunded as the ticket was worthless as far as securing a seat was concerned.

Many things might be enumerated that struck the fancy of the large crowds. For instance, it was plain to be seen that this section of the province has its share of fine horses and cattle. In driving and heavy horses the showing elicited great pleasure. One spectator was heard to remark that he had no idea that there were so many fine drivers in and around Peterborough.

PERSONAL.

Miss Lulu Butterfield of Bobcaygeon is visiting in the city.

Mr. T. F. Matthews left on Saturday on a business trip to the west.

Miss McClellan, of the Wellesley Hospital Staff, Toronto, is spending her vacation at the home of her parents on Gilmour street.

Mrs. Fitzmorris and two children of Seattle and Miss Conlin, of Vancouver, B.C., are visiting in the city, the guests of their sister, Mrs Mahoney, 843 Water street.

Mr. John Allan and Miss Dorothy Allan were in St. Thomas on Saturday and attended the Russell—Tait nuptials at Knox Church. Miss Allan was one of the two bridesmaids, and Mr. Allan played the wedding music

Deceased was widely known and highly esteemed. She is survived by three sons, Richard of this city, and Fred and Walter of Toronto. Three daughters are Mrs. W. A Peterborough man who is in charge of a survey and work for a western city, writing home relates the following:

"I was up a little earlier this morning than usual and witnessed a funny incident.

"The dinner bell is made of a short length of railroad iron suspended from the side of the cook shack, and the cookee beats on it with an iron bar when meals are ready. It makes a very musical sound and one that carries very well.

"In the morning he rings two bells—one, a call to get up, and the second when breakfast is ready. This morning when I looked out and the cookee was just about to hammer the 'bell,' all the camp dogs—there are five—were sitting in a semi-circle around the gong and looking at it waiting for the cook to start.

"The second he hit it each dog turned his nose to the sky and accompanied the tones of the bell with a most mournful howl. As each dog was a specialist in tone production and each struck a different key, the effect was like that of a choir out of joint. You can imagine the resulting din. It was enough to drive a man to drink. The cookee says it happens each morning regularly. When he goes out, the dogs are there waiting for him and breakfast. The queer thing is that the chorus never accompanies any other than the earliest morning bell. Possibly the fee for the engagement covers only one daily performance."

Two tablespoonfuls of ammonia added to the bath makes it very refreshing in hot weather.

To keep white paint bright, rub it with a clean kerosene cloth after the ordinary cleaning.

Effects of Eye Strain

The ills resulting from eye strain are so numerous that it would take a volume to enumerate them all. But among the most common are headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many cases of indigestion are directly due to eye strain.

It causes an undue strain on the nervous system, thereby decreasing a person's strength, both physical and mental. The brain worker finds it harder to concentrate his mind, the student cannot study as well, the farmer and mechanic will tire far quicker, the housewife finds the numerous duties of home a burden, in fact every walk of life suffers from depleted nervous energy due to eye strain. Therefore, it behooves everyone to be sure that their eyes are properly cared for. It is well, therefore, to have your eyes examined by a competent Optician. ## ELDERLY MAN TAKES HIS LIFE BY LEAPING INTO WHIRLPOOL

After Being Balked in an Attempt to do the Same Thing on Saturday, Sixty-Eight-Year-Old Man Mounts Rail and Hurls Himself Into Water Two Hundred Feet Below

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Sept. 16.—A man believed to be John Hawkins, 68 years old, a moulder who came here from Erie, Pa., on Sept. 6, and attempted to leap from the lower steel arch bridge last Saturday evening, committed suicide by plunging from the lower steel arch bridge into the whirlpool rapids, nearly 200 feet below, at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. The description of the man tallies with that of Hawkins, who had not returned to the Waverly Hotel in Second street, where he boarded, since he left the place in search of work at eight o'clock yesterday morning.

Hawkins entered upon the bridge at the Canadian end. He walked along the sidewalk on the north side of the bridge, but infrequently used by pedestrians. When he reached the middle of the bridge, he began leisurely to climb the four-foot railing. Swinging his left leg over, he perched his body for a moment on the rail. Then he drew up his right foot, and slid off into the river. The body disappeared immediately it touched the water.

Mrs. James Donald and Mrs. Henry Suess of Niagara Falls, Ont., were the only ones who saw the fatal plunge. They were standing on the river bank, about 200 feet below the bridge on the Canadian side, when they first noticed the man. He was at that time walking across the bridge. A moment later they saw him stop, climb the rail, and take the plunge.

Saturday evening Hawkins attempted to take his life by leaping into the river from the lower bridge. Robert St. Clair and John Robertson, returning from the Canadian side saw him climbing the railing at almost the identical place he scaled yesterday. They fought with him for fifteen minutes, and finally succeeded in reaching the American end of the bridge.

STILL ANOTHER FIRE AT TRENTON

Large Skating Rink Destroyed—Freight Sheds Scorched.

TRENTON, Sept. 16.—Another disastrous fire visited Trenton Sunday night and caused serious loss to property. About 7.30 p.m. flames were discovered issuing from the skating rink. The fire had made considerable progress before it was noticed, and before the firemen could reach the scene it was bursting out through the roof. A dwelling house occupied by a family named Pringle was next to go and the flames spread to the fine new passenger depot and freight sheds of the Canadian Northern Railway, and at one time it seemed certain that the entire property would be consumed. The freight sheds were also damaged, and the fire spread to several boxcars and coaches.

The loss to the rink is estimated at from $7,000 to $8,000, partly covered by insurance. The loss to the Pringle house is from $1,300 to $1,500. The damage to the C. N. R. station is principally by water.

Whole Hamlet Threatened.

WHITBY, Sept. 16.—Thornton's Corners, two and a half miles east of this place on the Kingston road, was visited by a most destructive fire on Saturday, in which three barns and two dwelling houses were totally destroyed, with a loss of probably well over $5,000. The fire originated in a barn on the premises of Wm. Jones, and quickly spread to an adjoining stable. From there the flames leaped to the frame [illegible], and later across to another house, about fifty feet away, occupied by Harry Kings[illegible]. Flying boards ignited the barn of Arthur Farewell about 300 yards away, and it was destroyed.

At one time the whole hamlet was threatened, but a bucket brigade saved the day by hard work.

Killed by Steam Hammer.

KINGSTON, Sept. 16.—Jammed by a steam hammer at the locomotive works yesterday afternoon Melville Knapp received injuries which caused his death two hours later. He suffered several fractured ribs. He was 30 years old and married.

Boundary Agreement.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 16.—It is officially announced that an agreement on the principal points of the frontier question was reached at the sitting of the Turkish and Bulgarian peace delegates yesterday.

MR. PHILIPPE BUNAU VARILLA

That the Panama Canal soon will be opened to navigation is the opinion of Phillippe Bunau Varilla, eminent French engineer and diplomatist, who was associated with De Lesseps in the French construction work of the canal. He arrived in New York City on board the France, of the French line.

Mr. Bunau Varilla said he was in America for a rest and change of scenery, and that he expected to spend the next two months in seeing the United States. "Although I have been here before," said he, "this will be the first time as a 'gentleman of leisure,' and without having the Panama Canal or other thrilling business to look after," [illegible]

PANACEA FOR CANCER.

Germany Is Excited Over Reports of a Successful Remedy.

MUNICH, Sept. 16.—All Germany is obsessed with the idea of procuring misothorium as a panacea for cancer. It is stated to have power emanating in rays similar to but much more effective than radium. The cost seems almost as great. The substance is derived from thorium waste in the manufacture of gas mantles, and is used in a tiny portion enclosed in a silver covering, in which extremely small holes are pierced. The silver box is then placed upon the part affected by cancerous growth, and, it is said, will slowly but effectually remove all traces of the disease. There is hardly an important town in the country which did not vote a large sum from the public funds for the purpose of purchasing some of the costly material. Where public funds are not forthcoming concerts, bazaars and such like are the means adopted for raising the money for the purpose.

GIRL SHOT BY HER BROTHER

Canadian Press Despatch.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16— Anne Cochrane, the twelve year old daughter of a farmer living five miles from Papineauville, was shot here by her fourteen-year-old brother, Ernest. The boy was cleaning a rifle and pointed it at his sister. There was one cartridge left in the weapon which went off, the bullet entering the heart.

PAINTER SHOOTS ARMY CAPTAIN

Canadian Press Despatch.

BERLIN, Sept. 16 — Professor Heinrich Maass, a well known painter, last night shot and killed Count Chamberlain Von Westernhagen, a captain in the army. The men had met before in the court of honor to decide whether a duel was necessary. Enraged by some remarks made by Maass, Westernhagen slashed the painter in the face. The latter drew a revolver and shot Westernhagen dead.

SAILOR HEIR IS FOUND

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 16.—Chas. Rowe, a sailor, who has been sought as a missing heir during many of the last thirty years he has worked on great lake freighters, learned yesterday that a fortune of $50,000 awaits him in London, Ont.

The fortune, known as the Rispin estate, was left him by a relative, John Rispin, at one time a sailor.

Rowe saw in an old London, Ont., newspaper an advertisement of the administrators. He left yesterday to claim the legacy.

A VICTORY FOR THAW

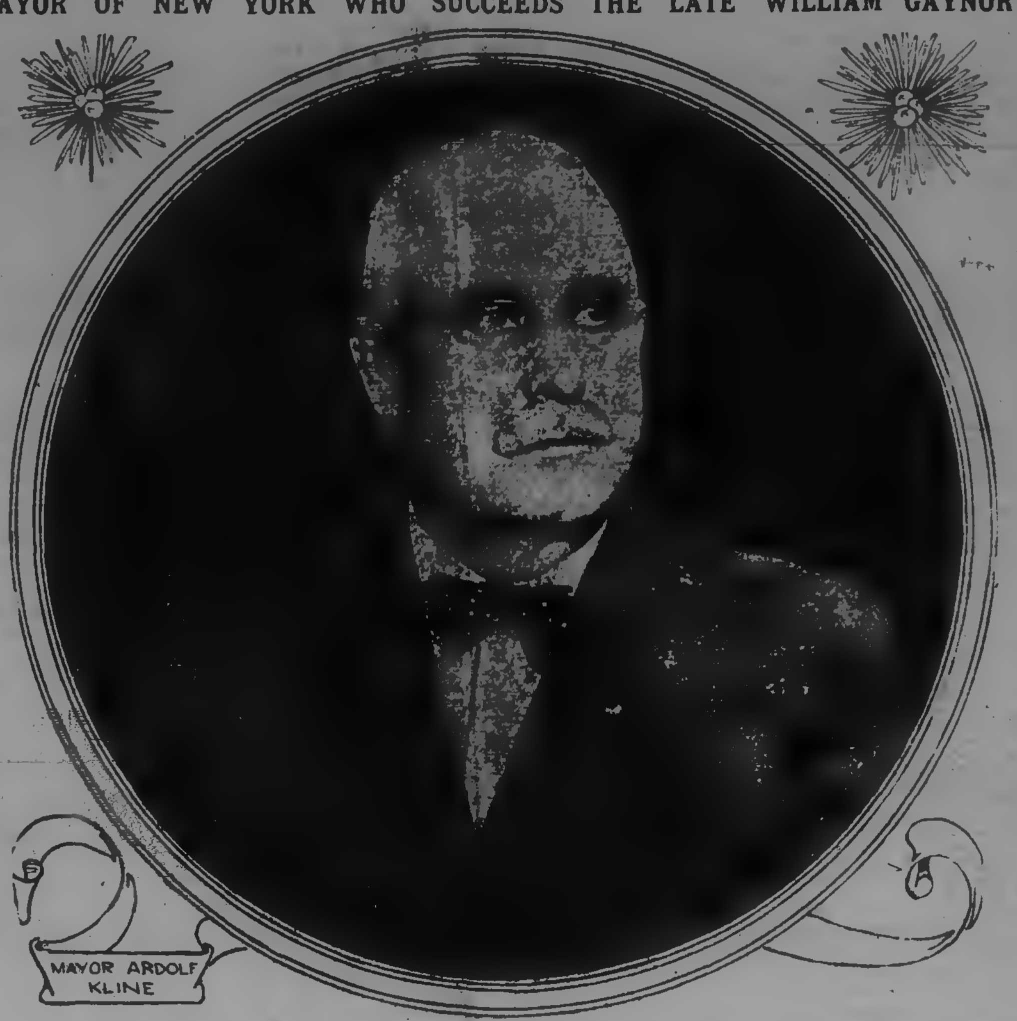
Canadian Press Despatch.

LITTLETON, Sept. 16.—The court heard arguments in habeas corpus merit this morning, after which Court adjourned the sitting without setting any date for the further hearing. This is considered a victory for Thaw, as the New York authorities asked for a decision to have the writ quashed.

Slices of toast spread with minced ham and served with a tomato sauce make an excellent breakfast or luncheon dish.

MAYOR OF NEW YORK WHO SUCCEEDS THE LATE WILLIAM GAYNOR



The new Mayor of New York city, who automatically became the executive head of the city government through Mr. William J. Gaynor's death at sea on steamship Baltic, is Colonel Ardolph L. Kline, a Republican. President of the Board of Aldermen, Colonel Kline will be at the head of the New York city government until January 1, 1914.

CANADIAN PROFESSOR TELLS OF ADVANCE IN MEDICINE

Noted Physiologist Makes an Important Announcement to the British Association.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Among those attending the meeting of the physiology section of the British Association has been Prof. Macallum, F.R.S., Toronto University, who yesterday gave an account of the joint discovery and investigation into "a new substance in nerve cells," a Canadian discovery which Prof. Leith, who presided, described as most valuable.

Prof. Macallum said the new substance was to be found only in fresh nerve cells. It did not occur in any other kind of cell except those that were metomorphosed into the modulary cell of the suprarenal gland. It was absent in fibrae and more abundant in the nerve cells of the sympathetic nerve system. The substance itself was easily extracted from the cell by water or alcohol and disappeared from the dying cell. It was probably an expert compound and forerunner of adrenal. The substance was now known to be of first importance in maintaining blood pressure or the tone of the arteries.

The theoretical importance of the observation lay in the fact that it seemed to show that nerve cells were secreting structures or glandular elements, which they were not previously supposed to be.

Prof. Buller of Manitoba University and Dr. Ruggles Gates, formerly of McGill, took part in the discussions of the botany section. Prof. Buller also contributed a paper in which he showed that in certain common toadstools the structures of the gills underneath the cap were most wonderfully organized to secure successful liberation of seed-like bodies. He said that the organization of these fungi was just as wonderful as that of the orchids.

Prof. Fields, professor of mathematics, Toronto University, gave an address to the section for pure mathematics. Dealing with the direct derivation of the complementary theorem, he compared the theorem he has discovered with the Riemann Roche theorem and gave proof that it was more general in its method than the latter.

The secret of the determination of sex possibly may be found in plant life. Sir Oliver Lodge told the association at its meeting yesterday afternoon. Referring to the fact that some plants produce both male and female flowers, he said this must be the result of some profound change in the sap at the junction in the stems where differently sexed flowers branch away from each other. He continued:

"I do not know what this is, and the microscope tells me nothing. Perhaps if physiologists could find out what happens in that little plant joint they might get a clew to the reason why some human beings are born boys and others girls."

Rush for Seats

There was a big rush for seats at the Grand box office this morning, due to the visit to Peterborough on Thursday of Maud Adams.

LISBON IN FERMENT.

Forces Against Administration Are Increasing.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A cable from Lisbon says: The situation here is becoming critical. Hundreds of minor Government officials have not been paid for several weeks, thus giving rise to a dangerous feeling against the administration.

Newspapers not given to alarmist views, admit that the situation is desperate while expressing the conviction that a restoration of the monarchy would be a failure. One of the papers says that a new monarch would certainly be assassinated by the people.

One of the streets of the city has been named amid general plaudits, in honor of Francisco Ferre, the Spanish educator.

Thousands of persons are fleeing the country and the Government is trying to find a way of checking the movement. Most of the fugitives are those who have remained neutral during the political struggles which have continued since the assassination of King Carlos, and who have been systematically blackmailed by secret organizations with Government affiliations.

Explosion Kills Fireman.

SARNIA, Sept. 16.—Word had been received here of a fatal accident that happened on the steamer Stephen C. Hall at Blind River. The steamer had loaded lumber for Detroit and Walkerville and was proceeding out of Blind River when a big boiler flue blew out, killing the fireman, Archie Swenor, of this place. The body was taken ashore and shipped to his home here for interment, the remains arriving here yesterday afternoon. The deceased fireman was 29 years of age and is survived by his widow and five children. He formerly resided at Trenton.

WAS FRIEND OF BRITAIN.

Prof. Arminius Vambrey of Budapest is Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A London cable says: Prof. Arminius Vambery, whose death at Budapest is reported to-day, in his 82nd year, was one of Britain's most influential friends in the Near East. As professor of oriental languages in the University of Budapest, he was a fearless and tireless fighter against any Russian policy of aggression in Central Asia, and a consistent supporter of British resistance.

Prof. Vambery was of Jewish descent, and although once a tailor's apprentice, he ultimately turned to the study of languages and became a traveler in unexplored Central Asia, which he toured in the disguise of a dervish, braving terrible hardships and dangers.

Bush Fires Near Guelph.

GUELPH, Sept. 16.—The entire neighborhood of New Germany, a village seven miles northwest of Guelph, is shrouded in smoke and the inhabitants are waging a night and day war against the flames in their bush lots. The peat fire that has been burning on the old Imphon farm near the R. C. Cemetery has now covered about fifteen acres of ground. A three-hour battle was waged against it Sunday by nearby residents without any considerable check on its progress.

FASTEST MAN EVER TRAVELLED

PARIS, Sept. 16.—With the wind behind, Aviator Guillaux Sunday flew with a passenger from Savigny en Craye, his home, to Paris, a distance of 190 kilometers, in 50 minutes, representing a speed of 148 miles an hour. This is the fastest rate at which a human being ever traveled.

Jumps From Steamer.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 16.—William Hunter, who broke out of the police station here after being committed for trial in July last on a charge of theft, was apprehended in Ogdensburg Sunday. Hunter consented to return, and while being brought back yesterday afternoon by the steamer Riverside escaped again by jumping from the stern of the craft when she touched the dock at Morristown, the last stopping place before Brockville is reached. He made a clean getaway, hiking for the woods in the vicinity of the village, which is on the American border opposite here. At latest accounts officers were in pursuit of the fugitive, who will undoubtedly be deported if caught.

Women To Enter Politics.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—"The Women's Political Party" is the title of a new organization founded by the Duchess of Marlborough, which will make a strong attempt to interest women in municipal affairs and promote their election to local government bodies on the ground that women are not treated properly in the matter of municipal representation. The organization consists of women of all political parties confined to London. It has nothing to do with the suffragette movement in the sphere of imperial politics.

Atlantic Companies' War.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.—The Atlantic steamship war is dealt with in a report of the Trade and Commerce Department yesterday. In all probability, the result of the quarrel that has broken out between the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American lines with regard to the division of the North Atlantic emigrant passenger traffic will be to provide this fall additional facilities for the transportation of Canadian produce to German ports via Boston and Baltimore at low rates.

Hangs Himself From Beam.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 16.—William Lee of Light street, who has been employed for the past twenty-five years as candy-maker at the Bean & Westlake Biscuit Co., committed suicide early yesterday morning, by hanging himself from a beam. For some time past, the deceased had bad fits of depression, owing to ill-health.

Physician Arrested.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Announcement was made last night by Police Inspector Faurot, that another man was under arrest here in connection with the murder of Anna Aumuller, Inspector Faurot declared the new developments would prove fully as sensational as Schmidt's arrest.

Poison Suspected.

GALT, Sept. 16.—George Phillips, mail carrier between Galt and Sheffield, has lost three valuable horses from some mysterious malady baffling the skill of veterinaries. Samples of feed and water have been sent to Toronto for analysis, to determine whether poison was used.

OFFICIALS PESSIMISTIC REGARDING THE OUTLOOK

President Wilson is Cutting Short His Vacation and Hastening to Washington in Fear of Massacres Which Will Arouse American Indignation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Marked pessimism as to the Mexican situation is no longer concealed in administration circles. Whereas for some weeks all the White House talk about Mexico was extremely optimistic, the official tone is discouraging.

It is admitted on all hands that no progress is being made to restore peace, that fighting is more prevalent than ever, and that an explosion in the form of massacres of Americans may break forth any time, thus making it impossible fo the President or Congress to stay the force of public sentiment here.

The fact that President Wilson has cut short his vacation and is starting back from Cornish, N.H., is understood to be due to the uncertainty of the Mexican situation and fear of demonstrations in Mexico City to-day, Independence Day. One hundred Americans, fugitives from the Mexican desert between Torreon and Saltillo, harassed by bandit bands, according to unconfirmed reports, were not mentioned in the early official despatches yesterday, and the State Department had no other information of them, although a Mexican news despatch said they were safe.

Tell Thrilling Tales.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—Tales which move the blood are told by one hundred American refugees who arrived here Sunday on the Pacific Mail steamer Peru from all parts of the Pacific coast of Mexico. Among the worst of these stories was the cold-blooded murder of Morris P. Root, an American mining engineer.

Root was murdered by a band of revolutionists while he was unarmed and helpless. He was superintendent of the El Tegre mines at Tepic, and while on his way to join employes of the company, who were preparing to defend the mine against a band of guerrillas, he was seized and disarmed, and then hacked to death by the machetes of half a dozen bandits.

Root was known as the nephew of Elihu Root. Elihu Root, jr., denied he had ever heard of Morris P. Root. The murdered man had been in Mexico for sixteen years. He was fifty years of age and was an expert miner.

G. Hirschfield, a native of San Francisco, and cousin of the vice-president of Levi Strauss & Co., laid strong emphasis on the futility of President Wilson's pacification idea.

"If President Wilson knew anything about Mexico," he said, "he would realize the country can be pacified only in one way, and that is with the big stick, just as Porfirio Diaz wielded it. It is hard to even suggest pacification, for it is beyond human power to bring the various bandit factions together. The rebel chiefs do not recognize each other, and between looting they fight among themselves. They are fighting for loot, and for nothing but loot. If this Government had sent a man who possessed a knowledge of Mexican affairs there, other truths would have been known to the President, and the ridiculous note sent to Huerta would never have been written."

ALBERTA HOUSE OPENS TUESDAY

[illegible], Alta., Sept. 16.—The first session of the third Alberta Legislature opens Tuesday, and it is expected that the session will be of shorter duration than usual. Only a small number of civil bills have been advertised and it is not expected much important public legislation will be enacted.

A libel law will probably be introduced. Such a measure was slated for last year, but was shelved owing to pressure of other business. Hon. A. G. MacKay will probably signalize his entrance to the Legislature by moving the Woodmen's Lien Act to protect wages of men making ties for railroad building in the west. This will have the support of the Government.

Best Crop In the World.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—The statistics of the new crop now rolling eastward in a mighty wave are most gratifying. On yesterday's market were 1,445 cars of wheat, 954 of which graded No. 1 northern, 278 of contract grade, and 310 No. 1 hard, or about 98 per cent. of the total. No other country in the world can show a crop of such splendid quality. Western Canada itself has never equalled this, and it has been some producer in its day.

With 1,000 cars in sight to-day, receipts promise to be quite as heavy.

Constantine's Paris Visit.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—It is officially announced that King Constantine of Greece, will visit Paris incognito on Sept. 20, when he will be received by President Poincare. The visit may be intended to counteract the king's visit to Germany and his remarks there in praise of German military tactics in the Greek campaign, which gave offence to French instructors.

STRIKERS STARVING.

Dublin Transport Workers Not Weakening, However.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A London cable says:

Hunger has become the ally of organized capital in the fight against the Dublin transport workers. By the end of this week the spectre of starvation will be a grim reality in the foul slums of the city, where life at best is a hand-to-mouth struggle to keep body and soul together.

There is no sign of weakening, however, on the part of James Larkins' deluded followers, despite a steady and ominous growth day by day of the employers' lockout.

Larkin, speaking at a labor meeting in Manchester, said he believed he had a divine mission to make men and women discontented.

Since he went to Ireland, in 1907, he had raised the flag of discontentment from Belfast to Cork, and brought a new hope and a new gospel to the working classes of Ireland.

New Turkish Loan.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The Petit Parisien learns that a Franco-Turkish agreement is about to be concluded authorizing a Turkish loan of 700,000,000 francs ($140,000,000) in France. The agreement deals also with the question of Turkish customs, and provides for railway concessions to French companies in Eastern Asia Minor and Syria.

Two Are on Trial.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 16.—General interest in the New Westminster assizes opening yesterday, centres in the case against Charles Dean, charged with complicity in the $270,000 Bank of Montreal robbery, two years ago yesterday. Martin Powell, also charged and recently extradited from Detroit, will arrive at New Westminster to-day.

W. T. JEROME GETS EVEN

His Coaticook Enemy Faces a Serious Charge.

COLEBROOK, N.H., Sept. 16.—The judicial branch of the U. S. Government assumed joint guardianship of Harry K. Thaw last night. By virtue of a writ of habeas corpus issued at Concord on Saturday last, U. S. Marshal E. P. Nute became one of the Matteawan fugitive's custodians, and to-day he will be taken to Littleton, N.H., and produced before Judge Edgar Aldrich in the U. S. District Court.

The writ was obtained by Thaw's lawyers as a weapon against William Travers Jerome, in case Jerome should essay forcibly to get Thaw across the New York border.

Thaw spent an uneventful day. Only once did he leave his hotel, and that was to get shaved. He heard with interest that John Andrews, the Coaticook constable who arrested Jerome on the charge of gambling, of which he was subsequently exonerated, had run afoul of the U. S. immigration law. Last night Andrews was held here in the custody of Chas. Kelley, Colebrook's chief of police, pending the arrival of George R. Allen, a U. S. immigration inspector, stationed at Island Pond, Vt. Allen telephoned that he had a warrant for the arrest of Andrews, charging him with assisting a pauper woman to enter this country in violation of the immigration laws.

Inspector Allen took charge of Andrews shortly before ten o'clock. He said he was under indictment returned by the federal grand jury at Windsor, Vt., in May of this year. It is charged that the offense was committed in October, 1912, when Andrews with others smuggled the pauper woman into the United States from Coaticook to Reading, Mass. The maximum penalty for the offence is a fine of $1,000 and two years' imprisonment.

C.M.A. IN CONVENTION.

Annual Session of Manufacturers at Halifax.

HALIFAX, Sept. 16.—This city is prepared to entertain this week several hundred members of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, the annual convention of which opens to-day, when R. S. Gourlay of Toronto, will read his presidential address. From Toronto alone two score delegates are expected. It is eleven years since the association last met in this city, and at that time the association declared themselves in regard to the British preferential tariff, and it is anticipated that this year's deliberations may be equally momentous.

Among the topics to be discussed at length, the one of chief importance will be that of freight rates on land and sea, and co-operation will be sought with the western grain growers in a campaign for reductions. There is also the question of providing, in cities, a cartage service to replace that which the railways have decided to discontinue.

Workmen's compensation will also be a feature of the discussion, and the association is expected to declare itself against those provisions from the English Act, which Sir William Meredith has approved of for Ontario.

Another topic will be the proposed parcel post, and the zone system will, it is predicted, come in for unfavorable criticism. A special committee will report on the question of telegraph rates and forms.

It is not expected that tariff matters will enter into the deliberations to any great extent.

CONSERVATION OF YOUNG LIFE

In another column we reprint an editorial from the Bobcaygeon Independent which is worthy of the perusal and serious consideration of all who are interested in the future, not only of Canadian lands, but of the Canadian people.

The Review has already on several occasions called attention to the same subject. We are glad to see that it is being kept before the public and that the problem of these denuded and non-farming districts is to be grappled with.

THE LUMBERMAN.

While the lumberman has been a blessing in clearing good land and preparing the way for the farmer, the work has been carried a little too far and has, in many places been nothing short of wanton destruction.

Canada cannot do without trees; the life of the country both in winter and summer would not be so trying if there were more trees along the highways and in places where neither grain nor hay will grow.

THE PINE AND THE POET.

The average Canadian has no far-seeing sense of utility, he has no true consideration for his own comfort, and has no poetic vision.

A pine tree, to a poet, is the majestic monarch of the forest, even to the Indian (the Indians are the only true Canadian poets) a pine tree suggests something lofty and magnificent, for they say that when "The Lord" visited the Indians He was "as tall as a pine tree."

HOW MANY CORDS?

But the average Canadian farmer when he looks upon this monarch of the woods, does not go into poetic rhapsody about it, nor does he consider its utility as shelter in summer or winter, but he measures it with his eye and calculates how long it would take to bring it to the ground, and how many cords of wood he would get out of it.

SNOB-STOCRACY.

It is little wonder that so many of our young people find country life uninteresting and sordid, for it is sordid. There is not that pastoral spirit which finds its full life in the heart of nature. Many farmers regard their work merely as a laborious means of getting a fortune together to enable them to live in retirement among the snob-stocracy of the nearest town or village.

LIVE FOR PIG-RAISING.

The hardships of farm life are the results of this mercenary, get-rich spirit which possesses many of our country people. Men and women slave and drive their children from their homes by making life a mere pig-raising, dollar-getting affair. To young people life is something more than this and they seek the human life of the cities.

CONSERVATION OF YOUTH.

When Rural Canada begins to take rural life as something worth living for its own sake it will take thought upon these questions of the conservation of many other things beside trees and water powers. It will do something to conserve the young life which is flowing out to waste into the seething ocean of the cities.

A PROFESSOR PRESIDENT

President Woodrow Wilson is proving that it is possible to run the United States without bluster and bombast. He has only been in office for a few months, but in that time he has had certain very serious situations to negotiate, which would have given him a chance to spread himself, and which Mr. Roosevelt would have made enormous capital out of.

There is nothing spectacular about Wilson he does not wield the big stick, at least not in public, he doubtless has it lying somewhere at hand. But he has force and can speak with authority and conviction nevertheless.

Huerta seems a little non-pleased at the quiet way in which the Professor has taken him. The Mexican was half wishing the American President would lose his temper if he did not acknowledge him; but Wilson did neither. He merely told the Mexicans that they were making fools of themselves and if they wanted to go on killing each other, they could do so, but they must be careful and not kill any of Uncle Sam's fine chickens.

He wisely ordered all self-respecting yankees to come away from the row, like a father would call his children from a scuffle of ruffians in a back street.

It is not difficult to imagine what Mr. Roosevelt would have done, had he been in office. The big stick is all right in local politics, but in delicate international matters calm commonsense, the touch of the gentleman and the philosopher, are requisite and necessary.

These the Professor President has certainly displayed to good advantage in dealing with the Mexican situation.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The progress of Jack Johnson in England seemed doomed to disaster in every way. His auto collided with a taxi, and the pugilist was seriously injured. The driver of the taxi was said to have been drunk. This could not be said to be the cause of Jack Johnson's collision with Rev. F. B. Meyer, and Dr. Clifford. These gentlemen are staunch tee-totallers.

The Guelph Mercury says: "No wonder it costs more to live now than a few years ago. Almost any time you care to pass a shoe-shine parlor, there is a row of young men some of them not over fifteen, waiting for a shine. While it is a commendable thing to see a young man keeping his shoes shined, the question suggests itself: "Why does not he do it himself?" Probably afraid that he will dirty his fingers. Perhaps it gives him a feeling of importance to puff a cigarette while someone cleans his shoes for him.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, receipts of live stock for the week ended Sept. 13 were 3300 cattle, 4000 sheep and lambs, 1900 hogs and 1650 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 2600 cattle, 3300 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 1400 calves.

Owing to the demand lately from American buyers for stockers, feeding cattle and common bulls, and the good prices being realized for the same, the offerings of such stock on this market were the largest for many months past. Sales of common bulls were at $3.50 to $3.75; feeding steers, at $5 to $5.25, and stockers, at $3.25 to $4.25 per cwt. in car load lots, while the tone of the market for butchers' cattle was stronger, and prices were fully 25c per cwt. higher than a week ago.

The trade in small meats was also active, owing to the fact that American packers bought large numbers of lambs and grass fed calves, but notwithstanding this fact, the market for sheep and lambs was weaker.

Hogs continue weak prices today, scoring a further decline of 15 to 25c per cwt., and the indications are that they will go still lower in the near future.

CONSERVATION IN EASTERN CANADA

The Problem of Denuded Wood-Lands

The Commission of Conservation is not parading the country with a band wagon but it is quietly accomplishing a useful service for the country. The Fourth Annual Report, again forms a very interesting volume of information, grasping such subjects as Lands, Minerals, Fisheries, Forests, Water power, etc. In connection with Lands and Forests Dr. Fernow made a reconnaissance of the Trent waterway, a district of some three thousand square miles, of which one third is water. This work was brought about by Mr. Burnham, Member for West Peterborough. The result of the survey made by Dr. Fernow, brings out the fact that in the district north of Peterborough, the 3,000 square miles tributary to the Trent waterway, the farm area comprises only 11 p.c. A moderate valuation puts the loss of timber by fires on prospective out lines at eight million dollars, and at least 60,000 acres have been turned into absolute rock barrens. The Doctor deplores that unsuitable lands, anywhere in the province should be opened for settlement Pockets of land among the hills may furnish potatoes, oats and hay for the lumber camps, while the timber exists, but when the camps cease and the pockets of land cropped out, a certain number of families are left to become hopelessly unable either through want of energy, or financial ability to move away, and a degenrate population follows that is highly undesirable. This is not to say that the whole population are of that description far from it, but it is true of a small proportion. The main object Dr. Fernow had in view was to ascertain what could be done for the recuperation of the timberless lands, the lands unfit for cultivation for the district in question, is a fair example of what exists in other provinces besides Ontario. There are thousands of square miles of similar lands in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and the problem is to decide on what is best to do in order to restore these lands to their covering of forests. Deprived of their rich growth of timber they are really a menace to the country, whereas clothed in their forest grandure, they would be a national asset of immense value, not only as producers of wood, but as conservers of moisture. The wanton destruction of forests in the last fifty years has been a national shame, and the Commission of Conservation, has yet to bring its most forceful influence to bear on the Provincial Governments in order to have them adopt a more sane policy something that will end the destruction of the forests, and conserve them for interminable cultivation.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

"Tim," said Norman Fisk to his friend, Timothy Forman, "I wish you would do me a favor. I must be absent from home on business for a month. I don't like to leave an old woman and a little girl in the house alone, and I'd like you to at least sleep there while I'm gone, though if you like you can eat there as well."

Fisk was forty-five and Forman thirty-four. They were chums, Fisk being a widower, Forman an "old bach." Fisk's household consisted, besides himself, of his aunt, an old lady of sixty-five, and his daughter, [illegible] in school.

"Certainly, old man," replied Forman. "I'll sleep there anyway. It won't be necessary for me to spend my evenings there, will it?"

"Not at all. Blanche usually studies her lessons in the evening, and my aunt goes to sleep over her knitting."

"Your house is only a few blocks from the club," said the other, dismayed at the picture.

"Just so, and I'll see that you get a latchkey. You can go in as late as you like."

The first night Mr. Forman went to his friend's house at 9 o'clock. True enough, there was the old lady dosing over her knitting and a girl in short dresses sitting at a table with a globe lamp on it studying her lessons. The girl looked up at Forman with an expression on her face indicating more interest in his coming to spend some time with them than mere protection warranted. Her glance told him that it would not be entirely safe to treat her absolutely as a schoolgirl. Her aunt woke up and welcomed the custodian, but the girl said never a word.

The next few evenings Forman spent at his club. Then one morning leaving the house Blanche went out at the same time with a pile of school books under her arm. They walked on together, but it didn't occur to Forman to offer to carry her books for her till she remarked that they were very heavy. When he left her at a corner and returned them she gave him a look of gratitude.

"DIDN'T YOU ENJOY IT ALL, TOO?"

Blanche at recess informed her bosom friend, a girl about her own age, that she had had a grown man to walk to school with her. She had pretended that her books were heavy because she wished to be treated like a young lady. She was not sure whether she would fall in love with her escort or not. He certainly seemed very nice. True he was a little old for her, but a fortune teller had told her that she would marry a man twice her age.

The next evening Mr. Forman came in rather early—10 o'clock—being tired and sleepy. He found the schoolgirl with a pack of cards before her playing solitaire. With a pout on her young lips and a knitting of her smooth brows she said:

"Oh, I can't work this out. Won't you help me, Mr. Forman?"

Forman sat down opposite her. From that moment she ceased to be interested in the cards, except for a pretext, prattling to him and endeavoring to appear like a young lady.

"How old would you take me for, Mr. Forman?"

"Fourteen—perhaps a year older."

"Oh, dear, you are far out of the way. I'll be seventeen next month."

"You don't mean it!"

"Are you a believer in platonic affection, Mr. Forman?"

"I never thought about it. Are you?"

"It's dangerous. The least thing is liable to break down the platonic and bring about the true love."

"What do you mean by the least thing?"

"Well, an act of kindness or of sacrifice; a touch of the hand; a kiss."

"Good gracious! You talk very queer for a"—

"Oh, yes; I know you consider me a kid. You forget I'll be seventeen next month, and eighteen is legal age for a woman."

Forman remembered a time when he had considered a girl of eighteen in her prime and one of twenty-two passe. Then he thought how nice it would seem to be back in those youthful days. How much he had lost by coming to middle age. And here was a girl who was plainly indicating that she wished to be considered a companionable person for him. Wouldn't it be fine if he could go back a dozen years and she could go forward a few years, and he could love her and she could love him, and he could get rid of his wretched club life and all that?

The next evening Forman, who had received a letter from Fisk, made a pretext of it to go to the house to tell Blanche that he had heard from her father. "Take good care of my little girl" was the injunction, and Forman made himself believe that it was incumbent upon him to afford her some amusement, so he asked her aunt if he might take Blanche to the theater. Permission was given and tickets secured for a Friday night when the girl would not be obliged to go to school the next day and could therefore sleep late.

Blanche wore the dress with the longest skirt in her possession and put on all her finery, including a number of gold and silver bangles. She looked very pretty and, more than that, wore on her face a youthful expectation that was fast fading from her escort. She had been to a theater but once or twice in her life, while the drama was an old story with him. But in his companion's enjoyment he found a new sensation. The theater, the players, many of them "mouthing their words" and overacting, were to her real persons, their joys and sorrows real emotions, while the hero and heroine seemed to be enacting her own feelings.

Forman, blaze himself, sat regarding his companion with infinite satisfaction. When he felt her arm against his own a thrill ran through him. When she turned her face toward his looking for a companionable appreciation of some noble sentiment expressed by one of the actors, he smiled good naturedly and sympathetically. Then when the curtain fell he took her where they could get an ice, which to her was more than a canvasback duck to one who had been satiated. And that night Blanche went to sleep dreaming that Forman was the hero and she the heroine in the play that had been enacted. As for Forman he sank to slumber thinking about the pretty young thing who had sat beside him at the theater.

Forman passed the next evening at his club. Saturday night is gala night at most clubs and there were plenty of his companions there to keep him company. But somehow the evening dragged. At billiards the face of Blanche was always interposing itself between him and the object ball. At bridge he lost because he couldn't keep his mind on the game. And so it was in whatever he did. When he went home to the house he was guarding he felt relieved because he was under the same roof with the girl who had thrust herself unbidden into his thoughts. His club life seemed more unsatisfactory to him than ever.

One morning Forman woke up conscious of the fact that he was drifting into an equivocal position. His friend had asked him to look out for his home and the two people in it during his absence. What had he been doing? Turning the head of that friend's daughter, not quite seventeen years old. In this Forman was wrong. It was not he who was turning the girl's head, but she who was turning his head. At any rate there was something very delightful between them. How would he meet his friend when he returned? Then suddenly he was terrified at the thought that Blanche would give the whole matter away to her father.

And this is exactly what she did. She didn't tell him her secret, but when Forman went to the house on the evening of Fisk's arrival to get something he had left there Blanche received him so enthusiastically that her father could not help noticing it. Forman began to stammer something that would help the matter.

"It has been a pleasure to me," he said, "to afford your little girl"—here Blanche gave him a reproachful look—"some amusement during your absence. Her aunt was good enough to let me take her to the theater, and I gave her a drive in the park in my buggy."

"Didn't you enjoy it all, too, Mr. Forman?" interrupted Blanche, with another pronounced reproachful look.

"Very much, very much!" replied Forman, reddening.

"I dare say you've been very kind, old man," said Fisk, and there was something in the familiar appellation of "old man" that for the first time grated on Forman's feelings. "I think I'll stroll over to the club with you tonight for a game of bridge."

That was the last meeting between Forman and the little girl for three years. He was then just passed middle age and she a young lady.

"Blanche is home," said Fisk to his friend one day. "Come round and see us."

"I will with pleasure," replied Forman, and he chose a time for calling when he knew his friend would not be at home.

When Forman called he saw a vision of loveliness advancing to greet him with pleasure in her eye and a smile on her lips. It seemed to him all at once that he had been growing younger as the girl had been growing older. Surely this could not be the little girl whom he had taken to the theater and to whose prattle he had so often listened. That experience now seemed to him like a dream.

The child had passed completely into the woman. Nevertheless she had not recovered from her girlish fancy, and though she endeavored to conceal the fact from Forman she failed. He saw through the disguise at once, and his heart was filled with a great joy.

There was a courtship, but a post facto one. The real courtship had occurred three years before.

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bellevue, Ohio.—"I was in a terrible state before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back ached until I thought it would break, I had pains all over me, nervous feelings and periodic troubles. I was very weak and run down and was losing hope of ever being well and strong. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I improved rapidly and today am a well woman. I cannot tell you how happy I feel and I cannot say too much for your Compound. Would not be without it in the house if it cost three times the amount."—Mrs. CHAS. CHAPMAN, R. F. D. No. 7, Bellevue, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

THE CRACK OF THE WHIP

By SADIE OLCOTT

Nell Walker had been courting me for some time, but no proposal came. One day he told me where the hitch was.

"Amiability," he said, "is indispensable in a wife. How can I know before marriage that you are amiable?"

"You show a great deal of good sense," I replied. "There is a great deal in what you say. Come and take up your quarters with us for a month. There you will see me every day and often when I am off my guard. I shall be compelled to show my natural disposition."

"And as soon as the month is over we will enter upon that other month called the honeymoon," he cried enthusiastically, and, throwing his arms around my neck, he covered my face with kisses.

Now, we women have a way of doing things by strategy. I didn't [illegible] any more fear of betraying a disagreeable nature with Nell in the house than when he came to call on me. I knew well enough that matrimony is different from courtship and that when two people settle down to work in double harness there is going to be a good deal of friction, for awhile, at any rate. I thought it a fine chance to let Nell see before marriage that these frictions are not all the wife's fault. I was especially equipped to do this, for my little brother Jack was at home, and I well knew that if Nell could stand Jack's antics without losing his temper he would be quite able to stagger under my most glaring faults.

Nell came and settled himself for the trial—my trial. He hadn't said anything about being tried himself, and I didn't tell him that he was to be under observation. Nell went to business in the morning, returning about 5 in the afternoon. Jack took him in charge as soon as he arrived. Nell tried to get rid of him, but Jack stuck like a leech. Nell would be reading poetry to me in the garden. Jack would come up behind him and with a stick and a horse's hair and a tiny ball of paper would make him think that a bumblebee was lighting on his nose. Jack sneaked into Nell's room and filled his underclothing (on the inside) with burs. Nell got the clothing on, then had to take it off again and was half an hour picking out the burs. He was late to business that day and came home in a very bad humor.

By such innocent juvenile expressions of a child's nature did Jack ingratiate himself into Nell's disfavor. Nell remarked that the boy had been very badly brought up, whereupon I simply said that it was evident he didn't like children. To me these little pranks were delightful. Nell said that, the boy being my brother, I was doubtless used to him.

Jack during this preparation for a honeymoon found a boy he would rather play with than annoy Nell. So I was obliged to bribe my brother with candy every day and the promise of a football at the end of the season to keep him at home during this test of my disposition. Besides, I was obliged to conjure up methods for harassing my lover and suggesting them to the dear boy. When Nell was snoozing Jack poured sand in his ear. Then Jack would steal up behind Nell and slip a small piece of ice down his back under his clothing. And one day when Nell and I were walking over the lawn together Jack, who was watering the grass with the hose, turned it on my companion and drenched him.

This was the climax of a long term of annoyances, and Nell could not have kept his equanimity any longer unless he had been descended from the angels. He broke loose in a profusion of Bible quotations in which the word "damnation" occurred oftenest. Then he ran after Jack, vowing that he would knock every bit of spirit out of his villainous little body.

"Mr. Walker," I exclaimed severely, "how can you speak so of the dear child!"

"Child!" he cried. "Hellion, rather!"

"Mr. Walker," I continued in a dignified tone, "I am disappointed. I supposed that your disposition was as gentle as a lamb's. I find that you are easily angered and when angered not only fierce, but vindictive. How fortunate that I should have discovered the true acerbity of your makeup! Our engagement is at an end. Had I married a man with such a temper I should have looked forward to the rest of my life with horror."

These last words were the same as he had used to me, but he didn't remember them.

"And had I married you," he retorted, forgetting himself in a new burst of anger, "one in whose veins flows the blood of that little viper, I would"—

I walked straight into the house and shut the door after me.

Where he stayed that night I didn't know, but the next morning he came to me and on bended knee begged me to forgive him. I asked him if he wished to test my disposition any further, and he said he was quite satisfied with it. Then I forgave him.

I do think men are the stupidest creatures in the world. And yet they think themselves superior to women. They have so many theories about them for our guidance. They bluster and arrogate to themselves, but they all know the crack of a woman's whip.

A School Teacher's Death.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 16.—The death occurred here yesterday of Miss Annie, daughter of the late Rev. John Carroll of Gananoque. She had been a patient at the hospital only one week when the end came. Miss Carroll was a teacher of the staff of St. Agnes' school, Belleville. The body was taken to Gananoque for burial.

At Odds With Vatican.

San Marino, the smallest and unquestionably one of the most ancient republics in the world, is engaged in a quarrel with the Vatican owing to a recently enacted law empowering the government to confiscate and distribute church property. This unique state consists of a craggy mountain 2,500 feet high, amid the lesser ranges of the Apennines, and encircled by Italian provinces formerly belonging to the Pontificial States. It is 33 square miles in extent and comprises the small town of San Marino, practically impregnable, and several adjacent villages. The population of the republic is 10,791 and has remained almost stationary for the last twenty years.

Although located in the heart of Italy, San Marino is independent of the laws of that country. The inhabitants are noted for hospitality, sobriety, industry and general morality. They are sensitive, jealous of their rights, and cling with tenacity to their territorial and legislative independence. The rights of this miniature state were scrupulously respected by Napoleon in his Italian campaign.

The republic is governed by the Sovereign Grand Council of 60 members, one-third of whom are nobles. The executive consists of two captains-regent, one being chosen from the party of the nobles and the other from the radical party. They hold office alternately every six months. The chief trade is agricultural produce and cattle.

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her And Brought Her The Joy Of Living.

ENTERPRISE, ONT., OCT. 1st.

"For seven years, I suffered with what physicians called a "Water Tumor". Hypodermics of Morphine had to be given me to ease the pain.

During one of these bad spells, a family friend brought a box of "Fruit-a-tives" to the house. I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I began to experience relief.

I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes, I was cured, and when I appeared on the streets, my friends said "The dead has come to life" and this seemed literally true because I certainly was at death's door."

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

HAD TROUBLE WITH THE FIRE ENGINE

Further Particulars of Fire at Bobcaygeon When Stores Were Wiped Out

Further particulars of the conflagration at Bobcaygeon state that Mrs. Wm. Hill, who nurses Mrs. John Warren at night, who is recovering from typhoid, on her way home at 6.30 saw smoke issuing from the rear of Russell Thurston's harness shop, opposite the Rockland, and immediately gave the alarm. Firemen and citizens, men and women turned out and worked like trojans, but the fire soon had complete control, and all buildings in the vicinity were menaced at once.

To make matters worse, the fire engine balked and could not be got to work for some time. Water was turned into the grist mill flume and hose connected unto the pump, and that with the water from the pump house on north bank of canal, helped considerably till the engine got working. However, the fire had gained such headway that from Taylor's block (which has a fire wall) not a building was left between that and the canal. The buildings destroyed are: Capstick's shop, vacant, Russell Thurston's harness shop, James Bardo's barber shop and living rooms overhead, Woollard's drug store, the Bank of British North America and Broad's grocery on the corner next the canal. Besides, the bake shop at the rear was also destroyed.

Russell Thurston lost everything. James Bardo's family barely got out and lost everything except his barber shop furniture. His household furniture was not insured. Mr. Woollard got some of his goods out. The bank lost nearly all their stationery but saved all their books, cash and security. Mr. Broad got a lot of his goods out, but much was destroyed. The goods of the Masonic Lodge, over Broad's store, were all lost, valued at perhaps $1,000.

A conservative estimate of the loss of property and effets would be about $15,000.

For the time being the Bank will occupy the sample rooms at the Rockland; Mr. Woollard in Mrs. McDermott's store, next the Rockland; Mr. Broad in the post office and Mr. Bardo in Mrs. McDermott's millinery shop.

Mr. Mark Tailor, and Mr. Hurchmer, jeweller, the Public Library and Geo. W. Taylor overhead all moved out, expecting the worst, but thanks to the hard work of firemen and citizens that block was saved.

EPWORTH LEAGUE RALLY AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH

An Enthusiastic Meeting of Young People—Message From Rev. Isaac Couch

Last night the Epworth League Rally was continued and concluded at George street Methodist church. There was a good attendance, about 200 people being present. A very fine musical program was gone through and the social evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Brief addresses were given by the Pastor, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., and by Mr. Thomson, in whose hands the League has prospered of late. The four vice-presidents also addressed the meeting. Rev. J. G. Lewis was on the platform.

Very great credit is due to the young people of George street, for the healthy and promising state of the year's work, and they are looking forward to the coming year, with hope and confidence.

Rev. Isaac Couch, who went from George street to Ottawa last conference, sent the following letter to the League, which was read at last night's meeting:

Dear Fellow Leaguers of George street Methodist Church, Peterborough:

Your President, Mr. Thompson, has written me that your "Rally" takes place on Monday evening, September 15th, and has kindly asked that I send a message for that occasion. This I gladly do, for at once your pleasant faces seem to stand before me. Pleasant are the memories of the past. I have watched your growth, and once again I say to you; Go forward—Seek the new! How significant that under the very shadow of the end Jesus said: A "new," a "fresh" commandment I give unto you that ye love one another."

That love will always make life worth living, and it has an eternal power of renewal. One of the last things Jesus did was to point His disciples to the fountain of ever-new and ever-fresh life. It was into the life of love He had led them. It was old in a sense, but Jesus made it new by His own life. He made love a richer thing than it had ever been before—made it new. It was in that life He wanted them to continue when He was gone.

But this was not all. They were to go on learning as well as loving. Jesus speaks not only as a Friend, but as a Teacher. He had been teaching truth. And here in these last days He says He has not told them all He had to tell; He had kept some things back out of consideration for them. They could not bear to know all things. Therefore, Jesus does not make the things He had taught final. He warns them against that notion. He wants them to keep themselves open to the guidance of that Spirit from the Father which leads men into all truth.

This word ought to serve as the charter of spiritual freedom for the Christian. It is the grand assertion of the power of the soul in touch with God to achieve progress in knowledge of things divine. It ought to have made impossible any final bandage to written things. But thanks to God, the influence of the dogmatist is growing less and less. We must believe what we know to be true that the Divine Spirit leads men to-day into the knowledge of divine things, and that revelation is continuous; and we must claim freedom for every loyal soul, freedom to learn, to discover and to grow. Jesus in the last days assured us that many things had not yet been told. And if Jesus were here to-day He would say the same thing.

Many things of the Infinite Wisdom are still to be known and the [illegible] recently a good old doctor said: "We have made great progress; we have practically got rid of the plague; we need have no small-pox if people would only do what they ought; many diseases, which were once fatal, have now been mastered; but we are only beginning. "The future—the future is rich with good things." That is a fine example of faith. Faith in what is to come, and not in the finality of the past.

Now suppose that the doctor—of course such a thing is not possible in the realm of science, and not to be in the realm of religion. But imagine that the doctor had condemned all new knowledge, and persisted that the doctoring of the 16th century should be final, would that be faith? In any of the great lines of life to declare the past final is want of faith. And to stubbornly cling to that nation is rebelling against the Spirit who leads us through the ages? There is nothing like orthodoxy for quenching the Holy Ghost. Then, fellow-Leaguers of George street Church, seek in religion a corresponding faith to the doctors. May your eyes brighten as you think of the days to come.

Say: "The past is great, but the future is greater." Jesus, looking upon His own work, said of His disciples: "Greater things than these shall they do because I go to my Father." "When the spirit of truth is come, He shall guide you into all truth." The Spirit is still guiding, and will guide, and in the coming centuries there will be more marvellous unfoldings of the Divine purposes, richer knowledge of God, deeper religious experience, wider wisdom than any yet granted to man. See to it, ye George street Leaguers, that you get your share of these things. Go on with your life. Advance.

ISAAC COUCH.

Ottawa, Sept. 12th, 1913.

Mrs. Finlay has been removed from Nicholls Hospital to her home in Norwood. Great care had to be taken in her case, and a small cot and water mattress was used. Belleghem's ambulance conveyed the patient to the C.P.R. station and the trip was made on the Port McNichol train.

AUTOMOBILE AND STREET CAR IN COLLISION

Mr. J. A. Davidson and His Niece Escaped With Bruises

Shortly after five o'clock last evening, a collision occurred at the corner of Dublin and George Sts., between a north-bound street car and an auto owned and driven by Mr. John A. Davidson, who resides on the Lakefield Road.

The four year old niece of Mr. Davidson also in the auto was hurled to the road for a distance of from fifteen to twenty feet.

One of the passengers of the street car carried the child to an upstairs apartment of the Hooper premises and Dr. Morgan was called. She was found to be suffering from bruises. Mr. Davidson had also been bruised and cut about the head. Both were taken to Nicholl's Hospital in Belleghem's ambulance and later to their home.

The auto was travelling on Dublin street towards George street and it would appear that the driver was not close enough to the north side of the street, so that the north-bound car could be seen approaching.

The front part of the auto was caught on the fender of the street car and carried along till the street car was stopped.

First Class Honors

In the recent pianoforte examinations held under the auspices of Toronto College of Music, Miss Lillian Calder and Miss Muriel Bridge were placed in the pass division. Mr. R. J. Devey has this morning received a letter from the Registrar placing both students with "first class honors," and in addition, will forward them their certificates, which will doubtless be some solace for the former announced result.

HOW STANFORD WAS MURDERED

Story of Crime in Brief

Many misconceptions are in existance as to the facts in the murder of Stanford White by Harry Thaw, the following taken from the Toronto Star gives a brief summary of the whole case:

On the evening of Monday, June 25, 1906, Harry Thaw and his wife were dining at the Cafe Martin when Stanford White and two other men entered and took places near by. Thaw did not know that White was present until the agitation of his wife attracted his attention. She wrote him a note informing him that White was present. Later in the evening, White went to the roof of Madison Square Garden to witness the first performance of a play. Thaw was there, but his wife had gone behind the scenes to visit some friends, and immediately her husband began pacing up and down the floor. He watched White for a moment from one of the entrances, then began to thread his way forward, and walked slowly towards the table until he leaned forward over its edge opposite to his victim. White [illegible] made a move as if to arise, but there was no time. Thaw fired three shots, two of them taking effect. As he started off, he was arrested. Soon afterwards Mrs Thaw appeared on the scene. There is no evidence that White spoke to her either at the Cafe Martin or in the roof garden.

Stanford White, distinguished architect, was a son of Richard Grant White, the famous author and critic, who was particularly known as a Shakespearean scholar.

KELLY GOES TO CENTRAL PRISON

Two More Fines Following Trouble at the Fair Grounds

Man Who Supplied Blacklister With Liquor Pays $25

Elm Street Women Told to go Home and Mind Their Own Business

For disorderly conduct at the Fair grounds. John Revoy was assessed $5.75 at police court yesterday afternoon.

Revoy was disorderly when the police were making an arrest and during the disturbance it was said he called the police "a bunch of dubs."

Samuel Deval put out his hand to to stop Detective Newhall, while the officer was about to make an arrest. The act cost Samuel $8.75.

It all happened at the Fair Grounds.

The Magistrate called John McManus but John had paid the Chief $2 in hopes that it wouldn't be any more. They called it square.

William Kelly was given six months in Central Prison on a charge of vagrancy. This case occupied about 23 seconds.

Chas. Rex was fined $25 for supplying a blacklister with liquor.

Mrs. Locke and Mrs Lawrence of Elm street, had their say as to who was to blame for trouble between them but the magistrate told them to go home and mind their own business and cease quarrelling.

His Worship promised to deal severely with them if they appeared before him again.

The last case of yesterday's court was juvenile—so exit reporters.

POLICE COURT

When the court was called to order at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the Revoy case, the table in front of the magistrate's seat was a miniature midway—everthing pertaining to a hoop-la game was there even to a Teddy Bear.

James Donovan was the first witness called. He said he was at the Exhibition on Saturday and he picked up some rings near where John Revoy had his tent. These rings were produced in court and they were smaller than the blocks.

The Italian was re-called. He said that the ring he threw that could not go on the block was lighter in color than the rest of the rings. It was similar to the ones Donovan had.

John Revoy, the defendant, was re-called. He denied owning the rings produced by Donovan, but said he owned all the rest of the property produced. He swore he did not own the small rings.

Gerald Dunsford was then called and he swore he saw Mrs. Deval throw away some rings on Saturday evening. Donovan and another lad ran and got them. Some one told her they were taking them, and she said they were the small rings, and she didn't want them.

That concluded the evidence.

The magistrate asked what the charge was and the chief said the defendant was charged with running a game of chance. The magistrate said he didn't see the difference between this game and quoits, but the Chief referred to small rings being used.

Bert Farewell then spoke up from the side and said he owned the small rings. The Chief tried to silence him, but the Magistrate on request of Revoy allowed him to give evidence. He said he was employed in the snake tent right beside Revoy's stand, and swore he had some small rings, which he obtained in Oshawa, in his suitcase. On Saturday night, he said, he took the rings out of his suit case and Mrs. Deval threw them away and when he saw Donovan with them he did not ask for their return as they were of no value.

Phileph Revoy was then called. He was asked if he ever saw the rings before. He said, "No."

Mrs. Deval was re-called and stated that rings were hanging up on a post Friday morning. She never saw rings again in their tent till Saturday evening.

The magistrate then referred to Provincial Detective Brodie for advice and the court came to the conclusion that if the large rings were used the game was not chance and if the small rings were used it was fraud.

His Worship then stated that he would reserve judgment.

LARGE BRICK CHIMNEY COMPLETED FOR DeLAVAL

Nine Feet in Diameter at the Botton and Five Feet at the Top—Height 115 Feet and Weight 150 Tons

A huge chimney which has been under construction at the De Laval Company, under the personal supervision of Mr. W. B. Smith, of the Ferguson Construction Company, Patterson, N. J., is completed. It has a very picturesque appearance and adds greatly to the general appearance of the factory. It is 115 feet in height.

The total weight of the chimney is 150 tons and it is round in shape. It is built of radial brick which is made especially for the building of such structures. At the base it is some nine feet in diameter and at the top, five feet. It is independent of itself and is connected to the boiler by a sheet iron flue built by the Wm. Hamilton Co, of this city. There are two lightning rods running down the huge structure on opposite sides.

About a foot from the top is a diamond design worked out on the white background by red brick.

A conference is now in progress at the Company's premises for the officials and salesmen of the Company.

WIRING, PLUMBING AND BUILDING INSPECTION

Applications Will be Received for One or More of the Positions

Applications will be asked for the position of building inspector, wiring inspector, plumbing inspector, or any two combined or all three combined.

This was decided by the Fire, Water and Light Committee in joint session with the Property Committee last night. The members again met Mr. H. F. Strickland, Chief Wiring Inspector of the Hydro Electric Commission which body has power to enforce the Act relating to electric wiring in Ontario.

This Act provides that every municipality shall appoint a wiring inspector. At the present time the Commission is only advising municipalities to make the appointment. Full power is given to compel any municipality to make the appointment.

Mr. Strickland made this explanation last night, and added that as Peterborough was an important city, the Commission was desirous that an appointment be made here. Toronto, Ottawa, London, and other cities have provided this department and many smaller places have the matter under consideration. [illegible] was no objection to the combination of departments as long as the Wiring Inspector was a reliable man.

Ald Duncan brought up one point. He said he could build a house and secure a certificate that the wiring was all right. He might then sell the house and the owner would make changes in the wiring.

Mr Strickland answered that this was one of the dangers. The city could not at the present time prevent the man from making these changes. Any person could make them. Mr. Strickland cited several instances to show how defective wiring was being installed.

With a wiring inspector, this practice would cease and all wiring would be inspected. A reliable inspector would have knowledge of the wiring in every building in the city.

As to work already done. Mr Strickland answered Mayor Bradburn with the statement that there were methods by which this work could be tested.

MR. C. E. JAMIESON SUPERINTENDENT

Rev. Canon Davidson Refers to Change in Sunday School

On Sunday, Canon Davidson referred to the retirement of Mr. R. J. Devey, as superintendent of the Sunday School after a most useful term of office, extending over five years.

During this time, Mr. Devey had been enthusiastic, painstaking and faithful in his important work and deserved the appreciation of the Church in general.

Mr. Davidson was sure that there was a general appreciation of Mr. Devey's splendid services. His place had been taken by Mr. C. E. Jamieson, of the Collegiate Institute staff at the request of the rector, the wardens and the officers of the Church.

Mr. Jamieson would bring technical ability and training to bear upon the work and the church was very fortunate in his acceptance.

On Sunday afternoon the church wardens were present at the re-assembling of the Sunday school as an indication of their interest and support.

A CHAMPION WINDOW SMASHER

"Thanks, Thats my Job"

When a man who said his name was George Lloyd was charged at the Guildhall Police Court, London, with smashing a large plate glass window in the city, he handed in a long written statement in defence, in which he said that he was a window-breaker by profession, and was working in the interest of Tariff Reform. On political grounds he considered he was a greater benefactor than Mr. Lloyd George, for his methods brought considerable profit to the community. Not a single person had done so much window-smashing as he had. He had carried out a vigorous campaign, and the the glaziers were not long to follow.

The magistrate sentenced him to two months' hard labor.

BRIDGES WAS DOCTOR

NEW POET LAUREATE WIDELY KNOWN IN HOSPITALS.

Successor to the Poet Left Vacant by Late Alfred Austin Has Written Eight Poetic Dramas, a Couple of Masques, Many Lyrics and Several Pieces in Classic Metres—Work of High Quality.

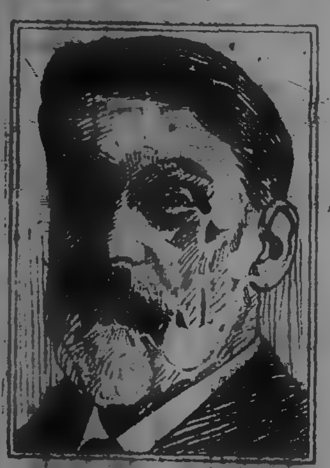
Mr. Robert Bridges, D.Litt., has been appointed Poet Laureate in succession to the late Mr. Alfred Austin.

Mr. Robert Bridges, who has been described as Britain's only classical poet, is sixty-eight. He was born in Kent, and from Eton he went to Corpus Christi College, at Oxford, the university which just a year ago honored him with the degree of Doctor of Letters. After leaving Oxford he settled down to study medicine in London, at St. Bartholomew's, where he eventually became casualty physician. Assistant at the Children's Hospital, Great Ormond Street, was his next post, followed by a period as physician at the Great Northern Hospital. In 1882 he retired from medical practice, and a couple of years later married the eldest daughter of the late Mr. Alfred Waterhouse, the well known artist. He lives at Oxford.

Mr. Bridges is undoubtedly one of the surest of immortality among our contemporaries. His work maintains throughout an extremely high standard; little, if any, of it has suffered from hurry; he has never allowed the quest for popularity or gain to tell against its perfection and beauty, but careful and studied finish has ever been his motto.

His output includes eight poetic dramas, a couple of masques, numerous lyrics and several pieces in classical prosody. He maintains that English prosody depends on the number of stressed syllables in a line, not on the number of syllables, and that poetry should follow the rules of natural speech. A number of essays stand to his credit, and he has strong and, in some particulars, curious views on spelling reform.



MR. ROBERT BRIDGES.

The new Poet Laureate has been particularly successful in the writing of odes. The following is from that written for the bi-centenary commemoration of Henry Purcell:

The sea with melancholy war
Moateth about our castled shore:
His world-wide elemental moan
Girdeth our lives with tragic zone. . . .

Yet shall his storm and mastering wave
Assure the Empire to the brave:
And to his billowy bass belongs
The music of our patriot songs.
When to the wind his ridges go
In furious following, careering a-row,
Lasht with hail and withering snow;
And ever undaunted hearts outride
His rushing waters wide.

The beauty of his masques, too, compares well with that of the [illegible] this form of [illegible], and his epic, "Eros and Psyche," is distinguished for delightful [illegible] lyric gift is also remarkable. We quote the following from Shorter Poems, Book 1.:

I heard a linnet courting
His lady in the spring:
His mates were idly sporting
Nor stayed to hear him sing
His song of love—
I fear my speech distorting
His tender love.

The phrases of his pleading
Were full of young delight;
And she that gave him heeding
Interpreted aright
His gay, sweet notes—
So sadly marred in the reading—
His tender notes.

And when he ceased, the hearer
Awaited the refrain,
Till swiftly perching nearer
He sang his song again,
His pretty song—
Would that my verse spake clearer
His tender song!

Ye happy, airy creatures!
That in the merry spring
Think not of what misfeatures
Or cares the year may bring;
But unto love
Resign your simple natures
To tender love.

The salary of the laureateship is £70, with an allowance of £27 in lieu of a butt of sack. Dr. Bridges himself contradicted a report early this month that he had been offered the vacant post.

M. P. Had Luck.

The popular member of the British arliament who left bank notes to the alue of £85 in a taxi-cab recently, and ad them returned by a friend who fornately proved to be the next fare, has ad good luck which is denied to many. discovering his loss the M.P. comunicated with Scotland Yard, but bere the police could reply he received telegram from his friend apprising that he had found on the seat of a i-cab which he had hired not only bank notes, but papers which show the identity of the owner.

Clergymen Barred.

As a club the Personal Service Club Piccadilly is unique in that it altoher debars clergymen from becom members, though it has a resident aplain of its own. Recently, however, rule has been relaxed in favor of two Archbishops and the Bishop of ndon, who are honorary members. club was founded in King George's ronation year, and none but Univer and public school men are admitted membership.

BY SPECIAL MESSENGER

An Errand That Had Unexpected Results.

By WARING MITCHELL.

On that certain Tuesday morning when Colonel Graves got ready to start for the city from his country place he said to his daughter Winnie:

"It is possible that I may want those Mexican bonds this afternoon, and here is the key of the safe. If I have to have them I will send you a note by a special messenger."

The colonel was something of a lawyer, speculator and broker, and Miss Winnie was his nineteen-year-old daughter. She acted as his amanuensis at home and was pretty familiar with his business transactions. The bonds spoken of had a face value of $20,000 but of late had been rather wabbly in the market and had caused the colonel considerable anxiety. At 1 o'clock that afternoon he wanted the bonds and telephoned his daughter to that effect, saying that he would send a messenger. Instead of sending a boy from the regular service, he stepped into the office of Jones next door and said:

"Jones, I want a trusty fellow to run out to my house and bring me back some bonds. Haven't I noticed a young man around here?"

"Yes. He's a nephew of mine. He's out now, but write a line and I'll send him when he returns. He ought to go out to East Park and back in an hour."

The colonel wrote a line to Miss Winnie to deliver the bonds to bearer and then went out on "the street" on business. Fifteen minutes later Jones' nephew was making for the Grand Central station as fast as the express in the subway would carry him.

Jones hadn't given the young man's biography, but it may be stated that his name was Vincent Gray, his age twenty-two, and he was in the office of his uncle to learn the devious ways of Wall street before setting up in business for himself on the comfortable fortune left him by a deceased aunt. For a young man who expected to come in contact with bulls and bears and other animals, young Gray was very trustful of human nature. For instance, while his train was speeding along underneath the streets and he was hanging to a strap thinking of things financial a young man with ambitions leaned against him and picked his pocket without exciting the least suspicion.

The light fingered youth found there only a cardcase and the letter to Miss Winnie, but they were sufficient to bring about several unlooked for results. He passed into another car and opened and read the letter, and he saw the golden opportunity he had been long looking for. In the cardcase were two or three dollar bills. The thief had a right to infer that his victim had no more money about him. He likewise had a right to infer that young Gray could not produce the wherewithal to buy a ticket for East Park. The fare was only 20 cents, but without it a man is as badly off as if the sum were $5.

There was a train ready to leave. [illegible] his ticket and got aboard. Vincent Gray stood at the ticket window and [illegible] and was left. His cardcase and money were gone, and when he found that the letter had also taken wings he realized that he was in trouble. He hadn't even a nickel to get back to the office. He hadn't the wherewithal to telephone to his uncle Jones in New street, and after wasting fifteen minutes trying to figure out the problem he made haste to a pawnshop, where he put down his watch for $5.

The next train to East Park was ten minutes late in starting and the same in reaching the Park, so there were in all fifty minutes lost. The young man had not suspected that he was the victim of a pickpocket, but supposed he had lost his property in the jam while boarding the car. He had been told that a telephone message would precede him, and he had remembered the address. Therefore he did not worry so much over the loss of the letter. It was only when he came face to face with Winnie Graves and stated his errand and saw her look of surprise and distrust that he realized the situation.

"Why, sir," she replied, "those bonds were delivered to a messenger more than half an hour ago."

"But I was sent for them and was delayed."

"If you were sent for them, you must have a line from my father."

"I—I had a line, but unfortunately I lost it, together with my money. My name is Vincent Gray, and I am in the office of Ezra Jones, in the same building with your father. I am afraid that some rascal found the lost letter and has taken advantage of it."

"And I am afraid that another rascal is trying to do the same thing!" exclaimed Miss Winnie's Aunt Ruth, who was at the head of the house and who had entered the library just in time to hear the young man's words.

"But, madam, you surely can't think that I"—

"I can think what I please, sir. Can you imagine we were idiotic enough to give up those bonds without a written order from Colonel Graves?"

"But whoever presented that order was an imposter."

"Perhaps so, and perhaps it is the imposter who is here now. Winnie, go to the telephone and ask your father the name of the messenger he sent. He wouldn't have sent Tom, Dick or Harry on such an important errand. Young man, sit down here until we find out the truth of this matter."

The girl went to the telephone, and the young man sat down with visions of policemen and prison bars passing before his eyes. The aunt took a seat directly in front of him and stared at him in a cold, cruel way—a way that gave him to understand that she would let no guilty man escape. After three or four minutes Winnie returned to the room to say:

"That's always the way. Central tells me that the line into the city is crossed or something and it may be an hour or more before they find out the trouble and remedy it."

"Then I will go back and tell your father the situation," said Mr. Gray. "Some sharper has the bonds, and the police should be notified at once."

"You will sit right here until that telephone wire is in working order!" announced Aunt Ruth. "There are men about the place, and we have dogs and guns, and if you try to run away it will be the worse for you. Winnie, notify the coachman that we have a suspicious character in the house."

"She needn't do anything of the sort. I will sit here until you have solved the mystery. I am to blame for losing the letter, but if the bonds are not recovered it will not be my fault."

"He doesn't look like a suspicious person," whispered Winnie to her aunt, but in tones loud enough so that he caught the words and turned red again.

"He may not to you, who can't tell a robber from a church deacon. But he does to me, and here he shall stay until we know all about it. You sit down in the hall and wait for the telephone, and I'll keep him under my eyes."

Aunt Ruth leaned back in her chair, folded her arms, compressed her lips and fastened her eyes on Mr. Gray, and had he been a bunko man of ten years' standing he must have been disconcerted. As it was, he coughed and blushed and hitched around and crossed and recrossed his legs. When the aunt broke the silence it was to impart no cheerful information. What she said was:

"It makes you squirm to realize that you've reached the end of your rope at last, but you'll squirm more still when the judge pronounces sentence. While I pity your poor mother, I hope you'll get at least ten years."

Mr. Gray made no reply. He couldn't find words. About every ten minutes for the next hour he received a brief, vigorous lecture until he was almost worked up to the point where he thought of jumping through a window and taking his chances, when a man's step was heard. There was an "Oh, papa!" from Miss Winnie in the hall, and Colonel Graves stalked in to exclaim:

"What in the devil is the matter here?"

"There he sits!" replied Aunt Ruth as she pointed to the culprit.

It took about ten minutes to unravel things—that is, to establish Vincent Gray's identity. Fortunately by this time the telephone was working, and fortunately Mr. Jones was in his office. It took five minutes more to discover that Winnie had given the false messenger Honduras instead of Mexican bonds and that the colonel was simply relieved of some waste paper.

When it came to apologies and inviting Mr. Gray to forgive and forget and stay to dinner, perhaps a full quarter of an hour was consumed, but it is [illegible] on record that Mr. Gray regarded the time as thrown away. Now when the colonel smiles and throws out hints at his prospective son-in-law Miss Winnie blushes and protests. Aunt Ruth assumes one of her sweetest looks and says:

"I don't say I shall leave when he becomes one of the family, but I do say that I shall always lock up my jewelry when I go to bed and lock and bolt the door!"

On London Surface Lines.

London tramway men seem to be developing the smart answer habit, says the Manchester Guardian. For example, a correspondent overheard this the other day:

On the front of the tram the indicator showed "Piccadilly," but the route outlined on the side of the car showed that it was the usual Albert square service.

"Are you going to Albert square?" a lady asked.

"No, missus; Piccadilly," was the reply.

"Oh, but the side indicator says Albert square."

"Perhaps so, missus, but we don't go sideways."

Another correspondent reports a similar case:

Passenger (to conductor)—Do you stop outside Affleck & Milne's?

Conductor—Yes, miss; they won't let us go inside.

A Club Kick.

The house committee of a New York club recently received this unique complaint:

"I have the honor to inform you that I lunched at the club this afternoon and had as my guests three gentlemen, all well known gourmets. Among other things an omelet was served. It contained only three flies. As an old member of the club, jealous of its reputation, I naturally found this very embarrassing, as, in order to make an equitable division of the omelet it was necessary either to divide a fly—a nice bit of carving, as you must concede—or forego a fly myself. I beg to suggest that in the future, when an omelet is served for four persons, it should either be with four flies or the no flies at all."—Everybody's Magazine.

Which Is More Urgent?

Fire Insurance

Important? You fully realize it; You would not allow your house to remain uninsured over night.

Your house may never burn. Comparatively few buildings ever do.

If your house does burn, your property is destroyed, but you can still provide for your loved ones. Your income remains unaffected, your earning capacity unimpaired.

If your house is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,

YOU
Carry the Risk

Your friend has had his home insured these thirty years and has had no fire. He has been fortunate in that, though he has nothing now to show for the money paid out.

Life Insurance

Important? Oh yes, you intend to insure after a while when "a little better able to do so."

You will surely die. All men do. You are more likely to die within a week, or a year, than your house is to burn.

Death destroys at once and irrevocably, in whole or in part, the income that provided for the daily wants of those you love, the income that was counted on to feed and clothe and educate your children.

A large attendance at the meeting would be a big encouragement, and all interested should make it a point to be on hand.

Bachrach and Assistant District Attorney Parkin argued before Federal Judge Carpenter yesterday, on the question of the proper form for a bill of exceptions on which Johnson's appeal is based.

Johnson's trial on the Milwaukee [illegible] indictment under the Mann Act, is set for the middle of October. No date has been set for the hearing of the case before the Court of Appeals.

A Strenuous Statesman.

Charles James Fox, the English statesman and sport, had wagered something about a waistcoat which could only be obtained in Paris; went off to Dover by night, caught the mail packet, posted to Paris and back to Calais, and remembered he had a horse racing at Newmarket. He chartered a fishing boat bound for the eastern counties, just got to Newmarket in time for the race, took the post back to London and stopped on the way to dine. In the middle of the dinner he was caught by a special messenger who had been tearing over half of England in search of him and reminded that he had to move to bring in a marriage bill in the house of commons. He rushed to the stables, reached the house in time to make a brilliant speech in reply to North and Burke and defeated North on a division by a single vote.

AMANDA'S TOOTHACHE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

There was Farmer Jones, and there was his wife, and there was the daughter, Amanda. The latter had come to be twenty-two years old. She wasn't an angel or a sylph. She didn't have a high school education, and she couldn't sing and play. She was just a good hearted, affectionate country girl who could make the nicest kind of buckwheat cakes in winter and turn out the finest soft soap in the spring.

Amanda had a beau. She might have had half a dozen, but she discouraged all young men except Philo Brown, and Philo had been courting her for two years and had never approached the subject of matrimony He was the hired man on the next farm, and he had a tidy sum saved up and when he was with men he had no lack of gab. It was when in the presence of women, and more particularly in that of Amanda Jones, that words failed him. It was his bashfulness.

Some young woman would have brought that young man to time with in six months, but Amanda Jones was also a little bashful, and she was patient and kind. Farmer Jones had nothing to say, and all that Mrs. Jones had to relate was:

"Well, I hain't saying nothing except that an earthquake may come along some day and stir Philo up."

The earthquake came. It's name was Mary Skinner, sister to Mrs Jones and a widow. She saw Philo and approved of him. She saw the situation and didn't approve of it at all She watched and waited for a couple of weeks, and then one June morning she said:

"Amanda, come out into the orchard with me. I want to have a talk with you."

And under the white and pink apple blossoms they talked—that is, the aunt did most of the talking, and Amanda did all the blushing.

That evening when Philo "jest dropped in for a minute" he found Amanda suffering from the toothache. He wanted to swim across Lake Erie to show her how he sympathized with her, but Lake Erie was 400 miles away. The Widow Skinner was right on the spot, however, and she took Philo outdoors and said:

"I'm mightily concerned about Amanda and that toothache."

"But it's only toothache," he replied

"Only! Only! Why, man, don't you know that she may have lockjaw or brain fever or get paralyzed all over?"

"But what can I do?" he anxiously asked.

"H'm! You come in tomorrow night and I'll tell you. I'm hoping she won't die, but I dunno—I dunno. I saw a star fall last night, and that's a sure sign of death in the family."

"I—I hope not," was the trembling reply, and Philo went home to toss about [illegible] moment's sleep. The next day seemed a hundred hours long to him, and as soon as he had finished the milking he set out on the run for the house of Jones. It was Mrs. Skinner who met him and said:

"That toothache is worse tonight, Philo. I'm afraid it's striking into Amanda's system."

"You don't tell me!" he gasped.

"There's only one thing to be done—she must go to the dentist over at Charlotte tomorrow. She must be driven over in a buggy. She must be driven by somebody who is sympathetic. Her father hain't sympathetic, her mother is too nearsighted to drive, and I feel one of my old fashioned headaches coming on. Philo, you may have to go."

And Philo didn't go to bed at all that night. He just roamed around the farm and prayed for daylight to come. He was at the Jones farm as soon as he had finished breakfast, and the Widow Skinner was at the door to meet him and say:

"Go home and dress up and come back, and by that time the horse and buggy will be ready. You have got to drive Amanda over to Charlotte."

Philo was back in half an hour. Amanda and the rig were ready. Amanda had her good clothes on and a rag over her jaw.

"Look here, Philo," said the widow as he was ready to get into the buggy, "you must let Amanda rest her head on your shoulder, and you must drive with one hand and keep an arm around her. Talk to her and keep her from thinking of the pain. Her life is in your hands."

Philo was shaking like a leaf, but he rose to the occasion. To his amazement, the more he talked the higher he arose. He had hardly got through with the weather, the crops and Farmer Scott losing a cow when all of a sudden he found himself saying:

"Mandy, I'm going to drive straight to the preacher's first!"

Amanda pressed his arm.

"Yes, durn my buttons if I don't. Then as your husband I can punch the head of that dentist if he hurts you."

At the preacher's the rag came off. At the dentist's a small cavity was found in a tooth and filled. At the Jones farmhouse, when the newlyweds returned, the widow Skinner met them at the gate and exclaimed:

"For the land's sake, but here's Amanda looking as chipper as a new tin pan, and Philo with a grin on him like a summer squash, and I'll just bet that something has went and gone and happened!"

HOW A MOTOR "TALKS."

The Sympathy That May Come Between the Animate and Inanimate.

"One day my chauffeur was taken ill, and I drove myself in, left the car standing in a side street during the day, and drove home at night," said a suburbanite. "Then, for the first time, I began to sense the feeling of mutuality or mutual sympathy, if such an expression may be permitted between animate and inanimate things, between the machine and myself. Several trips by myself confirmed the sensation; then I bought another car for the family and now drive myself regularly in this one.

"I have often thought of the stories told by locomotive engineers in which their great engines are endowed with almost mental faculties. There are enough of them to fill a book, but I never considered them seriously until I began with this car. Sometimes the engine sings; sometimes it purs. I know its 'sing' and its 'purr.' If anything is the matter with it it tells it in a language entirely intelligible to me. It responds to my lightest touch in all its functions, but once," and here his voice became grave, "it refused to run into an unlighted ditch where I was trying to steer it. I looked for half an hour for the trouble with the steering apparatus, but could find nothing wrong."—Suburban Life.

INSTINCT IN PLANTS.

Actions That Seem to Indigate Some Sort of Nervous System.

Plants sometimes appear to possess reasoning power. Charles Darwin instanced the case of the rootlet, which, piercing its way through the soil and detecting a stone or lump of hard clay in its path, will go round it without touching it. "How does the rootlet or plant know that the stone is there?" he asks. "Certainly it cannot see it and as it does not touch it cannot feel it. The avoidance therefore seems to be in the nature of perception of some kind which is a mental operation."

The species of mimosa known as the sensitive plant will contract its leaves even at the sound of a footstep, and when such a plant is being transplanted it crumples up during the process in such a way that it really appears to be suffering from fear. Afterward it recovers and resumes its ordinary mode of life.

Plants undoubtedly possess consciousness of a kind which enables them to carry out certain operations necessary to their preservation, and this can only be done through the possession of some sort of nervous system.—London Standard.

Disraeli's Nuptial Joke.

There was a little joke between them (Disraeli and his wife) which I heard from the late dean of Salisbury. "You know I married you for your money," Disraeli would say to her. "Oh, yes, but if you were to marry me again you would marry me for love," was the regular reply. "Oh, yes!" her husband would exclaim, and the little nuptial comedy ended.

But what Disraeli said to Bernal Osborne once about his marriage is much better worth the telling. It was at a dinner party after dinner when the [illegible] "What did you marry her for?" Osborne asked in his characteristic way. Disraeli twiddled his wineglass in the pause that followed this point blank inquiry. Then he lifted his head slowly and looked the other very expressively in the face. "For a reason," he said, "which you could never understand—gratitude."—From "Lord Beaconsfield and Other Tory Memories."

OVER A PRECIPICE

Climax to the Reckless Ride of a Fearless Horseman.

HIS WILD LEAP IN THE DARK.

It Carried Horse and Rider Past the Edge of a Sheer Cliff to a Fall of Two Hundred and Fifty Feet to the Rocks and Water Below, Yet the Man Lived.

Perhaps the most extraordinary fall that a human being ever survived is that described by Thormanby in his "Sporting Stories." The lucky man was Colonel William Yorke Moore, a British officer, who rode his horse in the dark over a sheer precipice 247 feet in height and came out alive! It seems incredible that such a fearful experience should result in anything but instant death, yet here are the facts, which once again confirm the adage that truth is more wonderful than fiction:

Colonel Moore, who commanded the troops at Dominica, lost his way one evening after sunset. In complete darkness he endeavored to make his way home. Two or three times he had difficulty in making his horse cross obstacles, and at last they came to something that the horse would not face.

Colonel Moore was a fearless rider. Again and again he rode his horse at full speed against the unknown obstacle, but in vain. At last, urged fiercely by whip and spur, the terrified animal, with a snort of terror, cleared the low hedge—for such the obstruction proved to be—and went over the cliff.

Colonel Moore says that during his flight on horseback through the air every event of his whole life seemed to pass in a luminous panorama before him. Suddenly there came a terrific concussion, which deprived him of his senses and left him with his legs in the sea and his body on the rocks, apparently dead.

He must have lain there stunned for some hours, for when at last the lapping water and the cool breezes restored him the moon was shining brightly in midheaven, and its beams fell upon the upturned, glittering shoes of his gallant horse, which lay dead and mangled beside him.

As soon as he had collected his scattered wits Colonel Moore coolly began to examine himself to ascertain what injuries he had sustained. He found that he was severely cut about the body and head, that his right ankle was dislocated and that his back was benumbed or paralyzed by the concussion of his fall.

When the sun rose it shone upon his bare, bleeding head with such intolerable heat that, as a protection from its rays, he tied his cotton handkerchief about his forehead. Above his head projected the two ends of the knotted bandage stained crimson with his blood.

After lying in horrible pain for several hours he spied a boatful of natives rowing toward the spot where he lay. As they came near he hailed them in a faint voice, but the moment they saw the ghastly figure of the colonel, with his bloody headdress, they set up a yell and rowed away as if 20,000 fiends were after them.

After some time a single black man came clambering over the rocks, intent on catching fish. He was within a few yards of the colonel when the latter hailed him. The moment the negro caught sight of the bleeding head and the blood stained bandage he, too, uttered a fearful yell, flung down his rod and line and scrambled off over the rocks as fast as his feet and hands would carry him.

The colonel now began to resign himself to the prospect of a lingering death, but fortunately his English servant, alarmed at his master's absence, went in search of him and, following the horse's tracks, at last came to the edge of the precipice.

The sudden disappearance of the hoof prints near the low hedge fence convinced him that an accident had happened. He ran to the barracks and got out a boat, which a party of soldiers rowed to the foot of the cliff.

Very tenderly and carefully the soldiers lifted the colonel into the boat and brought him back to the barracks. For some months he lay in great pain and danger, but in time the paralyzed muscles of his back recovered, and eventually he was restored to complete health. Not even the slightest touch of lameness remained to remind him of his fall.

Use Chloride of Lime.

Next to corrosive sublimate the most effective germ destroyer and deodorizer is chloride of lime. Corrosive sublimate is such a powerful poison that it is dangerous to have in the house. But chloride of lime is perfectly safe and very cheap. There are many uses to which chloride of lime can be put. Among these are sterilization of water supplies and sewage effluents, street sprinkling, flushing of gutters, disinfecting of all sorts in hospitals, homes factories and railway cars; the extermination of vermin of all kinds, especially the typhoid carrying housefly.

Cheering.

Robby—I think I like you better than any of the other fellows that come to see sister. Percy—I'm pleased to hear it, Robby. Why do you like me the best? Robby—Because sis always lets me stay around and hear what you say.—Judge.

The talker sows; the listener reaps.—Italian Proverb.

Wagner's Music.

By the study of Wagner's masterpieces a glimpse of the eternal is had, and once the vision of his truth fills the soul counterfeits are detected instinctively. The polyphony of Bach and the music of "Die Meistersinger" prove the spiritual kinship of Wagner with the founder of modern music. A Beethoven symphony and the "Tristan und Isolde" music demonstrate the common genealogy of the composer from Bonn and the maker of music dramas, but listen to the Strauss music from "Salome" when the prophet is being murdered in the well and then hear the mighty tone structure of the last scene from "Gotterdaemmerung" and observe that Strauss shrieks while Wagner chants.—San Francisco Call.

The Coach and Four Came.

Among the many records of Harrow school is that of a boy, the son of a poor local tradesman in a very small way of business. His schoolfellows often taunted him about his family poverty. Their thoughtless jeers, although hurting his feelings, drew from the lad the retort, "I intend before I die to ride in a coach and four." The years sped by, and, lo and behold, the poverty stricken youngster of Harrow had developed into Dr. Parr, the great est scholar of his time, whose customary and favorite means of locomotion was a coach and four!—London Mail.

WEDDING—PERSONALS

HAMMOND—KOHL.

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 16.—The marriage of Miss Elsie Kohl, only daughter of Mr. Arthur Kohl, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Brockville, to Mr. Douglas Hammond, of the Bank of Montreal staff at Kingston, took place in St. Peter's church at four o'clock Saturday afternoon, Rev. H. H. Bedford Jones officiating. The edifice was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms and quantities of pin kasters. The bride, entering the church, escorted by her father, was preceded up the aisle by the maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Danforth, of San Francisco, Cal., wearing a dress of mauve crepe with an over-dress of shadow lace, black hat with trimming of Tulle and mauve orchids.

The bride was a picture of girlish beauty in an exquisite gown of palest pink charmeuse with an over-dress of old Limerick lace. The train, which hung from just above the waist, was caught up with silver roses. The veil of pink tulle in Dutch cap effect, was also finished with silver roses. She carried a magnificent bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley, and wore a pendant of opals and diamonds, the gift of her grandmother. There were five bridesmaids. Dr. Hammond, of Peterborough, was best man.

Mrs. Kohl, mother of the bride, wore white satin, draped with chantilly and rose point, black lace and chiffon, and large black hat. She carried orchids and roses.

Mrs. Hammond, mother of the groom was in silver grey silk trimmed with silver lace. Her hat was of grey roses and silver, and her bouquet, roses.

BROOKS—PATTERSON.

At the home of Mrs. J. S. Patterson, Norwood, the marriage took place of her daughter, Margaret May (Madge), and Mr. Robert Anderson Brooks, of Asphodel. Miss Lottie Chiles played the wedding march, and Rev. Mr. Cree, Presbyterian clergyman, officiated. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr Gordon Patterson, of Lethbridge, Alta., and wore a becoming gown of golden velvet. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks left to spend the honeymoon at Orillia and adjacent points, the bride wearing a tailored suit of navy blue with hat to match.

Mrs. George Harris, Toronto, is visiting Mrs. J. J. Thompson, Downie street.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Macdonald and Master Howard, Homewood Avenue, have returned after spending two weeks' vacation with Mr Macdonald's parents in Woodstock, Ont.

SCIENCE OF FALLING IN LOVE EUGENICS AT OPERA HOUSE

Mme. Labadie's Recital—How to Breed the Race of To-morrow

Mme. Harriet Labadie had the stage all to herself last night at the Grand Opera House, but those who listened to her recital of Mr. McKaye's play "To-morrow" must admit, whatever they think of the play itself, that she filled the stage with the creatures of fancy, and that they were as effective as very real puppets of flesh and blood.

Mme. Labadie came to Peterborough under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the Peterborough Health Association with the double object of raising funds and of introducing modern drama to Peterborough audiences. Those who went to hear her recital with the idea of hearing something they had heard before and waited to hear again, must have gone away disappointed; for Peterborough has not developed to any large extent the taste for either Mme. Labadie's recitals, or [illegible]

NOT BASEBALL OR BARRIE.

There were present in last night's audience some to whom the whole performance seemed absolute rubbish along side of a baseball march, or even compared with one of Barrie's plays. But to those who have seen the same thing in various large cities of the world, Mme. Labadie's recital was nothing strange or startling.

One might be inclined to criticize Mme. Labadie's style as being a little unnatural at times, or perhaps it was merely the exotic atmosphere of the whole play that gave that impression. Judged apart from the play and the questions involved, she certainly conducted the staging and portrayed the characters graphically and conveyed the teaching of its author.

EUGENICS—WHAT?

The theory expounded by Mr. McKaye in his play is what is termed "eugenics," and it would take up too much time and space to deal fairly with it in a notice of this kind. Eugenics may be briefly stated, in the words of one of the characters, as the science of "raising children as carefully as we raise cattle." The inference to be derived from this may not be very complimentary to us humans. But there is some warrant for the comparison in the social conditions of sections of our country and city life.

But eugenics is not concerned so much with the effects of things as the causes. By raising children it does not mean merely their education and up-bringing. It "takes pity on the children before they are born." It would regulate the marriage market, and would not leave love matches to any promiscuous arrangement.

SCIENCE OF FALLING IN LOVE.

Eugenics is the science of falling in love with the right person, and if you want to know who the right person is you must consult a doctor or a biologist. Eugenics traces all the evils of this world to bad and haphazard marriages. Blindness, epilepsy and insanity are the direct results of wrong selections among lovers.

THE RACE OF "TO'MORROW."

All this is to be regulated and a race is to be raised for "To-morrow" which shall be refined and perfected as the botanist develops delicate and beautiful plants from crude and wild species.

This is all chimerical and visionary but it is not without its value as an ideal. In practice and in theory it is impossible and is based upon a fallacy.

IF MEN WERE CATTLE.

If men and women were as easily handled as plants, or as tractable as cattle; that is, if men were cattle, then eugenics might be brought into practical politics. But young men and maidens will go on falling in love in the old romantic way and marriage will still continue to be a lottery in spite of the elocution of Mme. Labadie and Mr. McKaye's beautiful theories.

THE LADY OF OSTEND

Mr. Lawrence Brough's all Canadian Tour—1913-1914

Brief Resume of the Play

"The Lady of Ostend," the famous farcical comedy which Mr. Lawrence Brough is using as vehicle for his outward trip through Canada (Montreal to Vancouver,) was written by Sir Francis Burnand, for many years editor of London "Punch." It is all about the "movies," but about moving pictures applied in a different manner to the usual 5c and 10c movie-theatre. The camera man "snaps" couples at Ostend, that merry Belgian watering place; he finds couples at Covent Garden ball; he photographs them in every conceivable place, where they ought not to be. Then he exhibits them in London, to the intense disgust and annoyance of those who have been "snapped." The erring husband buys up the offending films and destroys them, only to find that his dearest friend has been similarly treated. These films are also purchased, when yet a third set is discovered showing the naughty old father-in-law cutting capers at Covent Garden. Then the "Lady of Ostend" herself turns up; her husband turns up, said husband being a towering mountain of prize-fighting flesh; and last, but by no means least, Mr. Lawrence Brough in his inimitable impersonation of the French 'Baron de Longueville,' adds his lion's share to the general pandemonium. The London Daily Mail in reviewing Mr. Brough's wonderful performance, wound up its critique by stating "it is a welter of uproarious fun! It started in a chuckle; it ended in a yell!"

Mr. Brough says that "The Lady of Ostend" is the funniest of all the funny plays he has ever handled and a comedian of Brough's experience ought to know. Grand Opera House, Saturday Sept. 20th, matinee and night.

Toronto News, Sept. 9, 1913: "A very mirthful play. A laughing success. Just plain unadulterated amusement."

EXTEND THE FIRE LIMITS

Is the Suggestion of Several of the Aldermen

It is quite likely that recommendation will be made to Council to extend the fire limits.

Members of the Fire, Water and Light committee and the Property Committee expressed themselves along that line last night.

The freight sheds of the C. P. R. now being erected along the Water front, are not in the fire limits.

THE SHIP WHICH WILL NOT SINK,

The question of the unsinkable ship has been occupying the minds of inventors since the Titanic disaster, and a Swansea master mariner, Mr. A Clifton Saines, has devised a vessel which, in his opinion, could not sink after a collision, even if cut in two.

"My ship," he says, "differs from the ordinary straight sided one in that she has a concave side, the extending upper portion of which, with an inner longitudinal bulkhead meeting the outer plating at a point above the load water line, forms a water tight chamber or belting of triangular shape round the vessel.

"A vessel of this design cannot sink through collision. Another important point is that the concave side prevents her capsizing, and she would in heavy weather be a dry vessel, and rolling would be reduced to the lowest possbile degree."

MAUDE ADAMS

In James Matthew Barrie's Classic Fairy Play "Peter Pan"

What will be to many people the most important theatrical event of the season is the appearance of Maude Adams at the Grand Opera House, Thursday, September 18th., in James Matthew Barrie's classic fairy play, "Peter Pan." This whimsical work of eternal youth and joy and happiness is known throughout the English speaking world. Had the gifted Scotch dramatist never written "The Little Minister," "Quality Street," or "What Every Woman Knows" this play having for its hero the boy who wouldn't grow up would have made him famous. The success that has fallen to it and to Miss Adams as its hero is a matter of theatrical history. Many plays have been produced since Barrie gave "Peter Pan" to the stage. A number of these were smiled upon and applauded as successes, but they have lived their little day and passed into oblivion, while "Peter Pan" continues to live and grow more attractive with time.

While "Peter Pan" is a fariy play it must not cause people to mistake it as a production intended for children; it is a fairy play in the fullest meaning of the term, but it is one that has been devised for grown-ups, and one which every man or woman who has not lost sight of the joyful illusions of their earliest years will be able to find enjoyable. Mr. Barrie deals with the human emotions in this production. He has written a story in which children are [illegible] but which is intended to appeal in the strongest possible way to adults.

There is much charm to Barrie's story. "Peter Pan" was the boy who wouldn't grow up. He lived in the Never-Never, Never Land, but one day while he was sitting on the window ledge listening to Mrs. Darling telling stories to Wendy, John Napoleon and Michael Nicholas Darling, the window closed suddenly and cut off his shadow. Mrs. Darling who was as neat as she was a pretty mother, put the shadow away in the top bureau drawer just as though it were a dress pattern or something but Peter got very unhappy and lonely without it, and one evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Darling had gone out to dinner, and the children were asleep in their three beds, he flew into the open window and rummaged around until he found it again. The children awoke just as Peter was trying to stick the shadow on again by rubbing it with a piece of soap, and Wendy politely sewed it on his heel for him. Then Peter taught them how to fly and away they all went, out of the window, back to the never-Never, Never Land. Here they met Peter's band—the boys who had fallen out of their perambulators while their nurses weren't looking and grown-up without any mothers—and Tinker Bell, who was very brave and drank the poison the chief pirate left for Peter and nearly died for it; and the crocodile that swallowed the alarm clock, Captain James Hook the one-handed pirate chief, whose other hand the crocodile thirsted for, always knew that he was in danger by hearing the clock's approaching tick, and Smee, the pirate who wished he had a mother, and the red-skins and the pack wolves and all the rest. They had many wonderful adventures, and when they finally decided that their mother must be getting exceedingly anxious about them and went home. Mrs. Darling wanted Peter to stay too. Peter longed for a mother—he had made Wendy his little mother while in the Never-Never, Never Land—but when he was told that he would grow up and be put in office, and probably soon be president, he had to refuse. So he made Wendy promise to come every spring to do his house cleaning and flew back to the Never-Never, Never Land, where one is always young.

The spirit that pervades the play is that of youth. To Miss Adams' admirers her depicting of the role of Peter is one of her most finished pieces of work. Mr. Frohman has surrounded Miss Adams with a strong company. The production is an elaborate one. One scene shows the deck of a pirate ship, another a cave underground with Indians on guard over head and another shows Peter's house in the tree tops. 31

CORONER'S JURY DID NOT PLACE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COLLAPSE OF THE BUILDING

Whole Structure a Piece of Botch Work Says G. W. Gouinlock Who Made Examinations At Inquest of Attorney General's Department---Basement Wall Not Strong Enough

Jury Recommends That City Council Provide Building Inspector, the Duties to Include Alterations

At 11.25 last night at the City Council Chamber, the coroner's jury, investigating the cause of the death of Miss Hannah (Dolly) Sisson returned a verdict that Miss Sisson's death was caused by the collapse of the Turnbull building and that the evidence was not sufficient to determine the person or persons responsible for the accident.

The jury recommended that the City Council provide a building Inspector, whose duties would include the inspection of buildings, at which alterations are being made.

Five witnesses were examined, and the jury retired at ten o'clock. The Council Chamber had been crowded with citizens, but there were only seven people outside the railing when the verdict was announced.

John Collins, laborer, said he was working at the basement wall, and he took some brick from where the columns were to be placed. It was a 14" wall and he used a crow-bar. The top bricks were loose. He could not say it was a good wall. He did not know who made the opening for the door. Some of the mortar stuck to the brick and some did not. He saw the centre of the wall and so far as he knew the wall had been properly built.

In reply to Mr. Wood, Mr. Johnston said Mr. Guy made the opening. He was not now in the city. Mr. Johnston thought he went to Guelph.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay was asked if he could explain the position of the city in regard to the building by-law. He said provision was made so far as to see that the building conforms with the by-law. The walls must be of brick, stone or iron, in the fire limits. It is assumed that the building must be properly put up. There was no particular provision for repairs although the same materials must be used; also the same method of construction. Special clauses related to roofs.

City Solicitor Hall submitted that the by-law did not provide for a case similar to that before the inquest, but more for exterior walls.

Mr. Hay said that as a matter of duty he did inspect the building. He was shown the plans but was given a description of the work. He observed the operations and he concluded that it was quite safe and that every precaution had been taken by the contractor to make it perfectly safe. He had no knowledge of the wall.

In view of the accident he had in mind some amendments providing a more modern way of doing things.

Mr. W. J. Johnston, the contractor, was recalled and he said that Mr. Might wanted the opening for the door made in the basement wall, and Mr. Might explained the desired position. He thought this was before one of the archways above was taken out. Witness showed Mr. Guy he wanted the opening made and he could say the wall was examined afterward. Collins removed the upper part of the wall and to some extent assisted with the columns. After the removal of the bricks, witness saw the top of the wall at various places. The wall between the joists seemed substantial.

To Mr. Gordon— The bulk of the work cut down seemed to be a good substantial wall. He did see some parts where the inside brick was not attached to the outside brick by mortar. It might not be as strong as if attached with mortar.

To Mr. O'Connell— The wall presented an appearance sufficient to carry the weight he was putting on it.

The Diagram shows the arrangement of columns standing on the brick wall and supporting the party wall above. The opening (or door space) cut through the brick wall was crossed on top by two short I beams, as a lintel, and on these beams stood a column. The support given to the I beams was only about 10 inches each side of the opening. It is inferred that the supporting brick, under the I beams, crumbled, the column dropped and precipitated the fall of the building.

BRITAIN THREATENED WITH RAILWAY STRIKE

Refusal of the Liverpool and Birmingham Dock-Workers to Handle Freight From Dublin, Where Transport Workers Are on Strike, Has Resulted in Walk-Out of 7,500 Men so Far,

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The country is again threatened with a great railway strike, and Liverpool, as before, will be the storm centre. The trouble began with the refusal of the Liverpool dockers to handle freight from Dublin, where the transport workers are on strike. Men to the number of 3,500 employed in the freight yards of the various railways went out yesterday afternoon and joined later by 4,000 at Birmingham.

That a complete freight tie-up is expected on the northwestern lines is indicated by a warning issued by the Cunard officials to homeward bound Americans to carry all their baggage with them on the boat trains.

The Liverpool workers struck without the sanction of the railway unions, and lack of support may prevent a national strike on the railways but as other big centres are involved the outlook is ominous. The only hopeful feature is the appointment of a committee of strikers to negotiate with the companies.

At Dublin, the deadlock continues. Vast crowds gathered in the streets last night, but there was only one riot, which resulted in the smashing of the windows of street cars. More than 10,000 men are on strike in Dublin.

The Bus Drivers' Union adopted a resolution last night calling out all the employes of the transport combine, which includes practically all the motor bus lines and tube railways, unless drivers discharged for wearing the union badge are immediately reinstated and the union recognised.

Ten Thousand Join Strike.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Sept. 17.—Over 10,000 men have joined in the strike movement started by the transport workers here, and the building and other trades are greatly affected. It is estimated by the men's leaders that unless peace between the men and the employers is soon reached 6,000 more men will be thrown out of work, as their labor depends on that of the men who have struck already.

There is considerable suffering among the poorer classes, both in the Irish capital and in other towns of the south of Ireland, owing to the rise in the prices of foodstuffs brought about by the lack of transportation facilities. A number of vessels laden with commodities are lying in dock here unable to discharge their cargoes.

For Motorists.

The woman who motors should take more care of her complexion in winter, for it is now that much havoc is wrought by biting east winds. Before starting on a long drive she should always rub cold cream into her face and on returning should wipe it off with equal parts of rosewater and glycerin. The tendency to wrinkles which is produced so often by frowning when motoring is prevented if the face is bathed with sour milk, the approaching wrinkles being gently rubbed in the opposite direction.

STOLEN PEARLS

Workman Finds Them Almost Entire Lying in Heap on Sidewalk

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A workman yesterday morning found on a sidewalk practically the entire pearl necklace valued at $650,000, which was stolen on July 16, while in transit by mail from Paris to London.

The man was going to work in Highbury, a northern district of London, when he noticed the pearls lying in a heap. He found there were 58. He took them to the nearest police station, where they were at once recognized. Only one pearl is now missing.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—(C.A.P. Two other sites in the vicinity of Westminster are under consideration, but no decision has been arrived at.

Nova Scotian Makes Pointed Remarks at C.M.A. Conclave

HALIFAX, Sept. 17. — Thomas Cantley, general manager of the Nova Scotia Steel Co., who welcomed the C. M. A. as its vice-president for Nova Scotia, at the opening of its convention here yesterday strongly criticized the management of the I. C. R. for increasing freight rates, contrasting the burden placed on the Maritime Provinces thereby with the free canals in Ontario. He also took a strong stand on the tariff, pointing out that the situation so far as the steel makers were concerned was becoming intolerable, and took a rap at his fellow-manufacturers by pointing out that they were importing much of their steel free and get- [illegible]

HUERTA IS PLEDGED TO FAIR ELECTIONS IN MEXICO

In His Message to Congress the Provisional President Indicates That He Will Hand Over Office to Properly Elected Successor—Regrets Break With U.S.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 17.—Provisional President Huerta delivered his semi-annual message last night at the opening of the second session of the 27th Mexican Congress. In it he promised to spare no efforts to bring about the unrestricted elections of President and vice-president of the Mexican republic next month, declaring that it would constitute the greatest triumph of his career to turn over the office to his successor with the country at peace, as he hoped to do. Gen. Huerta said the strained diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States had caused the Mexican nation to suffer unmerited affliction and had retarded the pacification of the country. Nevertheless, he asserted he had good grounds to hope for an early solution of the differences between the two nations and to see Mexico and the United States once more united in the bonds of friendship.

The Provisional President drew a distinction between the attitude of the Government of the United States and that of the people of that nation, saying: "The tenseness of our diplomatic relations with the Government of the United States, although luckily not with that people," had put Mexico into a state of apprehension.

The message was disappointing to many who had expected that Provisional President Huerta would deal at some length with recent diplomatic exchanges. This subject, however, he said, "being so delicate and the permanent commission of Congress being already informed," and owing to the fact that negotiations were still pending, he would pass over with a bare mention.

The deputies and senators in joint session filled the floor of the Chamber of Deputies. The balconies were packed, the diplomatic gallery being filled with foreign representatives and their families. The silence which prevailed during the reading of the President's document by the reading clerk was broken at its conclusion by prolonged cheering, in which the congressmen were joined by the crowds in the galleries.

Of the treasury funds, amounting at the beginning of the last fiscal year to $27,600,000, $24,900,000 he said had been expended for the pacification of the country. Of the loan of $100,000,000 authorized in May last, French bankers took $30,000,000 at 90. Out of this Speyer & Co. had repaid $20,000,000, half of which was a loan to the national treasury and half to the monetary commission. For the army 6,600 horses and 2,300 mules had been purchased during the year. The national cartridge factory he said, was turning out 260,000 cartridges monthly. Besides a great number of cannon of various descriptions, machine guns, rifles, carbines and ammunition for the same, the government had contracted abroad for ten aeroplanes, 77 armored automobiles and 50 unarmored automobiles, 2 armored transports armed with four 75 millimetre guns, each of the vessels of 3,500 tons displacement.

Following the reading of the Presidential message the session was adjourned until to-day.

POLICE MAKE ARRESTS IN FREIGHT ROBBERIES

COMPANIES LOST ABOUT $40,000

A Score of Men Are Wanted in Bridgeburg and Buffalo and Five Have Already Been Captured and Have Confessed.

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Sept. 17.—The wholesale theft of merchandise from bonded cars in the Bridgeburg-Fort Erie yard has assumed an international aspect. To-day a score of private detectives, with many war- [illegible] are [illegible] Bridgeburg in search of the ringleaders of the gang whose extensive operations have startled the district. Of twenty men, against whom charges are made, five have already pleaded guilty to charges of theft. They will appear for sentence to-day before Magistrate John G. Rathvon. The others, who are alleged to have been implicated in the thefts, will be arraigned at the same time.

Following the appearance of the accused in court yesterday disclosures of a startling nature are predicted by the detectives working on the case. It was stated last night that about fifty people, a number of whom are railway employes, are under surveillance, but the police will not divulge the names pending further developments. According to the detectives and policemen, the loss sustained jointly by the Grand Trunk, the Wabash and the Michigan Central Railways will be in the neighborhood of $40,000.

The detectives laid a decoy for the culprits and some of the railway employes under suspicion neglected to hedge themselves around with all precautions, and eventually stepped into the trap. Realizing that they were caught red-handed, several abandoned their positions and fled before the detectives obtained warrants for their arrest. While the five men under arrest, two of whom are G.T.R. employes, have admitted their guilt, they stoutly refuse to disclose the full details of their method.

The majority of the cars robbed here were broken into and the contents ransacked at H. office terminal, a mile and a half from the town. No. 91, a fast merchandise freight, which passes through here daily between nine and ten o'clock in the evening, was usually the train from which the thieves made the successful hauls. At H. terminal the conductor has to wait for running orders and occasionally for passenger trains, which often results in lengthy delays. As soon as the conductor had finished examining the seals, the thieves started their operations. The loot would be thrown into empty coal cars and subsequently smuggled across the border. The cars entered were mostly routed for Detroit, St. Louis and other American points via Windsor. According to railway officials, between sixty and seventy-five cars were broken into and valuable merchandise abstracted, some of which they never expect to recover. The loot has been in most instances so widely distributed that the detectives are experiencing much difficulty in recovering it. It was reported at police headquarters last night that several cases of shoes and silks had been found in a field on the outskirts of Bridgeburg. In a number of cases people who had received stolen shoes, etc., voluntarily produced the goods at police headquarters when they learned that the detectives were about to execute search warrants.

Special officers were sent to Wind- [illegible] Detroit last night by the railway companies to investigate and clear up the operations at these points.

ULSTERMEN HAVE ARMY OF 100,000

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 17.—Sir Edward Carson, the leader of the Irish Unionists, landed in Ireland yesterday with the object of inspecting the volunteer army which is being raised in the Province of Ulster to support the provisional government which, it is said, is to be brought into existence in the event of the home rule for Ireland bill becoming law.

The Ulster army is said to be thoroughly organized and already to have attained a strength of about 100,000 men, which number is expected by its leaders to be nearly doubled when recruiting has been completed.

The Irish Unionist leader intends to spend a week in Ulster in company with his lieutenants, with whom he will visit the various corps which have been formed by drilled men of the Unionist clubs and Orange lodges.

The climax of Sir Edward's visit is awaited on Saturday next, when he has arranged to inspect the Belfast Unionist corps.

In the course of the week a number of private meetings of the Ulster Unionist Council will take place to complete the arrangements for the provisional government which it is proposed eventually to establish.

There seems to be little hope of a general conference between the various parties on the question of home rule, although the possibility of the holding of an open conference on the subject of Irish government as a whole is still canvassed.

NAVY ON THE "HIRE"

"The Hiring of Naval Defence even though the persons hired be Britain's best, is repugnant to the National Spirit."

Thus spake the Globe yesterday. It is hard for a plain man to keep his temper when reading the Globe's editorials on the navy question. If the Globe ceased to write articles upon the subject, the problem would have ceased to be a problem long ago. But every time the debaters get near to a point where they begin to understand each other, the Globe chimes in with an illogical, irrelevant and idiotic remark like the above, and everybody looks at everybody else wondering just where they were at.

The answer to the above is so obvious and has been given so often in this column that it sounds like vain repetition to say anything further on the point.

But at the expense of being thought monotonous, we would remind the Globe that Canada is already "hiring" naval defence and is being taken care of by Britain's best in men and money, free gratis and for nothing, and the Globe does not feel the least "repugnance" towards the British Admiralty, nor is the least bit grateful.

DRIVING THE WEDGE

The bi-lingual school question is to the fore just now. Whatever course is adopted by an Ontario Government it cannot be that of granting rights not already their's under the B. N. A. Act, to anybody. If the "regulation" recently devised to meet the case complies with these legal requirements, no fault possibly can be found, but it is a question and a very serious one as to whether this is the case or not.

We do not like the matter as so far worked out. It may please the French. But it does not help us in nation-building any more than permitting the establishment of High Schools or Continuation Schools other than those already established.

Any sign of driving in a wedge must be fought against by the people or unity and consequent strength are not to be a thing of the past.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS

There must be an amiable lot of aldermen in Toronto City Council. The following is a choice bit of dialogue reported by the World:

[illegible] ed in your career as controller by giving a cheap picnic to my few constituents."

Foster to McBride—"You're a liar from your feet up."

McBride to Foster—"Your picnics don't cost you more than the price of the badges. Fleming gives the car rides and Solman the ferry rides'".

Foster to McBride—"Come outside and I can lick you. You are an awful liar."

McBride to Foster—"If you run for mayor next year there will be told something about your old shacks that will put you in a deep hole."

Foster to McBride—"I can beat you to a finish any time."

Why don't we have these interesting interludes in Peterborough? We must send a couple of aldermen up to take lessons in Toronto dialectics and the art of polite repartee.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Canadian correspondent to the Westminster Gazette recommends the British Railway Companies to learn from Canada and put a strong searchlight at the head of every engine. This is one thing which the Mother Country can learn from her offspring with advantage. Railway accidents are far less frequent in Canada than in England for this one reason.

His Holiness the Pope seems to have survived the attack of his doctors, who at one time said that he was a very sick man and that he ought to die. The latest report is that "the Holy Father is now pursuing his usual life." His Holiness evidently puts no faith in the infallibility of doctors.

NOT SOLVED YET.

Sir Oliver Lodge Riddles "Origin of Life" Theory.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 17.—Members of the British Association yesterday pursued the question opened by Sir Edward Schaefer last year regarding the origin of life. Several solutions were volunteered and many differences of opinion were revealed in the debate, but on one point there was complete agreement. It was that we are no nearer a solution of the origin of life than they were a thousand years ago.

Prof. Bernard Moore of Liverpool launched the debate, announcing that he believed he had found the first step in organic evolution.

In considering the origin of life the start must be made in the purely inorganic world possessing no trace of organic matter. Either the plant or animal is more detailed now by taking the celloids together with water and carbon dioxide. In the presence of uranum salt formaldehyde he described as the simplest organic structure, and to it he had traced the first step in the evolution of life.

Sir Oliver Lodge was the first critic. He described Prof. Moore's formaldehyde as potential living matter.

"When you have got potential living matter, life makes use of it," he remarked. "What life is I do not know. I suppose it provided parents and passed on. Formaldehyde would not be the origin of life, but the physical and chemical vehicle which can be made use of by life."

The discussion was animated, but Sir Oliver Lodge refused to accept the title of the debate, declaring that the meeting was not discussing the origin of life at all, but a laboratory synthesis of some material that might possibly become endowed with what we call life.

Race Ran After Twenty Years.

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 17.—A sprint of 100 yards was ran yesterday afternoon by Rear Admiral Sir Robert K. Arbuthnot and Capt. Eric Back of the British navy, in fulfilment of a bet made by them twenty years ago, and the captain won by a yard in the excellent time of twelve seconds.

Both officers were serving in the Pacific Ocean on board the Warspite in 1893, when a challenge was given and accepted for a race to be run on the same date twenty years later.

Admiral C. Hedworth Meux was commander of the Warspite at the time of the wager, and was stakeholder yesterday. Rear Admiral Arbuthnot is 49 years of age, and Capt. Back 48.

The average depth of the ocean bed is about 12,000 feet, as again the average land height above sea level is 2,300 feet.

Team Ran Away; Man Killed.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 17.—George Moulton, aged 32 years, employed on the farm of George Shillington near Westport met his death yesterday under tragic circumstances half a mile from the village.

Moulton, with other teamsters, was engaged drawing stone from the Government quarry to the new wharf at Westport. When about a mile out the team became frightened and ran away. In attempting to stop them, Moulton in some manner fell from his seat and became entangled in the wagon. He received such injuries that he lived only half an hour. Moulton came from England three months ago.

And a Ring That Was Finally Put to Good Use.

By JOHN BEAUMONT.

"See here," said Chester hotly, "if you think I stole the ring why don't you say so and search me?"

"Vincent," cried Elvia, "how can you say such a thing?"

"I'm simply putting into words what Miss Celeste has been hinting for the last ten minutes," he cried.

"Celeste may have been unfortunate in her remarks," said John Noailes soothingly, "but she meant nothing of that sort."

Vincent Chester laughed. Ever since Miss Celeste Noailes descended upon her brother's household at the death of his wife she had fought Vincent. He was a boy then, but even then in love with Elvia, and Miss Celeste had higher ideas of matrimony for her very attractive niece.

This evening the two had been examining a ring, and somehow, none knew how, it had disappeared. They had hunted all over for it, but it could not be found, and it was to be expected that Miss Celeste's acid tongue would but thinly veil her suspicious thoughts.

"If Mr. Chester's conscience is uneasy," chuckled Miss Celeste, "I can understand that he takes to himself purely impersonal speeches."

Vincent turned to Mr. Noailes. "Will you search me, sir?" he asked.

"Nonsense!" cried his host. "Celeste, for heaven's sake keep still. My boy, no one believes that you would steal anything—except one thing."

He patted Elvia's shoulder meaningly to explain his last sentence and thereby added fuel to Miss Celeste's flame.

"I don't see why he should not be searched," she fumed. "The ring was here a moment ago, and now it is gone."

"You see," said Vincent. "Again, I ask you to search me."

"My boy, you were not a day old when I first took you in my arms," said Mr. Noailes. "I would as soon accuse myself of crime as to believe it of you."

"Well, if you won't," said Vincent briskly, "I'll have to do it myself, I guess."

Rapidly he turned out the contents of his pockets, spreading them on the table. John Noailes sprang forward as though to stop him, but Elvia laid a detaining hand upon his shoulder.

"It is better so," she whispered. "It is the only way to convince auntie."

They stood silent until the things had been returned to Crawford's pockets; then Mr. Noailes stepped forward.

"This should satisfy you, Celeste," he said sternly. "I want to tell you that if you ever raise the question again I shall not condone your second offense."

"Very well," said Miss Celeste, with a shrug of her shoulders. "Since I seem to be so much in the way here I suppose that Mr. Crawford will permit me to retire."

She swept grandly from the room leaving the three to face each other uncomfortably. All knew that Miss Celeste was not satisfied and were fearful of her next outbreak.

Each tried to appear at ease, but the pleasure of the visit was gone, and presently Crawford made an excuse for taking his departure. Elvia followed him to the door.

"Will you drop in tomorrow evening?" she asked. "We shall probably be able to tell you then where we found the ring."

"I am afraid that I cannot get around," he said uncomfortably. "If you find it will you write?"

"Won't you come over?" pleaded Elvia, but Vincent shook his head. He had been shocked by the accusation and not even the belief of Elvia and her father could salve his wounded feelings yet. It seemed almost as though he were passing out of Elvia's life.

Up in her room Miss Celeste was sitting at her writing table while her busy pen covered sheet after sheet of note paper. Not until she had written a dozen pages did she cease her work, and then, going over to her bureau, she unlocked the upper drawer and drew therefrom a paper covered book with a gaudy title page. From the inside of this she clipped a coupon, which she attached to the letter before slipping it into an envelope.

A year before while visiting the city she had been tempted to visit a vaudeville theater at which a man and woman known as the X-Rhys were creating a sensation with some mind reading accomplishments. Always inclined to the supernatural, she had been greatly interested by the Rays' accomplishment and had slipped back the next afternoon to purchase some of the books which gave her the right to ask questions by mail.

Once or twice since then she had consulted the oracle, and now she was writing for advice as to the whereabouts of the ring. It was well for her faith that she was not present at the answering of her question.

Two young men sat before a table in a cheap theatrical boarding house when a messenger entered with a package of letters to add to the pile on the table. One of them caught the thick blue envelope up.

"Here's another whole book to be answered," he laughed as he slit open the cover. "Twelve pages," he gasped as he turned over the closely written pages.

"She must want her money's worth."

"What's the question," laughed the other—"love or theft?"

"Something about a ring," chuckled the first as he read the first paragraph. "Listen. 'At several crises in my life,'" he read, "'I have turned to you for advice, and you have never failed me. Now, in sore distress of mind, I come to you for advice as to a ring which I have reason to believe was stolen. I will acquaint you with the facts in the'"—

"Cut it," urged the other. "Just use the old standby, 'Your first suspicion was correct.' That'll do as well as anything."

The reader scribbled on the pad of paper before him and slipped it in the return envelope. A couple of days later Miss Celeste read the confirmation of her suspicion and bore it in triumph to her brother.

John Noailes came as close to swearing at a woman as he had ever done in his life, but he checked his temper and solemnly warned her of the folly of giving heed to the charlatans, but even as he spoke he knew that nothing would convince her of Vincent's innocence save the finding of the ring.

Gradually it became noised about the town that the spirits had told Miss Noailes that Crawford was a thief. Vincent had not been near the house since that night, and his apparent break verified the gossip. It began to look ugly for his prospects when Miss Noailes was moved to entertain a few friends.

Elvia sat apart from the rest trying to appear interested in the conversation while her thoughts were with Vincent when suddenly Miss Celeste sat up in her chair.

"That miserable kitten has brought a bone in here!" she cried as an irregular rattle on the hardwood floor broke upon their ears. "She is forever playing with bones."

Elvia sprang toward her aunt. The kitten was one Vincent had given her and for that reason disliked by Miss Celeste. Just as they turned to the heavy cabinet under which the kitten was playing Shah bounded out from under the low setting cabinet in pursuit of his plaything.

Elvia's startled cry scared him, and he scampered off, abandoning his toy. Elvia pounced upon it.

"Do you remember that Shah was playing in here that night?" she cried. "This is what he was playing with." She held up a jeweled circle. "The ring dropped on the floor, and the sparkle of the diamond attracted Shah. As long as he was on the rug we did not hear him. He must have knocked it under the cabinet. Nellie never sweeps under there. Look!" She caught up a light cane and poked under the cabinet. The dirt she swept out showed that the ring could easily have lain there since its loss.

"Perhaps you will believe the Rays now," laughed John Noailes, coming forward. "I guess I'll call up Vincent."

"I'll call him," volunteered Elvia.

"I guess that you had better, daughter," he laughed. "You can promise anything if he will come over."

Elvia's promise must have been attractive, for Crawford borrowed an automobile to come in, and after Miss Celeste had humbled herself to an apology John Noailes insisted that that ring be the engagement one.

The Lost Watch.

A detective tells this story about a "confidence man," who gave the police a lot of trouble.

One day the detective was in an auction room, where "fake" jewelry was being sold. A lot of watches were offered—cheap, worthless affairs, but got up to look like solid gold. They were knocked down for $2.15 apiece, and the detective noted that they were bought by this confidence man. Two months later the detective met him and asked him what he had done with the watches. The scoundrel explained his scheme. He had hired a room, put in a desk and a few chairs and made himself up to look like an old man. Then he advertised something like this: "Found—A solid gold watch. Loser can have it by paying costs. Apply," etc. Nearly every smart thief in town answered the advertisement, claimed the watch and paid $10 for "costs." In two days he disposed of his entire stock in this way, and about 100 smart thieves were fuming over their loss.

Helped by an Earthquake.

Gallipoli, the ancient Callipolis (beautiful city), passed into the hands of the Turks in a remarkable fashion nearly a century before Constantinople. It was among their first European acquisitions. Invited over by Christians to take part in the quarrels, they had crossed the Dardanelles and seized the castle of Tzympe. Then in 1358 came a terrific earthquake, which shattered the cities of Thrace. The walls of Gallipoli fell down, the inhabitants deserted the place, and the Turks marched in over the ruins and stayed there in spite of the remonstrances of the Emperor Cantacuzenus. The Sultan Orkhan replied that providence had opened the city to his soldiers and he could not be guilty of the impiety of disregarding such a manifestation of the divine will.

Repartee.

The Boston Globe thought it had put over one when it asked, "Where does a noise go?"

But the Toledo Blade hit it on the face with the answer, "Sometimes to congress."

An enormous amount of intellect in this country is working on small salary.—Minneapolis Journal.

Toboga Island.

Famed for its unfailing springs of pure, sparkling water, the island of Toboga lies about ten miles from the city of Panama in the Pacific. Here the mail steamers plying between Balboa and San Francisco lie by for their supply of fresh water, as do also the steamers that sail southward from Panama. The island is also famous for its splendid pineapples.

Preoccupied.

The professor had fallen downstairs, and as he thoughtfully picked himself up he remarked, "I wonder what noise that was I just heard?"—New Orleans Times Democrat.

Just Rebuke.

"Is life worth living?"

"Not if you have nothing better to occupy your mind than such questions as that!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Lack of desire is the greatest riches.—Seneca.

INSECT ANAESTHETICS.

Wasps and Beetles Paralyze Their Victims Before Killing.

That the sting of the wasp, which punctures the nerve centers of a captured caterpillar or spider, usually paralyzes the creature into helplessness rather than kills it is well known. The victim remains alive in the burrow or cell in which the wasp stores it as food for the larva which will emerge from the egg laid in the same cell. Therefore the newly hatched grub finds ready for it a provision of living meat instead of decayed carrion.

That "wizard" among entomologists, the venerable Fabre, has discovered a similar yet even more extraordinary fact in the history of the glowworm beetle (lampyris—namely, that it anaesthetizes the prey upon which it itself feeds, so that it may consume it at leisure and predigested. This beetle, whose brilliant phosphorescence attracts the eye in the dusk of the summer evenings, habitually hunts and seizes upon a certain small snail in order to eat it.

The curious thing is that the beetle anaesthetizes the mollusk at the first attack, preventing it from escaping by withdrawing to safety deep within its shell. Upon finding the snail the beetle dashes forward and, thrusting out its sharp, curved mandibles, repeatedly stabs the side of the body of its prey. After a few punctures the snail becomes insensible and remains in that deadened state for three or four hours—a time more than sufficient for the beetle to complete its meal.—Independent.

CAUGHT THE CAPTAIN.

He Was Not on the Early Morning Job, but the Kaiser Was.

Some time ago the kaiser heard that a captain in one of the guards regiments at Potsdam had fixed the regulation hour of schooling for his men at 6 o'clock in the morning. The kaiser, though doubting the fitness of such an early hour for the lesson and the ability of a popular young officer to keep up to this rather exacting standard of early rising, said nothing, but one day walked into the barrack room at 6 o'clock.

The captain was not there, but the emperor showed neither annoyance nor surprise. He asked where the lesson was to be found in the books, and without more ado, to the mingled anxiety and delight of the men, he took the lesson in hand and explained the passage in history which was the subject of the day. It was nearly 7 o'clock when the captain showed himself. The kaiser returned his salute and made no allusion to his crestfallen countenance, but handed him the lesson book after pointing out how far the class had got and then left the room.

Nothing more was said or heard about the incident until a few days later, when the captain received a handsome alarm clock, evidently from the kaiser. What the officer wrote in his letter of thanks for the gift is not recorded.—"Ireland's Own."

Came Near It.

A New England farmer was once describing in the presence of a very humane person the great age and debility of a horse that he formerly owned and used. "You ought to have killed him," interrupted the humane person indignantly. "Well," drawled the farmer, "we did—almost."

A Mean Dig.

Myrtle—Look what a lovely diamond engagement ring George has given me.

Estelle—Yes; it's lovely. It nearly broke my heart when I sent it back to him.

DR. YOUNG LEFT TO-DAY FOR SASKATOON

Will Reside in the Western City —He Has Been a Valued Citizen

To-day many citizens shook hands with Dr. T. W. H. Young, and expressed regret at his departure from the city and wished him every success in the western city of Saskatoon, where the doctor will in future reside. Dr. Young left Peterborough to-day.

At Saskatoon, Capt. E. V. Young, the doctor's brother, is practicing law.

Many circles in this city will miss Dr. Young. For many years, and in fact since he came to Peterborough, he has been actively identified in his medical, military, social and fraternal associations, and he has always enjoyed high popularity.

Dr. Young is a graduate of Edinburgh and Glasgow. He came to Canada at the age of twenty, after which he attended and graduated from Trinity college, Toronto. His practice in Peterborough was not alone that of the physician, as he held the positions of examiner for insurance, fraternal and benefit societies, and for sixteen years he was the attending surgeon of the C.P.R. He held a similar position with the Canadian General Electric Co. In leaving Peterborough he retires as chairman of the Board of Health. He was also on the medical staff of both the Nicholls and St. Joseph's hospitals.

Dr. Young is a past president of the Sons of England, and served for many years as surgeon to that society.

Dr. Young has few hobbies, but it can be safely said that the most of his interests, apart from his profession, have been bent toward the militia, in which he has played no small part. He organized the 24th Field Battery and commanded it for seven years. He is Surgeon-Major of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, and he is now Brigadier, with the title of Lieut-Col. of the 10th Brigade of the Canadian Field Artillery. The doctor will certainly be missed by the officers and men of the artillery, for he was personally known to all the men, and to his efforts are due in no small measure the success of the camps and the general work of the 24th Battery, and also the 10th Brigade.

In England Dr. Young's clubs are the Army and Navy and the Colonial Institute, of which he is a fellow. Dr. Young was medical examiner and leader of the Canadian Home Circle. He is a member of St. John's church. Years ago, when cricket was in general favor in Peterborough, Dr. Young was one of the most ardent players. In fact that was the principal game he played.

Dr. Young served as Justice of the Peace for Peterborough County and he was the representative in four counties for the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons.

P. C. MEAGHER LOSES LOCKET

When the T. A. S. won the City Hockey Championship, a dozen years ago, "Bill" Meagher as one of the victorious seven, was presented with a gold locket. Since that date he has kept the locket as a memento of the numerous hard knocks and other glory. Monday evening P. C. Meagher lost the locket which bears his full name on the back. The finder would confer a favor by returning the locket to the police station.

CORONER'S JURY DID NOT PLACE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COLLAPSE OF BUILDING

To Mr. Gordon— He could not give the weight.

To Mr. Hall— To the best of his knowledge, Mr. Might told him the opening was to be made.

To Mr. Peck— The opening was made after the work was first spoken of.

To Mr. Wood— A door frame was placed in the opening.

To Mr. O'Connell. He had a conversation with Mr. Belcher as to the location of the columns after the opening was made. Mr. Belcher said the I beams must be placed across and this was done.

EXPERT EVIDENCE.

Geo. W Gouinlock, architect of Toronto, said he had had a large experience. He had been sent to Peterborough by the Attorney General's department and he made an inspection last Thursday. He saw the basement wall and examined both breaks. The nine inch bearing of the I beams on either side of the top of the opening would not be sufficient with the original wall. He would make it eighteen inches. There was no bond in the mortar. The wall had not been properly flushed and the bricks were soft. The wall was exceedingly badly built and the mortar very poor. It did not adhere to the brick, and he thought he could have pulled down the wall brick after brick with his hands. The wall was not sufficient for the weight. In another break the brick and mortar were the same quality.

The south wall was without bond or tie for eight or ten feet. It was very bad work and he had not seen worse work. In a portion of the centre wall there were several courses of brick without bond or mortar.

Witness assented to the opinion that the whole building was a piece of botch work. The wall was so bad that the concentration of weight caused it to give way. Had he been in charge of the work, he would have built piers. One pier could could have been built in the basement doorway. He did not think the cement was sufficiently thick for the 12 inch base. The cement if thick enough was as good as stone.

To Dr. Greer—Had the wall been of average strength, it would have held the weight. The question as to the strength of the wall was a matter of judgment.

To Mr. Gordon—Had he been the architect he would have cut into the wall to ascertain its strength. With a proper examination of the wall, the accident would have been avoided. The condition could be seen by opening the wall and this would give sufficient notice of its character.

The witness was further examined by Mr. O'Connell, Mr. Peck and Mr. Ball. It was determined that the crushing power was 86 tons per square foot.

J. K. Costain, now employed with the Henry Hope Co., said he had had long experience in the remodelling of buildings in the Old Country. He had examined the building since the accident and the quality of the basement was very inferior in material and workmanship. The bricks were good and bad; the mortar, which was medium, did not adhere to the bricks, and this indicated that the brick had been used when taken from the kiln without exposure to the weather. This was very often done. The opening would have the effect of weakening the wall. Nine or ten inches of beam on either side was hardly enough. The inferior quality of the wall, he thought, caused the collapse. It should not have been a difficult matter to determine the quality of the wall. An engineer or contractor should have knowledge if the wall was sufficient.

John Belcher said he had been an architect in Peterborough for forty years. Mr. Might employed him. He got his instructions as to details from the contractor. The wall appeared to be very good indeed. He had a sketch as to the position of the columns and a blue print for the beams. The opening had not then been made. His first knowledge of the opening was when the contractor told him. He fixed the length of the beams, but did not know the length of the beams put in. A day or so before the accident he was in the basement, and after the collapse he was very much disappointed to see the condition of the wall, which he took to be a good one.

To Mr. Peck—He had not been told about the general condition of the wall.

To Mr. O'Connell—The basement was better than the other wall above.

To Mr. Gordon—He did not examine the cutting in the cellar wall, and did not cut into the wall to examine it.

It was ten o'clock when the jury retired to deliberate on the evidence. Coroner Dr. Greer had outlined the duties of the jury.

MORAL RESPONSIBILITY.

As to the moral responsibility, Dr. Greer said it appeared to him that as to Mr. Might, there was not a shred of evidence that he had the slightest suspicion of danger. In view of the unfair criticisms and rumors on the street, it was the duty of the jury, if they could, to exonerate Mr. Might. As to the others, he could speak almost as strongly. There might have been an error in judgment, but as to the actual cause, the evidence was unanimous in favor of the statement that the accident was due to the basement wall, which was rotten and would not sustain the weight.

One thing that had impressed him very strongly was that in every city there should be an expert, whose whose duties would be to superintend work of this kind. He should be a man of high technical skill, who at a glance perhaps would find the incentive to examine. That was a pertinent question to be considered, and if the by-law did not provide such, the jury could suggest that it should [illegible]

Hoops For Children.

The opinion is expressed by men who have made a study of exercises for health that it is a pity the skipping rope and hoop have gone out of fashion for children.

It is suggested they are more excellent mediums for the physical development than bicycles and roller skates. The fact that small children are allowed to have bicycles and consequently make no use of nature's means of progression is offered as an objection to them.

The skipping rope and hoop require them to run and walk. Young children should be encouraged to do this as much as possible, and always with a springy step. They need to use their feet and legs, and exercise that brings them into play is beneficial.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE FIRE BY-LAW.

To The Editor of The Review

Dear Sir— I notice by the papers last night that James G. Graham, builder, asked and obtained permission from the Council to erect a new house on Dublin street with a 9" wall instead of a 14" wall as required by the Fire by-law.

I would like to know why Mr. Graham is allowed to break the by-laws and why the Council can grant to one what they refuse to others. When Mr. Graham was in the Council, J. J. Turner, Jr., was building his residence on Water street and he was building the lower story with 14" walls and the upper storey with 9" walls, and Mr. Graham, the man that now wants to build a complete house with 9" walls and in a more congested part, was the man that objected, and consequently J. J. Turner, Jr., my son, had to build 14" walls all through, and adding extra cost of some two hundred and fifty dollars, and now this same Mr. Graham comes before the Council and asked permission to do something that he refused to others, and I am astonished to think that our Mayor and Council should grant permission to Mr. Graham, and especially in such a congested neighborhood, and it is to be hoped the Council will stop the building of this house. The idea of allowing one man to break the by-law and prosecuting another man for doing practically the same thing, as I notice by the papers the Council are after Mr. I. Eastwood, "British Fair Play to All" should be the motto, and not try to prosecute Mr. Eastwood and then give Mr. Graham permission to do something contrary to the by-law.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours truly,
J. J. TURNER, sr.

Her Suspicion Aroused.

They were discussing the new lodger.

"He slips in and out of the house so quietly," said the grass widow boarder, "that I think he must have been a married man once."

"Perhaps it is that," says Mrs. Hashcroft as a troubled look came over her face, "and maybe he is in the habit of getting behind with his board."—London Stray Stories.

SCHMIDT A COINER?

New York Police Say Priest Had a "Money Factory."

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The discovery of a counterfeiters den, which Hans Schmidt, priest and confessed slayer of Anna Aumuller, yesterday admitted was fitted up by him to make spurious money, led the detectives, Coroner Feinberg and other visitors to his cell in the Tombs to express the opinion that Schmidt was sane and that further investigation will develop that counterfeiting was only one of his "side lines." They declared it as their belief that he was feigning insanity after carefully thought-out plans of a master criminal mind.

To Rev. Father Evers, chaplain of the Tombs, to his attorney and other callers, Schmidt admitted his connection with the flat in West 134th street, in the rooms of which the detectives found bundles of imitation $10 gold certificates.

Dr. Ernest Arthur Muret, the dentist arrested Monday night soon after the raid upon the counterfeiters' flat, yesterday was held in $5,000 bail for a hearing on the charge of having in his possession a revolver in violation of the state law. Through his knowledge of the law, Muret forestalled the plans of the federal secret service agents waiting to arrest him on a warrant charging counterfeiting. By waiving preliminary examination, Muret, for the time being at least, escaped the more serious charge.

Inspector Faurot, head of the detective bureau, reiterated last night his belief that Muret and Schmidt were relatives, if not brothers. Dr. Muret told the inspector that the resemblance was merely a coincidence.

"I firmly believe," Inspector Faurot said, "that before long—for the truth is bound to come out—it will be shown that these two men are more than friends, that they are kin."

The inspector added that he would continue his investigations of the murder and the counterfeiting operations of Schmidt along the lines of the striking resemblance between the priest and Muret.

Large Royal Families.

Prince Louis of Bavaria, who succeeded his father, the Prince Regent Luitpold, has three sons and seven daughters. Nevertheless he does not hold the record among the sovereign houses for the largest family. Prince Robert of Parma, who died five years ago, left by two marriages 12 children. His eldest daughter was the first wife of Ferdinand of Bulgaria. Abdul Hamid is the father of seven princes and six princesses. Nicholas of Montenegro, have seven daughters and four sons. Kaiser Wilhelm has six sons and one daughter. George V. of England, has five sons and one daughter. The Czar of Russia, four daughters and a son. The Count of Caserte, son of King Ferdinand of the two Sicilies, gave his name to 11 children, every one of whom, sons and daughters, were called Marie. In Austria the Archduke Leopold Salvator has five daughters and four sons; the Archduke Francis Salvator, four sons and four daughters.

Wasn't Sure It Was Wasted.

Alexander Graham Bell, the Canadian inventor, one of the pioneers of flying, said recently that he was surprised to see aeronautics still at a stage where the aviator has to risk his life in every flight he makes.

"We have not advanced as I expected," continued Mr. Bell. "Indeed, Mrs. Blank's reply to her friend, made ten years ago, is still timely.

"'So your husband is working on a flying machine?' asked Mrs. Blank's friend. 'Don't you thing he is wasting his time?'

"'Oh, I don't know,' Mrs. Blank replied. 'He's got his life well insured'."

Saving Middlemen's Profits.

In many parts of Germany the farmers co-operatively sell their geese on the hoof directly to the consumer, saving the middlemen's profit thereby. Having rounded up a large flock, they drive the herd into the city where no handbills are needed to advertise its presence. Selecting a goose that fills the housewife's needs, the salesman extends his long-hooked stick, dexterously catches the bird by the neck, delivers it, receives the price and departs to the next customer waiting on the curb.

Selling the Children.

At Ravensburg, in the Tyrol, a children's market is held every year, where the children of the poor are sold by auction to the highest bidders. As a rule, boys and girls do not fetch more than a few shillings. When bought the children are taken away to do hard work, the boys being used for agricultural purposes and the girls for domestic work. Sometimes when a would-be purchaser cannot decide between two boys he makes the youngsters fight and parts with his money for the winner.—London Answers.

Milady's Mirror

There are various preparations sold by manicures to remove stains under the finger nails. With careful laws most of these can be relied upon, but if there is any doubt about a special preparation substitute lemon juice.

As a stain remover it is excellent, and the woman who keeps half a lemon on the stationary washstand where she washes her hands rarely will have to blush for the unsightliness of her nails.

Oxalic acid is also good, but is injurious to some skins. It should be applied with a bit of cotton on the end of an orangewood stick. In using the lemon the tips of the fingers can be rubbed into a section of it. Later rinse well with clear water.

Stains on the sides of the fingers are quickly removed with a moist pumice stone. This is invaluable to get off the first blotches after preserving, painting or doing any disfiguring work. In cases where the skin under the nails has roughened a little powdered pumice can be moistened with lemon juice and applied with an orangewood stick.

Never scrape away a stain; it roughens both cuticle and nail and becomes a dirt catcher rather than dirt remover.

Soaking the tips of the fingers in olive oil will help to keep the skin about the nails in good condition.

Sweet Cream Face Bath.

When a woman's face is inclined to dryness in cold weather the less she uses water on it the better, for the water is drying and will aggravate the condition that other agents which are cleansing may soothe and even heal.

A person who is willing to take the trouble to use sweet cream daily on her face will give the best of treatment. A tablespoonful of cream is sufficient for this bath. To every tablespoonful of cream should be put ten drops of tincture of benzoin. This latter preserves the integrity of the cream and is an excellent application.

To use this mixture a small bit of old soft linen should be saturated and the face then thoroughly wet. The throat and the flesh behind the ears should also be bathed. Then with the finger tips the surface so anointed must be rubbed gently for five minutes. This will send the cream into the pores and loosen the dust. The face must then be wet with more cream. This last wash is to remove the soiled application.

Before retiring is the best time for this work. The last anointing must remain on all night. In the morning the face should be wiped with a lotion of one-eighth glycerin, the other seven parts being rosewater. The wash is intended to have just enough glycerin in it to prevent the astringent action of rosewater.

Sunning the Hair.

The reason that some women's hair is so thin is because they never give the air a chance to get at the scalp especially with the number of rats worn nowadays. But, even if you do not wear them, give your hair a sunning at least once a week and every day if it is possible. Your hair needs such a treatment, and so does your scalp, for the cold dries the natural nourishment, and thus the hair is likely to become dry and lusterless. Take all the hair pins out of the hair, remove all the tangles by running the fingers through it, then seat yourself in a comfortable seat by the window through which the sun is streaming. Toss the hair about from time to time and massage the scalp to get the glands working properly. Part the hair in different places so the sun will get all over the scalp. Do this for an hour if you can; but, if not, half an hour is better than none. You need not fear headache unless it is the hottest part of the summer.

Southern Alberta farmers say they will raise 450 000 hogs this year.

THREE MONTHS TERM IN JAIL

Boarder Pleaded Guilty to Taking $11 From Purse

George Johnston was charged in police court this morning with stealing $11 from Mrs. Thomas Arnott, of North Monaghan. He elected to be tried by His Worship and pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Arnott stated that on Saturday night Johnston, who was a boarder, wanted to get matches and she told him to to to her purse in the side-board drawer and get the money. He did so and on Monday she missed $11.

County Constable Bullied went out to their residence in North Monaghan and arrested Johnston yesterday.

Mr. Arnott stated that he had known Johnston from infancy and when he came to him a short time ago he was out of work, and he got him a job with the Radial Railway Company.

Johnston was asked if he had anything to say and he told the court that he had had trouble with his wife and had been sick for nearly a year.

His Worship, however, didn't think that sufficient reason to steal from a friend and he sentenced him to three months in jail.

PRISONERS HAD KEYS.

Woodstock Jail Run on Quaint Lines Say Witnesses.

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 17. — Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons and asylums, held an investigation, under oath, here yesterday into conditions leading to the escape of two prisoners, William Klue and Albert Bernard, from Oxford County Jail on Sept. 4.

The evidence showed that the men had not been locked in their cells because they were ill. Turnkey Burgess swore that when he wanted to go to church he locked the prisoners in cells and left the jail unguarded.

It came out that two prisoners had been frequently entrusted with the jail keys and that another prisoner had his cell left open so that he could attend to the jailer's horse. Still another was allowed to sleep in the store-room.

Dr. Smith was astonished at the laxity and neglect shown and spoke of the jail as "liberty hall" and "a place where no one need stay who did not want to."

Evidence will be sent to the Government for consideration. In the meantime the suspension of Wilson and Burgess stands.

Record Lumber Cargo.

SARNIA, Sept. 17.—The steamer Charles Beatty, the largest lumber boat on the great lakes, arrived here yesterday morning with a cargo of lumber, comprising 1,200,000 feet, which is the largest ever brought to this port. ### The Rejected Valentine.

Sambo went a-courtin'
 Of Miss 'Phelia Green.
'Phelia was the handsom'st
 Gal he'd ever seen.

Sambo with his banjo
 Stopped to play a tune
'Neath Miss 'Phelia's window
 In the light o' the moon.

Played he there so softly,
 Sang he song of love;
Then all of a sudden
 Cried voice from above:

"What you want dar, niggah?
 Stop dat noise, I say!
Why are you hangin'
 Roun' heah anyway?"

Sambo, sort of frightened,
 Lifted up his eye,
Saw Miss 'Phelia's mommer,
 Thought that he should die!

Vain he tried to answer,
 He couldn't speak at all.
So he leaned in anguish
 For strength against the wall.

"Git you off!" cried mommer
 Of Miss 'Phelia, mind.
"For my daughter doan't want
 No comic valentine!"

And In Love Young People Are Not Overwise

By J. BERRY CRAPO.

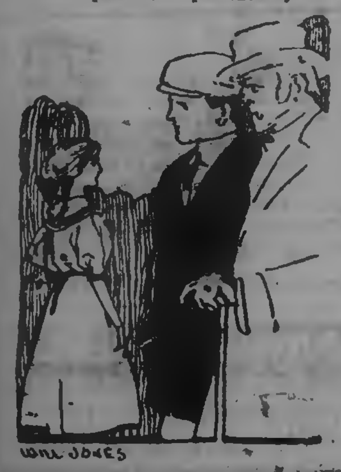
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I was fourteen years old my father one morning called me into his study and said to me:

"Frank, I have a letter from your Uncle Mark, in which he offers to take you to live with him and leave you all his property at his death. You know that, being a poor clergyman, I have nothing to leave you, and by going to your uncle you will eventually be rich."

"Do you advise me to accept the offer?" I asked my father.

"There is a certain important reason for my not wishing you to do so. Your uncle is a monomaniac. He has had a love affair which has turned out badly and has conceived what he fancies to be a hatred of all women. He declares that he will never marry, and his spleen is so great that he wishes so far as possible to prevent any woman from enjoying his property. He therefore makes it a condition with you that you shall bind yourself never to marry."



THAT INNOCENT LOOKING CREATURE.

Being too young to settle such an important matter for myself, my action was decided upon in a family conference or, rather, by my mother, who, being the last court of appeal in all matters pertaining to the household, decided that I should accept the offer. She gave no reasons in support of this decision, but it was supposed that she fancied my uncle might find a new love and his antagonism to women would vanish. In this case I would at least be educated by him.

When I went to live with my uncle he was forty years old. At that age a man, especially if soured by the miscarriage of a love affair, is not likely to fall into another one. Instead of softening toward the opposite sex his antipathy increased. His associations were not with young and pliable women, but with those of his own age. Something of his own crankiness in them drew sparks, as flint striking flint. One by one his unmarried women friends fled away from him, he shut himself up in his house, receiving only his men friends there evenings for a rubber at whist.

Had my uncle desired to bring me up to break my contract he could not have placed me in a position better calculated to bring about such a result. An old housekeeper was the only woman in our home except the negro cook. We do not covet what we have, but what we are deprived of. I went to school with boys and never associated with girls. From the time I was fourteen till I was twenty I did not know what it was to have a girl friend. When I saw them on the street going to school I would turn to follow them admiringly with my eyes. One day when I was about sixteen, walking with my uncle, one of those little creatures whose skirts extend only to their ankles passed me. He observed me turn and look at her.

"You have remarked, I see," he said to me, "that innocent looking creature. She is very pretty to look upon, I admit, but under that grace and beauty is poison—poison of the most virulent kind. She will grow up to womanhood without a spark of that sense of honor which is born in us men and which I and your schoolmasters are endeavoring to stimulate in you."

"Nevertheless, Uncle Frank," I replied, "she's mighty pretty."

A deep sigh was his only response.

This girl I used to meet every day as we were going to school. She must have seen admiration in my eye, for after awhile she would pass me with a very conscious look, casting her eyes in every direction except toward me, hitching her shoulders, brushing back a curl that hung on one of them or in some other way indicating that she was aware that a youngster of opposite sex was interested in her. In one of these meetings she was sufficiently agitated to drop several of her books. I took them up and handed them to her, she avoiding looking at me as if I were an ogre, a glance at whose face would turn her to stone.

Not having any assurance and desiring to give her a flower, one morning upon meeting her I dropped it on the pavement shortly before we passed. I turned, dreading to see her walk over it with her head turned contemptuously upward, and when I saw her stoop and pick it up my heart beat like a trip hammer. I considered that I had been a marvel of bravery. I wondered how I had dared do it.

What avail is it for the old to attempt to instill their ideas, their fears, their hopes—indeed, their varied experiences—into the young? It did not enter my head that this delicate creature would ever be aught but a thing of beauty and a joy forever. My uncle's prophecy had no more effect upon my heart than a drop of rain on my cheek. From the moment I saw her pick up the flower I had not the courage to hand her openly I was a [illegible] man-boy, I grew bold as a lion. A few days later I went to school with a bunch of violets in my hand and on meeting her did not fear—marvel of courage that I was—to toss them to her. She caught them, and the smile she gave me set my heart aflame.

And so Dame Nature went on with her work as quietly as if an old curmudgeon was not attempting to thwart her, as unconcerned as the violets I tossed to the maiden with whom she designed I should fulfill her intentions. Of what importance to me were my uncle's warnings that this sweet creature was a reptile with poison in her breast? And what booted it that I had made a contract with him never to marry? Marry? What had my love to do with marriage? It was love—love absolutely pure—that had taken possession of me. Marriage was something to be considered when I should reach what to me was an advanced age. And the girl! Between her and that something which falls to the lot of older people was still the gulf of some five or six years—an interminable period.

But time was passing more rapidly even than one realized. Before we had had time to come to that comparatively prosaic period when young people begin to talk of the love they feel—an advanced stage on the road to commonplace matrimony—we were separated, I going to college, she to a seminary. However, there were four years before us of love dreaming. I have always thought that we were especially fortunate that the period of feeling was so long in giving way to that of speech. There is in the former a delicious doubt, a fear that there will nothing come of it all, a dread that at any time we may hear that the loved one has entered into another such world far more beautiful than the first and leaving a horrible void for the forsaken one.

When we returned, an educated man and a woman, all was changed. The flower had opened, but there were a lot of thorns bristling about it. I knew that the result of love was marriage, and between me and marriage stood a fortune. Still I was no wise old man. I was merely one beginning life and endowed with the propensities bestowed upon mankind. I felt in honor bound since my uncle had brought me up for a certain purpose under certain conditions to fulfill those conditions. I was now old enough to realize the responsibilities I was under and that a carrying out of the contract with my uncle would involve the loss to me of my love. On one side of me was Sylla, on the other Charybdis.

Though I was twenty-one I was no wiser in love than when I was sixteen, and my uncle, who was past fifty, was a greater fool as regards such matters than I. The truth is the farther we get from that period when nature intends we shall mate the less we know about mating. When we are in it we and it are the truth; when we pass beyond it we know it by cold experience only. The boys and girls to whom in other matters we may be solons, in matters of love can act what we cannot even feel.

This analytical statement is preliminary to a confession. The first thing I knew I was married clandestinely.

The marrying occupied about three minutes, the ragged edge period that followed occupied months. Common sense should have told me to arrange the matter with my uncle first and marry afterward. But common sense is very sparing of visits to young people. It is supposed to be a natural faculty, but I am inclined to think it an artificial faculty. What does a pair of doves know about common sense?

After our clandestine marriage we lived in a perpetual whirl between alternate bliss and mental torture. At least I did. My wife, with the delightful stupidity of woman, said it would come out all right. Her prediction was followed by my uncle's suddenly falling dead of heart disease.

Here was a pretty kettle of fish! I was his heir under pledge of bachelorhood, and I was married. However, I was glad that the blow [illegible]. I was tired of living under false colors.

Then what happened? Why, when the will was read it was found that the bulk of his estate was left to me and under a condition. What condition? Why, that I marry before I could inherit a cent of his money. There was a codicil leaving the income of $50,000 to a Miss Arabella Wagstaff during her life. What did this mean? And who was Miss Wagstaff?

It came out at last that even old people can sometimes be natural in matters of love. Miss Wagstaff was the woman with whom my uncle had had trouble in his youth and who had turned him against her sex. Shortly before his death he discovered that some forty years before he had made an ass of himself and had treated a girl very badly. He made amends so far as he could by leaving her enough to make her comfortable for the rest of her life.

"Didn't I tell you it would come out all right?" remarked my wife, making one of those illogical, irrelative statements for which women are famous.

"You'd better say," I retorted, "that in love matters all men, old and young, are idiots."

SENT BOMB TO EDITOR.

Unknown Persons Tried To Kill Gen. Otis.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—An infernal machine was sent through the mails yesterday to Gen. Harrison Grey Otis, owner of The Los Angeles Times, which was blown up in October, 1910, by the McNamara conspirators.

The bomb, which was contained in a box four by five inches, was received at the Otis residence yesterday morning, Gen. Otis grew suspicious and turned it over to the police.

The box was carefully opened and found to contain two sticks of dynamite, each cut in two pieces. Fulminating caps were imbedded in each piece and an arrangement of sand paper and matches formed a device to explode the bomb when the box lid was lifted.

Blew Head Off With Gun.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 17.—Louis Juby, aged about 65 years, residing in Sidney Township, Monday committed suicide by shooting himself. In the afternoon a relative found a note tacked upon the stable door, which read as follows: "Seeing nothing ahead but work and trouble, you will find my body near the well in the lane." An immediate investigation resulted in the finding of Juby's body at the place indicated by the note. The unfortunate man had, in a moment of mental abberration, taken his life.

The victim's wife was buried a year ago on the date he took his life. Two young sons survive. Juby was in comfortable circumstances and apparently in his usual health and mind [illegible] of the tragedy.

THE VOW THAT MICHAU MADE.

He Kept It, Too, Though He Had to Be Aided.

By CLINTON DANGERFIELD.

"What I said to you then I say now!" cried Michau fiercely, an almost canine curl of his upper lip showing his strong white teeth. "I will never, pardieu, set foot on your land—never!"

"Then," retorted Le Hardy coolly, "you are likely to remain where you are forever, monsieur. For how can you escape from your house without setting foot on my land, seeing that last night's avalanche has set your cottage in the very middle of my field?"

"I will die where I am!" snarled Michau. And he meant it.

Never in the history of the canton had Antoine Michau broken his word. When Le Hardy had besought Michau to give him the latter's golden haired Jeanne Marie the angry father had not only posted the girl off to her aunt in the village below the great mountain on which Michau and Le Hardy dwelt, but he had forbidden Le Hardy to be seen on his property.

All of this because of an ancient feud between the Michaus and the Le Hardys.

Therefore it may be fancied what Michau felt when fate, pleasantly ironic, sent an avalanche which deposited the Michau cottage in the center of Le Hardy's little farm.

It had happened just before daybreak that very morning. Luckily for Le Hardy himself, his own cottage was not damaged, it being on the edge at one side. His astonishment when he discovered the plight of the irate parent soon gave way to glee when he thought how neatly Michau would be forced to forswear himself. But Michau had no such intention. As he could not fly or lay a bridge across and as his provisions would not last two days, he grimly prepared to starve, an arrangement which Lempriere, Le Hardy's special friend, advised the lover to encourage.

"For when the old fox is dead of his own folly," chuckled Lempriere, "'tis thou who shall console the pretty Jeanne Marie."

But Le Hardy, eating his own ample meals, could not enjoy them for thinking of Michau's rapidly diminishing larder. On the noon of the second day he filled a tray with food and carried it himself to Michau's door.

"Voila, mon voisin," said the young fellow good temperedly. "Thou must not starve. I will share with thee while thou remainest in thy chicken coop. Thou art welcome to it."

"Au diable with thee and thy welcome!" yelled the enraged Michau, and there descended on Le Hardy's head a perfect shower of porridge, poached eggs and bits of bread. Lempriere from a safe distance doubled himself up in his efforts to suppress his convulsive joy.

"Now wilt believe me?" asked he as the lover hurriedly retreated.

To his surprise the young man burst into a fit of laughter.

"What a tableau!" he said, holding his sides. "After all, though, one must admit the old rascal has spirit!"

That night Michau slept but ill. Hunger gnawed at his vitals till he rolled in agony, but he clung sullenly to his determination. Over and over he repeated himself that the neighbors should see of what stuff Michau was made. Common sense did whisper in his ear that such a course was to leave the field free to Le Hardy; but, though he ground his teeth and admitted it, [illegible] had no thought of yielding.

Dawn came, and the old man arose and tottered out on his tiny porch. There a surprising sight met his view.

Le Hardy was standing close beside the steps, panting and resting on the handle of a broad shovel. From the steps to the outer edge of the field which marked the confines of Le Hardy's property ran a narrow trail of fresh soft earth richly dark and about an inch thick.

"What devil's folly hast thou done now?" snarled the gaunt old man, leaning on the nearest railing to hide his weakness.

"Vraiment," smiled Le Hardy good humoredly as ever, "I have turned thief, mon voisin, and have been thieving all night! This trail of earth which you behold"— He waved a hand toward it.

"Nom de Dieu—of course I see it. What of it?"

"It came from thy garden, mon voisin. I chose it there that you might see the difference in color distinctly. My land along here is lighter and not so rich."

"From my garden, scelerat!" gasped the old man. "How hast thou dared! 'Twas because you had me trapped here, coward!"

"Rather," said Le Hardy coolly, "'twas because I wished thee to leave thy trap. Tiens, mon voisin, you swore never to set foot on my land. Well, there is thine own land. Mayest walk away on it when thou dost please."

The hunger clouded senses of the prisoner went aflush for joy. Here was a dignified method of exit. He was saved.

Reaching for his cane, he stepped coldly down and walked along the fresh trail, his feeble feet making irregular prints that stirred Le Hardy to fresh pity.

At the edge of the path he paused and turned to the man who followed him.

"Why didst thou do this for me? Thou wouldst have had a clear coast to win the girl had I died, and thou couldst have proved the offer of food to me."

"I hope I am a man," said Le Hardy proudly. "And as a man I wage fair fight, when fight I must. I love thy girl. I shall strive to gain her. But I will never stoop to take a mean advantage of one thrown at my feet by a force of nature which not even a giant could have defeated."

He paused, then added, a little wistfully:

"Hast thou nothing kindly to say to me, vieux voisin?"

The old man, now safely off the Le Hardy land, turned and grinned bitingly.

"I have this to say to thee," he snapped, "that thou art a vile scoundrel for stealing my garden soil to fertilize thy barren fields."

He vanished in the distance, and Le Hardy, red and disgusted, went back to his work.

It was sunset when Le Hardy stopped for the day and went into the house to get his simple supper from his bachelor cupboard. He was setting out the viands, not a little sadly, when a rap on his door startled him.

"'Tis Lempriere," he muttered as he hastened to open it. But it was not Lempriere. It was a slender, girlish figure, with drooping head, that half whispered:

"Mon pere would speak with thee." The sweet tones were seconded by a peremptory command from his late prisoner, who once again stood on the fresh trail and called to him, "Come!"

Le Hardy came, doubting his senses.

"Tiens," said the old fellow brusquely, "I have arrived to give thee notice that there's but one escape for thee from prison. Thou hast stolen my nice garden. Thy infernal shovel hath uprooted my best onions in thy digg! Thou canst not deny the theft [illegible] shalt suffer unless"—

"Unless," repeated the bewildered Le Hardy.

"Unless thou dost instantly wed my girl," snapped the ex-captive. And Jeanne Marie hid her blushes in her lover's joyous arms.

Jeanne Marie's toddling children often wonder why Grandpere Michau always follows a certain path in coming to the second cottage on the Le Hardy farm. The other cottage he never appears in. This certain path is carefully marked off by lilies growing along it, and resolute Grandpene Michau will die happy because he has never yet set foot on the Le Hardy property.

A Simple, Bashful Maid.

"I am glad your name is Mary," said Mr. Slowcoach to his sweetheart, whom he had been courting for several years.

"Why so?"

"Because I was reading today and came across a line which said, 'Mary is the sweetest name that woman ever bore.'"

"That is poetically expressed. I've heard my father say it to my mother, whose name is Mary. It is from some poet, isn't it?"

"I believe so."

"But I have also heard my father say that there was even a sweeter name than Mary."

"I think he must have been mistaken," said the lover as he tenderly pressed his sweetheart's hand.

"No; I do not think he was mistaken."

"What was the other name?"

A beautiful flush suffused the charming maiden's cheek, the silken lashes fell and veiled the lovely eyes, and in a tone as soft as the whisperings of an aeolian harp she murmured:

"Wife."

The cards are out.—London Answers.

A Matter of Gender.

The bell of a Scottish church was giving out a very poor tone, and a committee was appointed to inquire as to what was wrong and to report on the best means of putting it right. After an examination the members were divided in their opinion, and the kirk officer, who was in attendance with the keys, was asked his view. "Fine. A ken what's wrang wi' the bell," he remarked. "It's a she-yin," meaning that it was of the feminine gender. Pressed to explain, he added, "Its tongue's owre lang—it's needin' to be clippit!" And this turned out to be really the fault. The tongue had become loosened to the extent of an inch or so and was overlapping the curve at the rim and therefore not striking truly.

Dogs of Belgium.

Belgian dogs that are harnessed to carts often work themselves to death. They may enjoy their work for a time, when they hurl themselves into the collar to drag the milk cart (and often the lazy milkman as well as his cans), but they do not enjoy the ensuing paralysis. The sight of a dog dying of starvation in the streets because his paralysis jerked him away from food every time he attempted to take it is not conducive to happy memories of Belgium.

FEROCIOUS DOLPHINS.

Marine Monsters That Are Known as Whale Killers.

There really is such a sea monster as the whale killer. It is one of the largest and most ferocious of all the dolphin family. It also is known as the grampus. It is characterized as a genus by its large size and the conical and depressed head, devoid of a beak. The back fin is of great length, especially in the males, and the flippers are large and broadly ovate.

The teeth are comparatively few in number, varying from ten to thirteen on each side of the jaw, and are much larger than in any dolphins yet noticed, being often an inch or more in diameter and having an oval section. The coloration is striking, the upper parts and fins being black, while the lower jaw, chest and under parts are whitish.

The white area of the under parts does not, however, extend to the flukes, but ends posteriorly in a trident, of which the lateral and shorter prongs extend obliquely upward on the flanks. There is a large white streak above and behind the eye, and frequently at least a purple crescentic area extends across the back behind the fin. The killer attains a length of at least twenty feet.—St. Louis Times.

Fashion Frills.

Some of the shirt waists the women are wearing on the streets these days look as though they might furnish some fine ragtime music if run through the player piano.—Newark News.

Men's trousers and coats will be skin tight next fall and derby hats are likely to have crowns two inches high, says a fashion note. What awful things the women are wearing this year, aren't they?—Philadelphia North American.

Almost Recognized.

Dinah was a product of New Orleans, a big, plump "yaller gal" who could cook the finest dinners for miles around. One day a new butler appeared upon the scene, and Dinah's mistress noticed that she took a great interest in the man. At last her mistress could stand her curiosity no longer and asked:

"Dinah, do you know that new man?"

Dinah took another long and scrutinizing look and then slowly and reminiscently replied:

"Well, I dunno, Miss Alice, but I think he was ma fust husband!"—Everybody's Magazine.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

RUSSELL—TAIT.

Knox Church, St. Thomas, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, Sept. 13, the contracting parties being the Rev. G. Stanley Russell, M. A., of St-Annes-on-the-Sea, England, and Miss Ethel Margaret Tait, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Tait, 13 Wellington St., St. Thomas.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Murray C. Tait, of Wallaceburg, brother of the bride, and Dr. J. A. Macdonald, of Toronto, and Rev. N. H. McGillivray, pastor of the church. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a becoming gown of white charmeuse satin and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaids, Miss Jessie Keagey, of Dundas, and Miss Dorothy Allan, of Peterborough, niece of the bridegroom, wore mauve crepe de chine and carried mauve asters. Little Helen Tait, of Wallaceburg, made a charming flower girl. The groom was assisted by Mr. Walter G. Bartlett, of Windsor, while the ushers were Mr. Gordon McPherson, of St. Thomas, and Mr. Douglas T. Tait, of Forest. Mr. John Allan, of Peterborough, presided at the organ. Over one hundred invited guests witnessed the ceremony, at the conclusion of which a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The decorations at both the church and house were asters and palms.

The bride was the recipient of many costly gifts. The gift from the groom to the bride was a brooch, to the bridesmaids cameo rings, to the groomsman a pearl tie pin, to the flower girl a brooch, and to the ushers, tie pins.

Rev. and Mrs Russell will spend their honeymoon at Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The bride's going-away gown was of blue serge. Shortly after returning from their wedding trip Rev. and Mrs Russell will leave for England, Mr. Russell having charge of an important church at St. Annes-on-the-Sea.

Among the many out of town guests present at the wedding were: Canon and Mrs. Hicks, Simcoe; Dr J. A Macdonald and Mrs. Macdonald, Toronto; Dr. Nelson and Mrs Tait, Toronto; Rev. Murray C. Tait and Mrs. Tait, Wallaceburg; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Tait, Forest; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Tait, Vancouver, B. C.— and Mrs Angus Murray, Toronto.

Rev. Mr Russell will preach in St. Paul's Church on Sunday.

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore is in the city.

Mrs. Daniel O'Connell has returned from Ottawa, where she visited her parents and sister.

J. A Aylesworth, Government Inspector of Immigration Bureaus, paid a visit to the local agency last evening.

Mr. and Mrs George Lankin, of Victoria, B. C., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Keenan, 382 Stewart St. Mrs. Lankin is a sister of Mr Keenan, and is busy renewing old acquaintances after an absence of 35 years.

Mr. and Mrs John Allan and Miss Dorothy Allan returned from St. Thomas to-day where they were attending the wedding of Mrs. Allan's brother, the Rev. Mr Russell, to Miss Ethel Tait. Mr Allan and Miss Dorothy had a crowded and enthusiastic audience at the organ and vocal recital given by them in Knox Church under the auspices of the St. Thomas Y.W.C.A. on Monday evening.

EIGHTY VOCALISTS AT FIRST PRACTICE OF CHORAL SOCIETY

Singers Are Congratulated by Director — General Presentations

Peterborough's good choral ship "Judas Maccabaeus" with which the St. George's Choral Society are voyaging this season, was safely launched last night, when about eighty singers assembled for the first practice of the season, under the musical direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. Half an hour was spent in registration, then the director in a short address of welcome on behalf of the Executive Committee, congratulated the singers of last season upon their splendid work in the Messiah, and expressed a hope that faithful attendance at rehearsals would surely repeat that success in the spring. The first concert will be given probably in November to consist of choruses, part songs and glees, so it would be necessary to at once get to work. At 9 p.m. the President, Mr. Charles Coleman, took the chair, supported by Mr. John Crane and Mr. J. W. Worth. In introducing Mr. Crane the president said that as the Society was purely educational it was fitting that the Board of Education should be represented, and no person in the city could more ably do so in this respect than our visitor. Mr. Crane gave an address heartily endorsing the [illegible] to a dubious feeling when the "Messiah" was mentioned a year ago, and had carefully followed the course of events up to, also at the production, and warmly congratulated all concerned in the grand achievement. They had a musical director in Mr. Devey who was optimistic enough to tackle anything. He was very glad that the educational side of the work was emphasized so strongly, and was more than pleased with such a large attendance on the opening night, in spite of the rain, giving evidence of the vitality of the Society.

The following presentations were then made by Mr. Crane: To Mr R. J. Devey, an ebony and silver baton engraved with name and "Messiah" 1913; to Mr. Bert Read, secretary, a gold watch fob; to Mr. Rupert Gliddon, a presentation copy of the "Messiah" full score. Mr Read was mentioned as one of the principal founders of the Society and in responding, thanked the members for the handsome present which he would always value. Mr J. W. Worth presented to the Society a large finely mounted photo group of the Committee of last season, raising a hearty laugh when he gravely referred to it as a "bevy of beauty." The meeting then became of a social type and a memorable opening night concluded about 10 p.m.

PETERBORO'S NEW CONCERNS

Vermont Marble Co.—DeLaval Co.—Hope & Son.

Most of the machinery for the Vermont Marble Co. has been installed in the factory and operations will commence about the first of next month when at least 25 hands will be employed. Shipments of marble are expected to arrive in the near future.

Mr. T. M. Howard is the manager for the Peterborough factory, while Mr. S. H. Holden is superintending the present activities at the factory.

HENRY HOPE COMPANY

The construction of the factory of the Henry Hope and Son, is being pushed forward as fast as possible. For several weeks the contractors waited for the steel and at present the Hamilton Bridge Company is working hard on that part of the construction. It is expected that all the steel work will be up in the course of a couple of weeks.

Mr. R. Sheehy, the contractor for the brick work, has been delayed on account of the steel, but is now pushing along his end of the contract. The wall on the north side is almost completed.

AT THE DE LAVAL CO.

All the construction work on the De Laval factory is expected to be completed in the course of a few days and Mr. W. J. Smith, under whose personal supervision this work has been carried on, expects to leave Peterboro in about a week.

As the factory now stands there are three main buildings with the office directly in front of the middle one. Each outside building is about 112 feet from the centre one and the work now being completed by the Ferguson Construction Company of Patterson, N.J., is the erecting of the two main entrances.

A brick wall, some fifteen feet high, is being erected between the outside and centre buildings. In the centre of the two divisions of this wall, two very artistic gates and hose houses are constructed and as these gates are of heavy ornamental steel they make a very fine appearance. On the inside of this wall, a concrete platform covered with a roof is provided. This makes trucking convenient between the different buildings in all conditions of weather.

Another late addition is a track depression along the south side of north building. This enables the employes to load and unload cars at floor level. A silo store has also been erected, entirely of structural steel, covered with galvanized iron. This makes it absolutely fireproof.

Machinery is being installed in the new buildings recently completed.

MR. LAWRENCE BROUGH And All English Company

Canadian Tour 1913-1914

Sir Francis Burnand's farce-comedy in which Lawrence Brough is now starring on his first all-Canadian tour is described by the London, Eng., press as "charged with comedy and with an element of humor that makes even the unwilling cynic and the perpetual pessimist smile, and even lapse into the broad grin stage." This may well be believed of the work of such a recognised humorist as the former editor of Punch, Sir Francis Burnand, who wrote "The Lady of Ostend." This play, originally produced at Terry's Theatre, London, has proved a capital vehicle for Mr. Brough, and has further established that well known artist as a comedian, adding to his former laurels not only in the British Metropolis but also in the English provinces. Mr. Brough is bringing in his support what he describes as the best company it has ever been his good fortune to gather around him. Miss Olga Esme is his leading lady. The Canadian tour opened at His Majesty's, Montreal, on Labor Day, and the tour, which is under the E. Oswald Brooks Direction, will extend to the Pacific Coast and return. The local engagement is booked for next Saturday, Sept. 20, matinee and night. 33

THEATRICAL

Miss May Robson's portrayal of Mrs Matt Plummer made a big hit at the Grand last night. It was a succession of laughs from beginning to end.

The play opens with the newly rich Plummer family, which includes the parents and their only boy, living in New York. Mr. Plummer is continually trying to drag his wife into society. She appears to be a hopeless case, and he is compelled to give up in disgust. He then turns his attention to his son but is again defeated.

All the company is particularly good, especially Paul Decker as Plummer, jr., and Miss Evelyn Varden as Mary Lawrence.

LOBSTER AND BUTTERFLY.

Widely Apart In Appearance, They Are Close Relatives.

You would hardly think it to look at them, yet the lobster is a relative of the butterfly. The kinship is not merely that of two members of the animal kingdom. The lobster and the butterfly are actually in one and the same great group of the kingdom, like the clam and the snail or the whale and the giraffe, whose spheres of activity are so widely separated.

It is simply, as Darwin pointed out in the case of all other creatures a great many years ago, that the lobster and its friends, the crab, the prawn and the shrimp, chose one method of life, while the butterfly and its set chose another.

So the first group developed characteristics suited to the conditions in which it lived, including as one of the most important, as its members do not move rapidly, a coat of armor to protect them from their innumerable enemies, while the butterflies and the great host of other winged insects shed every bit of superfluous weight, trusting to swiftness to carry them out of danger and to protective coloring to conceal them when flight is unavailing.—London Family Herald.

When Dead Men Ate.

In the medical press is a story of a man who believed that he was dead and who for that reason refused to take nourishment. "How can the dead eat and drink?" he asked when food was pressed upon him. It was obvious that unless something were done to bring him to his senses the delusion must soon become actuality—he would die of starvation. The strangest ruse was tried. Half a dozen attendants, draped in ghostly white, crept silently in single file into the room adjoining his and with the door open sat down where he could see them at a hearty meal. "Here, who are these people?" inquired the patient. "Dead men," answered the doctor. "What!" said the other. "Do dead men eat?" "To be sure they do, as you see for yourself," was the answer. "Well," said the corpse, "if that is so I'll join them, for I'm starving." The spell was broken, and he sat down and ate like forty famished men.

LABOR CRISIS ASSUMES NATIONAL PROPORTIONS

Three Great Trunk Railway Lines Are Crippled by Strike of Dockers in Big Centres and Now London is Menaced by an Omnibus Strike.

Canadian Press Despatch.

BIRMINGHAM, ENG., Sept. 18 — Announcement was made to a mass meeting of strikers to-day, by Organizer Moffatt, that the executive committee of the National Union of Railwaymen had endorsed the strike and he was now in a position to ask every railroad worker in England to quit work.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A great national strike, it was described yesterday by one of the trades union leaders, threatens the United Kingdom. Beginning with the lockouts of large numbers of workmen last week in Dublin, in consequence of the strike of a number of members of the Transport Workers' Union because of the employment of non-union laborers, rumblings of discontent have since been heard throughout the entire labor community of the British Isles, but thus far eruptions have occurred only in the larger cities.

The sympathetic strike of the Liverpool dockers and transport workers on the railroads there and at Birmingham has already partly crippled the three great trunk railroads serving the Midland counties of England, namely, the Midland, the London & Northwestern, and the Great Western, while the Manchester Ship Canal Co. also is contending with a strike of its dock laborers for better wages.

At Liverpool seven of the great freight depots were idle yesterday, and others are likely soon to be closed for want of traffic.

Peace, too, seems to be a long way off between the workmen and employers in Ireland, as all attempts have hitherto failed to settle the Dublin trouble, which was the direct cause of the stoppage of work at Liverpool and Birmingham.

The difficulty of getting provisions into the Irish capital to-day has become so great that it is believed the markets there will have to close their doors.

London, which has been only indirectly affected by the strikes on the railroad system in the Midlands, is more directly interested in the threatened strike of the motor omnibus drivers, which has now drawn nearer, as the firm which forbids its employes to wear union badges yesterday morning refused to permit any man disobeying its order to take out his omnibus.

The men thereupon held a meeting and passed a resolution in favor of striking. If this should be put into effect it will tie up all the motor omnibuses and tube lines in London, and the men have sent an ultimatum to the employers, demanding the reinstatement of their dismissed comrades by Friday.

The Labor members of Parliament declare that the trouble in Dublin, London, and elsewhere has been caused by the determination of the employers to challenge the rights of labor to organize, and they state that the lockouts in Dublin and the refusal to allow the trades unionist workmen in London to wear their union badges were decided upon only after the men had begun to talk of seeking redress for other grievances.

INDEBTEDNESS ABROAD IS CAUSE OF TIGHT MONEY

Commercial Year Reviewed by President of Canadian Manufacturers.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 18.—The address of retiring President Gourlay before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday was the feature of the proceedings.

"The year that has passed since our last convention has been in many respects a memorable one, filled with happenings of great moment both at home and abroad," he said.

"The money stringency is a point I should perhaps elaborate upon, considering how closely it affects us all as business men. The key to the situation in Canada, as it appears to me, lies in the fact that Canada is financing her rapid numerical and material growth and development on borrowed capital.

"The wealth of our resources is unquestioned, but that wealth has not yet been converted into money, or into merchantable commodities that can be used to pay our debts. Meanwhile our immediate requirements in goods from other nations are far in excess of anything we can offer in return. For the twelve months ending May our imports for consumption were $685,000,000, our exports of domestic produce only $358,000,000. On the business of one year alone, therefore, the balance of trade against us was $327,000,000; if we go back for ten years the total adverse balance amounts to $1,051,000,000. This we have had to pay in cash, and not having the money ourselves we have had to borrow it.

"In the natural course of events it could only be a matter of time till our credit abroad would approach its limit, and this past year the inevitable happened, supplies were in part cut off, carrying charges had still to be met and the result was tight money.

"Since the commencement of this stringency a good deal of criticism has been levelled against our banks for their alleged failure to provide the funds necessary for the business of the country. To say that they refused to provide money for speculative ventures or for the financing of new enterprises is to acknowledge that they have chosen rather to reserve their resources so as to be better able to take care of legitimate business.

"From now till Jan. 1 our banks will require to provide in the aggregate a sufficient sum to purchase a grain crop in the west valued at $200,000,000.

"It speaks volumes for the banking system of Canada that so large a sum will be provided for so useful, so necessary a purpose, with so little disruption to other business.

"We do not ask nor do we want higher duties all along the line. I am aware that such desires are attributed to us, and will probably continue to be, despite anything we may profess to the contrary. If it will serve any useful purpose let me here and now place our association on record once more as being satisfied with the present general level of our tariff."

He then referred to the new U. S. tariff. An examination of the Underwood bill as finally amended confirms me in the belief that Canada made no mistake in rejecting the reciprocity agreement of 1911. In saying this I do not question the value of the market concessions we would have secured thereunder, but whereas then we would have secured these concessions only in return for similar concessions on our part now we are to secure many and some of the most substantial of them without an embarrassing consideration of any kind."

Touching on the question of imperial defence, President Gourlay referred to the joint resolution passed by the House in 1909, and said: "Having thus placed ourselves on record four years ago, we are to-day in the humiliating position of a nation that has pledged itself to a course of action and done nothing, or next to nothing.

"If the need for action was recognized as imperative in 1909, it is surely far more so to-day with so impelling a duty before us. We have been chagrined and humiliated by the spectacle of a noble ambition converted into a football of party politics."

The report of the membership committee showed that the roll call for 1900 was 340, while to-day it was 3,007, of which 1,696 are in Ontario and 773 in Quebec.

The use of an inter-Imperial trade mark for the encouragement of trade within the Empire was approved, and the organization of the British Empire trade mark association in London, England, was heartily endorsed.

DUBLIN, IRELAND, Sept. 18 — Boys in schools connected with the Catholic Cathedral here struck to-day because they were required to use books published by a firm which had locked out workmen belonging to the union. The boys attacked the teachers with slates and two of the latter had to be taken to a hospital.

CHINA IS SLOW TO APOLOGIZE

Japan Held Back by Britain From Using Force

TOKIO, Sept. 18.—China's acceptance of Japan's demands in connection with the killing of several Japanese at Nankin is confined thus far to minor points. No answer has been received to the demand for an apology for insults directed against the Japanese flag, and uniform, or to the demand for the dismissal of Gen. Chang Hsun from the governorship of Kingsu Province.

Before presenting the demands, the Japanese Foreign Office sounded Great Britain regarding her attitude in the event of military action being taken, and learned that Great Britain would view it with apprehension, as such action would be likely to encourage the partition of China among the powers. The British Government promised its support to Japan diplomatically at Pekin in the demand for indemnity and an apology, but refused to countenance military or naval action.

Atrocities at Nanking.

PEKIN, Sept. 18.—The American legation is sending to Washington, detailed reports of atrocities committed by Gen. Chang Hsun's army at Nanking. This information has been supplied by American and Canadian missionaries at Nanking, who express the fear that even the relief supplies which Chinese and foreigners at Shanghai are sending, will be appropriated in a large part by the soldiers. The American and other hospitals at Nanking are crowded, and most of the people are destitute.

Many Americans in Pekin, as well as the citizens and subjects of other powers, are urging Gen. Chang Hsun's dismissal, arguing that if China has any serious thoughts of reform, this can be brought about only by severe measures in the case of outrages such as occurred at Nanking.

Suffragettes Blamed For Attempted Arson at Penshurst Place.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A desperate attempt by a suffragette "arson squad" to burn down Penshurst Place, the historic fourteenth century country seat of Lord De L'Isle and Dudley at Tunbridge, Kent, was made Tuesday night.

The inmates of the great mansion, awakened by the crackling of wood and by clouds of smoke, found the framework of a number of windows ablaze. A working party of household employes soon succeeded in extinguishing the flames with the efficient apparatus on the premises.

Two women were seen fleeing across the lawn in front of the building, and a large amount of suffrage literature were found on the grounds, while heaps of rags soaked in petroleum were discovered in several places.

Great indignation prevails among the neighboring residents as it is thought probable that the mansion, hitherto open to visitors, may be closed. It contains invaluable portraits.

THAMES YIELDS PEARLS.

Fishermen at London, Ont., Get $700 Worth From Clams.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 18.—Pearl fishing will be another of London's industries in the near future if success such as Messrs. George Abel and William Pearon have met with in their work of the past few months proves a temptation to those who have "get-rich-quick" desires. They have in their possession a bottle filled with a portion of their catch, and examination of its contents by jewelers resulted in their being pronounced the real thing.

The men claim that they found them in clam shells in the Thames within ten miles of London, and although jewelers say they are not of a high quality, they have no hesitation in pronouncing them pearls. The collection includes pearls of a variety of colors and most of them are perfectly formed.

Mr. Abel estimated the contents of the bottle to be worth $700 and they will be disposed of at Toronto and other points.

THE STEAM YACHT COLUMBIA

With her spars and brass work shining and showing few weather stains and with her machinery working like her well regulated chronometer, Mr J. During the entire journey the Columbia encountered exceptionally good weather.

REST FOR THAW

Policy of Delay May Earn Him a Long Freedom.

CONCORD, N.H., Sept. 18.—Harry Kendall Thaw was brought to the capital of New Hampshire yesterday afternoon to await a hearing before Governor Felker on Thursday next on the matter of his extradition to New York. If extradition is refused he will be a free man, to go where he will within the borders of this state; if it is granted his case will be reviewed by the U. S. District Court on a writ of habeas corpus granted by Judge Edgar Aldrich and perhaps appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Thaw reached here from Littleton, N.H., where Tuesday his lawyers obtained a continuance of the federal writ of habeas corpus in his behalf, shortly after two o'clock yesterday afternoon. A crowd which cheered him with lusty enthusiasm gathered about him at the station and followed him to his hotel.

WILL KEEP SHIPS.

U. S. Officials Disinclined To Pay Attention To Huerta's Threats.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. It was made apparent yesterday that unless there is some change in the present frame of mind among high officials of the Government, American warships will be kept in Mexican waters for the protection of United States citizens and their interests, even if President Huerta carried out the implied threat contained in his message to the Federal Congress on Tuesday not to renew the permission for national ships of this country to remain at Vera Cruz and other Mexican ports.

Curiously enough no official seen yesterday could recall that any permission for U. S. vessels of war to remain in Mexican waters had been asked for or obtained by this Government. President Huerta was explicit in his reference to the matter, detailing that the permission had been granted by the Mexican Senate on April 25 last for a period of six months.

Outside of official circles it is recalled, that the Mexican Senate granted the permission in accordance with a provision of the Mexican constitution, but administration officials asserted that they had no recollection of the transaction and knew of no record for it.

One circumstance that brings an element of humor into the situation, according to officials, is that owing to the shallow water there the battleships now at Vera Cruz and Tampico are compelled to anchor out more than three miles from shore, and are therefore on the high seas where no law of Mexico can possibly apply to them.

MILITANT IS CONFIDENT.

Mrs. Pankhurst Will Sail For America Oct. 11 She Says.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The London news agency circulates an interview secured in Paris with Mrs. Pankhurst, in which she says:

"I shall positively sail for America on Oct. 11. I have already booked passage by the French liner Provence, which sails from Havre on that day. I do not believe the American immigration authorities will detain me and certainly not for long. I am not the least afraid of deportation and will not resort to any subterfuge to gain admission to the country.

"I will sail under my own name and am convinced I will receive fair play. I have much faith in the open mindedness of the people of America. As soon as I finish my lectures in America I shall return to England to resume my work."

Farmer-Count Is Dead.

COBALT, Sept. 18. There has just died at the little village of Gulgues, in Northern Quebec, on Lake Timiskaming, Count Wilhelm von Falkenberg, one of the oldest residents of the district. For the past two or three years the count has personally been attending Haileybury market selling produce from his farm to the housewives of Haileybury, who have thus been dealing as customers of nobility.

The count came to Northern Quebec ten years ago and has devoted all this time to his farm.

An Unknown Victim.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—An unknown man was struck by a street car at the corner of Yonge and Wellesley streets last night at eleven o'clock. He was taken to the General Hospital, but late last night he was still unconscious, although it is not thought that he is seriously injured.

COLLAPSE AT CELEBRATION

POUGHKEEPSIE, Sept. 18. — A collapsible platform, 16 feet above the ground, on which 731 pupils of the Poughkeepsie High School were grouped for a photograph, gave way shortly after noon yesterday. Fifteen pupils were injured; twelve of them were taken to the Vassar and General Hospitals, most of them suffering from fractured arms and legs.

The platform on which they were standing was forty feet long and had been erected an hour previously, alongside the wall of the building.

READY FOR SENATE.

U. S. Currency Bill Has Undergone Few Changes.

WASHINGTON, Sept 18.—The administration currency bill will be passed by the House and sent to the Senate to-day. In order to complete the detailed consideration of the measure and leave nothing but the formal vote for to-day, the House sat last night and concluded the voting on proposed amendments. No material changes were made in the bill.

Republicans and Progressives yesterday concentrated their fight on a grist of amendments offered to the note issue section of the bill, which the Democrats disposed of with a rolling chorus of "noes."

The attack was directed principally against the provision making the federal reserve notes proposed to be issued through the federal reserve banks government obligations.

The committee proposed and the House wrote into the bill an amendment which prohibited federal reserve banks from engaging in loan transactions with anyone other than the Government. This change was made to prevent the federal reserve banks from engaging in a commercial business in competition with the member banks which are forced to supply the capital upon which the reserve banks will operate.

No obstructive tactics were resorted to by the opposition to the bill and the reading of the measure for amendment went along smoothly. A recess was taken before the evening session in order to allow the banking and currency committee to perfect certain minor amendments to be offered to correct the phraseology of the bill.

Death of Mrs. Drouillard.

WINDSOR, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Joseph Drouillard, the last survivor of a prominent old French family of Essex County, died at her home, Ford City, aged 84 years. Death came after two years' suffering from heart disease.

Mrs. Drouillard had lived for sixty-one years in the house where she died. The property was formerly known as the Drouillard farm, and has been in possession of the family for five generations. The surviving family consists of six children and seven grandchildren.

Schooner Is Missing.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The schooner Americana, from Knappton, Ore., about March 1, for Sydney, N.S.W., has been posted at Lloyds as missing.

Michigan Collieries Close.

BAY CITY, Mich., Sept. 18.—All coal mines in the Michigan coal mining district were closed yesterday, and the operators insisted that they would not be reopened until the differences between the union and Handy Brothers' Mining Co. in Bay County are adjusted. About 3,000 men are affected by the suspension of work.

Suspect Priest of Another Crime.

ASCHAFFENBURG, Germany, Sept. 18.—A school inspector named Helm at Moenchsberg, near here, committed suicide yesterday. He is reported to have been a regular correspondent of Father Johannes Schmidt and was considered insane by the villagers.

The authorities here are inclined to believe that Schmidt may have been responsible for the murder of a telephone girl named Haas, whose body was found near his parents' home a few years ago while he was living here.

Durham Visited By Fire.

DURHAM, Sept. 18.—A serious fire occurred here yesterday morning, resulting in a loss estimated from $30,000 to $40,000. Black's hardware store, containing stock valued at $15,000, is a complete loss. McFarlane & Co. lost two buildings, as well as a large stock, estimated at $10,000. The frame town hall caught fire several times, but was saved.

OTTAWA POLICE FREE SIX MURDER SUSPECTS

CLUES PROVED TO BE FAILURES

Shapiro and Dreyfuss Are Released as Are the Vaudeville Performers Who Were Supposed to Know Something of Rubenstein Murder.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—Several startling things happened at the conclusion of the coroner's inquest in the death of Abe Rubenstein, the bookmaker's clerk, last night. First came the announcement from Crown Attorney Ritchie, that Nathan Shapiro and Henry Dreyfuss, the two American race track men, would be released this morning as soon as Magistrate John Askwith gives his approval and signs the necessary papers. Both were charged with murder, but as a result of the straight story they told to the jury and Coroner Dr. Baptie, last night, in which they swore they could not throw any light on the mystery, Mr. Ritchie conferred with the two men and their counsel, A. E. Fripp, K.C., M.P., in Chief of Police Ross' office. When the party came out smiling the newspaper men waiting to see them at once concluded what had happened.

The next thrill was that Cooke and Stevens, the two vaudeville actors, arrested in Hamilton at witnesses, will be given their freedom. Dr. Gordon Henderson, their counsel, appealed Mr. Ritchie on their behalf. They told such a clear, tangible story that the crown was satisfied they knew nothing of the crime.

Then came the announcement that two colored girls, Lottie Brangman and Bessie Simms, both charged with the murder of Rubenstein, would be released in police court this morning. They could have gone free last night, but preferred to stay in the quarters they have at the police station, for one night more at least. In their case also the police are now satisfied that they know nothing more about the case than they have given out.

Two white women, whose names the police will not make public, have now entered the case, they being the two women with whom Shapiro went for a motor drive on the night of the murder.

Robert H. Durno, the young man arrested at Blue Bonnets as a witness in connection with the Rubenstein murder mystery, and upon whom a key of the death shop was found, was released by the police yesterday. Durno proved that he was in Toronto on the night the muredr is supposed to have been committed. His story that the key of the store was never out of his possession is accepted by the police as true.

CONVENTION OF LAYMEN FOR PETERBORO

Meeting Last Evening to Arrange for Convention on November 13 Mr. B. M. Rose Addresses the Laymen of the City

Last evening the Laymen's Missionary Movement held a meeting in Coleman's Parlors to inaugurate a District Convention of the movement in Peterboro on November 13 next.

The ministers of the city and lay representatives from the various churches to the number of between thirty and forty sat down to a sumptuous lunch at 6 o'clcok.

After lunch, Rev F. J. Sawers of St. Luke's church presided over the meeting. He immediately called upon Mr. B. M. Rose of Toronto to address the gathering on the subject of the Laymen's Movement and to explain the object of the proposed convention.

MR. ROSE'S ADDRESS

Mr. Rose began by surveying the progress of the movement, which, he said began at an improvised meeting of students under a hay-stack, during a thunderstorm. These students resolved that it was possible to evangelize the world if they had the will to do it.

He said the Laymen's Movement ushered in a new era and called upon laymen to take not merely a passive but an active interest in church and missionary work. The work of evangelization could only advance as far as the rank and file of the church wanted it.

In explaining the proposed convention, he said that there was a simultaneous campaign throughout Ontario, 38 conferences were to be held, which would cost about $2,000.

CONVENTION AGREED TO

After Mr. Rose's address the proposal as to holding the convention was put to the meeting, and after some discussion it was decided to adopt the suggestion, Mr. Downie moving and Mr. Clarke seconding the motion.

Mr. Turner was appointed as secretary by an enthusiastic vote of the meeting. It was decided that the Minister and two Laymen of each church be appointed to the committee.

The first meeting of this committee is to meet on Monday next at the Y.M.C.A. rooms.

The churches of Peterboro and citizens generally will welcome this convention of laymen, and everyone will be gratified to learn that it is in the hands of so able and faithful a secretary as Mr. Turner.

SCAVENGER IS ON THE CARPET

Charged With Dumping Refuse on the Highway

Magistrate Edmison is in Havelock to-day hearing a charge which has been laid against the town scavenger by Wm. Mathison, that of unlawfully placing refuse upon the public highway.

R. E Wood will conduct the prosecution and F. D Kerr the defence.

The case promises to be an interesting one. The Council's answer to Mr. Mathison's complaints previous to this was that the dumping ground was on the leased property of Mr. Alex Mathison and that no nuisance exists, and the latter contention was concurred in by the Medical Health Officer, Dr. Holdcroft, in a report sent by him to the Provincial Health Department recently. Mr Mathison, however, claims that the dump is not on private property but on the boundary line between the municipalities and that a nuisance does exist. Hence the action.

GUINEA PIG CAUSED SOME EXCITEMENT

Ladies on Lakefield Train Were Rather Startled

A very funny incident happened yesterday on the train to Lakefield. When the "mixed" was tearing it off about 20 miles an hour, a lady passenger in the back coach gushed forth a scream. Everybody stood up to see what was the matter. Two or three more ladies screamed, and then the "heroes" in the coach awoke to the fact that one of those "ferocious wild animals" of a side show was at large.

With the ladies on top of the seats, too frightened to move, one stout gentleman came to the rescue and reached under a seat and pulled out the run-a-way.

A big laugh went up when it proved to be a guinea pig.

HAD IMPRESSION HE TOOK POISON

A resident of Homewood Avenue created quite a disturbance early this morning. He is subject to epileptic fits, and about two o'clock this morning he conceived the idea that he had taken poison.

He ran to St. Peter's Rectory and awakened one of the priests and said he had taken poison. Rev. Father Ferguson knew what the trouble was, and he 'phoned for Dr. Gallivan, who summoned Belleghem's private ambulance, which conveyed the sick man to St. Joseph's Hospital where he was resting very nicely this morning. Apart from the effects of the shock he is all right.

THANKSGIVING DAY

OTTAWA Sept. 18— An order-in-Council has been passed fixing Monday, October 20, as Thanksgiving Day.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 18, 1913.

THE RESULT OF THE INQUEST

So far as the Coroner's Court is concerned the Turnbull disaster has been disposed of, and the verdict arrived at is one that was anticipated by all who followed the evidence closely. A Coroner's chief duty is to ascertain the cause of death and fix criminal responsibility if there is any.

In this case there was no question of wanton neglect, whatever may be said about inefficiency. It is easy to say what ought to have been done, but the advice is too late and therefore useless. A step in the right direction has been taken by the Council in seeking for an efficient building inspector.

Great care should be taken in this appointment. The idea of one man covering electrical, plumbing and building inspection may be possible but it is not often a genius is met with of this kind. Besides, a man may be given so much to do that he does nothing properly.

A PRACTICAL NAVAL POLICY

> "Liberal orators and the Liberal press continually prattle of a contribution. The facts clearly show that our proposals did not embody either the principle of contribution or of permanent policy. The ships were to be owned by Canada and were subject to recall by Canada whenever desired."—Premier Borden at Halifax.

Mr. Borden in this sentence puts his policy into simple English. "The ships were to be owned by Canada."

Liberals have perpetually chided Mr. Borden on his desertion of the "Canadian Navy" policy of 1909 to which he gave consent. To this charge Mr. Borden gave a straight answer when he said that it was "the genius of our race to proceed slowly and cautiously; we have no desire to force the pace—we know that we must creep before we walk."

The present Government were not going to be responsible for another Rainbow and Niobe fiasco. What was to be done must be done in a practical and efficient manner.

The mere fact of having a few ships and calling them a navy does not constitute Canada a nation, not to speak of the security of Canadian interest on the sea. Mr Borden's policy was one of acknowledgment of the present naval protection of Great Britain, and at the same time to create the nucleus of a Canadian fleet, which should be nursed while it was being used by the British Navy, and with the possible addition of other ships later on. In this way he hoped to arouse the interest of the rising generation of Canada in naval service, and when the time was ripe to man this Canadian fleet with Canadians.

To try and accomplish this at one stroke was the supreme folly of the Laurier Administration, they wanted to walk before they could creep and they "fell down."

Mr. Borden has proved himself a patriotic Canadian of the level-headed British type. Dialectical fireworks are all right in party politics, but in dealing with a question which involves the present and future nationhood of Canada, foresight and sane, practical methods are the best and cheapest in the end.

THOSE WICKED CENTRALIZERS

The United States Naval Department has awarded the contract for turbine drums on its newest battleships to a British firm. This is surely endangering American self-government.

The British firm are, of course, doing the work for a third of what it would cost in the States, but what of that when it casts a reflection upon the ability of America to build turbine drums?

This is a retrograde move on the part of our neighbor who boasts of his independence. We would not be in the least surprised if it turned out to be the Jesuitical work of those wicked centralizers. Shall Washington also come under the thrall of Downey Street?

Mr. Hawkes and the Editor of The Courier need no longer confine their "Canadian blood, bone and sinew" campaign to the Dominion, a call has now come from over the line, will they accept the call?

MOODY AND McNEILL AT CHICAGO

A correspondent of The Star writes:

In regard to your statement in Saturday's Star about the service conducted by Dwight L. Moody and John McNeill in Chicago while the World's Fair was in progress, permit me to say that on Sunday afternoon, June 18, 1893, I attended a meeting in Forepaugh's circus tent, which was addressed by Moody and McNeill. I am not speaking from recollection, as I have just looked up my diary of that date. In the afternoon of the day I went to a service in the First Congregational Church on Washington Boulevard, at which Mr Moody presided. Rev. John McNeill led in prayer. Rev. Thos. Spurgeon read the Scripture, and Rev. B. Fay Mills addressed the meeting. I would like to ask whether Mr. Mills is still living, and if so, what he is doing.

Answer: Mr. Mills was an evangelist from 1886 to 1897. He declined to accept the degree of D.D. on the ground that the bestowal of such titles created an aristocracy among the clergy. In 1897 He withdrew from the orthodox church on account of liberal views, and for two years he conducted an independent religious movement in Boston Music Hall and Hollis Street Theatre. From 1899 to 1903 he was minister of the First Unitarian Church at Oakland, California. He was the founder and the first permanent minister of the Los Angeles Fellowship, a new religious organization, 1904-11. In the latter year he became the founder and leader of the Chicago Fellowship. He has written several books and contributes to New Thought publication now and again.

The Burglar Alarm

It Did Its Work Too Well

By EDNA BLAKEMAN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Did you lock the pantry door?" asked Mrs. Bradbury from her position halfway up the stairs.

Bradbury turned with a muttered exclamation and tramped back to the kitchen, where he rattled the pantry door viciously. "I knew I had locked it," he said in an injured tone as they took up the line of march for the second floor.

Once more Mrs. Bradbury paused and hesitated. "I can't remember whether I closed that window in the living room. You know, I opened it for a breath of fresh air and, Joe, do you mind going back and trying it?" she added persuasively.

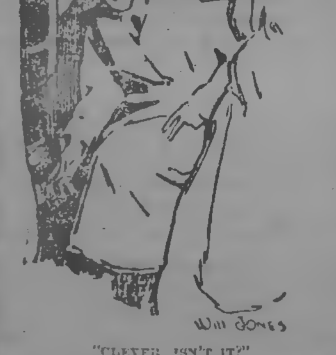
Mr. Bradbury seriously objected. Mrs. Bradbury passed him with uplifted chin and sailed down the stairs. Her husband sat down on the landing and yawned drearily.

When she returned he awaited her coming with a portentous frown creasing his handsome brow.

"Heard you trying the pantry door again—for the third or fourth time since we started upstairs. You tried the living room windows for the fourth time and the parlor for the third time."

"I feel much more relieved in mind after I've tried them several times," said Louise amiably. "Let me pass, there's a good boy, thanks. You know I always let Bridget lock the kitchen, only tonight she's out, and I wanted to make sure everything was all right. Dear," said his wife seriously, "you are so very clever, don't you believe you might invent a burglar alarm, one that would prevent any one from entering the house at night?"

"I'll try, my love," promised Bradbury, rumpling his head in perplexity.



"CLEVER, ISN'T IT?"

"I might as well put in my spare time trying to invent something. Perhaps I can make a go of it."

"Will you put it on the market, Joe?" she asked, running a comb through her golden hair.

"Certainly."

"What are you going to call it? It will have to have a name."

"I shall call it 'Bradbury's Burglar Alarm,'" said the inventor after some thought.

"Call it 'The Bradbury Burglar Alarm.' It's ever so much better sounding," urged Louise, flinging a golden braid over her shoulder.

"Nothing the matter with that either," assented Mr. Bradbury, jotting it down in his notebook.

Many weeks ensued before any mention was made of the burglar alarm. In the meantime Joseph Bradbury each night followed his wife from window to window of their little home trying each catch and lock after she had fastened it and then waiting patiently afterward while she once more made the rounds.

As time went on Mr. Bradbury spent much time of evenings at his own especial desk in the corner sketching plans and making abstruse calculations on scraps of paper.

One Thursday night Mr. Bradbury hurried home from the office at 5 o'clock. He came out on the trolley, and with him he carried a shabby leather suit case which hung heavily from one hand.

"What have you got, dear?" Mrs. Bradbury kissed her husband and looked curiously at the suit case.

"Anybody around?" asked Bradbury cautiously.

"Not a soul. Bridget's afternoon and evening, of course."

Bradbury knelt down before the case and opened it. Within was a tangle of wires and rods and bolts. "I've got it!" he whispered.

"What is it?" She leaned over the suit case, her pretty face puckered with curiosity and impatience.

"The Bradbury Burglar Alarm," announced the inventor proudly.

"Then you did invent it?" she squealed joyfully.

"Sure I did. Now, I've made arrangements with the electric light plant to run a line down from their feed wire. It will connect with this and this and this," displaying the tangle of silk covered wire and other bits of mechanism. "All I've got to do is to switch on the current when I go to bed, and nobody can enter the house without being heard. Will ring all these eighteen bells I've got here and set off a signal down in the constable's office, besides turning on fifty colored electric lights here and giving the intruder a heavy shock of electricity. How's that? Going some, eh?"

"Joseph Bradbury," said Louise, solemnly, "you are a wonderful man!"

"Nonsense, my dear," protested Bradbury, immensely flattered.

"When are you going to set it up?" she asked after awhile.

"After dinner. I've arranged for an electrician to be here, and we'll have the whole thing completed inside of a couple of hours. No need to do the lockstep tonight," he added jokingly. "We'll leave that to the chap that tries to get inside, eh?"

Three hours afterward, as the clock was striking 10, Mr. Bradbury closed the door after the departing electrician and rubbed his hands delightedly. "It's all right now," he cried enthusiastically. "Let us be off to bed, Louise, and wait for our burglar, eh?"

I will not go into details concerning the Bradbury burglar alarm, for its inventor has not yet decided to place it on the market. It is sufficient to say that it was a pronounced success as evidenced by their trials that evening. The electrician had tested the system by every clever device he could think of, but in every case he was neatly trapped by the delighted inventor. The lights flashed warningly in all colors of the rainbow. The wires did not shock the electrician, for he wore rubber gloves, nor did the bell ring in the constable's office, for they cut off that connection, too, but in the matter of colored lights the alarm did work beautifully, while the eighteen bells jangled diabolically.

"I wish all these wires and things didn't have to be so exposed," complained Mrs. Bradbury. "They look horrid hanging around the doors and windows. Seems to me your invention might have been simpler, Joe. It spoils the artistic effect in the rooms."

"Better be safe than artistic," snapped Joe impatiently. "Ready to come up? Shall I turn out the lights?"

Halfway up the stairs Mrs. Bradbury paused and turned with a theatric gesture. "Joe!"

"Well, what is it now?" he grinned. "Rest easy about the pantry door that's fastened all right."

"It isn't that—your best overcoat!"

"What about it?"

"I left it on the clothesline. I put it out to air. It smelled of camphor and I forgot to bring it in."

"I'll get it. Hold the candle while I disconnect this—there, confound it! I've dropped that little plug down the register grating. I can't get out of the house, Louise, until that plug is found—understand? Until—that—plug—is—found." Mr. Bradbury's voice showed the strain of an overworked stock of patience.

"Why can't you go outside, Joe? Do you mean that we're inside—held prisoners by that burglar alarm?" Mrs. Bradbury was frightened.

"You have stated the cold facts in the case," returned her husband. "This little plug is my own device. When it is removed from this hole the current is on all around the house. When I thrust the plug in the current is off—just the reverse of the usual method. Clever, isn't it?"

"Very!" said his wife drily.

That was the beginning of a strenuous night. The furnace pipe that led to the hall register down which Bradbury had dropped his plug was taken down and found empty. Then it was replaced amid much dust and disorder in the cellar and the search continued all over the hall floor without result. At midnight Mrs. Bradbury suggested that they run the risk of losing Mr. Bradbury's best overcoat and go to bed, as that gentleman had just made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the house by a second story window.

It was then that Bridget Lanigan arrived home, weary after a long afternoon of unalloyed pleasure. Her attack on the kitchen door was followed by an ear splitting shriek that brought the neighborhood out of their beds. Then it was that the Bradbury burglar alarm demonstrated its efficiency. The colored lights flashed intermittently all over the house; the eighteen bells rang incessantly; the constable and his aid rattled up on motor cycles, while Miss Lanigan proceeded to rend the air with her cries of pain.

When the tumult was over, when the current had been shut off from the feed wire and Bridget had been released from her unhappy position more frightened than hurt, for the current had not been a very heavy one after all; when the constable had been liberally fed for his trouble and all the neighbors had enjoyed their laugh to the utmost, Mr. Bradbury slammed the front door viciously upon the outside world and confronted his wife.

"Now, what are you going to do, Joe? You look desperate. Bridget says she brought in your overcoat at 2 o'clock, so you need not have tried to get out and"—

"My dear," said Bradbury with a great effort at self control. "Good night!"

Then when he was alone Mr. Bradbury proceeded to undo his earlier work of the evening. He tore down all his wires and other adjustments and restored the house to its "artistic" atmosphere. What he did with the debris from this devastation is not recorded.

When he had finished he went carefully around the house and locked each window and door. Then he made a second trip and tested each one.

"What are you doing, Joe?" called Louise from the stairs.

"The lockstep!" grunted Mr. Bradbury, with a grim smile at his own wit.

SUFFERED AWFUL PAINS

For Sixteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moretown, Vermont.—"I was troubled with pains and irregularities for sixteen years, and was thin, weak and nervous. When I would lie down it would seem as if I was going right down out of sight into some dark hole, and the window curtains had faces that would peek out at me, and when I was out of doors it would seem as if something was going to happen. My blood was poor, my circulation was so bad I would be like a dead person at times. I had female weakness badly, my abdomen was sore and I had awful pains.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and they certainly did wonders for me. My troubles disappeared and I am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. W. F. SAWYER, River View Farm, Moretown, Vermont.

Balcony Collapsed at Celebration.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18.—Just as the last section of the big military parade of the Perry Centennial celebration was passing, an improvised balcony outside the Chinese restaurant on Superior avenue, near Sixth street, collapsed and fell on the crowd on the sidewalk below last night, instantly killing one man and seriously injuring three other men and two little girls.

The crowd at that point was seeking shelter from the rain in the doorway of a saloon beneath the restaurant, directly under the electric sign of the restaurant, which formed one of the supports of the balcony.

Several others in the crowd were cut and bruised by the bricks which fell when the supports of the sign gave way.

"I ATTRIBUTE MY CURE SOLELY

And Entirely To Taking "Fruit-a-tives"

HULL, QUE., DEC. 24th, 1909

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for saving my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous remedy"

Charged With Conducting a Game of Chance at Fair Grounds

SECOND CHARGE LAID

Trespassesrs on C.P.R. Property Contributed $2

Magistrate Dumble did not register a conviction against John Revoy at Police Court this morning. Revoy ducted a game of hoop-la at the exhibition. The charge was conducting a game of chance, G.N. Gordon appeared for Revoy.

Revoy was next charged with obtaining money under false pretences, the amount being $1.65. The charge arose out of the same game.

"This is a second charge under the same offence, and the court should consider it dismissed with the other," submitted Mr. Gordon.

The Police Chief said he could have amended the old infromation.

"I suppose I heard all the evidence I could hear," said the Magistrate, but Mr. Gordon stated that he had not heard all the evidence.

The case was enlarged till Saturday morning.

"I didn't know there was any any harm away out there. I've been going out there all my life," said David Harper.

"Better commence a new life,—added the Magistrate, who imposed a fine of $2 for trespassing on the C. P. R. track.

Geo. Sexsmith was fined $2 on the same charge.

Sam Anglessy was another victim, it was $2.

Robert Clellan came next. "He looked six or seven times to see if I was coming," said Special Officer Weller, when Robert endeavored to excuse himself.

A H Stratton was fined $5 because of the absence of a rear light on his automobile.

OBJECTS TO THE CLOSING OF HUNTER STREET FOR TRAFFIC

During the Progress of Street Paving The Steam Roller Too Light?

At the Board of Works meeting last night Ald. Buller took strong objection to the paving contractors closing all that part of Hunter st. on which operations were in progress. "So far as I am concerned," said he "I am not going to stand for closing up of all the street."

Mayor Bradburn and Ald. Anderson favored the step taken by the contractors. Ald. Buller pointed out that the city paved Chambers street without preventing traffic.

The contractors applied for the use of the steam roller, for the foundation, at $1 per hour. Ald. Buller didn't think the roller was heavy enough "We can't be too careful," he remarked.

It was decided that Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Buller and the City Engineer should have power to act in the matter, whereupon Ald. Anderson said that he thought it was settled long ago, viz. close the street. This was the policy to prevent accidents.

"So did I," added the Mayor.

Ald Buller held that the "No Thoroughfare" notices should be used.

The City Solicitor reported that the Downie street creek matter was in pretty good shape. Ald. Johnston wanted to know when the work could be started and the Engineer promised early attention. This was necessary for the work that was to be done this year.

The Engineer will report on an application from J.H. Connal, Brock street, for a crossing.

He will also look into the question of a sewer for Messrs. Cunningham and Porter, and others on George st. south of Lake street.

Mr. Parsons reported that globes had been broken at the Smith st. bridge and suggested that action be taken. The Police Chief will be notified.

REV. DYSON HAGUE M.A.B.D. AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Harvest Festival Sermon — Science Plato's Cave—Christian Science a Religion of the Body—Exhortation to Rejoice — A Masculine Preacher.

The Harvest Festival Service was held last evening at St. John's Church. The windows, chancel and altar were copiously decorated with gifts of flowers, fruit and agricultural produce, and the interior of the church presented a very festive appearance.

The usual evening prayer service was observed, Rev. James Price reading the lessons, Canon Davidson, Rev. Soward and Rev. F. J. Sawers also took part in the service.

The preacher of the evening was Rev Dyson Hague, M. A., B. D., of the Church of Epiphany, Toronto. This was Mr. Hague's first visit to Peterborough, and owing to his eminence as a preacher in the Anglican Church, his sermon was anticipated with much pleasure.

A MASCULINE PREACHER.

Mr. Hague is a man of strong personality, and as a preacher is masculine and forceful in thought and in delivery. He took for his text the first verses of the 103rd Pslam, "Bless the Lord, O my Soul and forget not all His benefits." The preacher launched immediately into his subject and seized the attention of his hearers at once. He said that although this Psalm was probably written some three thousand years ago, yet it might have been written yesterday for it appealed and applied to the experiences of men to-day as much as [illegible]

Mr. Hague dealt in passing with the problem of the origin of life and referred to the recent scientific pronouncements on that subject. He said that Science reminded him of Plato's dark cave from which men saw small, distant lights, while there was the sunlight of God's Word which would illuminate all these dark problems. "In the beginning God," that was the word which explained all origins.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Referring to the Darwinian theory he said, that while there were many intelligent animals, and some men who were little raised above the level of the brute, yet there was never an animal that could utter the sentiments of this Pslam; "Bless the Lord, O my soul." Man was not a body with a soul, but a soul with a body.

There was too much made of the body these days. Christian Science was nothing more than a religion of the body. These people are forever seeking to make people comfortable, they only take the body into their purview. What the Christian Church is chiefly concerned with is not to make the body well, but to get the soul well. "Get Right with God," that was the primal message of the church.

FORGIVENESS AND HEALING.

Forgiveness was the first gift. "Who forgiveth all thine iniquities?" This is the first prayer in the Prayer Book. "We have erred and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep," and the only way to get right with God is by the way of forgiveness.

The preacher also dealt with healing, and said that while we owe [illegible] and nurses and to the care of our own wives and mothers, yet we must all say with the Psalmist—"Who healeth all my diseases." As an eminent French physician once said, "I bandaged, but God healed."

THE TERROR BY NIGHT.

"Who redeemeth my life from destruction?" We must all admit, said Mr. Hague, that we owe all we have and are physically and morally to God. If we have lived a pure life, or even a respectable life, we are what we are by the Grace of God. For nothing else could save us from the "terror by night and the arrow that flieth by day, nor the pestilence that walketh in darkness, nor the destruction that wasteth at noon-day. We are surrounded with perils and temptations that would drag us down and destroy us, but for the Grace of God."

The tender mercies of God was another point, and the preacher said that God was as tender as a woman.

REJUVENATION.

In dealing with the passage, "Thy youth is renewed like the eagles," Mr. Hague said that while Canada was regarded as a land where the youthful spirit predominated, yet youth was passing, and there were already signs that our young men were getting tired; too tired to take part in church work. We need this rejuvenation which can renew the youth, not only of tired young people, but can make the aged so that they can feel that their youth is renewed like the eagles.

REJOICE!

The preacher concluded by saying that we needed a higher sentiment of gratitude than for natural things; we have been greatly blest with prosperity, so far as material things go, but we need a higher gratitude for spiritual blessings, for those things which have to do with our eternal welfare. We ought to rejoice over these things. Christianity was not a gloomy and miserable religion, it was the religion of the Psalmist; "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits."

At the conclusion of the service the choir proceeded down the centre aisle singing "Now thank we all our God."

Several selections were rendered by the choir. Mr. Devey presided at the organ.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS ASTONISHED

RHEUMA Acts on Kidneys, Liver and Blood the First Day---and Out Goes Uric Acid Poison

Anybody can afford to pay 50 cents to get rid of terrible Rheumatism, Sciatica or Gout, and that's all RHEUMA costs at Warne's Drug Company and they say if it doesn't do all that is claimed for it, money back.

It's wonderful how speedily this simple remedy takes hold and how the sore muscles limber up and the swollen joints come down to normal. Make no mistake—RHEUMA costs but little, but its the best remedy you can find, to drive Rheumatic poison from the system and bring back health to misery racked bodies.

"I had Rheumatism for a long while, and tried many medicines, but was not cured until I used RHEUMA. I cannot praise RHEUMA too highly. My advice to those suffering from Rheumatism is to use this great remedy, as I believe it will effect a permanent cure in any case."—C. B. Lanham, Sattes, W. Va., April 27, 1912.

Elliott Green, who was with Varsity, the Dominion champions, and was captain of the Montreal team last season is now in the city, and he has promised to turn out and help the team along. He would be a valuable man to act as coach.

OMEMEE NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Omemee, Sept. 18—Dr. and Mrs. N. H Sutton, of Peterborough, came over in their auto on Thursday to visit Omemee friends.

Mr. T. C. Stephenson spent a week down the river since the duck shooting season opened.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church was held at the home of Mrs. D. Cain, on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. S Lowes, of Peterborough, was in town on business the first of the week.

The late John Boyd was born in Ireland, coming to Canada when a young man and locating at Mount Pleasant. He was married to Elizabeth Thexton, daughter of the late Robert Thexton, Esq., of Mount Pleasant; his wife predeceased him about 30 years. The deceased followed the occupation of farming for many years on the boundary line between Cavan and Emily, about two miles north-west of Mount Pleasant. His son, Joseph, now occupies the old homestead and from there the funeral took place on Monday 8th Sept. While on the farm, Mr. Boyd was elected many times as a representative of the municipal council of the Township of Cavan. He was a great lover of many forms of sport, especially that of baseball, which he played in his younger days and and watched with eagerness in his declining years. Retiring from the farm he made his home with his youngest daughter, Mrs. McAdoo, at Mount Pleasant, and was around visiting his children when the weakness which eventuated in his death overcame him. His end came quietly and without pain, the general system seeming to have reached the limit of physical power. He was well and favorably known in the Midland counties, and his death removes one of the pioneer settlers of Cavan Township. A large assemblage of relatives and friends were present at the funeral to show their last marks of respect. The Rev. Mr. Butler of Cavanville, was the officiating clergyman. Interment took place at St. John's Cemetery, Cavan The deceased was a Conservative in politics and a member of the Presbyterian Church, of which he served on the Board of Management. He leaves eight children to mourn the departure of a loving father, viz:—Robert, of Omemee; John, of Montana; Joseph, of Emily; Thomas, of Montreal; Mrs. R. J. Hayes, of Emily; Mrs. T. # P. C. BROWN RECOMMEMDED FOR SECOND POLICE SERGEANT

New Winter Uniforms Will be Provided for the Police Officers

The Police Chief was given authority at a meeting of the Police Commissioners yesterday afternoon to provide winter uniforms for the members of the force. The uniforms will be made by Merrill and Meredith.

A Hewbrew from Kingston having good recommendations was granted a license for a second-hand store at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets.

Letters from applicants for positions on the force were read, and the Chief reported on the present personnel. One of the applicants was a Scotchman.

"Can't you get some that don't talk such broad Scotch?" suggested Magistrate Dumble.

The proposition to appoint a second sergeant was brought up, but action was deferred. Chief Thompson recommended P.C. Brown.

A number of accounts were passed.

Manager Clayton, the enterprising manager of the Royal Theatre, has purchased from the Williams Music Co. a grand new Orchestra Instrument of ten pieces at an expense of $2,500.00, and will be installed in the Royal Theatre in about two weeks' time.

These instruments are being installed only in the largest picture and vaudeville houses in the leading cities throughout Canada, one being installed in the leading picture show and vaudeville houses at Montreal, and when the new orchestra is installed combined with the high class vaudeville and moving pictures the management of the Royal Theatre will no doubt be congratulated by the many patrons of this popular amusement house. The admission will still remain 10 cents to all. 35

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT THE LAKEFIELD FAIR

Wet Weather did not Damp the Enthusiasm of the People

Despite the fact that inclement weather reigned supreme, the Lakefield Fair Wednesday proved to be its usual success. The dark, heavy clouds that were very evident during the morning and the deluge of rain which came in the fore part of the afternoon did not lesson the crowd to any great extent. From early morning till three o'clock both gates were busy and not only were residents present but people from the surrounding towns came via auto, vehicle and train. The two trains running from this city were filled and the last train home was crowded.

The Fair itself was in every department away ahead of any preceding year. The exhibits were more numerous and the quality of them were very high. The live stock entries were of the very best class and one feature was that in almost every case the prizes were carried off by people in that vicinity.

One director remarked to the Review that the only division that was not up to the standard was in the poultry. The entries in this department were not as numerous as other years and the quality not as high. This director said that the cause of this was that the farmers are not taking enough interest in this line. Something must be done to impress upon them the good results obtainable by keeping a high class of poultry.

The fruits and vegetables exhibited were a credit to the district and it was remarked that it was little wonder that the farmers around Lakefield were doing exceptionally well when such products could be produced.

The fancy work such as quilts and mats were also worthy of mention.

The Fair was not without its midway and several hoop-la games were in operation. The big snake show was also there as was the gentleman who was "giving away razors for the sake of advertisement."

The horse racing was as good if not better than the majority of the racing held this fall. In every heat the horses were neck and neck, and until they were at the wire in the final heats it was next to impossible to find a winner. Ora Tariff won three successive heats in the 2.35 class and captured first money with Lucky Lou second and Billie Direct third. In the Free-For-All, Furioso won the first two heats, but happened with a mishap in the third, breaking the gig to such an extent that it was impossible to continue the heat. A fourth heat was put on and Furioso won it by a neck.

The result:

C. Elliott, of Peterborough. Rev. Dr. Shorey officiated, in the presence of a few close friends and immediate relatives. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white duchess satin trimmed with rhinestones. The white tulle bridal veil and bouquet of roses and lily-of-the valley, which she carried, completed a very pretty picture. Her maid of honor, Miss Helen Crandell, looked charming in pink silk with mop cap and carrying a bouquet of pink roses. Appropriate music was rendered during the wedding by Miss Elliott, sister of the groom. After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served by three young ladies prettily attired in white muslin and mop caps. They were Misses Zelma Kennedy, Pauline Carroll and Doris Clark. Miss Zelma Kennedy acted as door maid and directed the guests upstairs.

The groom's gift to the maid of honor was a five pearl ring, to the servers pearl pins, and to the pianist a pearl necklace.

The happy couple left for a trip to Buffalo and Atlantic City, the bride's going away suit being of midnight blue with hat to match. They will reside in Calgary.

STRIKE ORGANIZERS WOULD TIE-UP EVERY BUS

Momentary Relief Has Been Given British Nation by Failure of National Railways Union Executive to Endorse or Repudiate Sympathetic Strike —Dublins Situation is Critical.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Despite the intervention of the Lord Mayor, which led to the concession by the Tillings Bus Co. of the right of the men to wear union badges, a general strike of the traction employes is still imminent on the clear-cut issue of recognition of the union.

Explaining the failure of a conference held at the Mansion House yesterday, Organizer Ben Smith, at a mass meeting of the strikers last night, declared: "We are preparing to stop every passenger-carrying vehicle in London before we will lose the fight. Tillings will come first; then the General Omnibus, then the tubes, and, after that, if we are forced to it, the street cars."

The strikers declare that the Tillings concessions with regard to wearing badges are not enough, that the union must be recognized and the grievances with reference to wages and hours adjusted.

Mass meetings of employes of the bus companies have been called for to-night. The Tillings service was badly crippled yesterday, and will probably be suspended to-day.

The recent amalgamation of the London underground railways, tubes and busses and privately-owned street cars forms one of the most powerful traction combines in existence. The unionizing of the employes of these interests has proceeded with equal success. Therefore, the execution of a general strike order means the practical stoppage of all passenger-carrying traffic, except the municipal street cars. Even the latter might join in a sympathetic strike.

The failure of the executive board of the National Railways Union either to endorse or repudiate the sympathetic strike of the freight handlers has relieved the danger of a national strike for the moment, but this action has brought about a worse situation at both Liverpool and Birmingham.

The news circulated at Birmingham that the governing body had endorsed the demand for a national strike was hailed by the strikers there with wild delight. But this was turned to intense anger when a denial was received. The strikers adopted a resolution condemning the executive and reiterating their demand for a national strike.

The freight paralysis at Birmingham is affecting other points in the Midlands. The London & Northwestern Railway is not accepting any freight for Birmingham. Negotiations between the strikers and the railway officials at Liverpool are suspended because the latter declined to discuss the refusal of the men to handle goods from Dublin. The companies will reinstate the men only on condition that they handle all freight without discrimination.

In Dublin additional firms closed yesterday. What little work was done at the docks was under police protection. Profiting by the experience of Wednesday's riots, the authorities diverted the street cars from the routes followed by the processions of strikers. Many are on the verge of starvation and the belief is becoming general that the workmen will soon be starved into submission.

The opposition of the Catholic clergy to the Transport Workers' Union is growing. James Larkin, the leader of the union, denies the reports of the threatened starvation and asserts that food and coal are being sent to the strikers in increasing quantities from England and Scotland.

The situation is becoming graver in Manchester. If the carters fulfill their threat to strike, the traffic of the port will come to a complete standstill.

The only item to the credit of industrial peace yesterday was an agreement on the basis for a settlement of the London building trades strike.

It is reported that the police fired into a group of demonstrators at Finglas, Ireland, wounding over a dozen of them.

School Boys Active.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Sept. 19.—The boys attending the schools connected with the Catholic Cathedral here joined the ranks of the strikers yesterday. When the hour arrived for the beginning of a lesson requiring the uses of books supplied by a firm which had locked out its workmen belonging to the Transport Workers' Union, the boys immediately rebelled. An attempt at coercion was followed by an attack on the masters, boys armed with slates fiercely assaulting their teachers, two of whom were so seriously injured in the fighting that they had to be taken to the hospital for treatment.

Losses Through Strikes.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The Minister of Labor has just published an instructive series of strike statistics. In 1912 there were 1,100 strikes and 250,000 strikers, with a loss of 2,333,333 working days.

There were 1,400 strikes in 1911, with a loss of 4,000,000 days.

The figures show that strikes on a small scale are more successful than the larger movements. The Eclair suggests that Socialists draw the moral here from a general strike would be ruinous to the proletariat.

Theobald Park Destroyed.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Fire yesterday destroyed Theobald's Park, the beautiful mansion at Waltham Cross, about 14 miles north of London, bequeathed, together with a large fortune by the late Lady Meux to Admiral Sir Hedworth Lambton on condition that he take the name of Meux. Fortunately all the valuable furniture had been removed.

No evidence was found of the cause of the fire.

ULSTER LEADER CHOSEN.

General Richardson Is Commander of Volunteers.

BELFAST, Sept. 19.—Capt. James Craig, Unionist member of Parliament for the East division of Down, announced at a public meeting here last night the acceptance by Gen. Sir George Richardson of the post of "General Officer Commanding the Volunteers."

Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Unionists, who is continuing his inspection trip through West Down, expressed his hope in addressing the volunteers that the next time he saw them "every man will have a rifle on his shoulder." He advised them to leave no stone unturned to resist the invader.

Fred. E. Smith, another of the Ulster leaders, urged them to make their ideal such that when the time came for Sir Edward Carson to negotiate with the Government he might do so with the knowledge that behind him were 100,000 disciplined volunteers. The commanding general emphasized the importance of efficacy in drill and knowledge of the rifle as being useful when the rally sounded.

Hotelkeepers End Session.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 19.—The Dominion Hotelkeepers' Association decided yesterday afternoon to meet in Toronto next year, probably during the May Woodbine meet.

Mr. T. Ryan of Toronto urged that it would give strength and prestige to their cause to hold a convention in the Queen City. It was the home of the Dominion Alliance "and all the faddists." It would be a sore thing for their enemies in Ontario.

Mr. George Wright, Toronto, was re-elected president, and E. J. Rochon, Winnipeg, first vice-president

BROTHERS UNITED.

They Find Each Other In New York After Many Years.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—While F. C. Waldman of Sydney, Australia, who has been stopping at a local hotel on a world-girdling tour, was sitting in the main dining-room of the hotel last evening, a page passed crying: "Call for Mr. Waldman." Supposing the call was for him, F. C. Waldman took the message, but found it was addressed to S. C. Waldman.

"That's not for me," said Mr. Waldman, returning the telegram.

Because of the similarity of the name to his he followed the page. The ruddy-faced man in a remote corner of the dining-room proved to be Samuel C. Waldman, a merchant of Berlin, en route to Chicago.

The two Waldmans shook hands, commented on the similarity of their names and then began to compare notes. Presently to the surprise of the small page, the gray-haired men threw their arms about each other. It turned out that they were long-lost brothers. Each had supposed the other dead.

MADMAN TRIED TO KILL FAMILY WITH DYNAMITE

He and One Daughter Met Death—Two Others Will Die—Was Supposed to be Harmless

Canadian Press Despatch

BLOOMINGTON, IND., Sept. 19—Mick Hurst, a stonemason, recently declared insane but supposed be harmless blew up his family with dynamite at two o'clock this morning.

He awoke his wife and three daughters, assembled them in his room, locked the door, and merely remarking "we will all die together" picked up a stick of dynamite and threw it under the bed.

The house was wrecked. Hurst and one daughter were instantly killed and the other two daughters were fatally injured. Mrs. Hurst miraculously escaped.

SCHMIDT, PRIEST SLAYER OF GIRL; MURET, HIS AID AS COINER

DR. ERNEST A. MURET AND HANS SCHMIDT

MRS. MARGARET RUTLEDGE

MISS BERTHA ZECH

To the already remarkable and sensational disclosures that have followed the confession of the Rev. Hans Schmidt that he was the slayer of Anna Aumuller, victim of the Hudson River mystery, and arch schemer in the establishment of an elaborate counterfeiting plant, the priest coolly added in his cell in the Tombs, New York city, the admission that he had posed as Dr. Emil Molleire because he believed the world is overpopulated.

Both Father Schmidt and Dr. Ernest Arthur Muret, the second man to fall into the hands of the police as a result of the startling revelations that have followed Schmidt's confession of the slaying of Anna Aumuller, are charged with counterfeiting.

After Father Schmidt admitted counterfeiting, he said:

"Well, I have been studying the economic conditions of the world. I found that there was too much poverty in the world. One set of people have too much money. The other have none. I decided to make my own wealth and to give one-half of it to the poor of this country, and the other half to people of foreign countries."

In the above illustration are shown the dentist and the priest, who bear such a striking resemblance in various ways that blood relationship is suspected, some observers believing they are brothers.

Mrs. Rutledge identified Dr. Muret as having rented the flat containing the counterfeiting apparatus, and Miss Zech served as maid in Dr. Muret's office.

WILL PENALIZE COUNTRIES LEVYING WHEAT TARIFF

Free Wheat and Flour by Underwood-Simmons Measure Will Only be Granted to Countries Admitting Them Free — Potatoes and Pulp Wood May Also be Protected in the Same Way

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A settlement of the differences between the Senate and the House over the proposed duties on wheat and flour was reached by the Democratic members of the tariff conference committee yesterday. The nature of the agreement was not made public, but it is understood that the House members finally accepted the Senate amendment almost without change.

Under this provision, both wheat and flour would go on the free list and a duty of ten cents per bushel would be assessed against wheat imported from a country levying a duty on American wheat, and a duty of 45 cents per barrel against flour imported under like conditions. The House had put a straight duty of ten cents per bushel on wheat and had free listed flour with a countervailing duty of ten per cent. ad valorem.

Yesterday's agreement established a precedent, which, it is understood, will be followed in other cases in imposing countervailing duties.

It is expected that the conference will approve a countervailing duty of ten cents on potatoes, which both Houses have put on the free list, and that the countervailing duty on wood pulp, put in by the House and later stricken out by the Senate, may also be adopted.

Wide differences of opinion developed in the conferences over the duty on lead and zinc ore, burlap, ferro-maganese ore and several other items. An agreement was reached on the meat inspection provision as applied to free meat from abroad, and the section will be rewritten so that the rigid provisions of the American inspection laws will be applied in some of their more important features to imported meats.

A night session of the conference was held last night for the first time, owing to the slow progress made on the bill yesterday.

The decision of the conferees to drop Senate amendments proposing a tax of $1.10 a gallon on all fruit brandies used to fortify sweet wines, was vigorously attacked in the Senate yesterday by Senator Pomerene. He declared that if the provision were dropped, he would make a fight on the floor of the Senate against an approval of the conference report. The amendment met objections from the House conferees. By an agreement reached several days ago, it was proposed to eliminate the provision and take it up as a separate measure at the next session of Congress.

Port Hope Man Dead.

PRINCESS A SUICIDE.

Sophie of Saxe-Weimar Was Crossed In Love.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Princess Sophie of Saxe-Weiman, daughter of Prince William, committed suicide with a revolver at her father's house in Heidelberg Wednesday afternoon. It is believed the cause of her rash act was a love affair with Hans Von Bleichroder, son of a well-known Berlin banker, who was ennobled by Emperor William.

The engagement to Bleichroder was announced some months ago, then denied, not by Prince William, but by the reigning grand duke. The opposition of Prince William was based on the fact that Hans Von Bleichroder's father refused to abandon his Jewish faith in order to facilitate the son's wedding.

It is stated that the grand duke would have consented to the marriage if the princess had consented to relinquish her title, as did her brother, Hermann, when marrying beneath his rank, but this she declined to do.

When news of the death of the princess was first published, it was given out that she had died from paralysis of the heart, but last evening the truth became known. The princess was a good horsewoman, a keen motorist, splendid yachtsman, and versatile linguist, speaking most of the European languages. Both in features and in character, she was said to bear a striking likeness to Queen Victoria in her childhood.

MANUFACTURERS WILL MEET GRAIN GROWERS' DELEGATES

Letter is Received From Official Organ of Western Farmers Asking Co-operation in Securing a Preferential Tariff—Bankruptcy Act Will be Investigated

HALIFAX, Sept. 19.—The first business taken up at yesterday morning's meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, was the reading and discussion of the report of the Parliamentary committee.

The question was asked if any steps had been taken toward a conference with Ontario retail merchants who objected to the bulk sales act, and it was explained that steps were being taken for consultation in the matter.

A motion providing for the appointment by the president of the C. M. A. of a special committee to investigate and report on the matter of the bankruptcy act, to which many wholesalers were opposed, was carried.

In view of the appointment of this committee, a motion favoring a national bankruptcy act was withdrawn.

It was suggested that the credential-sales legislation in Alberta, tended to encourage crooks, and the question was asked whether the other provinces might not follow in Alberta's footsteps in this respect.

On the explanation that the Alberta legislation was being pressed by western agriculture interests, Mr. White of London, Ont., said he was informed that such was not the case. The farmers found nothing objectionable in the agreements used by the Canadian manufacturers.

F. W. Wegenest, Toronto, said the agreements used across the border were the principal cause of the trouble.

President Gourlay said the association should work hand-in-hand with the agriculturists, in whose interests the Alberta legislation was being made.

A resolution by Mr. Murray of Montreal, favoring the executive council taking action toward a conference with the bar associations of the various provinces in reference to the establishment of a system of commercial courts, was sent to the executive.

The report of the workmen's compensation committee was then read.

In answer to the letter sent by the grain growers' guide, requesting co-operation in the procuring of British preferential tariff, the association decided to send the following telegram to-day:

"The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, through its accredited representatives, is always willing to confer with the western grain growers or any other organization on matters of mutual concern. Three years ago we made advances in this direction to the western grain growers, and sent one of our secretaries to Winnipeg to extend the invitation personally to them. At that time there were, in our opinion, broad issues before the public regarding which a better understanding as between the farmers of the west and manufacturers generally was desirable. The grain growers did not find it convenient to meet us then, and should they desire to do so now, no doubt we will hear from them through the proper channel,

(Signed) "R. S. Gourlay, President."

The election of officers was held at the morning's meeting and there were practically no unexpected nominations. The elections follow: President, C. B. Gordon, Montreal; first vice-president, E. G. Henderson, Windsor; second vice-president, J. H. Sherrard, Montreal; treasurer, Geo. Booth, Toronto; auditor, W. C. Eddis & Sons, Toronto; chairman of committees: Tariff, H. H. Champ, Hamilton; transportation, S. R. Parsons, Toronto; legislation, Thomas Findlay, Toronto; membership, N. A. Howie, Toronto; insurance, H. W. Fleury, Aurora; technical education, H. H. Mason, Toronto; workmen's compensation, P. W. Ellis, Toronto

MONEY BILL PASSES.

U. S. Currency Measure Formally Put Through House.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The administration currency bill yesterday reached the end of the first stage of its legislative career, passage by the House. The measure, completed in detailed consideration, after three days of efforts to amend, reached a final vote in the House yesterday practically unchanged in its essential provisions.

Some House Democrats were inclined to look with disfavor on an amendment incorporated in the measure Wednesday night at the suggestion of the banking committee. The amendment proposed by Representative Fess, Republican, Ohio, included a statement that none of its provisions were calculated to repeal the law of 1900, prescribing the gold money standard or to disturb the parity of money.

Chairman Glass, however, declared that the amendment only made clear the meaning of the bill as originally framed.

AUTO IS HELD UP.

St. Louis Tourists Robbed by Daring Bandits.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 19.—Motoring from Toledo westward, Herman C. G. Luyties of St. Louis and party of five were held up by three men in an automobile six miles east of Bryan, Ohio, at an early hour yesterday. At the point of revolvers the thieves secured $2,000 in cash a gold purse carried by one of the women, several diamonds and other jewelry.

The brigands drove away with the two cars, leaving the Luyties party in the road. They walked to a farm house, were driven to Bryan and aroused Sheriff Weinland. Following the tire tracks the sheriff found the two automobiles at a farm house out of gasoline.

As he approached Weinland was shot in the left arm and another bullet inflicted a flesh wound in his head. He grappled with the man and arrested him. The prisoner gave his name as R. W. Duffy, 26, of Toledo. Two other suspects were taken later from a passenger train at Wauseon, Ohio.

Regulars Face Magistrate.

KINGSTON, Sept. 19.—Frederick Gabriel and Alexander Mains, former members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Toronto, charged with setting fire to the riding stables at the Royal Military College, were before Magistrate Farrel yesterday. Both men pleaded not guilty.

Francis King, conducting the prosecution for the Government, presented a document said to be a confession signed by Gabriel. T. J. Rigney, counsel for the accused, objected to its being given to the court on the ground that Detective Geo. Davey, of the Thiel Agency, who made the arrest, had not sufficiently warned Gabriel. The detective admitted that he did not warn Gabriel before the latter gave him the verbal confession.

The cases were not concluded.

Health Association Meets.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 19.—Two hundred and fifty delegates are expected to arrive in Regina to-day for the third annual congress of the Canadian Public Health Association. Last evening 50 delegates arrived, the most prominent being the president, Dr. J. W. S. McCullough of Toronto, medical adviser of the Ontario Government; Dr. Bryce of the Federal Government service at Ottawa, and Dr. W. E. Struthers of Toronto, inspector of public schools in that city.

SULZER TRIAL OPENS.

Governor of New York Faces Charge of "High Crimes."

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 19.—William Sulzer, the 42nd constitutional governor of New York, was placed on trial before a high court of impeachment yesterday, to answer an indictment returned by the Assembly, charging "high crimes and misdemeanors" affecting his official acts and personal integrity.

He was not present when the 48 Senators and nine of the ten elected and designated justices of the court of appeals were sworn to try him fairly and impartially for the offences alleged against his honor and the welfare of the state, or when his name was called to appear at the bar of his legally constituted peers.

The proceedings, conducted with impressive dignity, progressed only to the preliminary stages ranging to organization of the court, but brought out in unmistakeable clearness the fact that Mr. Sulzer will question the right of the highest tribunal provided by law to try him: that he will resort to such technicalities as his legal advisers can devise to prevent his actual trial.

Until the rules, which a committee of two Senators and one judge of the court of appeals were framing last night, are reported to-day, the actual scope of the efforts of Mr. Sulzer to disqualify his 57 judges cannot be determined.

KAISER INVESTS IN B. C.

His Germanic Majesty Likes Look of West.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—It is reported that the Kaiser has become an extensive investor in land in Vancouver and elsewhere in British Columbia. His Majesty's reported investments are partly personal. Other eminent Germans are said to have followed the Kaiser's example and to have purchased land in British Columbia, chiefly farming and forest land. The transactions have been conducted for them by Count Von Alvensleben, who lived in Vancouver for several years, and has "specialized" in interesting his wealthy fellow-countrymen in what has been called "the region of unlimited possibilities." Several German syndicates conduct an active propaganda for the investment of funds in property in British Columbia.

Turco-Bulgarian Pact Signed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 19.—The protocol of the treaty defining the Turco-Bulgarian frontier, which was signed yesterday, provides that the new frontier line shall begin on the Black Sea at the mouth of the River Pasova, immediately north of the town of San Stefano, 25 miles above Midia.

Stabbed By Companion.

KINGSTON, Sept. 19.—Alex MacGregor, a small boy, was stabbed in the abdomen with a butcher knife in the hands of a companion and only saved from death by the coat and vest he was wearing. A lad named Mitchell did the stabbing, which occurred in a quarrel. The police have not been asked to take action.

Heavy Swindle Claimed.

A SUICIDAL EXPEDIENT

If the strike of railway workers, which threatens the whole of the British Isles, comes into operation the struggle between labor and capital will be a swift and terrible one. Unless it be settled immediately it will not only wreck the trade of the country but it will bring sufferings upon the working classes, compared with which the matter of a few hours' extra labor, or a few shillings short in wages would be as nothing.

It is to be hoped that sane counsels will prevail on both sides, and that this suicidal expedient will not have to be resorted to. Labor and capital should recognize that they both owe it, not only to themselves, but to the commonwealth and to the women and children who will have to bear the brunt of the strife, to consider well the seriousness of these violent disputations.

A WORD TO TEACHERS

In view of the many children who have been decoyed and molested by strangers, one precaution might be taken by school teachers who are in the habit of letting the younger children in their care go out early as a reward for good conduct, or as a means of thinning down the class.

This is a very dangerous practice, for often enough when these little ones find themselves out on the streets with plenty of time to get home, they wander and loiter about and become an easy prey to vicious prowling fiends in human shape.

These children are placed in charge of the school for certain hours of the day, and teachers should see to it that they do not shirk their duty and expose them to the dangers of the streets.

By lightening their own labors in this way they are adding to the anxiety of mothers who sometimes take the opportunity of going into the city while the children are at school.

Our advice to teachers is, keep the little ones in school until the older ones leave, when there is less danger of their going astray or being molested.

THE LAYMAN'S CONVENTION

The Layman's Missionary Movement which has decided to hold a convention in Peterborough in November is an organization which takes in all the Protestant churches and has for its object the stirring up of the laity to an active interest and participation in church and mission work.

This gathering of the men of the churches of Peterborough and the surrounding district will not only be a happy event, but it will be a profitable one; for it will bring all Protestant denominations together in one place and with one mind, and is bound to be fruitful in bringing about a better understanding between the various churches.

Ministers themselves will be glad to see their laity taking hold of things which lie too heavily upon their shoulders. It is a good sign of the times to see the churches becoming more democratic in this way and we wish the convention every success.

HAVING A "GOOD TIME"

The Montreal Telegraph has been having a word with the modern young woman. It says:

> "There is no blinking the fact we are in an age of revolt against domesticity on the part of the women. The majority of our girls refuse to take an interest in household work. They scorn economy and the quiet life. They have expensive tastes. Their beau ideal is a young man with plenty of money, an automobile, and a never-ending capacity for giving them 'a good time.' Let young women who want husbands go in for the study of domestic economy. Let them dress as neatly as they please, but with due regard for propriety and the avoidance of reckless expense. Let them preserve at all times a strict regard for decorum in their conduct. The young men likely to make the best husbands are not inclined to ask frivolous and extravagant and incompetent young women to become their partners for life."

There is no doubt that with the average young man and woman life is looked upon as a sort of pic-nic, and that the highest object of existence is having a "good time."

In England the chief cause of the revolt of women against domesticity is that the sex is becoming too masculine. But in Canada the case is the opposite. Young women in this country are nothing if not feminine, and the young men are becoming effeminate, also

Professor Soddy told the British Association the other day that it was possible to turn lead into gold. This is nothing new. Plumbers have been doing it for generations. What we would like the professor to do, would be to try some experiments with ink. He is at liberty to use the Review laboratory, we will supply the ink.

A Presbyterian journal informs us that no Presbyterian minister of to-day chews or takes snuff.—"That is a peety, for there's grand accommodation."

THE FEDERAL ELECTION IN SOUTH BRUCE

To The Editor of The Review

Dear Sir,—I wish to call your attention to something that the people of this country will undoubtedly take note of. There is, as you know, a political contest on now in South Bruce. The candidates are very prominent men and it is considered to be an excellent opportunity of trying out the chief issue at the next election, namely, the Navy question. The constituency has been both Liberal and Conservative by small majorities, but the point I wish to call your attention to is contained in a report made to The Toronto Star (Liberal) by one of its own staff reporters dated Sept. 18th. The extract from the report which I wish to bring to the attention of all your readers is as follows:—

"Mr H. Weichel, member for Waterloo, Mr. George Clare, of Waterloo, and Mr. J Rittinger, editor of the German 'Glocoke' of Berlin, visited South Bruce for a few days last week, canvassing among the Germans. The Township of Carrick is almost all German while Brant Township is also strongly German. Carrick and Brant have in late elections inclined towards Conservative majorities although the German vote divides on political lines as a rule. It is surmised that the visit of the three influential German citizens from below was for the purpose of setting the Conservative party right with their compatriots on the Navy issue, for the Navy is the issue of this election and it is to the Naval issue that both candidates are addressing themselves."

It is quite plain from the latter part of the above extract that an attempt is being made to sympathize with the Germans as against the British and that if Conservatives are to hold their share of the German vote they will have to bestir themselves. There is no evidence that the Liberal policy requires any such work on the part of its advocates. It appeals to the Germans. In fact the Liberal policy is a pro-German policy. It is an extraordinary spectacle and must impress fair-minded Liberals everywhere, this statement in a Liberal newspaper, that in order to save the German vote from going to the Liberals the advocates of British connection will have all that they can do.

Yours truly,
"READER."

And How It Furnished a Detective a Clew

By RYLAND BELL

Being directed by the chief of the detective bureau with which I was connected to report to Mr. Oliver Ainsworth to investigate a case for him, I did so, and this was Mr. Ainsworth's statement:

"I live in a suburban town. My family consists of my wife, my son, Albert, twenty-two years old, and my daughter, Edith, aged twenty. Other persons come in from time to time, remaining temporarily. There are also the servants, consisting of a cook, housemaid and butler.

"For some time past we have been missing small articles, principally jewels. Only yesterday a brooch set with diamonds and worth $100 disappeared. I suppose in all $1,500 worth of property has been taken. I wish you to come into my house for a long enough stay to discover the thief. Your chief has recommended you as a person who would not be likely to be taken for a detective, you having been well brought up. He has told me also that you are very musical and play on several instruments. My daughter wishes to learn to play on the mandolin, and you can give her lessons. I shall introduce you as the son of an old and very dear friend of mine, giving out that you have met with bad luck and that I have taken you in for awhile until you can get on your feet again."

There was truth in the latter part of this statement. I had recently come from England to seek my fortune in America like others of my countrymen who are ready to do abroad what they would be too proud to do at home. I tried music, for which I have considerable taste, but after starving awhile in that field fell in with a detective, who secured me a position in the bureau with which he was connected. I think my chief recommendation was that, being a gentleman, I could play parts that would be impossible with an unpolished man.

This assignment with Mr. Ainsworth was my first in my new business, and I knew nothing about how to trap a thief. Persons who are ignorant of an important work they are expected to do are prone to look very wise and appear to be thinking very hard. I put on the semblance of the wisdom of Solomon, and when Mr. Ainsworth was about to tell me of any suspicions that were entertained I stopped him, saying that I always worked by method, pursuing my investigations step by step, and wished to avoid any preconceived notions that might lead me astray. This inspired the gentleman with great faith in me. I must trust to luck or my wits to bear out his confidence.

The story of my supposed impoverishment, which, as I have said, was in the main true, brought a very sympathetic reception from Miss Edith Ainsworth, and the fact that I was to teach her music foreshadowed that I would pass a season in clover. Under the influence of her beautiful eyes I felt that I could be a thief hunter for the rest of my days. I commenced the music lessons at once and was supposed to enter upon my investigations at the same time. Alas, I knew not where to begin! That part of my work which consisted in leading the family to think that I was the unfortunate son of a dear friend of its head I performed with great ease since it was natural to me. I was first cousin to an earl, and my father, having been born to the courtesy title of honorable, had never done a stroke of work in his life except garrison work, for he had been colonel of a regiment in the British army.

I spent a fortnight as a member of Mr. Ainsworth's family, and since I had not secured the slightest clew to the thief I felt it necessary to put on all the appearance of pursuing a deep laid plan of which I was capable. Mr. Ainsworth refrained from questioning me, which was lucky. Indeed, so engrossed was I with my lovely pupil that had a dozen clews been under my nose I would not have detected one of them. I wondered that he did not notice how matters were going between me and Edith, but if there is one thing I observed in my career of detective it is the stupidity of parents in failing to notice the incipient love affairs of their children.

After spending nearly three weeks pretending to be following a deep laid plan of investigation I began to be not only conscience stricken, but fearful that the humbug I was practicing would be discovered. To add to my worry I began to realise that the farce could not last forever and I must soon be separated from Edith. My cup of misery was filling up rapidly when luck came to me. I hit upon a clew.

Lying awake at night when all was still, I heard the distant sound of a chime. I wondered that I had never heard it before, but it was so faint that I would only be likely to detect it under the most favorable circumstances. There were two strokes, followed at an interval by three more. Then all was still again. Presently I heard it again. This time it was three strokes. While the chime was striking I lifted my head from the pillow to hear better and was surprised that I could not hear at all.

Since the sound seemed periodical I listened for it again, and in a quarter of an hour it was repeated, three strokes, followed by one. Struck by a thought, I reached out to a table beside me, lighted a match and looked at my watch. It was a quarter past 3. The sound I had heard was not a distant chime, but one very near, and it was in a watch. When the next time for it to strike came around I was lying on my back and did not hear it, but when it struck 3:45 my ear was on my pillow, and I heard every stroke.

"That," I said, "is a watch that may be made to strike the hour. It is in this house and possibly in this room."

In order to make it appear that I was investigating I had requested such change of rooms as was convenient. I had slept in this room two nights before I heard the chime, but each night there had been a strong wind. Besides, I had proved that unless my ear was connected with the watch by solids the chime was inaudible. Believing the watch to be in the room with me, a few minutes before it should strike again I got up and, pressing my ear against the wall, heard it distinctly. During the next hour I made several such experiments with a view to locating the sound, but without success.

Then it occurred to me that a watch must tick and if I could get near enough to it I might hear it. I walked slowly around the room, stopping at intervals to listen, and, drawing near a fireplace, the ticking grew more distinct. Thrusting my head up the chimney, I heard a watch tick near my ear. I was about to reach up to grasp it when a chime rang out fine, clear, melodious strokes.

I put my hand upon a narrow coping and took down what I could feel to be a brooch. Then I grasped other articles and finally a watch.

"Eureka!" I exclaimed, delighted.

Leaving the articles where I found them, I went back to bed, but not to sleep. Day soon came, and, rising, I examined the fireplace and found quite a lot of jewelry. I compared the pieces with a list of the lost articles and found that about two-thirds of them were on the coping.

What should be my next step? I had found the plunder—or most of it—but not the thief. And in this second part of my work I was as much at a loss how to proceed as I had been in the first place. But I felt comparatively easy. I had evidence that I was not another kind of thief in palming myself off as an investigator when I was really simply falling in love. I called Mr. Ainsworth into the library after breakfast and told him that I had made important headway in the case, having located a number of the missing articles. I intended to say no more; but, fearing that if left where they were the thief would remove them, I added that during the morning I would turn them over.

That morning when the postman delivered the mail I received a letter from England that obviated the necessity of my remaining in the detective business. The missive had been following me for some time and was covered with, "Try this and try that place," indorsed by different postal officials. It announced that the cousin mentioned earlier in my narrative, a vigorous man of thirty, had broken his neck following the hounds, and since his wife had not presented him with an heir I was Earl of Barrowfield.

I called up my chief, reported the case so far as I had followed it and offered my resignation from his force on the ground that I had business of my own that demanded attention. Before Mr. Ainsworth went out for the day I told him where he would find the plunder I had discovered and made a clean breast of the fact that I had learned where it was, not by a deep laid and methodical process, but by accident, and declined to receive any pay for my services or to permit any charge to be made by the bureau I represented.

Mr. Ainsworth declined to accept my services either as detective or as his daughter's music teacher. After arguing with him for awhile I showed him the letter I had received that morning changing my condition from a detective to a nobleman.

"While I am not the son of an old friend of yours," I said, "I am or at least have been in forlorn circumstances. I am your debtor, not you mine, since I have received every kindness at the hands of your family."

It was agreed between us that it would be better to inform the members of his family that I was not the son of his old friend, but that in considering me a gentleman they had not been deceived. Mrs. Ainsworth was informed first that the bulk of her lost property had been recovered, that I had come into the house as a detective and was going out a nobleman. From her the news spread to the other members of the family.

Miss Edith did not seem to know whether to be glad or sorry at the turn events had taken. I saw sincerity in her eyes when she expressed her regret that her music lessons must cease and said that she supposed the episode of my being there must end and she would never see me again. I assured her that an acquaintance so pleasantly formed would not be suffered by me to come to an end.

I went to Europe and discovered that the estate to which I had fallen heir needed attention. Nevertheless I found my thoughts constantly wandering back to America. And what drew them most forcibly was the young lady whom I had taught music while playing detective.

I never took sufficient interest to inquire whether the balance of the jewelry was discovered or the thief run down. Later I returned from England and took back Edith Ainsworth for my wife. As a wedding memento her father presented me with the striking watch that led to the recovery of the plunder, and I had engraved upon it an appropriate inscription.

Trying Hard.

An artist who had a lofty studio lately spent two months among the darker dwellings of London, sketching the laborer in the mass, children with dull eyes, houses with broken window panes.

One morning he was in a petty sessions court in the east end and a battered man was before the magistrate charged with drunkenness.

"When you were here thirty days ago," said the magistrate, "didn't you promise to sign the pledge?"

"I'm a-goin' to, y'r 'onor," said the culprit, "as soon as I can learn to write. I'm takin' lessons, but I ain't makin' much progress."

Reclaiming the Desert of Sahara.

"In the popular mind, the reclamation of the desert of Sahara is regarded as one of the most monumental tasks which could be undertaken, but, as a matter of fact, it is quite simple," said a well-known engineer who has just returned from abroad. "It is a much simpler project than the draining and irrigation of Upper Egypt, which has been recently accomplished by the English Government. The Sahara was once a fertile spot, covered with large rivers, and part of the scheme contemplates the utilization of these old river beds, abandoned by nature, for the purpose of again conveying the water which is to rejuvenate this desolate area."

A Thousand Successful Men.

I have on my desk a list of 1,000 successful men of this nation. By "successful" I do not mean mere money makers, but men who have given us new conceptions of steam, electricity, construction work, education, art, etc. These are the men who influence our moral as well as physical lives. They construct for better things.

How these men started in work is interesting. Their first foothold in work is a fine study.

Three hundred started as farmers' sons.

Two hundred started as messenger boys.

Two hundred were newsboys.

One hundred were printers' apprentices.

One hundred were apprenticed in manufactories.

Fifty began at the bottom of railway work.

Fifty—only fifty—had wealthy parents to give them a start.—Juvenile Court Record.

ROUGH MARRIAGE KNOTS.

Pledges Under Which They Were Tied In Medieval Times.

The matrimonial contract today is a thousand times more polite than it was in the middle ages. It has lost the engaging frankness of its medieval originals.

In the good old days when the bride was taken "for fairer, for fouler, for better, for worse," and promised "to be buxom and bonny" to her husband her father gave the bridegroom one of the bride's shoes as a token of the transfer of authority. The bride was made to feel the change by a blow on the head duly administered with the shoe. How much more significant and eloquent a use of the article than our "refined" custom of throwing it after the carriage! The husband took oath to treat his wife well, in failure of which she might leave him. As a point of honor, however, he was allowed to "bestow on his wife and apprentices moderate castigation."

An old Welsh law lays it down that three blows with a broomstick "on any part of the person except the head is a fair allowance," while another provides that the stick "be not longer than the husband's arm nor thicker than his middle finger."

The bride, however, had her privileges. In certain countries it was her accepted right the morning after the wedding day to ask for any sum of money or any estate that she pleased, and her husband could not in honor refuse. A man had to be pretty sure of his bride's "intentions" to run such a risk.

These old time marriages were often hard driven bargains, which unblushingly displayed a good deal of unlovely human selfishness. Yet the rough knots that were tied a thousand years ago held faster than many of the beribboned and bejeweled bonds we so genteely adjust today.—New York World.

Mark Twain and his peculiarities were being discussed by an English class in a certain high school. One youthful orator had very eloquently described Mark's personal appearance and had laid unusual stress on the author's fondness for wearing white flannels.

"Gee!" said one much interested youth. "I don't see how the public knows whether his flannels were red or white."—Everybody's Magazine.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK PORTABLE ASPHALT PLANT

Some Person Meddled With Property of Foley and Gleason

(Lindsay Warder.)

Quite a sensation arose around the Foley & Gleeson plant on Victoria ave. this morning, when it was discovered that an attempt had been made to put the big machine out of commission, and in so doing might have caused the life of all or many of the workmen engaged around the plant.

The information as given out by one of the men engaged with the company was to the effect that the operator of the small steam street roller was taken from that position and placed in charge of the engine on the asphalt mixing plant, a position heretofore held by a young man named Lamb. The new employe had only worked Wednesday, and on closing down at six o'clock on that evening every part of his engine was in perfect order.

On going there this morning at six a.m. to get up steam, matters had changed. The engineer fired up his boiler, but could not make the steam guage register. He at once concluded that some person had tampered with the engine during the night.

On investigation he discovered that the inspirators had been plugged so as to prevent the flow of water into the boiler.

The party interviewed told the Warder reporter that had the engineer gone on firing, and in the event of the inspirators not working, had taken other means to fill the boiler an explosion might occur which would shake the whole block and probably kill every man engaged around the machine.

A Toronto expert was deputized to look after the engine and the men started to work before dinner time.

An investigation will be held and a solution of the problem will be arrived at if possible.

LOURDES "CURES" SAID TO BE BUT TEMPORARY

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Stories of the "cures" at Lourdes, which reached London in rapid succession in the last few days, are now being rapidly reduced to their true proportions. There is every indication that, with the possible exception of Grace Maloney, whatever improvement there has been in cases of long-established disease, will prove to be merely temporary and more mental than physical.

HOUSE OF PROVIDENCE INVALID PASSES AT AGE OF 102 YEARS

Miss Rachel Bell, an inmate of the House of Providence passed away early this morning at the grand old age of 102 years. She was born in Ireland and lived in her native land during many a perilous epoch, of which she liked during late years to tell. She moved to Canada when about middle age, and settled in Port Hope. She resided there for a number of years coming to the House of Providence about four years ago.

For a person of her age she had a wonderful memory and her faculties for seeing and hearing were very keen. She was not ill, but toward the last she grew weaker and weaker until she slept peacefully away. She has always been able to walk about and even the forepart of this week she would go for a walk around the halls.

The late Miss Bell had no relatives in this city, but has friends in Port Hope, where the remains were sent to-day on the G.T.R. 11.10.

The procession itself is expected to be very large. The public reception is to be held on the church lawn the following night.

ALL FROM ONE FIRM.

Infected Milk Laid 147 Persons Up With Typhoid.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—One hundred and forty-seven cases of typhoid fever reported since Sept. 1 in the lower east side were traced yesterday to infected milk. The health department found that all this milk came from one company, and immediately ordered the company to cease selling anything but pasteurized milk.

The recent typhoid epidemic was one of the most virulent the health officials have had to contend with. The health department found that all the families infected got their milk from one dealer, who obtained his supply from one company. The company received its milk from an up-state creamery, which bought the product of a number of farmers. The department is now trying to trace the infected supply to its original source. A single case of typhoid on one of these farms might have caused all the mischief.

An easy way of making water ices is with jam. Mix four heaping teaspoonfuls of jam with one-half pint of cold water; add the juice of a small lemon; strain and freeze. Or fruit syrups may be used instead of jam.

ROBBERY AT EMILY POST OFFICE

Cash, Stamps and Postal Notes Taken by Thief

A SECOND CASE

LINDSAY, Sept. 19.—The police are investigating a reported case of robbery at King's Wharf Post Office in Emily township.

The thief entered the place through the back door, the family being asleep upstairs. This must have occurred between the hours of 12 o'clock midnight and 2 o'clock a.m., Wednesday morning, Sept. 17th, as members of the household had been awake for a time after 2 o'clock a.m. and heard no disturbance in the store beneath.

Mr. Leary has been postmaster for about 15 years at King's Wharf, and this is the second attempt which has been made to rob the office during his regime. On a previous occasion about $200,000 was taken.

The amount taken on this occasion from the office in cash was $50.00, stamps $12.00, and postal notes amounting to $5.00. Mr. Leary notified Chief of Police Chilton on Wednesday afternoon of the burglary. The Chief has since received a wire from the Chief of Provincial Police, asking him to look into the matter. County Constable William Thornbury and an inspector of Post offices from Toronto left for the scene of robbery and it is expected that a light will be thrown upon who the culprit was.

INCREASE IN POSTAGE STAMPS

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.— Last year there were more letters mailed and stamps sold in proportion than ever before in the history of the Dominion. During the month of August according to figures obtained at the Post-Office Department to-day, there were issued stamps to the value of $1,010,627. Eleven years ago the amount was only $110,131.

BLACKSMITH ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Sad Story of a Cheerless and [illegible]

News comes from Actinolite, a village five miles north of Tweed, and better known as Bridgewater, of the the attempted suicide of Oliver Frost, locally known as "Ollie."

He cut his throat with a razor, making an incision in the wind-pipe and severing the right jugular vein. Fortunately he missed the carotid artery.

Drs. Mather and Farrell, of Tweed, were summoned and attended to the wound, which is now said to be healing nicely, and that there is every likelihood of his recovery.

Frost has so far given no cause for his terrible act. But those acquainted with him will feel the kindest sympathy for him. "Ollie" Frost is a village blacksmith, of which there are two in Actinolite, both brothers, but working in separate shops.

The sad feature in this case is in the fact that Mr. Frost is almost stone deaf, and working as he does in a very poor farming district, and having a large family dependent upon him, life to him is a very hard, shut-in and monotonous affair.

He is apparently of a despondant and brooding disposition, but this is no doubt accentuated by his not being able to converse with his customers.

He was for a time subject to spells of excess in intoxicants, but for some time he has been very sober. He is a kind husband and father and is respected by everyone in the village.

REGINA ANSWERS THE SAME PROBLEN AS IS FACED IN PETERBORO

Sewage Disposal Plant to Prevent Pollution of Waters in Operation

A modern sewage disposal works has just been placed in operation at Regina, to do practically the same work as the sewage disposal plant will do when completed here.

The following article is from the Regina Daily Province:

What is conceded to be the first patent sprinkling system for the treatment of sewage effluent to be operated in Western Canada, and probably the most up-to-date disposal works in the world, was quietly started in its never-ending task in the north-west end of the city [illegible] afternoon and from the present time nothing but pure and harmless water will be discharged into the channel of Wascana Creek.

ALL IMPURITIES DISCHARGED.

For several days past the huge sedimentation tank has been slowly filling with the effluent brought down from the city through the now completed Seventh avenue trunk sewer. Yesterday afternoon the task of filling the big barn-like structure was completed, and the effluent commenced to flow over the weir, and through the dosing chamber, where it is automatically siphoned into three filter beds, in which millions of minute bacteria will gradually absorb all impurities, leaving only pure water to be discharged into the creek.

It will be some weeks however, before this desirable consumation will be achieved, and the water discharged into the creek will be rendered absolutely free from impurities, since the bacteria which performs this task will not form for some weeks after the filters are first put into operation. In view of the complaints as to the condition of the creek lodged with the provincial health bureau by residents along the banks of the stream, the news that the plant is now in full operation will no doubt be very welcome to many of these people, as well as a source of gratification to the citizens of Regina generally.

TO BUILD FOURTH FILTER.

While the three filter beds already built and equipped are enough to take care of the quantity of sewage at present finding its way out to the disposal works, the plant will not be actually complete until a [illegible] it has been decided to let the contract for the [illegible] without any further delay.

SPRINKLERS AT WORK.

The principal feature of the new plant is the revolving sprinkler apparatus is use on the filter beds. No other plant in the west has installed this up-to-date equipment, leaving Regina to lead the field in this respect. The effluent is forced up the centre of the bed by syphon through a drum and thence into four long arms, drilled with small holes along one side. The force of the water automatically causes the drum with its long arms to rotate, sprinkling the effluent evenly over the surface of the bed. These revolving sprinklers are manufactured by Adams Hydraulic, Ltd., of London, and York, England, and are said to be the last word in sewage engineering equipment.

STRENUOUS LOVEMAKING.

Mme. Lablanc Fairly Flung Herself at Maurice Maeterlinck.

Of the wooing of Maurice Maeterlinck by Mme. Georgette Leblanc the Gil Blas tells the story as given by the lady herself. Mme. Leblanc, on reading one of the poet's volumes, said to herself, said she, "This man shall be my husband and no other." She communicated this resolution to her friends, who made her believe that Maeterlinck was an old man with one foot in the grave. What was her surprise, when the long hoped for meeting took place, to find that he was "young and strong and beautiful."

The lady ran toward the poet with a cry. But the poet bashfully recolled, and little wonder, perhaps, for listen to Mme. Leblanc's own words: "I was like a little tigress. My heart was terribly excited, my cheeks burned, and my eyes were aflame." But there is no armor against fate, especially when fate takes the bizarre but alluring form of a "little tigress in a tight black dress with a long train and on the forehead, between the eyes, a simple blazing diamond."

So continues the story of the interview: "I took his hand"—thus Mme. Leblanc—"and said to him, 'You are mine; you are my husband.' He was disconcerted by my boldness, which had the force of a storm in a forest. He questioned me on myself and my life. Sensitive as I am, I realized that he doubted me. 'Give me the time,' I said, 'and I will gain your confidence.'" Was ever poet in this manner wooed and won?

PIRATE'S HOARDS.

Treasure Vaults Reputed to Be In Strange Places.

Many quests have already been made for the treasure vaults of pirates that lie secreted in various parts of the world, and at the present time both men and women are hunting for the wealth which is supposed to be concealed southwest of Panama.

If the stories regarding the Cocos Island deposit are true, there is treasure there to the value of many millions of pounds. Captain Don Pedro Benito anchored his vessel, the pirate brig Ralempago, at the island in 1812 or 1822 just after he had captured a ship of Guayaquil which had on board a large quantity of church plate and other valuables. This plunder the pirate buried, marking the spot by chiselling on a rock close by the inscription: P D M No. 1 D.P.S. 500 P." Setting sail again, Benito and his merry crew took a Spanish galleon of Acapulco. Returning with the plunder to Cocos Island, they made an excavation thirty feet square and eighteen feet deep in a solid rock, and, after rigging up a derrick, they hoisted out the brig and poured in bulk into the hole a hundred and seventy-five tons of silver dollars. The treasure was then covered with bricks made by the pirates on the island, earth put over the bricks, and trees planted in the earth. Later two more holes were dug, and in one was buried two hundred and seventy-three gold-hilted swords studded with precious stones and other valuables. In the other hole Benito hid the plunder of a private venture, which consisted of a triangle formed of gold and studded with precious stones, and a crown of gold studded with diamonds and emeralds, the centre stone being as large as a pigeon's egg.

Lafitte was one of the greatest pirates known to the annals of the sea and at one time in his career he had no fewer than a thousand desperadoes ranging over the West Indian seas. He is said to have hidden a quantity of his plunder on the island of Galveston, and, until a storm swept them away, there were three huge live oak trees near the coast that were known as Lafitte's Grove. They were supposed to indicate the positions of the pirate's treasure vault, which, though often looked for, has not been found.

For years past men have searched for the gold which is supposed to be in the graves of the Chiriqui Indians, on the Isthmus of Panama. The Indians discovered on their camp a small gold mine and from the metal they extracted they cast images of birds and beasts, which they used as ornaments. When one of their number died all the gold images he possessed were buried with him. A few men have dug up a little of the treasure, the first find being made by a couple of farmers in 1859. While gathering a crop of corn planted over an ancient Indian graveyard one of them pulled up a root, and in the soil he disturbed he found a small image of gold. He and his companion thereupon commenced to dig at the spot, and their labors [illegible] images weighing no less than a hundred and thirty pounds.

THE UNCANNY STRANGER

By SHIELD ESTHER DUNN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In the good old colony times when travelers, instead of spinning along smoothly in a parlor car, were bumped over dirt roads in a stagecoach on the post road between New York and Boston, in the state of Connecticut, there stood a tavern. Before it swung a sign on which, under a portrait of King George III., were the words "The Royal Arms." In the room which in those days was called "the bar" sat a number of persons, some drinking from pewter mugs.

"The up coach will be late tonight," said the landlord, going to the door and looking out. "The road is bad enough at any time, but on such a night as this it is well nigh impassable."

As he spoke a gust of wind shook the building, and those in the room fortified themselves with a pull at the mugs before them.

"A bad night to be on the road," said a man in a brown coat and buff breeches.

"And a merry one for ghosts," put in a red headed, blear eyed person whose wig, being awry, gave evidence that he had drank too much.

Those about him looked at him protestingly and with something of awe.

"If there's any of 'em about," spake up a fresh importation from the Emerald Isle, "you're the first of us that they'll be visitin'."

A creaking and a splashing were heard without, and the coach drew up to the door of the tavern. A man of somber appearance descended from the vehicle and stalked into the bar. His eyes were set deep in his head and surrounded by dark circles, his cheek bones high, complexion a whitish gray.

"Luggage, sir?" said the landlord inquiringly.

"Luggage! I need no baggage. I wish lodgings for the night only, and on the morrow I shall proceed on my journey."

The stranger attracted the attention of every one present.

"There's something queer about him," whispered the man in the brown coat to the Irishman, who was crossing himself with his finger under his coat. The landlord, who was looking over the keys to his rooms with a view to selecting one for the stranger, turned and said:

"No chamber vacant tonight, sir. Sorry."

"I sleep tonight," replied the guest, "in No. 12."

His back was turned to all save the landlord, so that no one could see his face, but they all saw the landlord turn pale and take down the key to No. 12. The stranger took it, put it in his pocket and, sitting down at a table, called for a glass of hot punch.

In a corner sat a young man with a hook nose, a little newspaper and a mug of grog before him, who did not seem to share the superstitious dread of the others for the mysterious stranger. Instead of shivering this young man looked at him almost insultingly. The somber man returned his gaze with his great melancholy eyes, but failed to strike terror into him.

"What d'ye mean," whispered the Irishman, "by angerin' the man? Mebbe he's a ghost."

"Ghost!" replied the other contemptuously. "I'll pull his nose for a shilling. There are no such things as ghosts."

The somber man turned. "You would pull my nose for a shilling?" he cried, his deep set eyes lighting up with a flare. "I'll give you a chance to pull your grandfather's nose for £20."

"My grandfather has been dead these thirty years and is not likely to come back to earth for the purpose of getting his nose pulled."

"For £20, I say, I'll have him here. If I fail, £20 is yours."

"I have but 5s. 6d. Will that serve?"

"No. Now cease your talk."

"Come, neighbors," said the man with the hook nose, "can't you help me to show up this pretender?"

The cupidity of those present overbalanced their superstition, and they began to feel in their pockets for coins.

Twenty pounds was made up among them, each man to receive as much in addition at the winning of the bet as he put in, and handed to the man with the hook nose. The stranger produced as much.

"Who shall hold the stakes?" asked the hook nosed man.

"Hold them yourself."

"Will not one of the gentlemen do as well?"

"No; you alone will know which wins."

"All right." And the hook nosed man pocketed the money.

"Now," said the stranger, handing him his key, "go to No. 12 and stay there till the bet is won or lost."

The hook nosed man did as he was bid, and the stranger, sitting down in the corner left vacant, apparently sank into a slumber. Presently a terrible shriek was heard on the floor above. It was repeated again and again. When those in the bar had mastered their terror they rushed upstairs to open the door of No. 12. It was locked and bolted. The shrieks had ceased. Then the landlord brought an ax and battered in the door. The room was empty.

Then a mild suspicion began to take hold of those present that they had been swindled. Running downstairs to the bar, they found that vacant also.

"The spalpeens," cried the Irishman, "they've done us illegant."

KIPLING THE HERMIT

Strange Conduct of the Author of "Tales From the Hills"

According to a despatch from London, the friends of Rudyard Kipling on that side of the Atlantic are seriously concerned about the state of his health. "Ever since the death of his child," says the despatch, he has been obsessed with fear that the only child he has left will die, and he cannot bear that this child should ever be out of his sight." The dread has now become a species of monomania with him, and recent visitors to him declare that he has become more peculiar than ever, and that he leads a virtual hermit existence at Bateman's Burwash in Sussex.

It seems that for a long time past the author has done odd things. For instance, one of his friends says that Kipling will rise suddenly in a drawing-room full of friends, and leave the house without a word of explanation or apology. Another friend remembers meeting Kipling not long ago at a dinner of literary men. The author of "Plain Tales" was the lion of the evening, and he greatly offended a number of authors by demanding from his host in a hoarse whisper. "Why on earth should I be introduced to this man? Will he be any good to me?"

THE AUTHOR OF "THE HOLY CITY."

Mr. Michael Maybrick, who under the name of "Stephen Adams," was perhaps the most popular song composer of recent years, died suddenly at Buxton, England, where he had been staying for the benefit of his health. He did not come down to breakfast on Tuesday morning, and on inquiry being made he was found dead in bed, the cause of death being supposed to be heart failure. On Monday night he appeared to be in the best of health, and chatted and joked with his friends.

His songs, including such favorites as "A Warrior Bold," "Nancy Lee," "The Midshipmite," "The Star of Bethlehem," and "The Holy City," have been heard by countless audiences, wherever the English language is spoken. He was the brother of Mr. James Maybrick, a Liverpool merchant, whose death from arsenic in 1889 led to the trial of his widow, Florence Elizabeth Maybrick, on a charge of murder. She was ultimately sentenced to death, but was reprieved, and in 1911 she was released after serving fourteen years' imprisonment.

RUGBY MEETING AT Y.M.C.A. TO-NIGHT

Rugby enthusiasts are reminded of the meeting to-night at the Y.M.C.A. when officers will be elected and other matters will be discussed. It is necessary that arrangements be completed so that practices start immediately.

If the Freshman rule does not go through at Varsity. T. R. and A. A. hope to have Dick Sheehy, the former Ottawa College player, although at that, the freshman rule at Varsity was never meant for players who had played senior Rugby at other colleges. It was adopted more to stop preparatory school players playing in the fall and then dropping out of Varsity at Christmas.

Turtle Worship.

At a place called Kotron, on the French Ivory Coast, the natives believe that to eat or destroy a turtle would mean death to the guilty one or sickness among the family. The fetich men, of whom there are plenty, declare that years ago a man went to sea fishing. In the night his canoe was thrown upon the beach empty. Three days afterward a turtle came ashore at the same place with the man on its back alive and well. Since that time they have never eaten or destroyed one of that species, although they enjoy other species.

If one happens now to be washed ashore there is a great commotion in the town. First the women sit down and start singing and beating sticks; next a small piece of white cloth (color must be white) is placed on the turtle's back. Food is then prepared and placed on the cloth, generally plantains, rice and palm oil. Then, amid a lot more singing, dancing and antics of the fetich people, it is carried back into the sea and goes on its way rejoicing.—London Globe.

To make gas mantles last longer, dip in a glass of vinegar for a moment and dry thoroughly before using.

SAVAGE MEXICO.

Internal Warfare There is of a Very Brutal Type.

With the gradual spreading of revolutionary activity to parts of Mexico hitherto more or less unaffected, tales of atrocities and indignities to foreigners filter into Mexico City in increasing number. Early in July these had become so common that whereas a year ago they would have caused great indignation and possibly prompt representations by foreign Governments, it is doubtful if they receive now more than inclusion in a possible claim for damages, in due time, upon the Mexican Government.

An experience related by passengers on a train proceeding northward from Torreon appears to place a certain contingent of the northern rebels in a class with the followers of Zapata, of the south on the score of barbarous treatment of their victims. The train was stopped near Bermillo by a burned bridge. A band of intoxicated rebels or bandits swooped down upon the passengers, robbed them of everything, including clothing, not sparing even the women victims, of whom there were half a dozen Anglo-Saxons.

A foreigner detected trying to hide a revolver, was taken out and shot. He fell severely wounded. An Englishman, of whom was demanded a diamond ring he wore, and which he had difficulty in removing, was assisted by means of a knife. The finger was chopped away so that the ring could be obtained. The passengers were eventually allowed to go and walked miles into Torreon.

Another experience growing out of an effort to escape a worse fate was that of a group of foreigners, refugees from a mining camp near Topolobampo, Sinaloa. There were three women in the party, which made its way to the coast town. To catch a coasting steamer due at an uncertain date, the refugees had to put out to an island, sun scorched and without a house or tree. Its only inhabitants were shark fishers and the stench of decaying shark fish was next to unbearable. For two days the refugees endured great hardship and discomfort; then a gunboat appeared.

A boat was sent off, but the officer in charge had orders to take only employes of a certain mining company. Nine were accordingly taken aboard and the rest, including the three women, waited two days longer, when, almost in despair, they were picked up by the coasting steamer, described as a filthy affair, already overloaded, which landed them in Mazatlan.

President Huerta, it is said, has great confidence in the ability of his new Cabinet to aid him in his work of pacification, but he expects them to devote their attention to the work of their respective departments and not let their covetous eyes dwell upon his seat. This he made quite clear to them at the first formal gathering of the new administrators. To them Huerta said, after the usual felicitations, that he expected each Minister to be supreme in his own post, so far as possible, and that they would experience little interference from him. But, on the other hand, he warned them to "Cuidarse Con La Pintura," a legend often seen on new edifices in Mexico, meaning "watch out for paint."

To his puzzled Ministers, who asked him to explain, the President said, patting the back of the chair he customarily occupies at his Cabinet meetings: "I mean that this old chair suits me very well, and for the present you should not try to improve it. Pay attention strictly to the duties of your offices, and I shall manage to look after mine."

Maximilian and "La Paloma."

Whenever that haunting air, "La Paloma," is played the memory of the Emperor Maimilian, shot by the Mexicans on June 19, 1867, should be preserved. Maxmillian's final request was that "La Paloma" should be played while he stood up to meet his doom. His died with the tune in his ears, and his wife went mad with the shock of his execution.

CONQUERED AT LAST

By R. PEMBERTON SLADE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Mike Dugan left the courtroom for a two years' term in the Arizona penitentiary for horse stealing—the vigilance committee had missed him or he would have been hanged—he turned to Billy Stokes, who was responsible for his arrest, and said:

"When we meet again, Billy, it will be from behind a couple o' guns. Two years behind the bars won't improve my already soured disposition toward you."

"I'll be ready for you, Mike, but I'm afraid you'll have to seek me in the city where I was born and brought up. I advised you long ago to stop monkeying with other people's property and go to work. If you had taken my advice you wouldn't have been about to do time for horse stealing."

The prisoner was led away, and Billy Stokes prepared to leave for the east.

Billy from childhood had been one of those boys who need a wider range than a city affords. While there was nothing bad about him, he was very unruly. Finally his father, feeling that his son would not make an ornament to civilized society, concluded to send him out among the cowboys and desperadoes. Billy found himself quite in his element and remained in the wild and woolly west five years. Then his mother couldn't stand her darling's absence any longer and begged him to come home. Her pleadings were re-enforced by an offer of his father to take the boy into business with him if he would settle down, and this brought Billy round.

A couple of years passed, during which the young man had got on fairly well as a humdrum business man. He lived at home with his father and mother, the idol of both. Though he was fond of them, they might not have been able to keep him had it not been for a girl. At any rate, the three held him chained.

One night Billy, whose room was over the rear entrance to the house, heard a singular sound. It was like the turning of an auger in wood. It ceased and was followed by the sound of a saw. Both sounds were very faint, but Billy had fine ears, sharpened by his western experience, and he was satisfied that a burglar was at work at a rear door. His 42 caliber revolver that he had used in the west was in his bureau drawer, and, taking it in one hand and an electric lamp in the other, after slipping on a dressing gown, he stepped downstairs and into a vestibule at the rear. There he could hear the sawing distinctly. An arm was put through a hole in the door, the key in the lock was turned, the door swung silently open, and the watcher saw the silhouette of a man entering the room.

A flash of electric light revealed the intruder's face, and at the same moment came the words "Hands up!" Being lighted and covered, the burglar obeyed the order.

"Well, upon my word!" exclaimed Billy.

"Yes, I'm Mike Dugan, and I know that voice of yours. You're Billy Stokes."

"At your service. Now, I remember when we parted a couple of years ago you said that when next we met a pair of guns would be between us. You hit it right, but it's I who have the drop on you instead of you having it on me. I suppose your coming here is intentional."

"Yes. As soon as I got out I came here to find you. I concluded that the best way to cover my tracks with respect to the move would be to burglarize the house you were in."

"I see. You could murder me, and if you could make a successful exit without being known you'd get your revenge and go scot free."

"That's about it, Billy."

"But instead of revenge you'll get ten years this time."

"I don't care much. What can a man do who has once been convicted? Only my wife and kids are having a hard time of it with no one to take care of 'em."

"Yes, there's the rub. That's going to bother me in turning you over. I wouldn't mind sending you up again, but you know very well that I sympathize with your family."

"Couldn't you give me a chance to live honest?"

"What! Help a man who has come here to murder me?"

There was no reply to this.

"Mike, you're a fool. I knew you before you took to the bad, and you were a good man, too passionate and revengeful, but I know how you loved your wife and kids, especially the boy you named for me. Now, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll give you a place in my father's business and enough wages to support your family. I know I'm a—no; I'm not a fool. I'll bet my bottom dollar that within another year you will be living comfortably with your wife and children, the kids growing up to make useful citizens. What do you say?"

"Oh, Billy, what a dunce you are! You'd only get yourself into trouble."

"I'll take the risk. You're a better man than you think you are." Billy tossed his revolver on to a table. "Now fire away. You came here for revenge. Take it."

There was the thud of Mike's revolver as it dropped on the floor.

"Billy," he said in a trembling voice, "you're a royal flush."

Toronto Gets This.

Ships' Eyes.

In the olden days, when the science of navigation was not as well understood as now, it was the custom to carve in the bows of ships a pair of large eyes, with the notion that they would watch the dangers of the deep and avoid catastrophes. Faith in such an idea has long been dead, but the eyes are still to be seen on ships. Through them pass the anchor chains when the ship is safe in port, and thus, though useless in the days of the old fancy, they fill a good purpose now.

WEDDING—PERSONALS

WHYTE—WOOD.

On Wednesday, Sept 17th, the marriage of Miss Gertrude Wood, daughter of the late Archibald Wood, and Dr. Bruce Courtenay Whyte, M.D., of Port Hope, was solemnized by Rev. Canon Allen, in St. Thomas' church, Millbrook. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. W. T. Wood, wore a blue travelling costume and was unattended. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Wood took the happy couple to Cobourg in his auto. From there they go to Toronto, and will visit Quebec. Upon their return they will reside in Port Hope.

TAYLOR—STEVENS

The marriage was celebrated of Miss Margery Aitman Stevens and the Reverend Albert Ernest Taylor, on September 8th, at Greenwich, Conn. The groom is a Peterborough old boy and the bride is a daughter of the late Rev. C. Ellis Stevens, D.C.L., LL.D., sometime Arch-deacon of Brooklyn, N.Y., a member of the French Academy and knighted by three foreign governments.

The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. R. S. Lloyd, assisted by the Rev. H. L. Burleson of New York, in Christ Church. The bride wore an afternoon gown of Canton crepe with a black velvet hat, and carried pink orchids. The church decorations were palms and hydrangeas. A reception at the country home of the bride's grandfather.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, after spending part of their honeymoon in a bungalow at the 1000 islands, are visiting the former's parents in the city. They leave to-day for Toronto Niagara Falls and Buffalo, and will reside in Hollis, Queensborough, New York City, where Mr. Taylor has a parish.

BARNETT—HEATH.

TWEED, Sept. 19.—One of those pretty events that lend a fascination and give a real inspirational charm to the movement of society along the thronging, bustling thoroughfare of Life's uneven way, was witnessed at the snug little parsonage home of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Terrill at Stirling on Monday afternoon, Sept. 15th inst., when Miss Edna Fern, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Heath, of the Queen's Hotel, of this place, became the bride of Mr. Ernest Clair Barnett, one of our promising and prosperous young business men, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Barnett.

The wedding party consisting of the bride-to-be and the groom, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Heath, Misses May, Fay, Ruby and Jean Heath, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Barnett and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Barnett, left town in the afternoon about 3 o'clock by autos for Stirling.

The nuptial knot having been well and truly tied, Mr. and Mrs. Terrill served a dainty luncheon, after which the happy party motored to "Hotel Quinte," Belleville, where the wedding dinner was served.

The young couple were unattended at the marriage altar. The bride wore a handsome travelling suit of Jacquard serge of a deep plum color with hat to match, and carried a lovely bouquet of white roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnett will spend a week in Toronto and another week in Webster, Ontario. The heartiest congratulations and well wishes are theirs from their host of friends, for both are among the most popular of our young citizens.

Peterborough friends of the bride and groom will extend congratulations.

The marriage of Miss Grace Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Shives Fisher, Orange street, to Dr. George Stewart Cameron, Peterboro Ont., will take place in Trinity church on Oct. 15.— St. John Telegram.

Mr. William Scott, Peterborough announces the engagement of his daughter, Florence Stewart, to Mr. Paul Ernest Trebilcock, Peterboro, son of Mr. P. Trebilcock of Bowmanville. Marriage to take place the first week in October.

Mrs. Rev. Coon was "at Home" on Friday afternoon and evening of last week to her lady friends. A very large number availed themselves of the first opportunity to formally visit her. Mrs. Coon was ably assisted by Miss Effie Wright who most graciously introduced the guests Mrs. C. F. Fawcett who poured the tea and Miss Amy Newton, who waited upon the guests.—Tweed News.

Mr. L. Ball, of North Bay, is in the city on business.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Pearce, Mr. R. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Howick, Mrs. Carscallen, Mr. G. Gladney, Mr. F. Melvan and Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Wright, all of Marmora, formed a theatre party and came to the city yesterday to attend the presentation of "Peter Pan" at the Grand Opera House last evening. They had luncheon at the White House.

Mr. C. Seymour returned to the city yesterday after a business trip to Chicago.

HIGHER CRITICS ARE SCORED

At Meeting of Provincial Synod in Toronto

TORONTO, Sept. 19— At the meeting of the Anglican Provincial Synod yesterday Hon. S. H. Blake scored a triumph when the resolution calling upon the Church to set aside the third Sunday before Christmas as "Bible Sunday" was under discussion. The preamble to that motion presented by Rev. Dyson Hague, declared "that in the present crisis of the world's history it is the duty of the Church to uphold more strenuously than ever the authority of the Holy Scriptures." It provided for the consecration of a day as an occasion for a review of the position of the Bible in the world and a more common recognition of its claims as the supreme guide in the individual and the national life." "It is our duty to uphold the authority of the Bible, and as an Anglican I proudly declare that the Church to England has ever been foremost in upholding the atuhority of the Bible," said the mover. He also referred to the fact that the British Association at its meeting in Birmingham, England, was delving into the question of the origin of life without regard to the explanation given in the first chapter of Genesis.

FLOODS AT SPRINGTIME; RIVER BED IS AT FAULT

Government Commissioner Coming to Investigate Claims for Damages From North and South Monaghan

The claims of North and South Monaghan for damages on account of flooding will be investigated very shortly by Mr. Wilkins, Government Commissioner. He is at present engaged in special work in connection with a re-survey of the government property in Stoney and Lovesick Lakes.

This being an urgent matter in connection with the canal, it had to be completed before freezing-up time. This has delayed the investigation of the claims above mentioned.

GREATER FLOW OF WATER

It is said by engineers familiar with the river that the reason that there have been floods in the last two years, worse than usual, is that there has been a greater flow of water at these times than at any other time since 1870.

As a matter of fact the new dam as Hastings lets the water away out of Rice Lake more rapid than the old dam and the levels of holding the water have not been changed. The difference, however, as to flood is said by the engineers to be that the river bed itself is not big enough to carry off the excessive supply of water.

At summer level the difference in height between the river at Peterborough Lock and down to Rice Lake is only nine inches. At flood water it is as much as seven feet, which shows that it is not the lake holding back the river that produces floods.

RIVER BED AT FAULT

This last summer a much bigger gap has been made at the river by dredging but the engineers do not think that when there is a great spring flood, the size of the mouth of the river will have an appreciable effect in carrying off the water, since the difference in levels during the time of flood shows that it is the size of the channel of the river bed itself is at fault in such occasions.

Since these are the conditions laid by their officers before the government it is well for the Councils of North and South Monaghan to look into these facts for themselves and in putting them in possession of these facts, Mr. Burnham hopes that it will enable them to arrive at a fair and therefore satisfactory adjustment of the matter involved, when Mr. Wilkins visits them in a week or so.

PETER PAN AND THE PETES MAUDE ADAMS' SERMON

Poetry and Religion at the Opera House — The Philosophy of Not Growing Up —

Who are you, Pan?
I'm Youth, Eternal Youth!
I'm the Sun rising. I'm Poets singing.
I'm the new world. I'm a little bird
That has broken out of the egg.
I'm joy, joy, joy.

This is Peter's description of himself to the Pirate.

Whether J. M. Barrie is a poet or not might be a question for some discussion. But he certainly was a poet when he conceived and wrote Peter Pan.

POETRY AND RELIGION.

It is not often that the true spirit of poetry is presented upon the stage, and less often is religion pure and undefiled preached from that pulpit

Last night the Gospel was delivered in the Opera House — "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Rev. Dyson Hague preached the other evening on the same subject in St. John's Church, when he spoke of the Psalmist's words, "Thy youth is renewed like the eagles."

GROWING UP AND DOWN.

Peter Pan is the personification of immortal youth. The boy who will not grow up—nor grow down, and this latter is important too.

Peter Pan is the poet in everyone of us. We may starve him or strangle him, we may put him into long pants and stick a cigar in his face, set him to add up ledgers, run railways, dig canals, make and mend roads, or, worst of all, write for newspapers, but he is the same Peter Pan and shows himself at unguarded moments in the most venerable of us.

ARTIST AND PREACHER.

Miss Maude Adams presented Peter with all the vim and joyousness of buoyant youth. She entered into her part with enthusiasm, as an artist or a preacher who is conscious of the importance and beauty of his picture or his message. She must have succeeded in awaking the boy and the girl spirit in every one in her audience who had any of vital spark remaining in them.

Every member of the company filled his or her part well. Marion Abbot made a charming mother, and Mr. Robert Peyton Carter played the contradictory parts of genial pater and terrible pirate to perfection. Dorothy Dunn who played the part of "Wendy" made a very natural mock-mother in the underground scene.

HIS SHADOW BEHIND.

Those Peters who were privileged to see Peter Pan last night will not soon forget his flying visit to Peter's borough. May he leave his shadow behind him so that he will have to return for it.

MR. LAWRENCE BROUGH
Who appears at "The Grand" to-morrow, supported by an all-English Co., in "The Lady of Ostend." Two performances.

THE FLIGHT OF PETER PAN

Due in London This Afternoon

Miss Maude Adams, who played Peter Pan at the Opera House last evening, is due in London this afternoon—not London, England. She took her flight, as is her wont, during the night. She travels in a special car, and while on tour in Canada she sleeps mostly on the railroad.

Small Boys Clean Up One Hundred Dollars From Grocer's Till.

SARNIA, Sept. 19.—Four small boys, ranging in age from eight to twelve years, were up in the police court yesterday to answer a charge of having robbed the grocery store of Charles Snider, south side. The boys have been securing their money all summer and have cleaned up in all about $100. A small crack just large enough to allow a boy's hand to enter the under side of the till was utilized to gain the cash. The lads were given suspended sentence on account of their tender age.

No Evidence Heard

No evidence was taken in the case at Havelock, yesterday, when the town scavenger was charged with depositing refuse on the highway. Counsel for Mr. Matheson, the complainant, was not present, and the hearing was adjourned to next Thursday.

Dancing Classes

Miss Gladman will open dancing classes in the Conservatory Music Hall, beginning on Tuesday next, Sept. 23. Children's class at 4.30; Adults class at 8. For all information, phone 355.

Braid Invalid's Hair.

"When caring for a patient with long, heavy hair I arrange it in two firm braids," writes an experienced nurse.

"Fastening two long, soft ribbons or strips of cloth at the top of the braid, I wind it closely to the end, again securing the strips carefully.

"In this sheath the hair lies smooth and untangled, only needing to be cared for once in several days and giving the sick one the least possible annoyance."

A Good Fattener.

Olive oil is an excellent fattener. Some can take a tablespoonful after each meal easily. It stimulates and makes active the digestive organs, clears the complexion and makes the eyes bright and sparkling.

She—"Was it a simple wedding?"
He— "Yes, two poor simples."

PRESIDENT HUERTA'S NOMINEE FOR PORTFOLIO REJECTED

Effort to Place Tamariz In the Cabinet as Minister of Public Instruction Is Defeated by an Overwhelming Vote—Gen. Felix Diaz Sure He Will Be Elected at the Elections In October.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20.—By a vote of 90 to 14 the Chamber of Deputies refused to ratify President Huerta's nomination of Eduardo Tamariz as Minister of Public Instruction, and the vote is taken as a distinct rebuff to the provisional executive.

Tamariz is one of the younger leaders of the Catholic party, which is avowedly in favor of electing Huerta President. The result was accomplished through the efforts of the Liberal members.

The Government newspaper yesterday placed a grave construction upon the action of the Chamber of Deputies, Tamariz's appointment precipitated a direct issue between the Government and member and deputies belonging to the various groups in opposition.

As a test of the Government's strength in the lower branch of Congress the result was surprising and palpably disappointing to the administration. Predictions are made today that if future events of the chamber provide additional evidence of the inability of the Government to control a majority, it is stated Huerta will dissolve and call new elections.

This would make the Government virtually a military dictatorship for the time being and tend to throw serious doubt upon the probability of a Presidential election being held in October. It was said yesterday, upon the best of authority that Jesus Ureta, one of the Opposition deputies, who Thursday night led the fight against the confirmation of Tamariz, was arrested after he left the chamber and that serious apprehensions are felt for his personal safety.

Diaz Confident of Election.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Gen. Felix Diaz, who has just returned here from Biarritz, told the Canadian Press yesterday that he had seen the despatch from Mexico City in the Paris newspapers announcing that he had been summoned back to Mexico by President Huerta, but that this was all he knew about the matter. Thus far, he said, he had received no order of recall and would remain in Paris until he did so, holding himself in readiness to start at a moment's notice.

"I am a soldier and always am prepared to go anywhere at any time in obedience to my superiors when I am ordered," added Gen. Diaz.

Gen. Diaz said that when he was ordered recently to go to Japan he had just two days in which to get ready. His instructions then were to go to Tokio and return as soon as possible so as to be in Mexico before the Presidential elections took place. He said his present stay in Paris would be a long one.

Asked if President Huerta would support his candidacy for chief executive of Mexico, Gen. Diaz replied that Gen. Huerta would take no interest in the election beyond that of seeing it properly carried out. He seemed confident, however, of the success of his candidacy for which he declared his friends in Mexico were now working hard. He also was optimistic with regard to the situation in general in Mexico, and thought that everything now pointed to the early re-establishment of peace.

EXPORTS TO U.S. CAUSES UNEASINESS AMONG DEALERS

Toronto Wholesale Men Express the Fear That the Heavy Shipments of Beef Cattle Combined With the Coming Removal of the U. S. Duty Will Deplete Province of Meat Supply.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—What promises to prove a serious situation for the Ontario beef consumer and the Ontario farmer is causing considerable talk among wholesale cattle dealers at the yards here.

During the season since last July, upwards of 60,000 cattle have left Canada for the United States. In the Buffalo market alone last week there were 150 loads of Canadian cattle, or a total of about 5,250, and the week previous 100 loads at the same market. When it is remembered that Canadian shipments are made to Chicago and other markets this estimate is not much wide of the mark. The cattle being shipped out consist principally of stockers weighing anywhere from 400 to 800 pounds. These enter the States on payment of duties per head of from $2 to $3.75; over $18 the duty is 27 1-2 per cent. on the value. Stockers on the Toronto market have been selling at from $3.50 to $5 per 100 pounds, and as about 20 per cent. is lost in weight in shipments most of the cattle when delivered at the American markets will figure up in cost below the $18 mark.

Stockers are young cattle bought by farmers to be carried through fall and winter feeding and will not be available for beef until some time next year at the earliest.

"If the shipments still go on, and they are likely to increase when the American duty is entirely taken off, Ontario farms will be practically depleted of cattle, and it requires no arguments to prove what a calamity this will be. Ontario consumers will undoubtedly have to pay high for their beef," said John Black of the firm of Rice and Whaley, yesterday.

The seriousness of the present conditions seems to lie entirely in the suddenness of the expansion. The widening of the market for Ontario cattle cannot help proving a benefit provided that the "bulge" does not cause too serious a setback to the farm stocks.

In addition to the shipments of stockers, the cattle men say large numbers of Canadian beef cattle have already been bought up throughout the country for export to the States just as soon as the new tariff comes into effect.

Some idea of the way in which cattle are being rushed off the Ontario farms can be seen by the receipts of the Toronto Stock Yards compared with a year ago. This week's receipts were 12,965, while the same week a year ago there were only 5,574 in the markets. The total number of cattle including milch cows, in Ontario, according to the last statement in the hands of the Provincial Agricultural Department, was 2,628,845, so that over 2 per cent. of this number have crossed into the United States in the last three months.

The damage is about $25,000. The majority of the buildings burned carried some insurance.

Sham Battle Among Peaks.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 20.—An interesting program of mimic warfare above the clouds was brought to an end yesterday by 600 mountaineers forming part of the Alpine section of the Swiss army who have been manoeuvring for some days among the highest peaks of the Alps.

The final movement in the plan of campaign was an attack on an imaginary enemy in occupation of the Eggishorn, a mountain 9,625 feet high.

Ex-Dragoons To Stand Trial.

KINGSTON, Sept. 20.—Frederick Gabriel and Alexander C. Mains, former members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, will stand trial before a jury on the charge of arson. The preliminary hearing in the case was concluded yesterday in the police court before Magistrate Farrel.

The evidence showed that the dictagraph, one of the very latest inventions for detective work, had been used in Kingston for the first time. Detective George Davy of the Thiel Agency, who made the arrests, stating under oath that he had used the instrument at the British American Hotel in order to secure the conversation between the men accused.

No More Secret Sessions.

KINGSTON, Sept. 20.—That the press would be admitted and that sessions would be commenced week after next was the statement made by G. M. Macdonnell, K.C., chairman of the Prison Reform Commission, last night, after a private meeting of the commission had been held. Asked concerning what was actually done at the meeting, the chairman remarked that the members discussed matters to be taken up and the procedure to be followed. Apart from this he had nothing to say. Before holding the session, the members made an inspection of the penitentiary.

Railway Bridge Collapses.

KINGSTON, Sept. 20.—The bridge over Sucker Lake, near Parham, collapsed yesterday morning just as a ballast train on the C.P.R. was about to cross over it, and the workmen on the train had a miraculous escape. The bridge is a new structure, and without any warning whatever it started to move and floated out into the lake. The trainmen just had time to stop the train within a few rods of the lake.

SULZER'S JUDGES WILL NOT TOLERATE LEGAL JUGGLERY

First Blood In Impeachment Trial of New York Governor Is Drawn by Accusers When Tribunal Refuses to Present Any Evasion of the Main Issue — Sulzer Recognizes Glynn.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 20.—At the conclusion of the second session of the high court of impeachment convened to determine the fitness of William Sulzer to continue as governor of New York, two very important points have been clearly indicated.

The first and most important is the unanimous purpose of the forty-eight Senators and nine appeal judges sitting in the judgment on the indictment returned against Mr. Sulzer by the State Assembly to prevent evasion of the main issue involved in the proceeding and that legal technicalities, even when based upon the fundamental rights of the accused governor to seek vindication shall be swept aside in order that the people of the state may be thoroughly convinced of his guilt or innocence.

The second development of the day bore only collateral relation to the undertakings of the high court. Yet it was quite as material to the proceedings as the overwhelming decision of the judges that Mr. Sulzer shall be compelled squarely to face the charges involving his honor and integrity. The suspended governor himself provided the second important chapter by recognizing Martin H. Glynn, the lieutenant-governor, as the acting governor of the state.

Two interpretations were advanced to explain his reasons for this first actual surrender of the office.

One, coming from the men who are insistent upon his removal from office, is that it foreshadows the formal resignation of Mr. Sulzer before the termination of the proceedings of the high court of impeachment.

The version furnished by Mr. Sulzer's supporters is that in recognizing the right of Mr. Glynn to exercise the duties of governor, pending the impeachment trial, he was actuated solely by a desire to promote the business of the state government, which has been virtually at a standstill.

Sulzer Bows To Inevitable.

ALBANY, Sept. 20.—Gov. Sulzer yesterday, for the first time, formally recognized the right of Lieut.-Gov. Glynn to exercise the prerogatives of of the chief executive of the state pending the determination of the impeachment charges. On the advice of counsel a request for the extradition of a prisoner, received by the impeached executive, was turned over to acting Governor Glynn.

PLANNED KIDNAPPING.

Arson Ring Had Plot to Intimidate State Attorney.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—A startling story of the arson ring's alleged efforts to smother prosecution was told yesterday in the state's attorney's office by John Gagliardo, alleged go-between in the trapping of Special Investigator Charles Furthmann.

Gagliardo, who was alleged to have given Furthmann marked bills to betray secrets of the state's attorney's office, declared he had been urged by a certain man to obtain aid of the Black Hand to intimidate Assistant State Attorney Frank Johnson, who was in charge of the prosecution of the arson cases.

Gagliardo said that the plan was to kidnap Attorney Johnson's nine-year-old son, Russin, and to hold the lad as a club over the head of the prosecutor. Gagliardo said that the proposition was put to him because of his wide acquaintance among Italians, some of whom were suspected of being blackmailers.

The plan was considered for some time, and then dropped. Attorney Johnson confirmed Gagliardo's story to the extent that he did receive one threatening letter, but nothing ever came of it he said.

Too Much Impure Milk.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 20.—That impure milk is responsible for the heavy infant mortality and the great amount of child sickness in Brantford and vicinity was the charge made at a meeting of the Brant County Medical Association held Thursday night in the public library hall.

The question of milk supply formed the leading topic for discussion, and it was the unanimous opinion that the proper authorities should take immediate action to improve the supply by enforcing the testing of all dairy cows for tuberculosis, and enforcing suitable rules and regulations to ensure the milk being brought to the customers as free from contamination as possible.

To Investigate Sullivan's Death.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—An investigation into "certain features" of the death of Congressman Timothy D. Sullivan, whose mangled body was recently found at a railroad crossing in the Bronx borough, has been begun by District Attorney Whitman. Mr. Whitman would go no further than to say nothing definite had developed as yet.

Since the funeral of "Big Tim" rumors have been persistent that he had not met death accidentally, some versions being that he had been set upon by footpads and left unconscious on the tracks or murdered outright.

ANOTHER ELECTION.

Australian Deadlock Requires an Appeal To the Country.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is stated to-day, in a despatch from Melbourne, that a deadlock has been reached in the Commonwealth Parliament and that preparations for another general election are being made.

Premier Cook has explained to the Governor-General that even with a net majority of two or three, he couldn't hope to be long in administrative control. He won't be satisfied with securing the dissolution of the lower House without revising the personnel of the Senate.

Joseph Cook, the Premier, has a majority of only one in the House and is in a very small minority in the Senate, and the labor party have been attempting to run the Government from the Opposition benches.

Invite Tenders For Canal.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—Tenders for the second section of the Welland canal will be called for on Monday. The contracts for sections one and three have already been let, so that with the letting of the contracts for section two over a third of the canal will be started. This is the most difficult portion of the work. There are nine sections in all, and contracts for the other sections will be called for steadily, until the whole of the canal is under contract.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 20.—A verdict of manslaughter was returned yesterday against Paul Lamirand and James Boutin, accused of the murder of Peter Supernavitch as a result of a quarrel in a lumber camp at Oba on Aug. 17. Peter Young, also charged with complicity, was found not guilty. The jury were out for six hours.

Immediately on being acquitted Young was rearrested on a charge of rioting.

The sentencing of Lamirand and Boutin was deferred until to-day.

Extortion Charged.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—The Montreal Trades and Labor Council has made requests upon the provincial authorities for the abolition of all employment bureaus, except those under the control of the city or Provincial Government.

The request is the outcome of the repeated complaints of extortion on the part of the independent employment agencies. Two charges of extortion by these agencies have been heard by Magistrate Lafontaine.

DR. SUN IN VANCOUVER

Chinese Reformer is Said To be in Vancouver.

VICTORIA, Sept. 20.—Traveling incognito as Wong Kwok Yin, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, formerly Provisional President of the Chinese republic, and leader in the recent unsuccessful revolution against President Yuan Shi Kai, is said to be in Vancouver. He was recognized by compatriots in spite of the fact that his appearance had been altered by shaving off his moustache, and is said to be en route to England. It is said that Dr. Sun Yat Sen landed at Victoria from Japan on the last trip of the Japanese liner Chicago. He remained in Victoria for some days with friends, and later attempted to enter the United States disguised as a Japanese student, but was refused admittance.

The impression here is that Dr. Sun does not feel secure in disclosing his identity among his fellow-countrymen in British Columbia, who are nearly all supporters of President Yuan Shi Kai.

Sun Yat Sen fled to Japan on the failure of the rebellion, and recent despatches from Tokio stated that the Japanese Government had delegated secret service men to safeguard him against assassination by Chinese in the pay of Yuan Shi Kai.

M. P. THREATENED.

British Liberal Receives a Demand For £100.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A London cable says: A Black Hand message, signed "Painter" has been received by Sir John Henry Bethell, Bart., M.P. for the Romford division of Essex and a prominent director of the London & Southwestern Bank, at his home, Park House, Blakehall road, Wanstead, demanding that a sum of £100 be placed under the steps of Wanstead old church at 6 p.m. on the morning of Sept. 20. The letter is written in a good free hand, threatens death if the command is not obeyed and dire disaster if the communication is sent to Scotland Yard.

Sir John nevertheless turned the letter over to Scotland Yard, and detectives will be on hand to watch developments when a dummy package is planted in the hope of catching the blackmailers.

Barns and Crop Burned.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 20. — The barns of John Mordue, Pleasant Ridge, four miles from Brantford were destroyed by fire Thursday night. The cause of the fire was children playing with matches. Loss is estimated at $5,000, all the season's crop being destroyed as well as implements. Four Brantford autoists who were passing at the time, succeeded in saving live stock valued at $500.

BATTLE IN THE STREETS

Hamilton Is Scene of Clash Over Labor Trouble.

HAMILTON, Ont. Sept. 20.—When the strike-breakers employed on Thursday night by the Guest Construction Co. reported for work at seven o'clock yesterday morning, near the corner of Ferguson avenue and King street, they were met by nearly 200 strikers. The men came to blows in a hand-to-hand battle, and a riot followed. Hundreds of stones were thrown, and several of the men who entered into the battle suffered severe bruises. No one was seriously injured, however. Pedestrians were compelled to seek shelter in nearby stores, and it is due only to the arrival of a squad of ten policemen that more serious trouble were prevented.

Before the melee about seventy-five foreigners, employed on Dundern, York and West King streets, marched in a body to Ferguson avenue, which apparently was made headquarters for the strikers.

Two policemen were previously detailed to prevent any trouble, but when the numbers increased to about two hundred the officers were unable to control the mob. One of the strikers was said to have hurled insults at the men who were working, and a wordy war was kept up until the stone-throwing commenced. When the battle was at its height, the siren of the police patrol was heard. The men dispersed quickly, and when the officers arrived they were unable to determine who were the cause of the trouble. No one was arrested, but Chief Smith afterward issued instructions that if another row occurred all concerned were to be taken into custody. Ample police protection was given to prevent any further trouble, and the chief ordered the men to carry their guns.

At noon yesterday the company was carrying on its work with about half the men required. A. M. Guest, head of the contracting firm, was notified of the trouble, and he is expected to arrive in Hamilton to-day. The city fathers will consult with Mr. Guest in an effort to have the wages increased.

PRESS WITH STRIKERS.

London Papers Condemn Tilling Omnibus Company.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Not a single motorman or conductor employed by the Tilling Omnibus Co., whose action in refusing to recognize the men's union, is likely to bring about a general strike of transport workers in London, went to work yesterday morning, and many of the motor bus lines running from the south to the north of London, which are chiefly supplied by the Tilling Company, were entirely suspended, causing great inconvenience.

A few of the old horse-driven buses were put on the streets for the first time in several years.

There was no disturbance of any kind in the vicinity of the motor bus sheds, around which the striking men gathered in groups, determined to hold out and waiting for their comrades to join them at midnight last night unless their demands should in the meantime be acceded to by their employers.

Several conferences were held in the course of the morning between the omnibus men and the representatives of the employes of the amalgamated Tube System, at which the action of the latter, in case a general strike should materialize, was discussed.

Practically the entire press of London supports the men in their demands, and many of the newspapers declare that the point in regard to the wearing by the men of the badges of their trades unions should never have been raised, and that the Tilling Company has made another blunder.

BLOWS UP FAMILY.

Maniac Assembles Them In Room Then Explodes Dynamite.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Sept. 20.—In a demoniacal fit of insanity, Mack Hurst, 50 years old, a stone-mason, blew up his home with dynamite yesterday morning, killing himself and one daughter, fatally wounding two other daughters, and demolishing the house. Mrs. Hurst, in some remarkable manner, escaped.

She says that the man awoke the family at two o'clock and told them to gather in his bedroom. After they had all entered he closed and locked the door and spoke only these five words: "We will all die together."

Then he picked up a stick of dynamite, which was lying on the floor near him, and threw it under the bed. There was a deafening roar and Mrs. Hurst remembered nothing more until she came to consciousness at the home of a neighbor nearly an hour later. The noise of the explosion awoke the whole city.

Hurst had not been working for some time, and had been acting strangely of late, and had been declared insane but not dangerous.

St. Catharines' Man Missing.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20.—The police are searching for James Riley, a local butcher, who has been missing since last Sunday when he stepped out of the house saying he would be back soon. Mrs. Riley expresses fear that her husband has been foully dealt with. As yet no person has been located who saw Riley since he left his home.

Gen. Bramwell Booth Coming.

SCIENCE AND IMMORTALITY

There are many and various ways of proving the immortality of the soul. Sir Oliver Lodge would prove by scientific demonstration that personality is a persistent thing which appears in physical form and only disappears at death into a higher or more rarified state of existance, and that it is possible by mere physical and sensuous processes to communicate with persons in that state.

If it were true that matter is the primal basis of all life and consciousness, and that what is called spirit, is merely rarefied substance, then it is quite conceivable that we might be able to communicate with the departed, supposing they still had a conscious existence.

The theory of St. Paul that "things seen were made from things which do not appear," would seem to contradict this materialistic conception of the universe. But Sir Oliver might still subscribe to the dictum of St. Paul, for he believes that matter is a form of spirit. He some time ago found by experiment that an atom could be divided, or be transformed into what are known as "electrons."

This would suggest that electricity, or something as intangible, was the basis of the material universe, and would therefore bear out St. Paul's assertion that the "things which are seen are temporal."

Shakespeare also corroborated this when he made Prospero declare:

"The great globe itself,
And all that it inherit shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a wrack behind."

Sir Oliver's recent pronouncement before the British Association was merely a restatement of views he propounded before in various books.

As a great scientist his words on so important a subject are worthy of careful consideration. Immortality is a problem in which more people are interested than is supposed. Everyone has some friend or relative beyond the veil, and there are times when the dead do not seem very far away from anyone of us. The matter of communicating with these is not an urgent one and the average man would rather wait till his own "departure" if he could have some sure basis for a belief that "there are no dead."

OLD AGE AND HYSTERIA

Marie Corelli says that the British Nation is growing old, and that it is not growing old gracefully but is nervous, irritable and [illegible]. Miss Corelli might have added—"and hysterical." For hysteria is certainly one of the characteristics of British life just now.

What with the threatened strikes, the Home Rule agitation, the German scare, the suffragettes, Mr. Hall Caine and even Miss Corelli herself, hysteria seems to be the most prominent sign of Great Britain's old age.

But hysteria is not usually associated with senility but rather with extreme youth, it seems to be the result of superfluous energy and emotion which being long suppressed or restrained bursts forth in wild inarticulate and violent passion.

If Great Britain is dying of old age it cannot be said at the funeral that "her end was peace."

MIRACLES

A great wonder was made the other day of the so-called cures at Lourdes, but it appears that the persons who discarded their crutches are seeking them again or buying new ones.

The desire and curiosity for things miraculous is very strong in human nature, and if people cannot get the real thing they will go in for the fake. This accounts for the success of the stage conjurer, for there is a certain fascination in being gulled.

This does not mean, and it is not intended to infer that there is nothing in the Lourdes' miracles. The curative properties of mineral springs all the world over do have certain effects upon people suffering from nervous or kindred troubles and may in some case bring about a cure.

But to call these miracles is surely either a misuse of terms or a deliberate attempt to deceive the superstitious. If they are miracles, then any doctor who knows his business at all could claim to be a veritable magician and wonder-worker.

If these Lourdes' cures were really miraculous, and had no physical explanation, then they deserve all due reverence, and there should be an end of the medical profession. If a miracle can be wrought one day it can be wrought another, and if one disease can be cured by super-natural means then why not another, and why should it be confined to one place and one particular kind of water?

EXCERPTS

A Cheap Dress Shirt.

As for paper fasteners, a touring actor writes to point another of their utilities: "There is, at times, in a small company especially, a scarcity of starched linen. And shirts, like King John's treasure, get lost or mislaid in the wash. You are playing a dude part, say, with naught but a flannel shirt to go with your dress coat. Take a sheet of note paper or foolscap, prod it under your vest, and where the central stud should be—insert a round headed brass paper fastener!" Necessity mothers invention.—London Chronicle.

Pitfalls of Success.

"He's a ball fan. Don't allude to 'em as mistakes; allude to 'em as bonehead plays. He'll understand that all right."—Pittsburgh Post.

LAURIER'S POSITION

Sir Wilfrid Says the Manitoba School Case is Not Settled

Editor Sentinel,—With you permission I will follow up still further in reply to Mr. Livingstone the exposure of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attempt to foist separate schools on both New and Old Manitoba. He demanded, as we have seen, the rights of the religious minority, or that there should be no extension of boundaries. Of course this is not coercion—certainly not. But if it isn't, it must be the great "What is it?" This is what Sir Wilfrid said as the debate in the House of Commons proceeded: "I now come to the question of the existing condition of things in the territory to be annexed under this bill to Manitoba. There is no doubt whatever that the law of 1875 is in operation to-day in those territories. . . ."

This law, he claims, a little further on, to be "the law of 1875 . . . which would give full separate rights to that part of the country."

He then takes a fling at the French-Canadian traitors in the Cabinet, who have accepted the Borden bill for the extension of Manitoba's boundaries without qualification. He wants another "settlement." Here is what he says: "This would have been a case for compromise, a case for conciliation, but my honorable friends who sit on the treasury benches from the Province of Quebec despise conciliation and have contempt for compromise. Their policy was everything or nothing, and the result is nothing."

How different it would have been if Sir Wilfrid had had his way. How determinedly he pleads the cause of separate schools in Manitoba even to the point of opposing extension altogether, unless the law of 1875 regarding separate schools went with the extension. It was at this juncture that Sir Wilfrid made use of his famous metaphor: "But though peace now reigns above, peace is not yet restored to the waters below."

He means, if he means anything, that he will agitate for another "settlement" at the first opportunity. Well! The storm is over whether Sir Wilfrid likes it or not. His attempts to balk the extension of Manitoba's boundaries have failed. He stands forth, however, as the champion of papal reaction—the man who would force separate schools on Manitoba. But Mr. Borden did more than beat out Sir Wilfrid in Manitoba. It was on the cards to extend the boundaries of Quebec. We can see how they would have been extended by Sir Wilfrid. How different it was under Mr. Borden! They have been extended and without any religious or separate school qualifications whatsoever. That is the sort of "settlement" the sort of "conciliation" this country wants, and I am persuaded will have.

Who was it also that betrayed the cause of liberty and sacrificed his own good faith on the altar of papal reaction in Alberta and Saskatchewan by means of the celebrated Autonomy bills? Conservatives have made mistakes and have been most properly punished for them but what Conservative leader, nay, what Conservative leaders, taken altogether from the beginning to the end in the history of Canada, have strewn the shores of time with such a list of wrecks and wrongdoings as Sir Wilfrid? I am persuaded that when Mr. Livingstone thinks over Sir Wilfrid Laurier's conduct with regard to Manitoba, Quebec, the Autonomy bills and Ne Temere, he will agree that it is enough to overwhelm any man. The single attempt to plaster this country with Ne Temere, and to keep it plastered with that badge of serfdom, is enough surely without the others, to make us pause and ask ourselves if we are lovers of freedom or merely slaves of party.

And let me ask Mr. Livingstone in parting, what he thinks of the Liberal Government of Saskatchewan, which altered its recent School Act at the last moment in order to compel every Roman Catholic to support separate schools whether he wanted to or not. I saw the bill in its original drafted form. The clause I refer to was written over the original printed clause in red ink. It was written over and in substitution for the original printed clause, which allowed Catholics the usual liberty of human beings. When I saw what had been done—saw it as approved and as it went to the printer for final reprinting, I could not forbear to exclaim: "It is written in red—it is well written so, for that is the color of blood."

All parties require watching, and the very existence of a nation depends upon our love for it as against our love for self or party, but who can deny that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been more faithful to the church of which he boasts that he is such a fervent member, than to the people? That he has failed to put his Catholic principles into full effect in Canada is not his fault. To the 300,000 Orangemen of this country belongs the credit of preserving our liberty from his insidious attacks.

MR. BORDEN'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Borden said in the debate on the Marriage Question in 1911-12, vol 1, page [illegible]: "Now, my honorable friend, in the very able address which he has delivered, has spoken of the relation of Church and State in this country with regard to this matter. So far as that is concerned every one of us knows that under the laws of Canada and under the laws of every Province in Canada the decree of any vindication of the church cannot invalidate the civil law." Is this vindication of the people's rights not in great contrast to the history of Sir Wilfrid's efforts? And I think most people will agree that, so far, Mr. Borden has been true to his words. Such a sentiment as that uttered by Mr. Borden, quoted above, would be impossible to Sir Wilfrid Laurier or to any other man in good standing, as he is, with the Catholic Church, which now, more than ever, in the course of its existence, is seeking, by almost unbelievable decrees and policy, to crush liberty and Democracy once and for all. Its policy of waiting for the world to reform has failed. It proposes to wait no longer. Its very last decree no longer ago than 1907 actually condemns freedom and free knowledge. For the first time in history the church requires an oath of fidelity. When a Pope requires an oath of submission to his orders it is going a very long way indeed. At one blow the whole church has become a Society of Jesuits. As I sit in the House of Commons and hear and see Sir Wilfrid, I marvel more and more that he can look Freedom in the face when he says dramatically: "I am a loyal, nay, a fervent Catholic." For Catholicism is not only a religion against which as such I have not a word to say; it is chiefly a system into whose hands it believes the world is given and from which it demands the most abject submission. Its latest weapon is education, which is the most dangerous of all. The great world-conflict is at hand. It will be as interesting as it is important.

Yours, etc.,
J. H. Burnham.

DISTRIBUTION OF PURE BRED MALE ANIMALS

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—As announced early in the season, the Dominion Live Stock Branch has this year undertaken a distribution of pure bred male animals throughout Canada on a somewhat extensive scale. In inaugurating this policy the aim has been to aid sections where pure bred sires were lacking, and to encourage new communities in following an intelligent system in breeding. This form of assistance has proven very popular, and during the past few months a large number of bulls and several stallions have been placed in various parts of the country in the hands of local associations, formed specially for the purpose of handling and maintaining them. All animals placed remain the property of the Department of Agriculture, the local associations assuming the responsibility for their maintenance and management, under the general supervision of officers of the Live Stock Branch.

The distribution of bulls and stallions having been brought to a close for this year, the opportunity is now open to deal with applications for boars and rams. Full information regarding the rules governing the distribution and the procedure to be followed in forming the necessary organization may be had upon application to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa.

As it is the intention to consider only such requests as are forwarded before October 20th, it will be necessary for districts desiring to take advantage of this offer to act promptly.

The Emigrants

A Story For Labor

By EVELYN C. GOODRICH

In what is called the Black forest in Germany lived a poor couple, Jacob Gaats and his wife, who had but one child, a daughter, Gretchen, who was the main comfort of her parents. She and Hans Dreckel, the son of a blacksmith, were brought up together, each being the other's only companion, for the region in which they lived was sparsely settled, and no other family lived near them.

[illegible] was a woodcutter. When Gretchen was nineteen years old there came a great commotion in the family. Hans Dreckel one day met Gretchen on the road carrying a bundle of fagots and said to her:

"Gretchen, I have come to an important decision. I am young and strong and am not satisfied to remain here in the forest, where there is nothing for a man to do but cut wood. One can earn only money enough by so doing to keep body and soul together, for if we ask a better price our employers say to us: 'There are plenty of men who would like the work at the same price. If you are not satisfied we will employ others in your place.' I shall go where there are labor unions, and, since I hear that there are better prices paid in the United States of America, I shall go there."

Hans kept his eyes on Gretchen while he was speaking and saw hers gradually fall till they rested on the ground and were wet with tears. Till this moment Hans had never thought of Gretchen other than as a playmate and, after they were grown, as a friend. But now, when he saw the tears gather in her eyes because he was to leave her, a new sensation was born in his heart, a tenderness for the maiden with whom he had been reared, and, taking her in his arms, he kissed away her tears.

When Gretchen reached her home and threw the fagots beside the fireplace she sat down in a chair and covered her face with her hands. Her mother, who was washing the breakfast dishes, paused and said:

"What is the matter, Gretchen?"

It was a long while before the mother could draw from her daughter that Hans was going to that far country, America. But Gretchen did not tell her what was of far more importance to all of them—that he had asked her to go with him as his wife. It was hard for the poor girl to lose her companion and, since the announcement of his intended departure, her lover.

There would have been no cause for sorrow, but reason for rejoicing, if she could have yielded to his wish. This she could not do, for it would have been cruel for her to leave her old father and mother, who would now need her more and more every day. She only said that Hans was going to America, knowing that if [illegible] knew they were keeping her from going with him it would trouble them greatly.

When Hans found that Gretchen would not go with him he asked her to promise him that if her parents died she would come to him. But this was not much comfort to him, for on that condition his sweetheart was not likely to join him for many years. And, as for Gretchen, it meant that she must lose her parents in order to join her lover.

The day Hans departed he said to Gretchen: "You know that my father is old and cannot live long and my mother is not my own mother, but my stepmother. Father will never come to me in America, and when he dies mother will go to live with one of her own children. But there will be nothing to prevent your bringing your parents with you to my new home. They say money is made very easily there. A skilled laborer gets 12 marks a day. Out of that I can save 6 marks a day at least and can send this money to you so that you may all join me in"—

"Oh, Hans," exclaimed the girl, "you are so good, so hopeful, but you must learn to do something that will enable you to earn so much money, and in those countries where high wages are paid they say it costs more to live. But," she added, "I will come to you if I can ever do so without bringing sorrow to my dear father and mother."

Hans kissed her again and again, then strode away without once looking back, lest he should show the moisture in his eyes, which he considered unmanly.

* * * * * * *

Eight years passed, during which the lovers remained true to each other. In all this time there was never an interval of more than a month that Hans did not write to his sweetheart, and she always replied to his letter with her whole heart. Hans prospered and offered to send her money to bring over her parents, but she never even mentioned the matter to them. Nor did they know that they were keeping apart two young persons who but for them might be happy together and rearing a family of children. In all these eight years Gretchen never breathed a word to her parents of the sacrifice she was making for them.

One day when Jacob was cutting wood a fierce storm came up and blew a huge limb from a tree, burying him under it. He lived but a few days, when his wife and daughter found themselves without even the support of an aged woodcutter. Gretchen at once wrote to Hans announcing her father's death and in a few weeks received a reply. Folded in the letter was a paper which ordered a bank to pay her 300 marks. Hans told her to use it as she liked, either for support of herself and her mother or to bring her mother to him in America, where he and Gretchen might be married and her mother could live with them.

Gretchen, who was a prudent girl, with great self control, thought over Hans' proposition for several days before coming to a decision. When she had made up her mind as to the only course to pursue that would be justice to Hans she confessed to her mother that when he had gone to America he had asked her to be his wife and she had refused to leave her parents.

"I am too old to go so far, Gretchen," said the old woman, "but I will not longer be a burden to you. Go to Hans. I will remain here."

It was a long time before Gretchen could persuade her that such a course was impracticable and that her mother could only repay the sacrifice that she and Hans had made by giving her consent to go to America. Hans had learned the mason's trade and was getting 12 marks a day for his work. But recently he had set up as master mason and employed men to work for him.

When the old mother became convinced that it was her duty to make the trip she consented, and the two sailed for America in the steerage of an ocean liner. They arrived at the port of New York in due time and expected to find Hans there to meet them. In this they were disappointed, but he had been there and had made arrangements for them to be admitted into the country by the emigrant authorities, pledging himself to take care of them so that they should not be a burden on the people. He also left instructions for them to come to him in a neighboring city, with tickets on the railroad to take them there.

When Gretchen and her mother reached their final destination they learned the reason of his not having met them on the arrival of the steamer. A strike had been declared by a certain trade union, and other trades had been gradually drawn into the struggle between capital and labor, including the masons. Hans had great influence with the men of his trade and was exerting himself to persuade them to keep the peace, assuring them that by doing so they would certainly win every just demand.

On arriving at the city where Hans lived they carried all their bundles except one box, which, being too heavy for them, they left to be brought later to the address that had been given them. Hans had expected them to hire a conveyance, but the frugal life they had led had not prepared them for such extravagance. So they walked, Gretchen inquiring the way, and passed through a street that was filled with workmen. On a wagon a man was standing speaking to a crowd of laborers who had gathered about him. They stopped to listen to him, but could not understand him since he spoke in the English language. But they could see by the upturned, intent faces that he was producing a profound effect upon them.

"Let us go on," said the mother. But Gretchen seemed disposed to listen to the man, though she did not know what he was saying. In vain her mother tugged at her to get her to go on, but in spite of the urging she remained. It was only when the man ceased to speak and, getting down from the wagon, was lost in the crowd that Gretchen consented to pursue their way.

When they reached the house where Hans lived they found a suit of rooms on the second floor comfortably fitted up. They were received by a woman whom Hans had deputed for the purpose, who told them that Hans was very busy and they must make themselves at home till he came.

After awhile they heard a cheering in the street which seemed to be approaching the house and growing as it came nearer. Then there were shouts of "We've won! We've won!" The crowd stopped before the house where the two emigrants were, and a man stood on the steps for a few minutes, cheered by the crowd. Then he hurried up the stairs and burst into the room. He and Gretchen flew to each other's arms.

"Himmel!" cried the old woman. "It is the man on the wagon!"

Gretchen had recognized Hans the moment she laid eyes on him, though he was but little more than a youth when they parted and he was now a man and very much changed. Their meeting was a happy one in many respects. In the first place, the winning of the strike was a great advantage to Hans, who had feared enforced idleness, whereas now that it was settled he could proceed with work he had contracted for. Gretchen and her mother had completed a journey both dreaded, and their future comfort was assured.

There was no reason for haste or delay in the wedding, so Gretchen was called on to fix the day, and, inasmuch as she had no trousseau to prepare, she chose an early date, since Hans desired that they should all get settled down to their new life and he give his mind to his work. The bride and her mother had no friends in their newly adopted country, but the groom had a-plenty. A number of bridal presents from them came in, some of them from well to do persons for whom Hans had constructed buildings, and they were quite valuable.

Hans is prospering and is considered one of the most reliable men in labor matters, he being always consulted before any important action is taken.

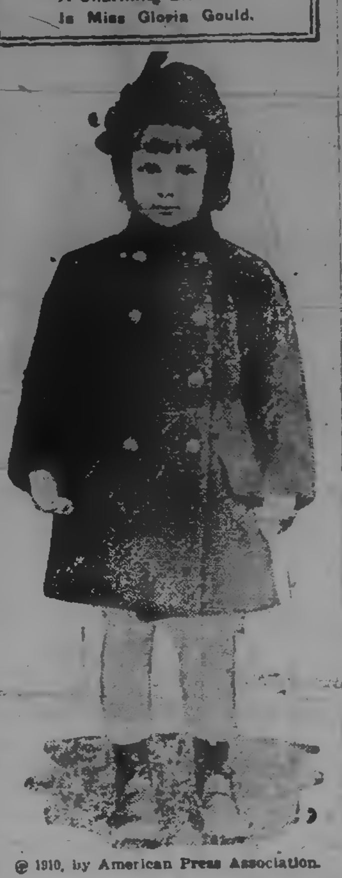
A Charming Little Girl Is Miss Gloria Gould.



© 1910, by American Press Association.

MISS GLORIA GOULD.

Don't you think that a little girl of six is rather young to be interviewed by a newspaper reporter and to have her picture snapped by the camera man? Well, this experience happened recently to little Miss Gloria Gould when she was an interested spectator at a society circus given at Georgian Court, the magnificent home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould at Lakewood, N. J.

Miss Gloria was not at all scared at having the camera pointed at her; but, like many grownup people, she objected, just at first, to be photographed for publication. The picture shows what a charming little girl she is in her play clothes.

This little lady, who some day will have a splendid big coming out party like those of her older sisters, was very much broken up the day this picture was taken over the sudden death of her pet dog, Buster Brown, which was her constant companion and the family pet. Miss Gloria and the fortunate Buster used to have many a fine romp on the lawns at Georgian Court, and the small heiress felt very much aggrieved that her comrade had quit her companionship for that of the other doggies in dog heaven.

Fox and Hounds.

The boys and girls in the school at Monticello, N. Y., might have thought that they were having an object lesson in the game of fox and hounds when a wild fox ran into the school room with two dogs in close pursuit. It was not really an object lesson. No teacher would make so much excitement over the teaching of any one subject. The excitement was great enough at first, but as the fox and the dogs circled the room the little girls climbed up on the desks and screamed and the little boys helped the dogs chase the fox. The hunted beast finally found refuge under the teacher's desk, where he snarled at the dogs and the children and kept them at bay. He would not let any one touch him, but at last one of the boys succeeded in putting a noose over his head. The boys tried to get him out alive, but he struggled so hard that he choked to death.

Figured in Cold Dollars.

"The value of human life isn't supposed to be figured in cold dollars," said a builder, "but people don't generally know that in every big building erected in New York the price of human life is a consideration figured in the estimate.

"In a building of so many stories and of a certain sort of construction the contractors figure that a few workmen will be killed and there will have to be settlement with the families. Maybe no architects or contractors would admit that this is true, but it's a fact nevertheless."—New York Sun.

Very Democratic.

"Is she the right sort to be a congressman's wife?"

"Is she? Why, she's even more democratic than he is. She even goes so far as to call socially on the wives of some of her husband's constituents."—St. Louis Republic.

A Hint to the Wise.

Madeline—Don't come up to the house tonight, Harold. Harold—Why not, dear? Madeline—Pa had a puncture, cracked cylinder and a bent steering wheel today, and I'm afraid he'll wreak his vengeance on you.—Kansas City Star.

Letting Him Out.

"Would you marry a man who has the reputation of being not more than half witted?"

"No, but I'll be a sister to you."—Houston Post.

PROFESSION FOR JILTED GIRLS

Winnipeg, Sept. 20—"There should be a profession for a jilted girl or a broken-hearted widow to turn to in the hope of forgetting her heart affairs," declared Miss Nedfeld, of Toronto Neighborhood House, to the Winnipeg Women's Press Club. "Ministers are not social workers. They think they are; but the idea of putting a minister in charge of some sorts of social work is ridiculous. It would be just as sensible to put a minister in charge of a hospital because he is a nice, kind young man. The churches are always talking about what ought to be done, but they never do anything to improve matters. They are shut up from Sunday to Sunday, and grow musty, when they ought all to be doing institutional work in their community."

WORK OF THE TELEPHONE

Its Magic Has Enabled Us to Snap Our Fingers at Space.

Just how modern is the essential and ubiquitous telephone—now connecting over a half million houses and offices in New York city—there is a casual line in "Pinafore" which serves to indicate. When the kindly chorus is condoling with Ralph Rackstraw on his separation from his Josephine it chants these words to picture the terror of his lot:

"No telephone connects with his dungeon cell."

The line falls flat today. But "Pinafore" was produced for the first time in 1878, and in 1876 the Bell patents for the first practical telephone were issued. Thus when the words were written they related to a new and startling invention that was the talk of the day, and the Gilbertian line was really a gay, topical jest.

It is a safe guess, however, that very few of the people who laughed at "Pinafore" in the seventies foresaw what the telephone would really prove to be. The years of the telephone are few. But already it has transformed business method and social intercourse. The railroads, the fast trains, the telegraph, wireless, the automobile, all helped to make the nineteenth century a century of acceleration.

The telephone worked more real magic than all the rest together. The discovery of astral bodies would hardly have done more to multiply human effectiveness and enable us to snap our fingers at space.—New York Tribune.

One of the released prisoners under the "Cat and Mouse" Act, Miss Annie Bell, was recognised by a constable near King's Cross, dressed in a Norfolk suit and a man's straw hat. Immediately after a sorter named Thomas Collier had dropped a parcel into a bin at Victoria Station, Manchester, there was a loud explosion and several windows were broken. It is alleged that the parcel contained explosive corks of the kind used by men acting as starters at athletic. The contents not being regarded as dangerous the parcel was dealt with in the ordinary way.

SLY REYNARD

A fox entered a pountry house in Lincolnshire by scratching a hole underneath the floor and killed fifty fowls, carrying many away.

BABOON'S LIVELY TIME

A young baboon escaped from an exhibition at Dudley and made its way into the street, where it scratched one child and bit another, the latter having to be taken to the hospital. The animal then ran along the roofs of several houses, but was eventually shot.

REVOLVER ACCIDENT

While a lad named Knight was playing with an old six-chambered revolver in a forge at Kennington Ashford, Kent, the weapon went off, and the bullet passed through the scullery window of a house opposite and embedded itself in the head of a Mrs. Hobday. She is now in a critical condition in Ashford Cottage Hospital.

FOUND ON THE LINE

The body of a well-dressed man, shockingly mutilated, was found on the Great Northern main line at Yaxley, near Peterborough. The man, who apparently fell from an express, is believed to have hailed from Yorkshire.

BROTHERS DROWNED

Two brothers, Archibald and Hector Annett, aged eight and ten respectively were found drowned in a reservoir at Tring. They had been bathing, and a dog was guarding their clothes.

RICH AND POOR PAY LAST HONORS TO "BIG TIM" SULLIVAN

CHARLES F. MURPHY THOMAS F. FOLEY JUDGE OTTO ROSALSKY TAKING THE BODY FROM OLD ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL

Timothy D. Sullivan's body was borne to its last resting place in Calvary cemetery, New York city, with 25,000 mourners from every rank in life, most of whom could truthfully say, "I knew him and he knew me." It was the personal side of "Big Tim" that made his funeral cortege miles in length and packed the streets for many blocks with spectators from every borough.

The large illustration shows Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, Thomas Foley, formerly Sheriff of New York County, and Judge Otto Rosalsky, all big political men and all great friends of the best loved man in the east side of New York City, "Big Tim" Sullivan.

In the small insert is shown "Joe" Sullivan, the scion and hope of the Sullivan clan, the nephew of the dead leader.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by the Official Scribe

The attendance of delegates at the meeting this week was not very large, even the moulders, who as a rule, show up in a most exemplary fashion, were conspicuous by their absence.

LOCAL MACHINISTS AFFILIATED WITH CENTRAL BODY

Representatives Bryden, McArthur Smith and Kite, were introduced to the Council by the President as delegates from the Machinists, Local No. 335. The President said that he regretted that more delegates were not present to welcome them, but gave them the assurance that the men would rally as the season went on.

COMMUNICATIONS

A communication from the secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers was read. It announced that the letter from The Council drawing attention to the fact that one of the I.B.E.W. membership was at work in the Grand Opera House while the local stage employes were locked out by Mr. Turner, had been given due heed and the member asked to withdraw from the hostile to union labor management of the Grand, which request had been complied with.

A letter from J. J. Thompson was read, acknowledging an honorarium from the Council, expressing his thanks also his willingness to further assist along the lines of athletics any time the Council needed his services.

From the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, came a missive dealing with the proposed new legislation regarding co-operative societies. Petitious accompanied same so that persons interested in this modern movement could affix their signatures, so as to show our legislators at Ottawa that co-operation was needed by the people and that their efforts along these lines must not be hindered by faulty measures on the statute books.

REPRESENTATIVE J. WATT SPEAKS

In a few well chosen words, President David Moore introduced to the assembled delegates, James Watt, representative of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. Bro. Watt started in by explaining that his duties at present were to visit the different organizations, and urge their sending delegates to the different organizations and urge their sending delegates to the Trades and Labor Congress to be held in Montreal, commencing Sept. 22nd. As the local Council had already appointed a delegate there was no need of his exhortations. Outside of his present position, Bro. Watt informed the meeting he was organizer for the Journeymen Tailors, and he greatly regretted not seeing any of the local tailors present; also to know by the roll call that they seldom put in an appearance with the central body. He was amazed to find during his travels so great a lack of knowledge amongst the rank and file of union men of those things which they most needed to know. Bro. Watt blamed this a lot to the indifference with which delegates reported back to their unions the doings of the central body.

The Trades and Labor representative also touched on the Compensation Act, and the law affectiong Co-operative Societies. Regarding the former, the speaker said that as the measure stood it was not what the toiler wanted. Still it would not do to leave it shelved, but to get it through, as the Quebec House was simply waiting on the doings of the Ontario House. The law regarding co-operation needed also to be closely followed, as the lobbyist with his hindering tactics was in evidence. The greatest opposition to the measure came from the Retail Merchants' Associations, who, naturally, were looking after their own interests. The speaker closed an instructive speech by expressing his regret at the paucity of the attendance, especially of the tailor delegates, but added that nevertheless the business put through had been of very great interest.

PETERBOROUGH'S TRADES AND LABOR REPRESENTATIVE.

President David Moore will represent Peterborough's organized workers at the Trades and Labor Congress to be held in Montreal next week. In choosing Bro. Moore the Council secured the type of man needed at the Congress, one possessed of a mind prolific in ideas, a ready wit, a rich vocabulary, and, chiefly, a deep sympathy with the toiler and his burden.

STAY WITH THE BY-LAW.

Attention was directed to a paragraph in a local paper stating that Ex-Ald. James Graham had been given permission by the City Council to build a 9-inch wall within the fire limits the by-law calling for a 14-inch wall. After a lengthy and interesting discussion, it was moved and seconded that this Council go on record supporting the by-law as it stands, not being broken to suit any particular party.

LOCK-OUT STILL ON.

The lock-out of the local union of State Employes by the management of the Grand still continues. Efforts are being made by Mr. Turner to influence the members individually, but the boys are all with paid-up cards, and will stay with their charter till replaced in its original position.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON THE GOLDEN CALF.

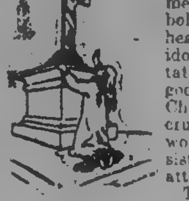
September 21.—Exodus 32:15-20, 30-35. "Little children, keep yourselves from idols."—I John 5:21.

THE Israelites experienced a severe trial of faith and obedience soon after entering into covenant relationship with God. In this trial they failed utterly. The Covenant was broken. However, after punishing them, God graciously renewed the Covenant.

The circumstances of this testing are a part of this lesson. After making the Covenant, Moses, by Divine direction, went up into Mt. Sinai, taking with him Joshua. He was gone forty days—a comparatively long period. His prolonged absence gave room for the cultivation of faith, patience and trust.

The Israelites remembered the trying experiences through which they had passed. The Egyptians were behind them; the Amalekites might renew their attack. What would they do without Moses, whose upheld hands brought them God's favor and victory.

Here worldly wisdom came in. Aaron was perplexed as to how to keep the people from utter discouragement. Apparently they were unable to trust fully the God whom they could not see. The leaders took counsel together and determined to make a representative of Jehovah—an image which the people could use as an instrument of worship.



Some Christians use the crucifix.

We are not to suppose that the Isrealites recognized the golden calf as their God Jehovah, but used it merely as a symbol, just as the heathen use their idols as representatives of their gods, and as some Christians use the crucifix — not to worship, but to assist faith and hold attention.

To-day's lesson seems clearly to indicate that God was greatly displeased with their symbolical representation of Himself. One of His commands had been, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image," to bow down before it and worship it as a symbol, or representation.

Making the Golden Calf.

We are not to suppose that the calf was made of solid metal. The supposition is that it was made of either clay or wood, and then covered over with molten metal—the gold which had constituted the people's jewelry. This in turn was doubtless graven, or tooled. Having made the idol, the people rejoiced in it as an evidence of God in their midst, and gave themselves up to a season of feasting and dancing.

At the end of the forty days, as Moses came down from the mount with the tables of the Law, he heard the shouts of the people, and then beheld them worshiping the golden calf. Moses was justly angry; for he was the mediator between God and Israel—the representative of both, charged by God with the responsibility of that nation—and he realized that a serious crime against the Covenant had been committed.

Moses dashed the tables of the Law into fragments, indicating that the Covenant had been broken. He went down to the people, angry against them. Armed with Divine authority, he let fall upon them a just penalty for their rapid retrogression into sin. Then he went to God in prayer, and besought that, if the penalty of this sin was the casting off of Israel, he might himself be blotted out instead.

Such patriotism as Moses here evinced has surely not often been equalled. It meant loyalty as Israel's representative and mediator, and at the same time loyalty to God, whom he also represented.

"Keep Yourselves From Idols."

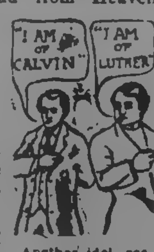
Let us apply the lesson to Spiritual Israel. After the Christian has left the world, the slavery of sin, passed the bitter experiences of Marah, had manifestations of God's favor, partaken of the Bread from Heaven, and entered into full covenant relationship with God—there comes a time when he must walk by faith, and not by sight. If he fails to learn this lesson, as did the typical Israelites, it will be a serious matter.



Another idol—sectarianism.

This making of images which divert and absorb our worship of God is one of the greatest tests to Spiritual Israelites. The golden calf which some set up is business. They give themselves wholly to it, sacrificing time and energy. The love of money and of things which money can procure leads into idolatry, and thereby breaks the Covenant with the Lord.

Others idolize the opposite sex, giving all they possess for its favor and fellowship. They make the great mistake of worshiping the creature more than the Creator, as the Apostle explains.

Still another idol is sectarianism. St. Paul warned against this idol, saying, "One of you says, I am of Paul; another, I am of Apollos; another, I am of Peter." Then he inquires, Is not this reverencing of men a form of idolatry?—"Are ye not carnal?"—1 Corinthians 3.3-5.

The same principle we may apply to ourselves to-day, and guard against sectarian worship. If one says, I am of Calvin; another, I am of Luther; another, I am of Wesley—are not these evidences of carnality? Is there not danger of worshiping the human institutions which bear these names, and thus of having something come between the Christian and his God? We believe that there is a serious danger along this line.

AT S.A. TEMPLE

Harvest Festival Services Now in Progress

The local corps of the Salvation Army are now in the midst of their annual World-Wide Harvest Festival effort, and are calling on all their friends for some expression of their practical sympathy with the work. Gifts to assist in aiding the needy will be acceptable. Knowing the sympathetic attitude generally of the Peterborough citizens, Adjutant and Mrs. McElheney and their workers are very confident of the result.

Special services are being held this week end at the Citadel.

Saturday evening will see a great enrolment of recruits, who have been on probation for some months.

Sunday special music and addresses will be given, and on Monday night the band of the Temple Corps will give a great musical festival, and are treating all their friends who make application to complimentary tickets.

BRITISH PREACHER IN ST. PAUL'S

Mr. Russell is a brother of Mrs. Allan, wife of the organist, Mr. John Allan. He occupies a prominent place among the preachers of the Non-Conformist Church in the old land.

Skirts Commence Under the Bust Because of the New Fashionable Silhouette.

Exclusive Copyright, 1913, New York Herald Company

WITH gasps of horror or amusement, according to temperament, womankind beholds an entirely new style dawn on the fashionable horizon. Then comes the ultimatum:—"Horrible! Dreadful! Ridiculous! I'm sure I could never wear that!"

You are perfectly right, dear ladies, the chances are nine out of ten that it is too extreme a fashion for you unless you are a leader of fashion, very rich, very pretty or effective looking and can carry off ultra fashionable clothes with nonchalant grace.

But what does interest you, on second thought, is that your dressmaker or milliner is going to adapt this new fashion into one that is conservative, for this has always been done and probably always will be. Also, your corsetière will note the new lines that shape [illegible] gown, and, while she will not mould you into so extreme a figure, will adapt the new lines in a measure to your type of beauty. For ultra fashions and popular styles always bear some resemblance to each other.

Two views of an afternoon tailored suit are portrayed here in Nos. 1 and 2. This suit is a very good example of a new and extreme type of Paris model. In some vague way it reminds one of daguerreotype days, when feminine curves were a part of women's charm. In cut [illegible] is all that is extreme in dressmaking—the material cut so that it widens the already rounded hips and draped so that it gradually narrows down toward the feet. Besides being pleated with artistic irregularity into the waist line, the skirt gets more of an inward slant by the way it is draped up into a narrow puffed fold that is stitched down the centre front. At centre back the material is folded into a deep slot seam. The coat is on bolero lines, the triangular facing on the front becomes a belt in the back, into which the superfluous fulness is drawn. Collar and armholes are piped with white satin, and extension sleeves are made of it, and the vest, reverless, négligée of form, fastens with a few satin buttons and has about the décolleté edges a scant wide frill of net.

Slightly more tailored is a black cloth tailored suit with a white Ottoman vest, having an attached matching Incroyable collar. This is shown in two views, Nos. 3 and 4. In its resemblance to last year's cutaway the coat stops at the classic curved edges, for the seams are curiously placed and the breadths shaped to make lovely rounded godets at the back. Long, slender revers follow the neck edge to the cutaway edges.

A shade less extreme is a Paris model of Russian green taffeta. The skirt, like the others, shows more of the shoe than last year's models, and mounts higher up, belting directly under the uncorseted bust, which is held apparently by the lightest of brassieres. A second girdle of cord with ornamental ends ties low on one side of the front. The coat is cutaway, with a waist line seam; the sleeves are pleated in under turned back cuffs that have an odd decoration of two overbound buttonholes. Cream lace and embroidered batiste form the collar. The lingerie waist, a mass of filmy frills, seems hardly more than a yoke, because of the high skirt.

From Deauville, where fashions are always the last cry and often an advance on next season's lines, come two girlish morning tailored suits. Both are of white cloth. They have this same new loose look that typifies coming fashions, and which is given by the lack of fitting. One has a deep yoke and a drop shoulder seam, the other set-in sleeves and patch pockets. Both are belted, one more loosely than the other. The skirt in each model has the peculiar new hang, the natural fulness at the top gathered into the belt, so that there are more gathers in the centre front, consequently the skirt slinks in a bit there.

The two other dresses in these Deauville camera snapshots are interesting because of the rapidly increasing vogue of ruffles and flounces. This promises to be more than a summer fashion, for the new imported materials are one and all of unthinkable suppleness, and lace, which seems to be made for ruffles and flounces, is in high style. One tunic is so full as to be rufflelike. The other model, with filmy pleated ruffles, forms, with the aid of a deep tuck, what looks to be a flounced tunic. Both are very good, and not at all extreme models on this order.

Ruffled Gowns the Incoming Fashion.

FASHION is very much like the words of the frivolous song that runs, "But little Cupid's never stupid, as I've found out; and love is truest when 'tis newest, beyond a doubt." For the newest fashion is always the last love and stands the best chance of supplanting the one before.

Two dress manufacturers in a street car the other day were overheard in earnest conversation. "Draped dresses will be best to make for this winter," said one. "What about these new ruffle dresses they are wearing in Paris?" said the other, and a lengthy discussion arose between them.

If you were to ask me, I thought to myself, you would better pin your faith to the ruffles, and hedge with a few draped models of the latest vintage for conservative folk.

Ruffles are new, though they tried to gain a foothold a year ago last spring, when draperies and panniers came in. But being too radical they have had to stand back and wait their turn. The funny little tunics that adorned last winter's gowns were the first indication of flounced effects in America. At the races in Paris several of the best houses exhibited their mannikins to impose these flounced dresses.

Between the flounced dresses of to-day and the flounced crinoline gowns of the Second Empire there is all the difference in the world. While a few of the new models show flounces laid one above the other covering the skirt, as in the dresses the Empress Eugénie used to wear, by far the most of the new models show an entirely different disposition. The inspiration has been gained rather from the distended tunics of the Russian dancers and some of the East Indian costumes. For instance, one plain taffeta dress, with scant skirt and simple yoked waist, has a tunic skirt that looks like an inverted rose. The tunic skirt yoke is cut in points on the lower edge, and a deep ruffle, also cut in petalled edges and made of the same taffeta, is fulled into it. Another gown of black silk crêpe has a white tulle tunic, made of two very full ruffles of white tulle superposed, one longer than the other. A big butterfly bow in the back of tulle and a little sleeveless jacket of bright brocade complete this costume, which in spite of its transparency makes the figure very wide about the middle.

Even the plain tunics have the skirt part ruffled, and most of them take the same line as the skirt hem, slanting downward toward the back, which gives them an entirely new air.

BYE IN JUNIOR SERIES AND ORGANIZE CITY LEAGUE

Officers Are Elected for Local Rugby Team Practice This Afternoon

Following the rugby meeting last night at the Y.M.C.A., Dr. McPherson communicated with Secretary Livingston, of the O.R.F.U., and informed him of the desire to place a team in the Union. Mr. Livingston was pleased to learn of the prospects here, but pointed out that as there were no other teams east of Toronto, a better arrangement might be for the club here to accept a bye in the junior series and run off a local league in the meantime. Then the picked team would be in good shape to meet the team or teams they would be drawn against.

The executive of the club will meet to-night and discuss the situation thus presented.

The meeting last night was a bumper one, the attendance being about .... Officers were elected as follows:

Patrons—Col. Clegg, Dr. Wightman, W. H. Denham, R. A. Morrow, E. G. Patterson, E. A. Peck, M.P.P.

Vice-Pres.—Fred Craig.

Secretary—J. J. Thompson.

Treasurer—B. L. Whitby.

Manager—Fred Craig.

Coach—Mr. Elliott Green.

The first practice in uniform will be held at the Oval to-day at 3.30.

AVERY, ONE OF YALE'S BEST FOOTBALL MEN

AVERY, A YALE END

Yale's football squad, which numbers sixty, is in the best possible condition. Clearly the conditioning is superior and the players have begun work on the home team faster than any squad in recent seasons. Avery, end, a veteran of two seasons' experience, is one of the strongest players in the line. He is the wrestling team captain. Injuries kept him from his best work last year.

RUBE MARQUARD THINKS GIANTS WILL WIN TITLE

"There isn't a man in the Athletics' line-up, and I do not except Home-run Baker, to whom I wouldn't rather pitch to in such a match than to Tris Speaker, of the Red Sox." This from Rube Marquard in discoursing upon world's series and kindred subjects.

"I have seen enough of the Athletics to know that every man in the batting order, from the lead-off right down to the battery, is a dangerous hitter at all times, but even so, they are not like Speaker. Tris was not a batting star in our series last fall, but there never was a time when he did not command all the respect of every Giant pitcher he faced.

"Unlike most of the Athletics you can't pitch [illegible] es, for we could not find that he had any. He hit everything we gave him and if he didn't always hit them safe he at least hit them hard. With such a battery there is never any telling when one is going to get away from a fielder, and then there is Helen McGregor to pay.

"With our pitching staff going as it has been all season, practically, I don't see why we shouldn't be picked as favorite for the series with the Athletics. We have four seasoned men to start against Philadelphia. Mack has only two to pitch against us. Two were plenty in 1911, but this is another year with a stronger Giant team, and I have been given to understand a slight falling off in Athletic strength.

"If Connie Mack opens with Chief Bender he has Eddie Plank for the second game. Then he has no alternative but to come right back with the Indian, after only one day of rest, or start Shawkey, a youngster, who has been taking a regular turn in the box for the past few weeks only. We played an exhibition game in Baltimore last spring against Shawkey, and found him a mighty good pitcher in most respects, but very wild."

THREE WONDERFUL MIRRORS.

Used In Place of a Telescope In Mount Wilson Observatory.

From Los Angeles by trolley car and burro back up through the pine forests one reaches the Wilson observatory. No dome or gigantic telescope greets the visitor when he gains the summit. A huge Noah's ark of canvas destroys all preconceived ideas of what an observatory should look like, and within three wonderful mirrors take the place of the great tubular telescope of other observatories.

The observatory building is constructed of canvas, the sides being set in the form of tiers of steeply overlapping eaves. This arrangement is calculated to allow for perfect ventilation and is re-enforced by a vertical wall of canvas, which can be raised or lowered at will to obtain an even temperature.

The peculiar arrangement of mirrors that replaces the familiar telescope is the center around which all interest in the observatory revolves. These mirrors are constructed at the Yerkes observatory and are the finest products of the optician's manufacturing skill. The enlarging mirror, which is supported by a pier of stone at the farther end of the building, is of concave glass four inches thick, and the scientists tell us it is of twenty-four inch aperture by sixty foot focus.

The glass is polished ever so often with jewelers' rouge upon pads of chamois skin and is burnished every week or ten days, in order to remove all possible dust. In addition a galvanized cover is kept over it when it is not in use.—Christian Herald.

Frolics of Ivan the Terrible.

Ivan the Terrible, among his many insane freaks, would let loose wild bears in the streets of his capital and placidly say his prayers while watching the slaughter of his people, "flinging a few coins to the mutilated survivors as he rose from his knees." He would compel parents to slay their children, and children to kill one another; and if there was a survivor "the amiable monarch would dispatch him with his own hands, shrieking with laughter at so excellent a joke."

In one of his lighter moods of frolic he commanded the citizens of Moscow to "provide for him a measure full of fleas for a medicine," and fined them 7,000 roubles when they failed.

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

PAIN IN MY BACK IS ALL GONE

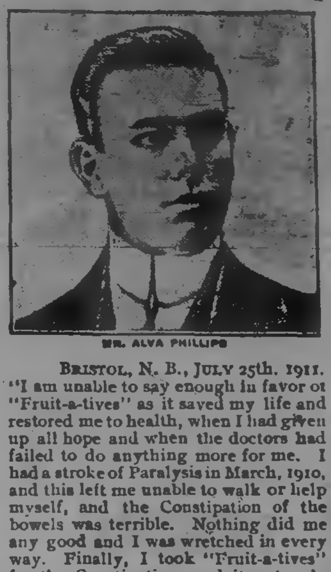
PARALYSED AND COULD NOT WALK

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Restored New Brunswick Merchant To Health.



MR. ALVA PHILLIPS

BRISTOL, N. B., JULY 25th. 1911.

"I am unable to say enough in favor of "Fruit-a-tives" as it saved my life and restored me to health, when I had given up all hope and when the doctors had failed to do anything more for me. I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the Constipation of the bowels was terrible. Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way. Finally, I took "Fruit-a-tives" for the Constipation, and it not only cured me of that trouble but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the paralysis. Under the use of "Fruit-a-tives", I grew stronger and stronger until all the palsy and weakness left me. I am now well again and attend my store every day and all day."

ALVA PHILLIPS.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy in the world that is made of fruit juices and tonics.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Had to Follow.

One day a young colored man of sporty appearance dropped in at a country livery stable and said be needed a job. He looked promising, so he was set at work greasing the axles of a buggy.

In a remarkably short space of time he reported the task finished.

"Look here," said his new boss, "do you mean to say you've greased all four of them wheels already?"

"Well," rejoined the new man, "I've greased the two front ones."

"And why haven't you greased the two hind ones?"

"Well," said the new man again, "so long's the two front ones goes all right the two hinds ones jes' nachelly got to foller!"—Everybody's.

Lobster Twine.

A man who had wondered what lobster twine was found the answer very simple: It is a fine quality, stout twine an eighth of an inch in diameter, made of manila hemp and originally intended for making the netted part of lobster pots. Lobster twine has come also to be used on board vessels, both sail and steam, for serving ropes, for whipping ropes, including ropes even of wire, and for various other purposes for which a stout, durable twine of this size might prove useful. There is probably more lobster twine used now on vessels than for the purpose for which it was first made.

Out of the 74 patients 30 were tubercular and 44 were general cases such as surgical, obstetric and medical.

NEW DIOCESE CREATED

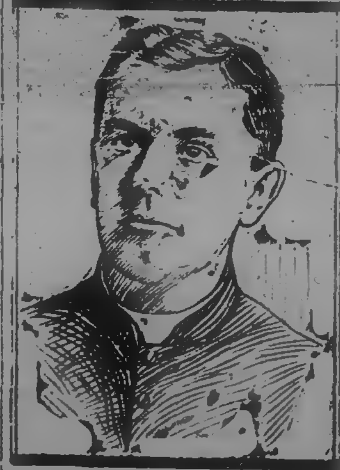
REV. F. X. BRUNET ELEVATED TO BISHOPRIC OF MONT LAURIER.

Most Recent Addition to the French Roman Catholic Prelates of the Dominion Is a Popular Clergyman and Third Graduate of His College to Be Raised Within a Year —To Start His Duties at Once.

Considerable interest was aroused the other day when Archbishop Gauthier, of Ottawa, received word from Rome that the Vatican has formed a new diocese in Canada to be known as Mont Laurier, out of the Quebec half of the Ottawa archdiocese and that Rev. F. X. Brunet, secretary of the archbishop of Ottawa, has been appointed the new bishop.

The new diocese takes in the northern half of Wright and Labelle counties. The most southern point in the diocese on the Ottawa valley line will be Gracefield and the head of the new diocese will be situated in the town of Mont Laurier, a place of about 3,000 inhabitants, but with a very promising future. It is at the head of the Laurentian mountain branch of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. There are said to be some 30,000 Roman Catholics in the district embraced in the diocese. It is served at present by three religious orders of priests, the Oblats, the Marists and the regular canons of the Immaculate Conception, who have a college at Nominingue.



REV. F. X. BRUNET.

Bishop Brunet is the third graduate of Ottawa University to be raised to the episcopate within the year, the other two being Bishop Ryan and Bishop McNally. The new bishop is very well known and popular in Ottawa. He is only 45 years of age and was educated at the University of Ottawa where he obtained his B.A. degree in 1890. He was ordained in 1893 by Archbishop Duhamel and after acting for a time as curate at the Basilica in the capital and at Aylmer, became parish priest at Mayo in 1895 and the Brook in 1900. He built a chapel in Mulgrave for the colony of German Catholics there and in the Brook in particular was very popular.

He became secretary to Archbishop Duhamel in 1904 and acting chancellor of the diocese, a position which he has continued to hold up to the present under Archbishop Gauthier since the death of Monsignor Duhamel.

The new bishop was born at St. Andre D'Argenteuil in the diocese of Ottawa Nov. 26, 1863. His parents were Francois Brunet and Leocadie Joly. He made his university course at Ottawa and studied theology also at the Grnad Seminary. He speaks English and French with equal fluency and is very well known throughout the whole diocese. His promotion has been well received. He will enter upon his new duties at once.

YOUNG GIRLS USE THE "WEED"

Cigarettes Said to be Used in the Streets

HAMILTON, Sept. 20.—The convention of the County W.C.T.U. held at Burlington yesterday morning a committee appointed to report on the use of tobacco charged that Hamilton's young girls were very quickly adopting the use of cigarettes and that some have become so brazen in their practice that they have had the audacity to smoke the "weed" while strolling down the dimly lighted streets and while joy riding in autos.

The report was startling and also charged that numerous of the social set had introduced "smokes" into the afternoon bridge and euchre parties.

Mayor Allan was scored because he refused to stop smoking in the city hall. It is permitted in some of the offices where men only do business but the Committee complained that the odor could be scented all over the building. The Mayor "is a lover of the two for a quarter" variety and is a member of the "I should worry club."

"What a heavenly little dog."
"Yes, he's a skye terrier."

MONTREAL WOMAN SHOOTS HER DAUGHTER AND MORTALLY WOUNDS GRANDCHILD

Terrible Deed While Woman Was in a Fit of Melancholy.

ALEXANDRIA, Ont., Sept. 22.—Mrs. J. H. A. Taylor, of Montreal, shot and killed her daughter, Mrs. Harold W. Norton, and seriously wounded her 13-year-old grandchild, Lulu Norton, also of Montreal, about six o'clock yesterday morning while they were asleep at the home of her son, J. A. H. Taylor. J. A. H. Taylor is a Montreal business man, who came to Alexandria a short time ago intending to carry on a model farm to supply the Montreal markets with eggs, poultry and other farm products.

On Saturday evening his mother, Mrs. J. A. H. Taylor, her husband, her daughter, Mrs. Harold W. Norton and her granddaughter, Lulu Norton, came from Montreal to Alexandria on a visit. It appeared to be a happy family reunion. The family retired late Saturday night, Mrs. Norton and her child sleeping downstairs while the others slept upstairs, and all was peaceful till Sunday morning at daybreak when Mr. Taylor, sr., and the other inmates were startled by revolver shots and screams. Mr. Taylor, sr., rushed to the stairs only to meet his wife coming up in the dim light of the morning with her face streaming with blood.

It would appear that Mrs. Taylor, who had been suffering for some time from melancholia, found a loaded 32-calibre revolver in a drawer in her son's dresser. She concealed it in her clothing and came downstairs to the room in which Mrs. Norton and her child Lulu were sleeping.

Without warning, while they slept, she shot Mrs. Norton in the left eye. She then shot the child in the temple and then turned the gun on herself. This last shot, however, failed to kill her, passing through her upper lip and nose and then cutting a deep gash in her forehead, and finally passing into the ceiling. There were four shots fired, but just where the fourth shot went is unknown. After the shooting Mrs. Taylor then threw the revolver away and rushed upstairs, her face streaming with the blood from the self-inflicted wounds. She was met on the stairs by Mrs. Taylor, jr., and Mr. Taylor, sr., who were awakened by the screams and shots below. She could give no motive for the awful deed.

Drs. J. T. Hope and K. McLellan were at once called, but in spite of their efforts, Mrs. Norton died from the effects of the wounds about noon yesterday.

An inquest will be held to-day. Mrs. Taylor in the meantime is being held in custody at her son's home, in charge of D. J. Macdonnell, chief of police. There is only a very slight hope for the child's recovery. Dr. Archibald of Montreal was summoned.

Harold W. Norton, husband of the dead woman, sailed for England last week. He was private secretary to Charles R. Hosmer of Montreal, and was called away on personal business. An attempt is being made to get in communication with him by wireless.

Mrs. Taylor, who fired the fatal shots, is a woman of about 58 years of age. She has for some time past showed signs of melancholia, and although she has never been confined to any institution, at various times she has threatened to commit suicide by drowning.

MANN DISGUSTED

Leaves Platform at Windsor When National Anthem is Sung.

WINDSOR, Sept. 22.—Tom Mann, the English labor agitator, left the speakers' platform in the Windsor Athletic Club in disgust Saturday night as John R. Mason, president of the Trades and Labor Council, sang "God Save the King." Mason's song followed a revolutionary speech by Mann, in which he characterized laws as the work of "dirty" Governments, derided the Church, belittle the King of Britain and defied the Canadian police to arrest him for his inflammatory utterances. Mann was invited to speak to workingmen of Windsor by unions of the city.

"I believe," he said, "that those who work, those who create wealth, should control their own energies, work for their own profit, and own the means of production and distribution."

He was especially bitter toward politicians and Governments, who, he declared, were controlled by the capitalistic class.

Boy-Girl Sent Home.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—The Montreal girl, Benedictine Wiseman, who masqueraded as a boy in Toronto for several months, was placed on board a G.T.R. train on Friday night en route for her home in Montreal. Whether she arrived there or not is a different matter, as she was not under custody and had repeatedly declared she would not return to her home. No word has yet been received whether the "boy-girl" reached Montreal or not.

Grenfell as Best Man.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell, head of the Labrador Mission for Deep Sea Fishermen, will act as best man for Francis B. Sayre when he is married to the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson, at the White House, on Nov. 25, it is said.

Dr. and Mrs. Grenfell are expected in Philadelphia in a few days. They are planning to spend the winter in England.

THE BALANCE OF TRADE

Canada on the Debit Side

The balance of trade between U. S. and Canada is several hundred million of dollars against Canada which must be paid in cash. The trade returns show that in almost every item, especially agricultural products, the excess of American products coming into Canada over those of Canada going into the U. S., is large.

POST OFFICE IN TORONTO

New Edifice Will be Most Handsome in Canada.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—This city is to have a postoffice which, it is said, will not only excel every postoffice building in the Dominion, but will, when completed, rank with anything on the continent.

That the city is to have the finest building used for this purpose in the whole of Canada was the definite statement made last night by Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, in an interview.

Hon. Mr. Rogers arrived in Toronto last night from Ottawa, and is to make an inspection of the Toronto harbor in company with the harbor commissioners. His visit is of even greater importance, however, and this fact was disclosed when he came out with the statement that the chief object of his being here will be to make a personal inspection of the site for Toronto's new postoffice, and that this is to be followed in short order by the calling for tenders for what is destined to be Canada's most magnificent postal building.

The property on which the new building is to stand runs west from the present Adelaide street structure to Victoria street, north to Lombard street and stretches east from the present building almost to Church street, the entire space to be taken up by the new building.

It is the intention to build a wing of the new postoffice first. On the removal of the occupants of the old building to the section of the new structure one of Toronto's old landmarks will disappear.

BRIDES TO BE MEET DEATH

Took Refuge in Grotto Which Lightning Demolished

Were Picking Flowers for the Wedding Ceremony

Canadian Press Despatch.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 22.—Four girls who were to be married yesterday at the village Nagy, Varad, went picking flowers to decorate the church for the ceremony, and when a storm was seen coming up, they took refuge in a grotto which was demolished by a stroke of lightning. At night the bodies of all four were found in the ruins.

SNOWFALL AT DULUTH

Canadian Press Despatch.

DULUTH, Sept. 22.—Snow fell all over Northern Minnisota and around Lake Superior yesterday. This is the earliest fall in thirty years.

COLLISION OF TRAINS TAKES FOUR LIVES

Many Passengers Also Injured When Electric Trains Come Together

Canadian Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Two electric trains on the Long Island Railroad collided near College Point at seven o'clock this morning. Both motormen, one conductor and an unidentified passenger were killed. Thirty or forty persons were injured.

HE CONSTRUCTED MOST OF C.P.R.

Late James Ross Was Widely Known Engineer and Capitalist.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—The death occurred yesterday morning of James Ross, the well-known railway contractor, engineer, capitalist and connoisseur. Mr. Ross had been suffering from heart trouble for two weeks past.

Mr. Ross was born at Cromarty, Scotland, in 1848, and received his education in Scotland and England. After spending some years on railway and harbor and waterworks construction in Great Britain, he came to America in 1870 and entered the service of various U. S. lines.

In 1878-9 Mr. Ross built the Credit Valley Railway and was appointed, after its construction, general manager of that road.

In 1883 he took control of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway west of Winnipeg, and in 1885 completed for the company their line over the Rocky Mountains, the Selkirks and the Gold Range. In 1886 he undertook for the C.P.R. the settlement of their location east of Montreal, and their legislation in Maine.

In 1892 he joined Wm. Mackenzie in purchasing the Toronto Railway from the City of Toronto, and afterwards rebuilt its tracks, making it an electric line. He also converted, in a like manner, the street railways of Winnipeg, Montreal and St. John.

Subsequently he was for many years president and active head of the Dominion Coal Co. Although Mr. Ross withdrew from most of his business activities, he retained the presidency of the Dominion Bridge Co. and of the St. John Railway.

Among his numerous benefactions Mr. Ross presented to the citizens of Lindsay, Ont., the Ross Memorial Hospital and a Nurses' Home, as memorials to his parents, and gave largely to the Alexandra and Royal Victoria Hospitals of Montreal, and to McGill University and the Montreal Art Association, of which last named he was president.

Wants Germany To Exhibit.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Representative Richard Bartholdt of Missouri, who is staying at Badherzburg, wrote Saturday to The Cologne Gazette and The Frankfort Gazette, urging reconsideration of eGrmany's decision not to participate in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915, as this is, he points out, a deflection from Emperor William's policy of cementing the friendship between the two countries.

Northcliffe In Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—Lord Northcliffe and his party, who have been in America for the last fortnight, arrived in Montreal at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The party includes Lord and Lady Northcliffe, Mrs. Douglass, Mrs. Sennent, Mr. Newton Horne and Mr. H. Russell Wakefield. Lord Northcliffe is to speak at a special meeting of the Canadian Club to-day.

Protecting Exhibitors.

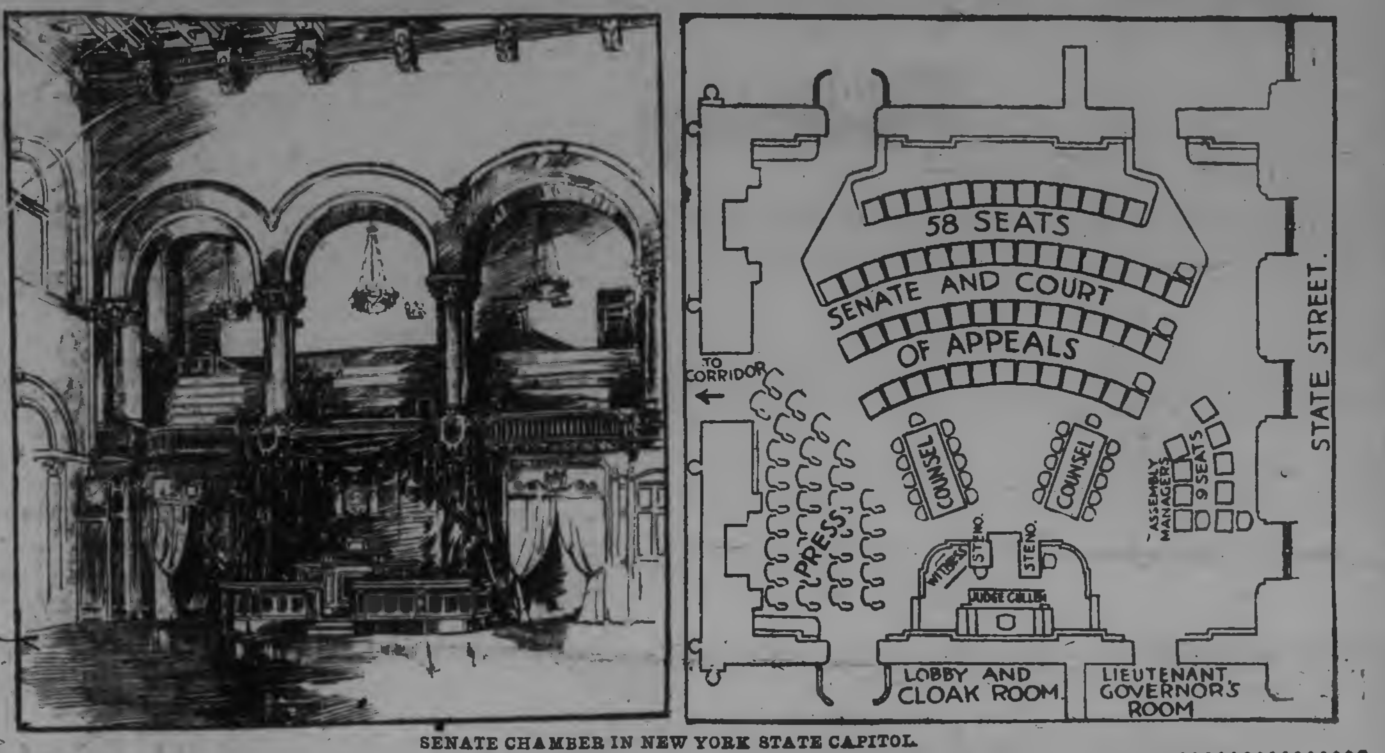
WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—President Wilson has signed the bill recently passed by Congress providing that all articles imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the Panama-Pacific Exposition shall be admitted free of duty. Infringement of the rights of foreign exhibitors would be punished by imprisonment or fine, or both, in the discretion of the court. Representative Kahn of California is the author of the act.

WHERE THE IMPEACHMENT TRIAL OF GOVERNOR SULZER IS BEING HELD



SENATE CHAMBER IN NEW YORK STATE CAPITOL.

MESSAGE TO THE MEXICANS

Huerta Pledges Himself to Hold Orderly Elections.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—Provisional President Huerta issued a declaration yesterday assuring the people that the elections will be held in October. He said: "My greatest desire is that the whole nation, according to law, should show its will in the designation of the authorities who direct its destinies." Huerta denied that the Government had a candidate for the coming elections. He said: "It would not only be anomalous for the Government to have an official candidate but wrong that it even have any predilection of favoritism in supporting any candidate, since the role it should play always, and especially under the existing conditions, is to avoid disturbances to public tranquility, repressing every disorder at the polls with police, which only have jurisdiction, and when such disturbances become dangerous suppressing them with force of arms.

"In this case the army will play the role not of political imposition, but of maintaining public order, were it seriously affected, and to sustain the democratic institutions which are the basis of our social institutions. I must declare once and for all, in the face of the whole nation, that I shall duly carry out the obligations which I contracted, being the establishment of peace and security in the Republic, at the same time leaving the various political parties free, so that without suppression whatever from the Government, they may place candidates in the field to carry on the campaigns and take their ideals and aspirations to a happy termination."

Huerta is showing the strain during the last few days due to the conflict with the Chamber of Deputies, also the accident to his son, which greatly affected him. In a conversation yesterday he indicated while he considered the situation serious and possibly critical it was by no means desperate.

Eduardo Tamariz last night resigned his portfolio as Minister of Public Instruction and resumed his seat in the Chamber of Deputies. Gen. Huerta had a conference with the leaders of the Opposition in an effort to close the breach.

GREAT GENERALS ENLISTED.

Carson Says Some of Britain's Finest Will Assist Ulster.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Unionists, is now engaged in reviewing the volunteers at various places in Antrim. Speaking at a demonstration at Antrim Castle on Saturday, he pointed to Gen. Sir George Richardson, who holds the post of "general officer commanding the volunteers," and said:

"We have our general on the platform. The radical press is exhibiting some emotion at the presence of this great general among us. I tell the Government that we have more. We have the pledges of some of the greatest generals in the army that they will come over and help us keep the old flag flying when the time arrives."

Freighter Is Ashore.

PORT COLBORNE, Sept. 22.—The steamer Haddington, which went ashore six miles west of here, is still fast on the rocks to-day. Reed's wrecking steamer Manistique, after taking about one hundred tons off her, had to abandon her on account of weather and return to the harbor. The Haddington is leaking and her compartments have been filled with water to keep her from moving. If the weather moderates the Manistique will make another effort to release her to-day.

The Haddington is owned by the Merchants' Mutual Steamship Co. of Toronto and had a cargo of coal for Montreal.

Shot at Range.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—Stanley Harris, a member of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, was accidentally shot dead at Rockliffe ranges Saturday afternoon.

The Dundonald match, a marching and firing competition among the regiments of the Ottawa garrison, was in progress, the various squads being lined up ready to shoot. One of the men in the squad behind that in which Harris was standing was engaged in loading a rifle magazine when it went off. The bullet took effect in the unfortunate man's side, and he died within a few minues. He leaves a young wife and infant child.

CLOUDS HAVE PASSED AWAY

Britain's Strike Menace Removed After Conference.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The strike of the railroad men in the British Isles was brought to an end Saturday when officials of the companies reached an agreement with the representatives of the unions on the basis of the reinstatement of all strikers who would handle all traffic which the railroads were bound to carry under the law. The trades union officials strongly urged the men to assent to this, and it is expected that they will do so at their meetings to be held in various centres.

The executive committee of the National Union of Railwaymen sent a manifesto last evening to all the branches of the union, requesting the members to resume work immediately.

The representatives of the railway companies at Liverpool announced Saturday night that the settlement applied to all companies and places, including Dublin. All the men who have been on strike or were suspended will be reinstated without being penalized.

Indications also point to a settlement of the motor omnibus trouble when Sir George Askwith of the Board of Trade brings his persuasive powers to bear on both sides. A conference is to be held on Monday at the Board of Trade offices.

Postal Employes Want Strike.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 22—The Postal Federation, at a special conference in Birmingham Saturday, took under consideration the report recently made by a committee of Parliament on the matter of postal service grievances. The Federation violently denounced the report and adopted a resolution favoring a strike.

FREDERICK SMITH THE VICTIM OF FATAL MISHAP

Light Hook of Travelling Crane Fell on Him at the C.G.E. And He Died In the Hospital

Victim Leaves a Widow but no Children—An Inquest Opened

Another fatal accident, the second within the course of a few weeks, occurred at the Canadian General Electric Co shortly before the noon hour and Mr. Smith, aged 35 years, who resides on High street, was the victim.

Smith was employed as a crane hitcher in the machine shop and was performing his usual duties. The man operating the travelling crane was James Neary. They had been making small lift, for which a light hook was used, and were about to use the heavy hook for a big lift. Neary started to haul up the light hook, and as the heavy hook was descending slowly, it is supposed that he didn't notice the light hook nearing the shaft or drum around which the cable winds.

CABLE GAVE WAY.

The light hook reached the drum and was wedged there. The shaft continued turning and the strain was too much for the cable. The hook, which weighs between two and three hundred pounds, broke off, and fell to the floor, a distance of about thirty feet.

Smith was standing waiting for the heavy hook to come down when, without a moment's notice, the light hook fell. As he was directly under, the hook struck him on the left hip, breaking his left leg in three places and causing internal injuries. The Dan Spence ambulance rushed him to the Nicholls Hospital, where he passed away before one o'clock.

The body was removed to Belleghem's Undertaking Rooms, where Coroner Dr. Greer empanelled a jury Saturday night.

The deceased leaves a widow, but no children.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon from the late home to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. H. J. Keith will officiate.

The jury is as follows: Morley Lyle, foreman; J. O. Fife, J. W. Stewart, Dickson Best, Baptiste O'Dette, Arthur Simms, John McCann, Patrick McGrath, John A. Armstrong, John Clancy, William Gibbs, Wm. Clancy.

The inquest was adjourned till Wednesday evening, Sept. 24th at 7.30 in the police court chambers.

YOUNG GIRL DEAD; BOY IS MISSING

Fifteen Year Old Lad Suspected of Having Caused Death of Girl Who Was Shot Through the Neck.

MADOC, Ont., Sept. 22.—Seventeen-year-old Ella Franks, living with her parents about three miles north of Madoc village was found Saturday evening dead in the pantry, having been shot through the neck. Her father and mother were on their way to Millbridge when the news reached them. The daughter and an adopted boy, Eddie, aged about 15, were left at home. The boy cannot now be found and a gun is missing from the house. It is supposed that the boy committed the crime and skipped out. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

BANK ROBBERY SUSPECT.

"Bid" Houlihan Is Arrested In Detroit Charged With B. C. Crime.

DETROIT, Sept. 22.—William, alias "Bid," Houlihan, said to have a long prison record, was taken into custody here yesterday afternoon and detained while the local authorities communicated with the Bank of Montreal concerning the $372,000 bank robbery at New Westminster, B.C., more than a year ago. Houlihan carried $350 in Bank of Montreal bills when taken into custody, and it is alleged that the bills answer the description of some of the money taken in the New Westminster robbery.

After several hours of investigation the police said last night that they were convinced that the serial numbers on the bills in Houlihan's possession had been altered, and that he would be detained pending further investigations. When questioned Houlihan is said to have refused to tell where he obtained the money or where he had been staying before the authorities took him into custody.

DR. SEYMOUR PRESIDENT.

Saskatchewan Official Head of Health Board Association.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 22.—The third annual congress of Canadian Board of Health Association came to a close at noon Saturday with the election of officers and the adoption of resolutions.

Dr. M. N. Seymour, provincial health officer for Saskatchewan, was elected president without opposition W. J. Hanna and Hon. Geo. Langley honorary president and vice-president. Other officers are: Vice-presidents, J. W. Pagl, Quebec; T. Aird Murray, Toronto; Duncan Anderson, Toronto; Prof. I. R. Amyot, Toronto University; T. A. White, Montreal; P. Lustin, general secretary; Major Lorne Drum, Ottawa, treasurer; George D. Porter, Toronto.

Fort William and Port Arthur were selected for the congress of 1914.

Exodus Exaggerated.

VANCOUVER, Feb. 22.—Neither the American consul-general at Vancouver nor the chief inspector of the United States Immigration Department would discuss the statements attributed to W. R. Trotter of the Vancouver Trades and Labor Council, as reported in a despatch from Ottawa, in which he declared that 10,000 Americans, formerly residing in this city and province, went south during the 90 days ending with July. From enquiries here it is believed that while a great many citizens of the United States have returned to their own country, the number has been somewhat over-estimated.

Railways In Conflict.

GALT, Sept. 22.—A miniature railway war has been raging in this vicinity for the past three days, the belligerents being the Grand Valley Railway and its rival, the new Lake Erie & Northern.

The fight has been carried on by officials and workmen of the two lines. The trouble arose over the new railway putting in a diamond near Galt to cross the Grand Valley tracks, and to prevent the new lines from making progress the opposing road has special constables on the scene, and two arrests were made, although the Grand Valley Railway put up every resistance.

SULZER SCORES

Hearsay Evidence Will be Barred at the Trial.

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 22.—It would seem that in the rules adopted by the impeachment court and the seating, as judges, of Senators, challenged as hostile to Governor Sulzer, the former executive has gained a series of advantages, rather than a setback. Governor Sulzer's counsel denies that the former had recognized Lieutenant-Governor Glynn as acting governor. The "advantages" claimed might be roughly enumerated as follows:

The adoption of the rules of procedure, providing that the rules of evidence of the Supreme Court shall be followed, was a big victory, because excluding hearsay evidence.

The challenging of the right of Senators Frawley, Wagner, Ramsperger and Sanner to sit in judgment on Mr. Sulzer, accomplished what the Sulzer counsel desired.

The seating of the three assigned members of the Court of Appeals, with the seven elected members, making ten judicial officers in all. This makes it necessary for the governors' Tammany former to recruit three more votes to expel Sulser from office. Mr. Herrick for Sulzer, has never acceded the right of Lieutenant-Governor Glynn to act as governor of the state.

Ten Years For Manslaughter.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 22.—Found guilty of the reduced charge of manslaughter, Napoleon Lamerand and Edward Boutin were Saturday morning sentenced by Justice Middleton to serve ten years in Kingston Penitentiary, while Young, the third prisoner, was discharged, the grand jury finding no bill against him.

The proceedings followed the killing at Oba on the night of Aug. 17 of a Russian laborer during a wedding celebration. Everyone was drunk and the ill-feeling which had existed for some time between the Russian, French and Italian laborers found vent. The Russian was knocked down with a billet of wood and was kicked in the face while down.

Big Yields Near Moose Jaw.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Sept. 22.—After a temporary lull owing to the wet weather threshing operations were resumed again yesterday morning. It is conservatively estimated that more than one-half the crop in this district has already been threshed. Some remarkable yields were reported. At Rouleau, R. J. Moore threshed 2,300 bushels of Marquis wheat off 42 acres of summer fallow, an average of 52 bushels per acre, and there are other yields almost as high.

Flies 50 Miles an Hour.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—The new naval Zeppelin dirigible arrived here Saturday, having made her first trip from Friedrichshafen, Lake Constance, in 11 hours, at an average speed against a contrary 16-mile wind, at a fraction over 50 miles an hour. The trip had been considerably postponed owing to the disaster which overtook the dirigible's sister ship, which was destroyed in a gale off Heligoland on Sept. 9, when 14 of her crew lost their lives.

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, SEPT. 22, 1913.

IN THE WILDERNESS

The Globe, like the Tempter in the wilderness, who quoted scripture when it suited his politics, appealed the other day to the authority of a British journal. The London Daily News is a Radical organ with a very local vision. It in no way represents the views of the men who are controlling either British or Imperial affairs.

The London News is a little Englander in the same sense in which the Globe is a little Canadian. If the News had been running the Government of the British Isles there would have been no British colonies at all. If the Globe had been governing Canada from the first this northern part of America would have either been absorbed by the United States, or Canadians would have been absorbed by the aborigines, and Dr. Macdonald would have now been living in the wilds of the Rocky Mountains, adorned in the habit of his kilted forefathers, and periodically shouting defiance to the British and Yankee invader to the tune of "Scots Wa' Hae."

If the Globe wishes to know the views of broad minded and responsible men, let it read and quote journals which represent the practical politics of both Liberals and Conservatives in England.

The London Daily News has more faith in the policy of giving a man five shillings per week when he is too old to work than in finding employment for a man when he is young and able to work. It does not recognize that commerce, and not politics, is the vital principle of a prosperous and healthy nation.

The London News and the Globe are more concerned about proving their own idealistic theories than they are about doing what is useful and practical. The latter has greater delight in grinning at emergency and "contribution" than in finding an honorable and practical way out of our present pauperism in naval defence.

The Globe accused Mr. Borden with being "muddled" in his speech at Halifax. If there is one adjective that does not apply to Mr. Borden's speech at Halifax, and that does apply most aptly to the Globe's editorial and its naval policy, it is that word "muddled."

A CANUTE WANTED

The [illegible] to encroach upon the southeastern shores of England and there is some talk of prevailing upon Mr. Asquith to introduce a bill into Parliament to stop it.

Such a measure would we presume, be called the "Canute Bill" and no doubt its chief clause would be: "Thus far shalt thou go and no further."

The North Sea Fleet does not seem to have any restraining effect, and Britannia cannot be said to rule those particular waves. The reason for this washing away of the beach and cliffs is because of the chalky nature of the coast line between Yarmouth and Dover. The same subsidence can be seen on Lake Ontario, near Toronto, where the soft clay cliff periodically collapses by being undermined by the waters of the lake.

But if England is being washed away on the side next to Germany and Holland, and the gap between those countries is becoming wider, it is gaining ground on the western shore. It is, as it were, putting out its arms to embrace the Emerald Isle.

The port of Liverpool has to be continually dredged or that fine seaport would soon become like the Dee which is no longer navigable as in the old days. All this goes to prove the words of Byron:

"Man marks the earth with ruin—
his control
Stops with the shore."

ANOTHER FLAG INCIDENT

Some of the Sabbath schools that are celebrating their "Rally Day" have supplied their children with badges, which are a sort of small flag of the "Stars and stripes."

Many of the children have painted out the stripes, and church members are enquiring as to the source of this inovation.

We have no desire to create another "flag incident," but if any national emblem is to be displayed on these occasions, let the kiddies wear the good old "Union Jack."

There is a tendency to introduce the stars into the British ensign and this was noticed in some of the decorations of the recent Peterboro Fair.

If it is a sign that Canadians are hitching their waggon to the stars this is very commendable, but let them be careful lest they get the stripes.

EDITORIAL NOTES

America is discussing the question as to whether they ought to allow Mr. Pankhurst to land. There seems to be no anxiety in England as to her reception. The Home Secretary and a few other secretaries not to mention the Police "Cat," are rather hoping the Americans will adopt this very troublesome mouse.

It must be very exasperating to the "cat" of the "cat and mouse" bill, to have a mouse that it cannot eat when it is tired of playing with it.

The suffragettes of Denmark have got the vote, and that without smashing a window or assaulting a Cabinet Minister.

The Westminster Gazette has a cartoon in which Huerta and Wilson are depicted sitting back to back. President Wilson is saying: "I won't speak to you until you behave yourself."

Huerta replies brutally: "I won't behave myself till you speak to me!"

A MAN WITH A MESSAGE AT ST. PAULS CHURCH

Rev. G. Stanley Russell M. A. of England Speaks of the Desert of Life

(By Our Special Reporter.)

The pulpit of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was occupied yesterday by the Rev. G. Stanley Russell, M. A., of St Ann's-on-Sea, England.

Rev. Mr Russell recently came to Canada to be married and was visiting in the city on his way back to the old land.

There were good congregations at both services to hear the English preacher and those who heard him did not go empty away.

The evening service which the present writer attended was conducted with that subdued but rich fervor characteristic of the Presbyterians, and but for the caps and gowns of the choir ladies, one might easily imagine one was worshipping in an English city church.

Mr. Russell showed the calibre of his thought and the loftiness of his vision in his prayer, which was rythmical and poetic in expression and feeling.

WHY NOT GO TO CHURCH.

Speaking to an intellectual business man the other day, who declared that he had long ago given up going to church, I asked him the reason why. He replied that he liked to hear a good sermon, but he asked me where in any of our churches to-day will you find a man with a message?

There may be something in this criticism, the obvious answer is that a man who wants to hear a message will get it from the poorest of preachers sometimes. But there is some ground for the complaint, for it will be found to be a general one, and it would be well for preachers to face it, and not condemn the critic merely.

A MAN WITH A MESSAGE.

Rev. G Stanley Russell was a man with a message last night, and he delivered it, both in the way he conducted the service and in the sermon. The hymns were particularly well chosen. One by Whittier was sung softly and gave that sense of quiet resignation and trust so characteristic of Whittier:

O Sabbath rest in Galilee!
O calm of hills above,
Where Jesus knelt to share with thee
The silence of Eternity,
Interpreted by love!

With that deep hush subduing all
Our words and works that drown
The tender whisper of Thy call,
As noiseless let Thy blessing fall
As fell the manna down.

Mr. Russell took for his text a passage in the 35th chapter of Isaiah, 7th verse:—"The mirage shall become a pool and the thirsty land springs of water." This is the marginal rendering.

The sermon was well thought out, well written out and well read out: for Mr. Russell reads all his sermons from manuscript. This fact alone notwithstanding his good delivery would condemn him with some people, who would rather listen to a man beating the air for an hour "without a note" than follow a choicely worded and carefully thought out discourse.

THE READ SERMON.

The read sermon is not the ideal, the downward glance is objectional to some, but every man must choose his best means of conveying his best; and with Mr. Russell the reading does not detract much from the effect of his delivery, for he has freedom and animation, and force in utternece and gesture which comes from a mastery of his subject. He handled the text well and applied very helpful lessons to individual and national life. He said that readers of the Old Testament soon discovered the prominent part the desert played in the thought of its writers. There was always the back ground of the wilderness to the Jew who was for ever comparing it with the beauty and fertility of Zion. In exile it was the desert which was the barrier between him and home.

These beautiful songs were full of desert pictures.

"My text is the heart of the poem, for it deals with the most pitiless and terrible things that the desert contains—the thirst which spells agony and death and the mirage which mocks the traveller with false promises of help and deliverance.

DESERT PILGRIMS.

"There is a sense in which we are all pilgrims seeking an eternal country through the wilderness of time. Mirage and thirst are realities even if only temporary and transient, in the pilgrimage of every soul; illusion and longing play their part in every life. We strive after visions and ideals and as we approach them they disappear. We thirst for the unattainable and long for the impossible."

The preacher went on to show that the prophet faced the desert of life, he did not shut his eyes to the hard facts of existance, the lonliness and suffering and disappointments of life. To use his own words: "The man who can face life with this settled and habitual faith is living on a very high plane. He who become able to face every tract of experience, however hard and full of disappointment or of agony, secure in the faith that it is not profitless but productive, not cruel but set against a back ground of love. To such a one the message of God is. 'Be strong, fear not, behold the mirage shall become a pool and the thirsty land-springs of water'"

DESERT PICTURE.

There were many beautiful passages which were gems of truth and poetry in themselves. Especially impressive was the description of the traveller in the desert with cracked tongue and blood-shot eyes he staggers on only to find the mirage receding before his advance, mocking him with its fairy magic until at last he realizes that it is a creature of his own fancy and exhausted and broken-hearted he lays him down to die."

A DESERT WORLD.

"The color and radiance of life have faded leaving only the harsh monotony of the desert." He said the world was full of people who had failed in their efforts to attain to their ideals.

"Carlyle once said that this world would never of itself satisfy the soul of one shoe-black. It is God who makes the difference; without Him the thirsty land, with Him the life giving spring."

This passing English preacher had a message and he delivered it faithfully and well.

Counterfeiting In Jail.

PETERHEAD, Scotland, Sept. 20.—That counterfeit bank notes so skillfully executed as to deceive the local bankers and shopkeepers were made by convicts in the Peterhead prison was a startling discovery made yesterday by Scotland Yard detectives. In the printing of the bank notes the convicts had used paper in which rations had been served them.

Hewn Out of Rock.

A peculiarity of the New South Wales Goverment Dockyard on Cockatoo Island, in Sydney Harbor, is that it is hewn out of solid rock. Historically, Cockatoo Island is of much interest, as it was the site of a large prison in the days when British convicts were deported to Australia. The present offices on the island are in the old prison buildings, the stone walls, barred windows, and iron-doored cells being still in evidence.

The formation of the island was originally quite unsuitable for a dockyard, as the solid rock rose sheer from the water to a height of 60 feet to 70 feet. By using convict labor, however, the rock was gradually cut back, first to permit the building of graving docks, and later to make room for building slips and shops near water level. The work has been continued until at present two-thirds of the total area of thirty-three acres has been brought to a practically uniform level of about 15 feet above high tide.—Globe.

A Night Long and Happily Remembered

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Molly Dearborn's father signaled the trolley car at the corner of the village street and helped Kitty Baker up the high step to one of the front seats.

"Thank you, Mr. Dearborn; good night," cried Kitty, waving her hand as he swung off the moving car.

"Good night," he called back, adding to the conductor as the rear of the car passed him, "Please let that young lady off at Belmont street."

The conductor shouted back some answer, and the almost empty car whizzed away into the darkness of the surrounding country.

"Grandmother will scold," she thought, turning up the collar of her coat and lifting her face to the strong breeze that swept through the open car. "She will tell me that Bakers and Withersams always rode in their own carriages and that no lady returned home unescorted from any merrymaking. But we are quite poor now, and our days of splendor are past. As long as I work side by side in the same office as Molly I must use the same vehicle that she does."

Kitty smiled a little as she thought of the errand that had taken her to Molly's that August evening. Molly was to be married, and Kitty had gone out to Rosedale to see all the dainty details of the trousseau and to discuss the simple plans. She was to be bridesmaid when Molly was married in the village church.

The conductor thrust a calloused blackened palm under her pretty nose, and Kitty fumbled for a nickel and paid it. The bell jangled several times, [illegible] of the car toward the city between walls of green trees on either side of the track.

Thinking of weddings reminded Kitty of one that might have been hers if her pride had not caused her to break troth with Len Thornleigh when the Baked fortune went to smash at her father's death. It had been Len's first year at college, and he had chafed bitterly because he must wait three years before he could leave and support her. He wanted to break off and go into his father's business without completing his college career, but the great magnate had demurred and held Len to a promise made years before.

Kitty had not seen Len since she had sent him that cruel letter that made him see light at last. Nothing but cruelty would have opened his eyes. She closed her eyes now, and a strange smile rose to her lips as she thought of the last three years of waiting.

They stopped at a little hooded station and changed conductors. Kitty Baker never knew it. She sat there drowsily, her face very tender, thinking of Len Thornleigh.

The bell ringing up fares roused her a little, and she groped for another five cent piece. There was nothing left in her purse save a silver quarter. She held it in her gloved fingers, waiting for the conductor.

When he came she did not look up. He leaned across the intervening space and held out his hand.

Kitty stared down at the hand. It was very different from the hand of the other conductor. This was a clean, brown, muscular looking hand, with well kept nails and a plain gold ring on the little finger.

It was a familiar hand. A sudden terror smote Kitty Baker, and she thrust forward the silver quarter. Somehow it spun away out of her fingers and went into the darkness.

"Oh!" she cried sharply. "I haven't another penny with me!" Then she looked into his face and saw that if the hand was the hand of Len Thornleigh the face certainly belonged to the son of the great financier. His eyes met hers uncertainly, steadied and became bits of gray agate.

It could not be Len, for he did not recognize her. It was a wonderful resemblance.

"That was all the money I had," apologized Kitty. "What shall I do?"

"You can pay me another time," he said gravely and touched his hat. He rang up her fare and went away to the back of the car.

Kitty sat paralyzed with surprise. It was Len Thornleigh's voice she had heard too.

Her good sense told her that this was absurd—to imagine that this trolley conductor could be Len Thornleigh! Why, Len drove around in his own high power motorcars, and she had read only the day before that his father was building a great country house at Marblehead.

The car whistled shrilly as it went down the steep incline that approached a narrow bridge over the little river. As they rumbled over the bridge the car slackened speed and came to a sudden standstill at the same instant that the lights went out.

The conductor went forward and sat down with the motorman. They talked together in low tones. Kitty looked back through the car and saw one man sitting alone on the rear seat. He appeared to be asleep, although he stirred as she looked at him.

It was very quiet there waiting for the power to return to the trolley cables. Kitty yawned sleepily and wondered if grandmother would scold very much when she returned home.

of Continental cavalry at a little town not far from her home, and she resolved to ride there in the hope of finding them and inducing them to attack the British force and possibly rescue her husband.

Athol, having been taken before the officer commanding the British troops, was searched, and a bit of paper crumpled into a hard ball was taken from his pocket. It was opened and found to be a statement of the British forces in South Carolina. It was of course more of a surprise to Athol than the British officer, who had been informed by Pinckton that if he would conceal his men on the Charleston road that day he would be likely to intercept a man passing with information for General Marion.

The first impulse of the officer was to hang Athol without even a trial by drumhead court martial. Then it occurred to him that the man should have some time to make preparation for death, and he concluded to go through the form of a trial and leave the time of his execution to the court. The command was a small one, and there were but half a dozen officers connected with it. These were all convened as a court, and Athol was brought before them. There was no doubt that he had been caught carrying information, the penalty for which was death, but he was permitted to make an explanation. He said that he was on his way to Charleston when arrested in answer to a summons he had received from there; that he was neither Tory nor rebel; that he had no idea how the communication had come into his pocket. He asked to see it and was permitted to inspect it. The handwriting was very like his own, which added to his astonishment. Not a suspicion that his friend Pinckton had put it there entered his head.

Of course the case was plain to the court that tried him, though since they were convened to convict him this made little difference. They brought in a verdict of guilty and sentenced him to be hanged the next morning.

Meantime Mrs. Athol was riding to the camp of the Continental troopers she had heard of. Reaching the place where they had been, she found that they had moved. No one knew where, for troops in war time are not accustomed to tell where they are going. But the direction they had taken was known, and Mrs. Athol started after them.

While riding she thought of the trap that it was evident her former suitor had laid for her husband and wondered what it was that had been dropped in the latter's pocket. This she could not divine. She had no idea of the depth of degradation into which Pinckton had sunk, the treachery to one who trusted him implicitly and considered him a bosom friend. Tears came into her eyes as she thought of her husband's unjust speech to her when she had warned him.

Along the route she took she made inquiries from time to time of the troopers she was chasing and learned that she was gradually drawing nearer to them. Then they were but a few miles ahead, then a mile, and at last she came upon them as they were about going into bivouac for the night. She sought the officer in command and told him of his proximity to the British troops.

The officer knew of this force and, having superior numbers, was after them to attack and capture them, but he had been misinformed as to their whereabouts and was moving in the wrong direction. Mrs. Athol offered to pilot him to their camp, but begged him to send a few men to Pinckton's plantation to arrest him. To this the officer assented, and it was agreed that after supper and a rest the command would saddle up with a view to surrounding the Britishers before day.

It was 10 o'clock when they started, lighted by a half moon and piloted by Mrs. Athol. She described the location of the enemy so that the American force might be divided and approach from different directions. Before they reached the vicinity of the British camp it was near moonset, and the night had become dark from clouds. On reaching the place where her husband had been captured Mrs. Athol described three different routes by which they might come upon the British. The separate bodies started and were each given an hour to get into position. The signal for attack was to be two shots in quick succession from the troops accompanied by the commanding officer.

When those two shots rang out on the still night the British sentries gave an alarm, and the redcoats sprang to arms—too late! They were hemmed in, and it did not require a long time for their commanding officers to realize the fact. He was called on to surrender and did so without firing a shot.

Athol not only found himself liberated, but by his wife's instrumentality. She said nothing of Pinckton's treachery, but in the morning the latter was brought into camp, and Mrs. Athol made a charge against him and requested the American commander to convene a court martial to try him. The officer was not slow in granting the request of one who had given him a victory, and the court was convened.

By this time all knew that a forged document had been placed in Athol's pocket, and Pinckton was charged with having placed it there. He broke down under Mrs. Athol's testimony and confessed his crime.

The court would have inflicted any punishment Mrs. Athol named, but as long as her husband was convinced of his supposed friend's perfidy she requested that he be allowed to go free.

The incident, which had really become a tragedy, changed Athol from being neutral in his sympathies to an ardent patriot, and he enlisted in the American army.

The Writers.

Romain Rolland, to whom the grand literary prize has just been awarded by the French academy, is well known as a playwright, novelist and historical writer. The amount of the award is $2,000.

Algernon Blackwood, son of Sir Arthur Blackwood and the Duchess of Manchester, is one of the newer authors who have had varied experience. He was a newspaper man in New York, farmed and mined in Canada and conducted a hotel. He has also been in the dried milk business. In 1906 he began writing books.

Frau Emma Giehrl of Munich, daughter of a former Bavarian finance minister, recently celebrated a remarkable jubilee. For fifty years she has not left her sickbed, and to forget her sufferings and to give pleasure to other people she has during this period written stories of mystery and educational works. Her books for women and invalids form quite a library.

Fashion Frills.

Paris skirts are reported as diaphanous. Let it be hoped that this is so [illegible] why is it a skirt?—Los Angeles Tribune.

Earrings for men are now on sale in New York. One hopes they will become fashionable so that the sort of men who would wear them can be identified at a glance.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Our inclination is to make no further allusions to the funny kind of clothes the women wear, but we feel it necessary to observe that the present modes are not adapted to the kitchen, nursery or the polls.—Houston Post.

The "Maximum" Wage.

England knew the maximum wage long before the minimum was thought of. It came about after the "black plague" of 1348 had swept away half the population. Work was at a standstill for want of workers, and wages went up so enormously that the state thought it necessary to fix a limit. The state ordered that the laborer should not merely accept gratefully what was offered him, but that he must not leave his parish in search of another master on pain of having the letter "F" (for fugitive) branded on his forehead. Statutes of this kind were popular up to Queen Elizabeth's time, when the last of the series was passed, "in the hope that it should banish idleness, advance husbandry and yield unto the hired person, both in the time of scarcity and in the time of plenty, a convenient proportion of wages."

Australia's Capital.

Canberra, the site of Australia's Federal Capital, has been transformed, and the country for miles around is now a hive of industry. The building trade there is brisk, and elaborate preparations have been made in connection with the commencement of the brickmaking industry. Railway construction between Queanbeyan and Canberra is being pushed on, and even greater activity is shown with the water supply scheme for the federal city. Excellent roads are also being constructed connecting Canberra with the surrounding districts.

Climb Ben Nevis on Cycle.

Mr. J. H. Lawcock, of Beckenham, and Mr. Aubrey Selby, of Bromley, Kent, Eng., have succeeded in an attempt to ascend Ben Nevis on a motorcycle. Ben Nevis is 4,406 feet high, and has a circumference of over 24 miles at the base.

The "Curmudgeon."

The word "curmudgeon" originally meant corn merchant. During a time of financial panic in England the corn merchants were accused by the people of keeping the price of corn up out of greed and hence the name curmudgeon came into use.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 20.—The local market opened steady on firm Liverpool cables, but later, in sympathy with American markets, was inclined to sag. Cash demand for all grades of wheat was excellent, but prices were ½c to 1c down.

Oats and flax were weak and declining. Oats 1c down and flax 5c lower.

CONFESSION WAS FALSE.

Condemned Man Says He Told Story To Save Woman.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 22.—Victor Pople, sentenced to hang here on Thursday for self-confessed murder of the Willis child, and entirely ignorant that papers granting his reprieve were on the way from Ottawa, Saturday made a startling statement in the [illegible] where he is confined. He said that the evidence he gave at the trial and which convicted him, was false and intended to shield the mother of the dead baby, Mrs. Willis. He says he can prove an alibi at the time of the murder and it was after the crime that he met Mrs. Willis, taking her that night to a local hotel where she broke down and confessed to the murder, and that the dead child was lying concealed across the river. Pople will be a material witness when Mrs. Willis comes to trial.

Police Threaten To Strike.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—The City of Verdun, a suburban city to Montreal, with a population of 27,000, is threatened with a strike on its police force. Half of the officers are said to be sore over their pay, declaring that the $12 a week they receive is not sufficient for their needs. In addition to their salary they are supplied with uniforms.

BOGUS GUESTS.

Problem of West End Society Functions in London.

Loud and bitter have been the complaints of late of many London society leaders in regard to the number of uninvited guests—"pests of society," they have been termed by some—who take advantage of the crushes at dances, balls, and receptions, and mix among the guests as though they have been specially invited. As a matter of fact, the audacious intruders at fashionable gatherings have become so many that London hostesses are becoming considerably alarmed.

It was recently mentioned that in one case a lady issued 250 invitations to a ball at a West End hotel. When she found she was charged for 340 guests she naturally asked for an explanation. A list of the names of those who attended was furnished, and she then found that nearly a hundred persons who were total strangers to her had had the impudence to present themselves and share her hospitality.

The great difficulty in guarding against these pests is that hostesses in many cases issue such a large number of invitations that it is quite impossible for them to be personally acquainted with all who attend, and it is quite easy for a well-dressed man or woman, assuming society airs, to attend a crowded function without being questioned, although they may not have been invited.

Furthermore, a hostess' difficulties are considerably increased by the fact that she naturally feels some reluctance in approaching a suspected intruder, for fear of placing herself in an embarrassing position. It has been suggested that the difficulty might be met by asking the guests to show their invitation cards when they reach the house; but it is pointed out that scarcely one person in a dozen would remember to take their invitation card, and there would always be the danger of a hostess asking a guest, maybe some prominent personage whom she did not know, for his or her card as a voucher for their bona fides.

While, however, certain society leaders are naturally indignant at the manner in which they are imposed upon by these outsiders, there are others who, if not exactly welcoming them, regard the intruders with encouraging leniency. And the reason is not very far to seek.

Take a typical instance. A certain titled lady may be giving a ball or banquet to celebrate the "coming out" of her daughter. She naturally desires the affair to be a huge success, attended by everybody who is anybody, in order to increase her social prestige. She sends out invitations to all her friends, and in order to guard against the danger of not having a good attendance she issues invitations haphazard to her friend's friends, asking them to bring along anyone whom they please.

This issuing of invitations broadcast gives the uninvited guest his opportunity. He—it is generally a man—turns up, shakes hands with his hostess, who may be quite unacquainted with his name, but nevertheless thinks that he is one of the friends of her invited guests, mingles with the crowd, and enjoys himself thoroughly, although he has no right in the house or hotel where the reception is being held.

Former Actor Is Dying.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Mr. J. C. Dixon, dentist and actor, is lying in a critical condition at Bellevue Hospital suffering from a complication of diseases. Dr. Dixon, previous to settling down as a dentist in this city some years ago, was well known first as an amateur actor at his home in Montreal, and later as Svengali in Trilby, and in the support of Sir Henry Irving. He is a son of Rev. Canon J. H. Dixon, pastor of St. Jude's church, Montreal. He has been ailing for some months, but his condition grew so much worse a few days ago that he was removed for treatment to the hospital.

TO JAIL FOR ONE MONTH

Harold McDonald Was Charged With Assaulting His Wife

At Police Court this morning, Harold McDonald didn't think he was guilty of assaulting his wife.

"God pity any woman who was ever tied to you—a drunken loafer," said His Worship as he sentenced McDonald to one month in jail.

On the charge of being drunk and disorderly he got one month in jail. The sentences will run concurrently.

WIFE WORKS OUT

Mrs. McDonald is the mother of two children. She works at the Oriental, and the children are in the Shelter. Her husband, she said, could get lots of work. On Saturday night he was drunk and he called her at the back door of the Oriental hotel. He held her and struck her on the back with his fist, and tore off her blouse. "He called me Stella, the one supposed to be his second wife," said witness. She knew her husband had been keeping company with Stella Ball.

He had not given her any money since last June, when he gave her $2.65.

McDONALD'S STORY

McDonald said he returned from Toronto last Saturday night, with the intention of taking his wife back to Toronto, where he had rooms. He admitted he had been drunk. He didn't remember tearing the blouse or hitting his wife.

He said the rooms were on Gerrard street and were the property of the man he worked with.

This was Mr. Logan's first visit to the city and he expressed himself as delighted with the thrifty appearance as evidenced by it sparks and public buildings, but what impressed him more than anything else was the manifest taken on every hand of industrial activity giving promise of the city becoming in the near future a great industrial centre.

SERVICE IN MEMORY OF MISS SISSON AND MISS BODDISON

To be Able to Point to Christian Character is the Joy of Our Christian Faith, Says Rev. R. B. Grobb —It Takes the Sting Out of Death.

Since the accident of a few weeks ago, when five lives were crushed out, two faces have been missing from the services in connection with All Saints' Church.

Last evening, the congregation joined with the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb in a memorial service in memory of two young ladies, Miss Dolly Sisson and Miss Lily Boddison. Relatives and numerous friends not members of the church were also present. The service was an impressive one. Feeling reference was made by the preacher during his sermon to the death of Miss Sisson and Miss Boddison, and his message was one of sympathy to the bereaved and helpfulness to all.

The recent calamity, he said, came to all like a great shock. But there was one great, good thing that came out of all our sadness—when the great bond of human sympathy is manifest in the time of the human sorrow.

Miss Sisson and Miss Boddison would be greatly missed from the sphere of church life. Miss Boddison had come to the church about two years ago from the old land. She had been one of the faithful, regular attendants at church service. Miss Sisson was an older member of the church and she had been one of the faithful attendants at Sunday School and at the church services.

Referring to their Christian character, Rev. Mr Grobb pointed out that this was the joy of our Christian faith. It took the sting out of death.

Appropriate hymns were sung and during the offertory, Mr. George Chandler sang "Crossing the Bar." The congregation remained standing as Mrs. McClelland, the organist, played the Dead March.

EVIDENCE AS TO WALL AT EASTWOOD BUILDING

Contractor Says Work Cost More Than if Done According to By-law — Not a Nine Inch Wall Says Magistrate—Judgment Reserved.

The charge against Isaac Eastwood of having violated the building by-law by the erection of a nine inch brick wall in the fire limits, was heard by Magistrate Dumble this morning.

The wall in question is an addition to Mr. Eastwood's property on the south side of Hunter street. It projects over the creek.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall appeared for the city, and Mr. E. A. Peck for Mr. Eastwood.

Judgment was reserved. "There's not a doubt about it being a breach of the by-law," remarked His Worship.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay testified that the second storey wall of the building was but nine inches, when it should be one brick and a half.

Three letters had been written to Mr. Eastwood, but no remedy had been made.

To Mr. Peck witness said the building was not occupied. Mr. Hay explained that he inspected buioldings in the fire limits when his attention was drawn to a breach of the by-alw. The work complained of was parts of the south and west wall, some 18 or 20 feet.

There was no adjoining building to the west or south. The next building to the west was on the other side of the creek. It was not probable that another building would be erected at the south or the west.

Witness could not say that the wall had been sheeted.

Mr Peck said the was instructed that there were two rows of sheeting, and also that there was a row of timber on the old wall to which the new wall was braced. Mr. Hay did not know of the timber. He did not anticipate danger from fire but the danger was in the weakness of the wall. The creek was subject to dloods and jams of ice, and the building ought to be particulrrly strong. The sheeting no doubt would stiffen the building.

"Would it not be just as strong under these conditions?" asked Mr. Peck.

"It might be!" answered witness.

ONLY A RECOMMENDATION.

City Clerk Armstrong was examined as to the by-laws and resolutions of the city. In the case of Ald. Graham, Mr. Armstrong explained that recommendation only had been made, and Council had yet to deal with it. No permit had been granted.

Mr. Sam Belcher, C.E., gave evidence as to the construction of the walls. He considered the wall to be safe.

To Mr. Hall witness said the foundation girders were sufficiently strong to carry a 14 inch wall for the second storey. He saw the crack in the west wall. He thought the wall was safe, notwithstanding the crack.

TO MAKE BETTER JOB.

Mr Rutherford, who erected the building, said the wall was veneered with brick, double sheeted, papered both sides and plastered.

"The object was to make a better job," said witness. "I could not have made as good a job with the nine inch wall. There was no intention to evade the law. It was a question of doing better if we could. It cost Mr. Eastwood between $40 and $50 more than if the work had been done according to the by-law."

It was stated that Council gave permission to build a nine inch wall, with the understanding that pilasters should should be used. This was not done.

His Worship held that the wall should be examined. He said it was not a nine inch wall.

Lawrence Brough and his all star English company made a big hit at the Grand Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening. There was an abundance of comedy and curtain calls were in demand.

Bees and Tin Pans.

The practice of beating tin pans to settle bees, no doubt, grew out of an old English law, now almost forgotten, which required the beekeeper to give notice in this way that his bees were about to swarm and that he was entitled to follow them and get them back. If after giving this warning, he failed to follow the swarm or if he lost sight of them and they alighted elsewhere the bees became the possession of the person on whose land they settled.—Farm and Home.

KINGSTON WANTS HYDRO

KINGSTON, Sept. 22.—There is another agitation to get cheap power from the Hydro-Electric Commission.

The matter was taken up by civic bodies some time ago, but allowed to drop. Now that the way has been cleared for Hon. Adam Beck to distribute power through eastern Ontario, it is felt that steps should be taken at once to get power.

It is pointed out that there are several industries here whose future expansion depends on securing cheap power, and the City Council, through the utilities committee, is being charged to take the matter up again

Fell Downstairs To Death.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 22.—Mrs. A. A. Polly, an elderly woman residing on Apple street, met death with tragic suddenness Saturday. At the head of the cellar stairs she either tripped or was seized with a fainting spell, falling headlong to the bottom, where her head came in contact with the wall. From a fracture at the base of the skull she died in a few minutes. Mrs. Polly was a widow and is survived by four children, one of whom is Mrs. A. B. Scott of Toronto.

Mayor of Rome Reproved.

ROME, Sept. 22.—The Vatican organ, The Osservatore Romana, strongly stimatizes the anti-Catholic utterances of Ernest Nathan, mayor of Rome, at the commemoration on Saturday of the anniversary of the fall of the temporal power. It characterizes the speech as "vulgar, impious, perverse and grotesque," and Mayor Nathan as "a ridiculous imitation of a civic magistrate and an exotic combination of Judaism and Free masonry."

The paper adds that Mayor Nathan is "a worthy orator to commemorate the fall of temporal power as his words, especially abroad, will excite only hilarity and pity."

The Queen Parson Bird.

A queer bird is the poe honey eater of New Zealand. Its throat is adorned with small white feathers, which, from their resemblance to clerical bands, have gained for it the name "parson bird." Its metallic green plumage, with bronze and purplish reflections, is very beautiful. Its long and rather large feet, and the length of its tail is mile, thinking they were dogs that belonged to his team.
ries, insects and honey. It has an extensile tongue, the tip of which is forked and, being covered with fibers, forms a kind of brush, most useful to the parson bird in gathering its food. It is a good songster and mimic.

A Perilous Pet.

An English major with a penchant for entomology asserts that the hornet is "a gentle, inoffensive creature, very suitable for a pet." This reminds one of an incident in the life of the late Lord Avebury. Traveling one day on a railway train with a pet wasp in his pocket, he hurriedly thrust his hand into his pocket to get his ticket, and considerable. Its food consists of ber the wasp stung him. He did not blame the wasp, however, as his hurried action had frightened the creature. Wasps have frequently become pets, but the major is said to be the first to turn the hornet into one.

Why Married Men Live Long.

The reason a married man lives longer than a single man is because the single man leads a selfish existence. A married man can double his pleasures. Any time he has a streak of good luck it tickles him all over, but it makes him feel twice as good when he tells his wife about it. And she is so pleased and proud that he feels like a two-year-old. There isn't a chance in the world of a man's arteries hardening or his heart weakening when he can get a million dollars' worth of pleasure out of making his wife happy.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Too Thorough.

"That's what I have done," replied Senator Sorghum. "I have been too thorough about it. A lot of them now think that they can give advice instead of taking it."—Washington Star.

Fearfully Foxy.

"I work a foxy scheme on my boy. He'd rather wash the dishes than wash his hands, so I let him wash the dishes."

"What's the foxy part?"

"Why, he gets his hands clean."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WINNING COWS IN THE DAIRY TEST; CHAMPION ANIMALS WERE EXHIBITED

AWARDS IN THE COMPETITION

Canadian Champion Milker Was Shown by Mr. Brethen of Norwood

That greater interest is being shown from year to year in the dairy cattle of this county, and also in the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, was clearly sho wlast week when some of the most famous cattle in Canada were shown at the Fair.

While it would be impossible to mention all the high class animals shown, special mention should be made of a bull shown by Jas. Seymour and Sons of Ida. This bull is a son of May Echo, the Holstein cow which produced 24,000 lbs of milk in a year. It is quite possible that many people attending the Fair were not aware that the exhibit of G. A. Brethen of Norwood included the holder of the Canadian championship for one day's milk, 112 1-2 lbs.

A great deal of interest was shown in the Dairy Test, which was one of the largest ever held at a Fall Fair in Ontario, and of course while every animal entered could not be a prize winner, it can be said that every animal entered was a high class one.

Particularly good work was done by animals from the herds of W. A. Anderson of Keene and J.K. Moore & Son of Central Smith. Both of these men are members of a Cow Testing Association and have made a great improvement in their herds during the past few years

The complete list of winners in the test was as follows:

PURE BRED HEIFERS

1st. A. Anderson, Keene.
22nd. S. Oliver, Lindsay.
3rd. R.O. Morrow, Hilton.

PURE BRED COWS

1st. R.O. Morrwo, Hilton.
2nd. Harry Elliott, Lang.

GRADE HEIFERS

1st. J.K. Moore and Son, Smith.
2nd. J.K. Moore and Son, Smith.
3rd. J.K. Moore and Sun, Snith.

GRADE COWS

1st. J.K. Moore and Son, Smith.
2nd. J.K. Moore and Son, Smith.
3rd. R.O. Morrow, Hilton.

BISHOP-ELECT HONORED BY PARISHES OF SACRED HEART AND ST. PETER'S

Appreciative and Congratulatory Addresses Accompany Gifts of the Episcopal Ring and the Crozier

At the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday afternoon, the Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop-elect, formally severed his connections with the parishioners of the Sacred Heart, for whom he has labored so faithfully this past four years, by giving Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, Protestant and Catholic alike assembled to hear his farewell words.

Before the ceremony began Mr. John Lynch, on behalf of the parishioners, read the following address, while Mr Joseph Picard, sr., presented the Episcopal Ring:

Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop-elect,
Diocese of Peterborough:

Rev and Dear Father O'Brien:

Some eight months ago this Diocese was plunged into deepest mourning, caused by the sudden demise of one of the beloved Prelates of the Church, Rt Rev. Bishop R. A. O'Connor, the remembrance of whose good works, kindly dispositions and sterling qualities will always remain fresh and green in our memories A short time passed, when the news was flashed from the Vatican, that, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of our late lamented Bishop, another had been chosen to assume the high responsibilities attached to such office, to continue the arduous labors of assisting in the administration of the affairs of the Catholic Church. You, Father O'Brien, have been signally honored in having received this appointment; we, the members of the Sacred Heart Parish, feel that we have also been honored, for does not such recognition of faithful service rendered reflect most brilliantly upon the zeal, devotion and true Catholic principles of the pastor of this Parish since its inception? We tender you our hearty congratulations, and express the sincere wish that they may be unfolded to you many years of wise leadership and usefulness.

For the four years during which you have guided the destinies of this Parish, there is not the least semblance of doubt that the condition of affairs—moral, social and financial—has materially progressed. Under your supervision we have seen the establishment and expansion of societies closely affiliated with the Church. These societies have exercised on all a lasting influence for good and have placed the individual in surroundings calculated to instruct fortify and enable him to surmount the many difficulties that will confront him on his way through life. Among these might be mentioned the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, St. Augustine's Sodality, League of the Sacred Heart and the Sacred Heart Total abstinence Society, the last of which has attained its special high, prominent position, in a great measure, through your fostering care and most hearty co- [illegible] ioners are pleased to know that under your careful management and resourcefulness, the financial obligation attached to our church has been considerably reduced, even surpassing our most ardent hopes and expectations We are confident that your every earnest endeavor in the future, no matter how hard the task, will be marked with the same calm determination, the same wise judgment, the same pronounced success, as has unquestionably attended your every effort heretofore.

Through our constant association with you and the harmonious tranquility manifested in all our dealings we have come to regard your joys as our joys, your sorrows as our sorrows; the expression, "All for one, and one for all," we believe, would most adequately describe the relationship existing between us. It then most natural that the announcement of your elevation to the Episcopate should bring to us a certain pang of sorrow, since it foreshadowed your removal from our midst, yet we find consolation in the fact that while losing your immediate guidance, we still retain you as our chief pastor in the exalted dignity of a prince of the Church of God.

We therefore consider it a privilege to offer you this Episcopal Ring as an expression of the deep affection and unswerving loyalty of the members of this parish. Again we congratulate you, and we will ever pray that under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, you and the flock confided to your care may be drawn nearer and nearer to the Sacred Heart.

On behalf of the members of Sacred Heart Parish.

N. Bibby, W. J. Grady, R. Gordon, R. Heffernan, P. Milloy, Claude Brady.

Peterborough, September 21st, 1913.

In reply Rev. Dr. O'Brien said that it was very hard indeed to find words to respond to such a beautiful protestation of their kind feeling and love for him. It was not necessary to read such a touching address to assure him of their good will, for he well knew it by the kind feeling and good will with which they co-operate with him in every undertaking for the honor and glory of God.

He thanked them for their generosity in presenting him with the ring, and in reference to the address he said: "The words are so apt that they stir up my soul far greater than I anticipated." Continuing, the Bishop-elect said that he had journeyed through the past four years with them, through sorrow and gladness and it mattered not which house sorrow came to, the whole parish felt it. He had sorrow, the loss of his beloved parents, and he had their consolation and comfort for which he was grateful. This ring, coming as it does from his first and only parish will, in after years, remind him of the unity that marked his short connections with them, during which all the undertakings were done with one heart and one mind.

Everyone knew when the diocese was bereaved of the late Bishop O'Connor that a change would come about in the appointment of a successor, but he and all his parishioners prayed that the parish of the Sacred Heart would not be touched, but God's ways are unknown to the wisest. When on the 21st of June the word arrived from Rome stating that it was the will of God that he should be raised to the Episcopate he had to submit.

With a low and even voice, he [illegible] followed the organization and development of the various societies now flourishing in the parish and thanked them for their hearty co-operation along these lines.

In speaking of the relationship with their Protestant neighbors, he said it was everything that could be desired and he wished to thank these kind and charitable friends for their good feeling toward him and his work.

One request he made was that they would not forget him in their prayers for the burdens of a diocese are heavy and great, In his prayers he would pray for the whole diocese and to use his own words, "especially that one dear spot in my heart, the Parish of the Sacred Heart."

The Bishop-elect, in conclusion gave Benediction of the Blessed Blessed Sacrament. Among those present in the sanctuary were, Rev. Father McColl, Rev. Father John O'Brien, Rev. Father Fergus O'Brien and Rev. Father McCauley.

The choir was composed of the children of the school of the Sacred Heart and their singing caused no small amount of comment from the large number of strangers present. The closing hymn "Oh Virgin Mother, Lady of Good Counsel," was particularly good.

The Episcopal ring which was made by a Montreal firm is of 14 karat gold set with a large amethyst surrounded by sixteen diamonds. The form of the cross is engraved on each side of the band.

AT ST. PETER'S

Last night at St. Peter's Cathedral the Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien D.D., formally took charge of the Cathedral. Mr. Maurice O'Hern on behalf of the St. Peter's parish, presented him with the Crozier while Mr. M. O'Brien, S.S.J., read the address.

The Bishop-elect said it was surely encouraging, for he no sooner arrived after severing his connection with his late parish to the Sacred Heart, to which he was dearly attached, than he is offered a testimonial of St. Peter's parishioners generosity and good will. He was overjoyed to think that he was not sent to a foreign land but rather he was sent to a field of labor in which he knew nearly everyone intimately and was sent to a spot that was sacred to him—St. Peter's Cathedral. It was there that his dear parents were married; it was there he was baptized. It was there he received first Holy Communion and Confirmation; it was there some sixteen years ago he was ordained a priest of God; it was there he spent eleven of the happiest years of his life as a curate, and as a grand climax to his long connections with this venerable old building he is to be consecrated to the bishopric on Wednesday morning. He remarked that the duties of a bishop are by no means few and small, but he had consolation in the fact that he knew all the priests in the diocese and that his very dear friend, Rev. W. J McColl was still the pastor of St. Peter's Parish.

In referring to one section of the beautiful address, namely; "No note escapes you that is calculated to wound the sensibilities of your fellow man, or to do unnecessary violence to interests or convictions which you deem it your duty to combat," the Bishop-elect said that that part greatly impressed him. He wished that Catholics would be friendly toward their neighbors who are not of their faith and that they would follow in the footsteps of their late Bishop O'Connor, who was marked for his kindness and consideration. Did not Christ himself say that "You shall be known as my disciples in as much that you have love for one another."

In addressing the many Protestants who were present he said that on becoming Bishop of the diocese he became more or less a public figure, and wished, as St. Paul did of old to let everyone know, be he Greek or Barbarian, wise or unwise, he is a debtor to them all. "I hope" he stated, "as far as it is in my power to live in peace and to be in harmony with everyone, and let no one be he Catholic or Protestant, ever feel strange in speaking to me." "I hope," he added, that we Catholics will be charitable to everyone and please God, if we do our part those who are not Catholics will do theirs. If we cannot have unity in regard to holy religion we can, at least, live in harmony."

In conclusion he again thanked the congregation for the gift of the Crozier, which is a symbol of the shepherd watching over the sheep of his flock and hoped that confiding in God in the Blessed Virgin Mary and in having the prayers of his people he would do all things for the honor and glory of God.

The Bishop-elect then gave benediction of the Blessed Sacrament during which the beautiful solo "O Salutaris" was rendered by Messrs J. Minicola and A. New.

The popular Irish singing actor, FISKE O'HARA, who comes to The Grand next Monday, Sept. 29, in the romantic comedy "In Old Dublin."

ASQUITH MAY SUBMIT HOME RULE TO PEOPLE

Correspondent of Liverpool Paper Makes Announcement on High Authority That Pressure of Outside Events Has Forced Cabinet to Seek Popular Support

LONDON, Sept. 23.—If the information of a special Parliamentary correspondent of The Liverpool Courier is correct, the Government has recognized the advisability of securing the judgment of the electors on the Irish question. The correspondent is unable to say what precise form the appeal to the electors will take, whether by way of a general election or by a referendum, but he asserts he is now absolutely assured that the country will be consulted before home rule receives royal assent.

This announcement is said to be on first hand personal authority of a very eminent politician who has full and intimate knowledge of all the facts thereof. This important decision, it is stated, has been brought about by the pressure of outside events, strongly reinforced by very high and powerful influences, backed by an overwhelming sense of public opinion.

According to the correspondent it is quite certain there will be no formal conference of the kind now being discussed, and that the referendum has now become a necessity to the country, "and in all constitutional, if not in all a legitimate measure, a general referendum there must be, and a general referendum there will be."

CONGRESS DEALS WITH ALCOHOLISM

Canadian Press Despatch

MILAN, Sept. 23—At the International Congress on alcholism today, the economic importance of the liquor traffic and the results of its prohibition was dealt with. There was a general agreement that legislation prohibiting it would not endanger the prosperity of the various peoples concerned. A basis was prepared for the foundation of three great international institutions — a bureau for combatting alcholism, a federation for protection, the universal races, and a federation of physicians.

BAD FAITH CHARGED.

Grain Growers' Guide Says C. M. A. Is "Bluffing."

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23.—In dealing with the reply of the C.M.A. on the subject of lower duties on British imports, The Grain Growers' Guide says to-day that the idea of the manufacturers in urging a conference is not sincere and is only intended to secure delay. The article concludes as follows:

"The suggestion of the manufacturers for a conference with the grain growers is a bluff pure and simple. We should be more than glad to see the leading officers of the organized farmers hold a public conference with the manufacturers' officials, where each side will present their case, and we will venture to predict that the result will be that the manufacturers would not have a single argument upon which to base their demand for protection.

"If the manufacturers really desire a conference they might have shown their good faith by suggesting that at least some reduction could be made in the tariff on British imports. As it stands now, the manufacturers are relying upon their financial resources to hold both political parties in check and prevent them from making any radical reduction of the tariff. In the past the manufacturers have done all their bargaining with the politicians; henceforth they will find that they have to reckon with the common people. It is now a struggle to see whether the manufacturers' dollars are more influential than the ballots of the common people."

Bogus Check Man Wanted.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23.—Several local dealers are looking for the man who succeeded in passing a number of bogus checks amounting in all to about $75. The man was in military uniform, but cannot be found. He bought goods and tendered checks on the Standard Bank for which there were no funds.

LAKE LINER HAD TO PUT INTO BAY DURING STORM

HURONIC REACHES THE SOO

Fiercest Gale in Memory of Many Captains Forces Boats to Run for Haven on North Shore of Lake Superior

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Anxiety concerning the safety of the Huronic of the Northern Navigation Co.'s line, was fully dispelled by the arrival of the big steamer at the Canadian Soo about 10 o'clock last night. James Playfair of Toronto, president of the company, was in communication with the Soo late last night and was informed that the Huronic arrived practically undamaged, despite the severe buffeting which forced her to seek shelter in Jackfish Bay during Sunday's heavy snowstorm.

The fact that the steamer's whereabouts could not be ascertained until late yesterday afternoon caused lively apprehension, particularly as the Huronic was equipped with wireless. The steamer Tionesta of the Anchor Line got into wireless communication with the Huronic in Lake Superior Saturday afternoon, but the messages ended abruptly, and it was not until late yesterday that a bulletin was received by local officials stating that the steamer had found a haven in Jackfish Bay. Later advices were that the Huronic had resumed her trip from Port Arthur to the Soo.

The steamer, which is commanded by Capt. Campbell of Sarnia, carried about 100 passengers and a crew of thirty-five.

Lake Traffic Suffered.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 23. Delayed steamers reaching the Soo yesterday confirm earlier reports of the furious storm which raged over the western section of Lake Superior Saturday night and Sunday. The wind blew from all directions, from northeast to northwest, starting rain early Saturday night and turned to snow before morning. The snow continued for hours and the gale lashed Lake Superior into a fury, which drove all downbound vessels to the north shore. The weather is still bad and careful navigation is necessary.

The steamer Lakeland also reported that they were unable to get in touch with the Canadian Soo wireless station all day.

Capt. O. W. Boldridge of Barge 137 Pittsburg Steamship Co., which came down the lake in tow of the steamer Matao, was washed overboard Saturday night during the gale. The whaleback barge was covered by the waves nearly all the time for twelve hours.

The captain of the Matao says the storm was the fiercest blow he ever ran into.

THAW'S MOTHER

She Joins Him In Concord to Help In Fight Against Extradition.

CONCORD, N.H., Sept. 23.—On the eve of the proceedings which are expected to decide whether or not Harry K. Thaw shall be returned to the insane asylum at Matteawan, he was joined here last night by his mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, and by his brother, Josiah. "I have come to give Harry the support of his mother's presence in his fight to keep away from the madhouse," Mrs. Thaw said.

Harry greeted his mother and his brother affectionately, just outside his rooms, and then the party retired to the apartments which had been reserved for Mrs. Thaw.

The only point that was definitely established last night was that the hearing which will be before Governor Samuel D. Felker, is that it will be held in the chamber of the Senate at the State House, beginning at 11 a.m.

British Olympic Fund.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—While contributions, a penny and upwards, are slowly arriving for the Duke of Westminster's fund to secure the proper representation of Great Britain at the Olympic games [illegible] has made a grant of $73,000 to the German Olympic committee. This is in addition to a great public fund that is being raised in Germany.

The French Government will probably grant $100,000 towards the expenses of the French participants in the games, and a great Olympic fund is making progress in America.

The Duke of Westminster, who requires $500,000, has so far received $37,118.

Death of Irish Peer.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Sept. 23.—Baron De Freyne died at his country residence, French Park, County Roscommon, at the age of 58, after a long illness. He was at one time honorary colonel of the 5th Battalion Connaught Rangers.

The successor to the peerage is the Hon. Arthur Reginald French, his only son by his first marriage. He was born in 1879 and became an officer in the Royal Fusiliers. He afterward resigned his commission in the British army. He comes into possession of 30,000 acres in County Roscommon.

Freshies Beat Sophs.

GUELPH, Sept. 23.—After submitting like true sportsmen to every indignity that could be heaped upon them, the big class of freshmen at the Ontario Agricultural College, turned, like the proverbial worm, and beat the "sophs" for the flag. To the credit of the second year, it should be stated that the freshmen are about three to one. Everything at the annual initiation went through without a mishap or bad feeling of any kind.

May Fight For Local Option.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 23.—John F. Schultz has been appointed permanent secretary of the local option forces in Brantford, and the announcement was authorized yesterday that the work of securing signatures for the 25 per cent. petition to be presented to the City Council would be commenced Oct. 1. It is said that the local option forces, following success in the preparation of the petition, will insist upon a fight here next January. As yet no organization has been completed by the liquor interests to combat the propaganda.

Committed For Trial.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 23.—Phillip Monahan was committed for trial in yesterday's police court, on a charge of assault and highway robbery preferred by James Johnston. The complainant alleged that he was attacked by Monahan and another man named W. Baker, shortly after midnight, while proceeding to his home, and beaten and robbed of his coin. Monahan is an old offender. A warrant is out for his pal who cannot be found.

A LONG FIGHT

Attempt To Hurry Progress of U. S Currency Bill Fails.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—An attempt to hurry consideration of the currency bill in the Senate banking and currency committee failed yesterday at the end of a day of desultory questioning of Samuel Untermeyer, who was counsel for the Pujo money trust committee of the last congress. Senator Shafroth of Colorado tried vainly to secure an agrement to close the hearings before the committee on Saturday, Oct. 4. No other member of the committee supported his suggestion. Senators Reed of Missouri, Bristow of Kansas, and Weeks of Massachusetts, declared emphatically against any attempt to limit the consideration of the bill.

In his discussion of the bill, Mr. Untermeyer criticized vigorously the provisions, outlining the character that the definition was "hopelessly loose." He said, however, it would be advisable to permit the issue of a certain amount of currency on cotton and grain warehouse receipts.

Progress on Hudson Bay.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—Reports received by Hon. Frank Cochrane from Chief Engineer Armstrong in charge of the Hudson Bay Railway, show that grading will be completed on 150 [illegible] Except for the filling in of several cuts, the line will be graded some 75 miles further to Thicket Portage.

Track laying, it is reported, is slow, largely through the difficulty in securing ties. Sixty miles of steel are now laid and unless more ties can be secured only 70 miles of track can be laid this fall. However, special efforts will be made this winter to secure a big supply of ties so that work can be rushed in the spring.

Innes May Be Arrested.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—An arrest, it was said, yesterday, may follow Saturday's shooting accident at Rockliffe rifle ranges, when Quartermaster Sergeant Stanley Harris of the 6th Dragoons was almost instantly killed by a stray bullet.

As a formality it is understood that Sergt. Innes, who fired the bullet, will be taken into custody on a charge of negligence until circumstances are thoroughly investigated, with a view to preventing further accidents.

Sergt. Innes has collapsed through the strain.

Walked Far In Sleep.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Sept. 23.—The most remarkable case of sleepwalking on record here was disclosed when little Albert Crisfield, three years old, walked into a local factory at two a.m., while asleep, and in this condition he had crossed several railroad tracks, accompanied and protected by a faithful dog. Employes could not awaken the boy, and he was taken to the police station. For four hours the child failed to awaken, and finally his father came in haste to the police station to report that Albert had left his bed and disappeared.

Drowning at Port Stanley.

PORT STANLEY, Sept. 23.—Joseph Tappin of Belle River, Ont., a watchman on the dredge Pelletier of Windsor, fell into the harbor from one of the scows, as he was going aboard the dredge in the dark and was drowned. The body was quickly recovered.

Tappin who was unmarried, had only arrived here at four o'clock to take his position on the dredge.

Dr. Nettleton, associate coroner for the County of Elgin, ordered an inquest which will be opened to-day.

Greece May Get It Next.

COLOGNE, Germany, Sept. 23.—The correspondent of The Cologne Gazette at Constantinople telegraphs that he has gained the impression during conversations with several foreign ambassadors to Turkey that they believe it quite possible for the Turkish and Bulgarian armies to come to an agreement to operate jointly against Greece, if the nation refuses the conditions of peace proposed by Turkey.

FEATS ALL QUITE EASY

Aviators Can Always Save Themselves says Pegaud

NO NEED TO FALL

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Aviator Pegaud describes in Le Matin his latest feats in the air, which, he declares, are all "quite easy." The object of his evolutions is to work out Bleriot's theory of the "air lifeboat," and his experiments show what an airman should do to save himself in the event of his machine being turned over by a gust of wind. He even asserts it is impossible to capsize an aeroplane of deliberate purpose by pivoting it on its wing, because the machine is too stable.

"If, however, some fearful gust of wind should thus turn the aeroplane over, the pilot could regain normal his position by pivoting on the wind. I proved this three times by flying downwards, with the machine on its side and righted each time, both on right and left wing. Downward falls with the wings perpendicular to earth, whether the engine is running or not, are no longer dangerous. I tried with the whole series of such falls by warping the wing to its fullest extent, without using the rudder. The way in which the machine righted itself merely by a movement in the reverse direction, was simply amazing.

"For my falls of 500 feet, tail downwards, I pointed the nose of the aeroplane upwards by pulling the stearing tiller right back and let her rip. The way I tried to capsize the machine sideways was by warping the wing to the fullest extent in the very act of banking steeply. If I want to capsize, to the ordinary way, I simply start coming down and push the stearing pillor right forward until the machine has turned over on its back."

RUSH HARBOR

Toronto Improvements To Be Finished as Soon as Canal.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—"We have set the date of the completion of the Government's harbor contracts at four years hence," declared the Hon. Robt. Rogers, Minister of Public Works at Ottawa, after his tour of inspection of the Toronto Bay, Island, etc., in company with the Harbor Commissioners yesterday. "Toronto without doubt has the finest natural harbor on the Great Lakes. It may even rank high in the world's list of inland harbors. We therefore want Toronto to take full advantage of the opportunities at its doors, as well as to be ready for the opening of the new Welland Canal. We look for the canal's completion in four years.

"I have always considered that with the natural advantages here," continued the Minister, "Toronto had a disgraceful water-front, which should have been put in proper shape [illegible]

Hold-Up Man Sentenced.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23.—John Scrutton was found guilty of having a hand in the holding up and robbing of H. C. Gibson of Prince Edward County in July last, and given three months at hard labor in the county jail. Two other men, John Joyce and James Black, are serving terms in the Central Prison on the same charge.

TRAIN IS WRECKED BY REBELS

Mexican Insurgents Responsible for Loss of Thirty Lives.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23.—A northbound train on the Mexican National Railway has been dynamited by the rebels near Vanegas, in the northern part of the State of San Luis Potosi. From the meagre reports received here it is believed that thirty were killed. The train left here Saturday night, but turned back at Vanegas on account of blown up bridges further north.

The locomotive passed safely over the dynamite charges, but the baggage car and two coaches were destroyed. The passengers killed were in the second-class coach. The telegraph lines have been cut both north and south of the scene. Troops were sent from San Luis Potosi yesterday to round up the rebels.

The victims were for the most part federal soldiers, it was reported. The number of injured was not given.

W. W. Marvin of San Francisco, the only American on the train, is said to have escaped injury, but was robbed.

Two dynamite mines were set off by electricity, it is said. The first-class coach was only derailed, but the baggage, express and two second-class coaches were blown to pieces.

Composer Puccini Nearly Drowned.

PISA, Italy, Sept. 23.—Giacomo Puccini, the composer, had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday on Lake Massaciuccoli, on the shore of which he has a villa. While steering his autoboat he collided with another autoboat containing the members of his family. Both boats were badly damaged and began to fill rapidly. Other boats rushed to their assistance and Puccini and his family were taken aboard.

TWIN BROTHERS USE BIRTHRIGHT TO HARASS STEWARDS OF STEAMSHIPS

DR. SIMON J RUSSELL AND DR. EDWARD M RUSSELL

The only system ever invented for outwitting the transatlantic steamship steward came as a birthright to Dr. Edward M. Russell and Dr. Simon J. Russell, twin brothers, who returned to America from a season of special study in Europe.

The brothers, who come from Springfield, Mass., look so much alike that only finger points are dissimilar. Hence when they began their trip they began to harass the stewards in a variety of ways.

MUST HAVE MEMBERS.

Laborites Should Enter Parliament Declares President.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—The 29th annual meeting of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada opened here yesterday morning in Auditorium Hall in the presence of over 200 delegates, representative of every department of enterprise in the Dominion.

The Parliamentary report of J. A. Waters, president of the congress says in part:

"Measured in terms substantive, tangible, the legislation enacted on behalf of human life by promoting the welfare of the workers, with one or two exceptions, can be summed up in the word 'nil,' and such experience should teach the workers that no amount of work on the outside will bring results commensurate with the importance of the organized labor movement until labor itself sets to work to direct its forces intelligently to capture seats in the House, and, from the inside, influence the shaping of legislation proportionately. It is gratifying to state that in almost every department of the Government material increase have been made to the rates of wages paid."

Railway Squabble In Court.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 23.—Charges against A. E. Bunnell, of the Lake Erie & Northern Railway, and James Longhurst and A. E. Johnston of the Grand Valley road, were adjourned in the police court yesterday. Magistrate Livingston ordering that parties on both sides preserve the peace until the cases are disposed of to-morrow. Mr. Bunnell faced a charge of trespass, while Longhurst and Johnston [illegible] a railway.

The row between the two railways still continues, and more trouble is threatened before the week-end. All Grand Valley employes have been sworn in as special railway constables.

Four Years at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23.—Yesterday "Jack" O'Brien, who was arrested for stealing a mail bag from a truck at Kingston Junction, on the night of Jan. 22, pleaded guilty and was given four years in the penitentiary. O'Brien was arrested in Sudbury about two months ago by Inspector Parkinson of the Dominion police.

The Duke's Patronage.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—The Duke of Connaught has booked a hundred guinea box for the performance at the Coliseum, Oct. 11, arranged by Madame Sarah Bernhardt, in aid of Charing Cross and French hospitals, which the King and Queen are to honor with their presence.

THREE KILLED

Two Long Island Railroad Trains Meet Head On.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Three persons were killed and more than 20 injured early yesterday in a head-on crash of two Long Island Railroad electric trains at College Point, Long Island. Of the injured one, it was thought, would die. The dead are: Conductor Geo. Borckel, Motorman Fred. Loder and Motorman Charles Hoblien.

Most of the injured were mill employes on their way to work. The crash occurred on a curve not far from the station. The trains, running nearly 40 miles an hour, rounded the curve from opposite directions almost simultaneously, and the crash was inevitable. The steel cars buckled, but did not telescope. This fact doubtless saved many lives.

An hotel near the scene and a number of residences nearby were thrown open for use as emergency hospitals. Many ambulances and a corps of physicians were summoned to the scene.

Stolen Goods Recovered.

KINGSTON, Sept. 23—A large consignment of hats left in the travelers' sample room of the Randolph Hotel, was stolen, when burglars secured an entrance during the night. Yesterday the police recovered nearly all the booty. Some was found hidden in the hay loft of the hotel stables and the rest in the old gun sheds on Ordnance street. Arrests are expected soon.

He was able [illegible] hobble to a shack close by, but as [illegible] person came his way, he was compelled to stay there for forty-eight [illegible] and was almost dead from exposure when found. London's Actors' Church.

Covent Garden is one of the sights of London, but few visitors go to see St. Paul's, Covent Garden, which has been called the "Actors' church," yet probably next to Westminster abbey and St. Paul's cathedral here is the church of greatest interest to the historian, for its famous dead number among them not only actors and dramatists, but famous people in every walk of life. Butler of "Hudibras" fame; Claude Duval, the highwayman; Lely, the painter; Macklin, the actor; Arne, the musician; Grinling Gibbons, the sculptor, are but representative of the celebrated folk buried in St. Paul's.—London Cor. ## FINAL EFFORT OF SULZER TO STAY PROCEEDINGS FAIL

His Claim That the Impeachment Was Illegal Because the House Was in Extra Session is Overruled—Only One Judge Ballots in Favor Quashing the Whole Trial

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 23.—Governor William Sulzer must go to trial. This was decided by the high court of impeachment last night, when, by a vote of 51 to 1, its members overruled the motion of the governor's counsel to dismiss the proceedings on the ground that he was unconstitutionally impeached by the Assembly, because that body was in extra session when the impeachment was brought.

Senator Gottfried H. Wende of Buffalo, Democrat, an ardent supporter of the governor, cast the solitary nay. Senators Brown, Bussey, Fitzgerald, Thomas, Walters, Wheeler and Judge Gray were absent.

The governor's defeat was the second that has marked the battle waged by his attorneys to annihilate, as far as possible, the impeachment proceedings. Last week the court thwarted the efforts of his counsel to prevent four Senators from sitting as members. Their remaining ammunition consists of arguments to prove that certain of the offences charged against the governor were not impeachable. These arguments will be heard to-day.

The vote last night was taken in secret session after an afternoon of impassioned oratory by the opposing attorneys. When the time came shortly before six for the court to render its decision, presiding Judge Cullen announced that he did not feel inclined to use the power granted him under the rules to be the first to express an opinion.

"My brethren," he said, "you will readily appreciate that the point which has been discussed, goes to the very foundation of this proceeding. If decided in one way, the proceeding must necessarily stop. You have the power to clear the court for private consultation under the rules."

Judge Cullen's opinion, in substance, was that the provision of the constitution which limited the acts of the Legislature in extra session to such subjects as were recommended to it by the governor, should be given a reasonable construction. It upheld the contention of the prosecution that the provision referred to the Legislature as a whole and not to the assembly as an independent body.

NEW LIBERAL MONTHLY

The New Liberal Monthly is telling its readers what Conservatism is. It says: "Conservatism means the conserving of vested rights."

The Liberal Monthly ought then to be very grateful to Conservatives for that. Have Liberals no vested rights? And do they want to part with them?

Furthermore, it says, Conservatism means the centralization (blessed word!) of Government in the governing classes."—

Now, was there ever government without centralization; and in whom should it be centred if not in the governing classes?

The Liberal official organ goes on to define Liberalism. Liberalism, it says, is "Government of the people, by the people, and for the people." It ought to be said that the journal does not claim to be the author of this epigram.

It was the claptrap slogan of the Socialists in England some years ago. One only needs to disect this platitude to discover its inanity, so far as its particular application to one party is concerned.

There is doubtless room for the new Liberal Monthly and plenty for it to do. Everyone will welcome it if it brings a little sanity and broad-mindedness into its party's discussions.

But Liberalism will do no good by pretending to a monopoly in all that tends to progress in national and social life.

If, as it says, Conservatism is "a brake on the wheels of progress," it is a brake in the hand of far-seeing politicians, and is only applied in cases of national danger.

Conservatism stands for progress, but not progress at any price. Speed is a good thing on occasions but a brake is often a means of Salvation to the car and its occupants.

APOLOGIA

In another column we publish a letter from the secretary of the Christian Science movement committee, referring to an editorial which appeared in the Review some time ago, commenting upon a case in the English courts, where a father was charged with manslaughter because he failed to bring medical assistance to his daughter who was suffering from diphtheria.

We do not wish to enter into any controversy upon these subjects. They are only discussed in this column for the general interest of a general public, and what is said is said with a full consciousness of fallibility [illegible]

The same might be said of the article on "Miracles" which appeared in last Saturday's issue, which seems to have touched the sensibilities of people who believe in the miracles at Lourdes.

One good lady, a short time ago wrote an awful letter to The Review because it happened to throw some doubt upon the divinity of Pastor Russell. This lady ordered the immediate removal of her name from our list of subscribers.

This is a wide world, and there is room for everybody in it, and for the time being we might as well live at peace together and admit that the other fellow has as much right to his opinion as we have.

Pastor Russell's "miracle wheat" may be a fact, and from a sheet received at this office giving photographs of the gigantic sheaves of wheat produced, there seems to be some ground for the Pastor's claim.

Christian Science may be all that is claimed for it in the many "testimonials" which have been submitted to us, and that cures have been wrought there can be no doubt.

The same may be said of the "Miracles at Lourdes." Some persons who have gone to Lourdes invalids have returned completely cured. These are not denied.

What was denied in the editorials referred to was that these cures were miraculous in the supernatural sense. In every case there is a physiological or psychological explanation.

Christian Scientists, or anyone else who believe in the efficacy of these supernatural methods are at liberty to do so, but they must not consider themselves or their faith slighted if a sceptical world which has to get its living by faith in cause and effect, does not take them seriously.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Whatever else may be said about Huerta, he seems to be the only man in Mexico who can speak with anything like authority. Under the very extraordinary circumstances which prevail it would perhaps be as well for the United States Government to show him some sort of encouragement.

The Presidency is certainly no sinecure just now and a man would have to have a great thirst for power or a great love for his country to aspire to the Mexican throne in such troublous times.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, receipts for the week ended September [illegible] hogs and [illegible] calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 2350 cattle, 3000 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 1400 calves.

The feature of the trade continues to be the good demand for common cattle, grass fed calves and lambs for shipment to the United States, of which supplies are liberal. There is also a good demand from local packing concerns for common bulls. Canning cows are selling as low as $2 to $3 per 100 pounds. Offerings of choice steers were limited.

There was no important change in the market for butchers' cattle owing to the fact that the supply was not in excess of the requirements and prices were firmly maintained. Really choice steers brought from $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

The tone of the market for small meats was stronger owing to the increased demand from both local and American buyers for supplies, and a very active trade was done.

Oil for British Navy.

The public declaration made in Parliament by Mr. Churchill of his belief in oil as fuel for warships has caused somewhat of a sensation. He predicted nothing less than the abandonment of coal as fuel and the substitution in all cases of oil, which he declares not only makes for greater speed but ensures a substantial saving of labor. There are now 150 vessels burning oil and 100 destroyers built and building which will use only oil fuel.

Atmospheric Voids.

Waves, eddies and vortices are much more common in the air than has been generally supposed. Showing this to the British Aeronautic Society, Colonel H. E. Rawson described eddies that, specially near mountains, descend sometimes with hurricane force and may cause the so-called "holes in the air."

Nicely Answered.

George IV. became convinced by dint of long imagining and saying so that he had left the life guards at Waterloo. "Did I not, Arthur?" he said at a court dinner to the Duke of Wellington.

Most men would have been embarrassed. Not so the Iron Duke. He simply answered, "I have often heard Your Majesty say so."

The Death Stone of Musu

"The Tale Has Served Its Purpose"

By JESSIE L. SHARP

Overhead was the Japanese sky of tender blue. In the far distance the snowy peak of Fujiyama seemed painted against the horizon, and below at the foot of the terraced hill the waters of the inland sea lapped the silver sands.

It was all very beautiful, very peaceful, a place to dream of love or a happy past or a sweet, beckoning future.

Yet Harrington stood there with a grim smile on his lips and murder in [illegible] hillside temple his form bulked large beside the small Japanese guide.

"You are sure?" he asked Taki for the third time that afternoon.

"Of a most positive sureness," responded Taki, also for the third time.

Harrington turned slowly and went back into the temple. Six strides carried him across to the shrine with its image of the sitting Buddha, calm, peaceful and remote in its attitude of meditation.

He did not look up at the image. His eyes sought the small flat gray green stone set in the exact center of the votive table. It was round and polished as if with much rubbing.

"If you have lied to me, Taki," he said sternly to the guide, who had padded softly in his wake, "it will go hard with you. I am not to be taken in by ordinary tourist stories."

"That is a truth," assured Taki solemnly. "I have myself seen it with my own eyes."

"Seen what?"

"The action of the death stone, honorable sir."

Harrington suppressed a shudder, and his voice shook a little as he motioned to the Japanese.

"Go on, Taki. Tell me about it."

Taki drew a long, hissing breath and sat down upon his heels. Harrington leaned against the votive table and gazed moodily down at the green stone.

"A man from my village had an enemy. He wished him much evil, and he persuaded his enemy to come to Musu and to kiss the death stone; said it would bring much virtue. The enemy kiss the stone and fall dead on the table."

Harrington walked slowly to the door and went down the crooked path among the cryptomerias. Presently he came out on the seashore and made his way toward the picturesque little inn where he had been stopping.

His host came forward, rubbing his hands with ill concealed pleasure.

"My lord will not dine alone tonight," he said, smiling. "Other American gentlemen and ladies will honor my worthless house."

Harrington smiled absently, and then as a sudden thought blazed its way through the dark chaos of his mind he asked abruptly:

"These new people—what are their names?"

"Alas, it has escaped my [illegible] memory," lamented Chenyo, "but one is a tall gentleman of reddish hair and merry laugh."

"Grayson himself. At last!" muttered Harrington, and he hurried away to his tiny room, where a servant was in waiting with water for his bath.

When he emerged an hour later he was clothed in spotless white, and, cool, refreshed and handsome, he was warmly welcomed by the little party of Americans dining on the veranda.

"Dick Harrington, by all that's good!" shouted James Grayson, springing up and grasping Harrington's reluctant hand. "Priscilla's here is an old friend. You remember Priscilla, eh, Dick?" Grayson laughed heartily as his pretty wife arose and shook hands with the grave eyed man.

"Yes, I remember Mrs. Grayson," rumbled Harrington's deep voice, and the pretty color which had graced Priscilla's cheeks faded and left a startled pallor.

Priscilla Grayson had nearly loved Dick Harrington once upon a time. Then Grayson had come and swept her heart into his own keeping. She had never forgotten Harrington's white hot anger, his bitter despair and his denunciation of Grayson, who seemed quite unconscious of playing traitor to his friend.

Harrington had waited his time. Some day, he told himself, there would come the opportunity to pay back Grayson for his treachery. A kindly fate must bring them together, and then—let Grayson look out for himself.

So Harrington had nursed his hatred and jealousy through a bitter year of restless wandering from one country to another, nowhere finding comfort or peace for his troubled heart. A few weeks ago, when he first came to Japan, he heard that the Graysons were in Tokyo. When Taki, his guide, had told him the story of the death stone of Musu it had entered Harrington's mind to lure Grayson here, and—well, the death stone would do the rest.

It was something of a shock for him to find that the Graysons had come to Musu without a lure of any sort save the beauty of its sloping hillsides and the exquisite pictures of sea and land and sky at sunrise and sunset. James Grayson was a landscape painter, and Musu had drawn him to paint her loveliness.

Now, as they gathered around the table, Harrington, the two Graysons and a bride and groom from San Francisco, the Martins, there was little hint of the tragedy that lurked behind Harrington's pleasantries. Priscilla quite forgot her nervousness and laughed and jested with her old lover, never knowing that each light reference to the past was like a stab wound in his heart. His lips grew white, and there was a tense look about his mouth when they arose from the table.

An idle evening followed. They walked on the sands and stood speechless in the glory of the sunset. They saw the moon rise over the distant peak of Fujiyama, and they were dumb when the moon's rays fell on the sacred mountain and turned the crest to a lustrous pearl.

"What a wonderful country!" breathed Mrs. Martin. "It does not seem that anything wrong or wicked could ever happen here."

Harrington drew a sharp breath and looked away. Priscilla Grayson may have heard him, for she looked at his stern profile, and she seemed to find something ominous in its set expression, for she suddenly complained of the cold and urged her husband to return to the inn. The Martins soon followed, and Harrington was left alone with his bitterness of spirit.

The moon swung high in the heavens when a step sounded on the sand beside him.

"By Jove, I'd like to paint this!" cried Grayson's cordial voice.

"Wait until you see the temple," remarked Harrington deliberately.

Grayson sprang up. "Let's go there now."

Harrington got upon his feet and slowly led the way along the crooked path under the black shadows of the cryptomerias. On reaching the temple Harrington pushed open the polished cedar door and held it wide for Grayson to follow him. It was dim and fragrant in there. A candle was burning low before the altar. Some in- [illegible] red on the votive table. When their eyes had grown accustomed to the darkness they perceived the mighty image of the Buddha in the recess.

Presently they moved as by one accord and crossed to the votive table. While Grayson's eyes sought the face of the Buddha, Harrington's burning gaze was fixed on the death stone set in the table. The vase of incense sticks stood near, and the red glow from the burning sticks shone down and revealed the dull gray green stone.

"I wish—I wish I could paint this just as it is. But it isn't in my line as you say," breathed Grayson, bringing his eyes down to meet those of the other man.

Harrington smiled stiffly.

"If you want to attain your desires old man, all you have to do is to kiss the wishing stone there," he said awkwardly.

"Well, here goes, Dock! I shall wish for the genius to paint the temple as it is. Looks as idiotic as kissing the blarney stone, eh?" Grayson laughed, bent swiftly and would have pressed his lips to the death stone had not Harrington's hand snatched him back.

"Don't!" he cried sharply, placing himself before the table. "You don't know what you are doing, Jim."

Grayson smiled queerly.

"I happen to be acquainted with the death stone of Musu," he said quietly.

There followed a long silence. There was no sound save Harrington's deep agonized breathing. The smoke of the burning incense swirled upward and was lost in the darkness above the table. The face of the Buddha looked down upon them from the lotus leaf throne.

"I did not know. I never suspected until tonight, Dick. I am sorry," said Jim Grayson at last, and his hand rested on the shoulder of the man who had lured him to death and then snatched him away at the fatal moment.

Harrington slowly lifted his head and looked at his successful rival. Grayson read in his eyes all the pain and suffering he had undergone during the past two years, and a great pity filled his heart.

"I don't blame you, Harrington. I would have done the same thing under the same circumstances," he muttered. "Come down to the shore and tell me all about it."

Without a word they went away and sat down on the silver sands. They talked until the gray dawn pearled the east, and Priscilla came to the veranda of the inn, wan and frightened, looking for her husband.

She saw Grayson and Dick Harrington standing shoulder to shoulder talking as only intimate friends may talk. She saw them part with a long pressure of hands and her husband's affectionate slap on the other's shoulder.

"Harrington has been called home to put his shoulder to the wheel of business," he explained to Priscilla, but she guessed that somehow Dick Harrington had recovered his manhood, and she was glad.

Taki, the guide, came running to them. "My lord, Harrington has gone away," he said anxiously. "Perhaps he was offended that I could not tell the straight truth."

"You did not tell Mr. Harrington that the death stone had been stolen years ago and that the stone in the temple is merely a bit of old jade placed there to deceive the unwary?"

"I meant to undeceive him, sir; of a sureness I did."

"Never mind, Taki; the tale has served its purpose. You will never know how or why, but a good man has found himself again. Mr. Harrington bade me give you this." He tossed a silver coin toward the Japanese and went inside, where Priscilla was waiting for him.

A Welsh Verdict.

Welsh juries were formerly accused of giving their verdict in accordance with their liking for the rival counsel rather than on the merits of the case. Sir Francis Palgrave tells of a Merioneth jury whose foreman, when asked for a verdict, replied: "My lord, we do not know who is plaintiff or defendant, but we find for whoever is Mr Jones' man."

Two Kinds of Truth.

The custom of restoring to an oath in extreme cases, sanctified as it is by all religious antiquity, it apt to introduce into the laxer sort of minds the motion of two kinds of truth; the one aplicable to the solemn affairs of justice and the other to the common proceedings of daily intercourse. As truth bound upon the conscience by an oath can be but truth, so in the common affirmations of the shop and the market place a latitude is expected and conceded upon questions wanting this solemn covenant. Something less than truth satisfies.—Charles Lamb.

IS FINDING KEEPING?

Rights and Duties Concerning Lost Property.

Considering the enormous number of articles that are lost and found every year—indeed, every day of the year—it is strange to discover, when attention is particularly called to a case, how vague is the ordinary person's idea of what is the true position of the loser and the finder, and what erroneous notions are held as to their respective rights in the lost article, says London Tit Bits.

The popular expression, "Finding is keeping," is probably responsible for a great deal of the error, for it is only true to a limited extent. The loss of an article does not deprive the loser of his rights in it, and he is entitled to recover possession when he can. The finder has no right to retain the article as against the true owner; nor, except in some special cases, to demand a reward as a condition of returning it.

If Smith loses his umbrella and Jones finds it, Smith can compel Jones to give it back; and if Jones has given or sold it to Brown, Smith can oblige Brown to make restitution, and need not, as a general rule, refund him the amount he paid for it. The duty of the finder of an article is quite plain; it is to dis- [illegible] it, and if he keeps it knowing who that person is, he runs the risk of being prosecuted for theft.

But where an article is found in a public place to which there is free access, such as the street, a public park, and even the public parts of a shop, the finder is entitled to keep the article until the real owner turns up to claim it, and no one else has any right to take it away from him. This was well shown in a very old case on the subject of lost property. A chimney-sweep's boy found a valuable jewel. He took it to a jeweller to ask what it was worth. The jeweller, wishing to swindle the boy, told him it was worthless, and offered 1½d. for it, and, on the boy declining this sum, refused to return the jewel to him. It was held that he had no right to deprive the boy of the jewel, and that in the absence of the true owner the boy, as the finder, was entitled to keep possession of the article.

This statement of the law must be taken with some limitation. Thus, if property is found in an inn, the inn keeper can demand it; and property found by railway porters and other employes in railway stations or trains must be delivered up to the company. In London cab drivers and train and omnibus conductors are entitled to claim possession of articles left in their vehicles, and must take them to the Lost Property Office at Scotland Yard. If an article is claimed the owner must pay a reward of 15 per cent. of the value; any article not claimed within a certain time is returned to the finder.

Fun at the Stock Exchange.

There were high jinks in the London Stock Exchange recently. A jobber who enjoys the nickname of the "Burglar" was suddenly handcuffed and accused of being a party to the sensational jewel robbery now exciting general interest. Circumstantial evidence of his guilt was duly forthcoming by the extraction of strings of imitation pearls from his pockets, and then the cry went up for the police. This was promptly responded to by another dealer, who had gone to the trouble of hiring a constable's uniform, and the delinquent was hustled out of the House by the scruff of the neck, followed by an excited mob, a large percentage of which was gulled into the idea that a genuine arrest had been made. Eventually the joke recoiled on the owner of the handcuffs, who, when demonstrating how they worked, had to suffer the mortification of having the key stolen for about an hour.—Financier.

Resourceful Livingstone.

David Livingstone, explorer and missionary, was a man of varied accomplishments. Besides getting himself taught on board ship, and later by Sir Thomas Macleur, to take with great accuracy astronomical observations for fixing latitude and longitude, besides acquainting himself with botany and geology, with patriotic literature and Egyptology, Livingstone was an excellent mechanic, a steersman and a mariner. His resourcefulness was at all times remarkable. When he was hard up for fuel on his first steamer journey up the River Shire, he landed in the elephant marsh. Here no trees existed and no fuel was obtainable, but his men found many bones of slaughtered elephants. Livingstone at once took the bones on board, burned them in the furnaces of the Ma robert and so continued his journey.

Meat "With Trimmings."

Pineapple chunks and roast beef as a dinner dish sounds like a return to the habits of our forefathers, who always wanted something sweet with their meat. Sir Walter Besant tells us how in Tudor days most people's teeth were black on account of their diet. Honey was poured lavishly over the beef, and sugar employed to give a fillip to the poultry, and even the wine had to be much sweetened to please the palate of the mediæval gourmet. To this day we ourselves add currant jelly to our mutton, apple sauce to our pork, and in Germany stewed pears form "the usual trimming" of chicken.—London Spectator.

Railway Board Say Only For Pedestrian Traffic

USE TURNSTILES

The City Solicitor submitted a copy of an order of the Board of Railway Commissioners authorizing the construction of De Laval street across the tracks of the Midland Branch of the Grand Trunk railway, but, providing that the crossing to be constructed shall be for pedestrian traffic only, with turnstiles in the fences.

The order does not provide at whose expense the crossing is to be constructed but the solicitor presumed from the wording of the order that the expense is to be borne by the city.

"That won't do," said the Mayor. It should be an open street.

Mr Hall explained that he had not been notified of the Board's meeting so that he might attend.

The City Clerk was instructed to write the Board advising them that the order was not satisfactory and that the city desired to have the street opened for vehicular traffic.

COLLOSAL NERVE!

W. G. Robertson, secretary of the Ontario Motor League requested co-operation on the part of the city to erect signs on the main roads leading through the city, at the boundaries, a sign indicating the speed at which automobiles are permitted to travel.

The communication was referred to the Board of Works.

"Collosal nerve," remarked Ald. Gordon with a smile: why don't they put them up themselves."

NAT. MUNICIPAL LEAGUE

Invitation was received from the National Municipal League to send delagtes to the convention at Toronto, November 12th to 15th., of this year. This matter was left with the Mayor.

GOVERNMENT TO PAY

The secretary fo the Departmnet of Public Works wrote that the department will be prepared to bear its proportion of the cost of street paving that may be done on streets along government property.

WILD MAN CAPTURED

Running Wild in Woods Near Ivanhoe

Belleville, Sept. 23.—A man has been running wild in the woods near Ivanhoe for some time. He came out the other day into a clearing, and was surrounded and captured and brought into the village of Madoc and put into the lockup there. He was nearly naked, and bit and scratched some of his captors.

To make toast water for invalids toast very brown a slice of bread, break it in bits and pour a cup of boiling water over it. Chill before serving

RECOMMENDATION FOR NINE INCH WALLS IS PASSED

Only Three Negative Votes — Mayor Bradburn Replies to Letter Written by Mr. J. J. Turner Sen.

Ald. J. G. Graham can go ahead and build two houses with nine inch walls on the south side of Dublin street between Water and George streets.

Last night the report including the recommendation of the Board of Works to this effect was passed by Council.

Ald. Gordon and Ald Duffus moved and seconded a motion to have the clause struck out of the report, but they were supported only by Ald. McIntyre Mayor Bradburn and the other members with the exception of Ald. Anderson, who was absent, voted for the clause as read.

Ald. Duncan, who moved the resolution in Board of Works, said that he did so because so many other buildings had been erected. He could name over a dozen, yes two dozen. Until such time as the City appointed a Building Inspector, who would go over all the fire limits, he would be in favor of allowing a nine inch wall to be built. His suggestion was to extend the fire limits and set some definite policy.

Ald. Langford said he had looked into the matter and found that at the time the fire limits were extended to Dublin street, Mr. Williams engineered the move as he did not want any sheds beside his residence. It was not intended to restrict a nine inch wall.

Ald. Johnston held that Council should get busy and remodel the fire limits. In his opinion, a nine inch wall was sufficient.

"BRITISH FAIR PLAY."

Mayor Bradburn replied to the letter written by Mr. Turner, who referred to the Eastwood building and "British Fair Play." Mayor Bradburn said that if Mr. Turner had just spent a few minutes to make himself acquainted with the agreement and resolution which went through the Council he would not have spoken in the way he did. His Worship explained, that Mr. Eastwood and the contractor, Mr. T Rutherford came before the Council and obtained permission to use nine inch walls. They were to provide brick piers, the same to be built in the wall. They agreed to that but simply built what they intended to build in the first place. Mr Turner might have acquainted himself with these conditions before he put it up to the Council in the way he did.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ON ITS DEFENCE

Mr. G. W. Allan of Toronto Replies to Review Article "Religion or Manslaughter"

Toronto, Sept. 17, 13

Dear Sir—Now that the "Jewell case" has been before the court, and the Judge, whilst the third witness for the prosecution was still in the box stopped the trial, and directed the Jury to find the defendant "not guilty," without hearing any evidence or calling any witnesses for the defense, we may profit by a retrospect of the newspaper comments on the case during the past few weeks

In commenting on the case our Ontario Press have used such headlines as the following: "Father liable if child dies under Christian Science treatment," "English Judge decides against Christian Science treatment," "Religion or Manslaughter," "Christian Science murder," "Manslaughter if child dies, says Judge," Christian Science is illegal practice," etc., etc.

Although we are aware that many of the above headings would tend to convey a wrong impression, and that some of them were indeed absolutely false, we cannot think these inaccuracies were intentional on the part of the press.

Now, let us suppose that the child had diphtheria, and that the parents had relied upon Christian Science treatment [illegible] the child had died, should these circumstances warrant the branding of the parents as criminals in the public mind?

If there is a system of curing diphtheria that has proved effective in every case, and the parents have knowledge of it and it is within their reach and then they do not resort to it, they might be considered negligent of the welfare of their children. But as no such system has yet been discovered, the parent, who has the greatest interest in the child's well-being, must choose that system, which in his judgment, will be the most efficacious.

I have before me statistics showing the number of deaths from diphtheria in our Province, and its various counties and cities. But, in order that we may all view this question from the outside, let me quote from those of New York City. (I am glad to say our own rate is somewhat less per thousand.)

The official report of the Department of Health for the city of New York for the year 1910, showed that in that city alone there were 1715 deaths from diphtheria, nearly all children under 15 years of age.

The report further shows that in the same year 27.111 children under the age of 15 died in New York city, and we are safe in assuming that the majority of these cases had medical attendance.

Were these 27.0 or even these 1715 parents arrested and made to stand trial for permitting the death of their children? Why?

Were these parents branded by the press of two continents as accessories to the death of children [illegible] would have given their own lives to save?

Could anyone think of heaping upon their grief the horror and anguish of arrest and trial when they had relied upon the system of healing which, in their judgment, was best?

Every one will concede that Christian Science parents are equally anxious for the welfare of their children, and will, when illness manifests itself, give the child that treatment which the parents have proved in previous experiences to be effective, even after materia medica has pronounced the case hopeless.

Have they not an equal right to decide what is for the child's welfare?

Why discriminate?

In the same city of New York there are several hundred Christian Science practitioners, with more demands upon them than they can attend to, and only one child passed away under Christian Science treatment within the year.

Our press contains almost daily some report of either the discoveries or the achievements of materia medica, but its failures are ignored or accepted as dispensations of Providence. On the other hand, the beneficent work of Christian Science is rarely mentioned, but its unsuccessful attempts to effect a cure are almost always given publicity.

Again, why discriminate?

Christian Science has no quarrel with any School of Medicine. No other profession numbers within its ranks so many noble men, untiring in self-sacrifice for the welfare of others, as does the medical profession. For any relief of distress that has been accomplished by any school, of Medicine, Christian Scientists, who are seeking the same end, are grateful. We rejoice with them when relief has been given the suffering, and our regrets mingle with theirs when they fail to accomplish the desired good.

If there has been any effort in the present instance to hold Christian Science up to public disapprobation, it has utterly failed. Thoughtful people are aware that criticism, condemnation and persecution will not avail to bar the progress of such a movement. The one and only way to cause Christian Science to fall into desuetude is by offering something better. The world waits

A noted LL.D of olden times left an admonition that is, perhaps, as much needed now as then—"Refrain from these men and let them alone; for if this counsel or this work be of men it will come to nought. But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found to fight against God."

May we not profitably adopt the spirit of the following sentence from Miscellaneous Writings, by Mary Baker Eddy:—"The only justice of which I feel at present capable is mercy and charity to everyone . . . taking especial care to mind my own business."

Thanking you for giving space to this communication, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

G. W. ALLAN.

Ouch!

One of those dear lady friends of ours who take a particular interest in other people's affairs got on a car and sat down beside a quiet looking man whose face was badly pitted.

"Why, you poor man!" she exclaimed. "How you must have suffered! How long ago did you have the smallpox?"

"Madam," was the [illegible] spoken reply, "what evidently drew your attention are not pits of smallpox. I had these put on by a beauty specialist to keep my face from skidding when I eat watermelon." — Chicago Tribune.

TENDER AND CAR LEFT THE RAILS

Mishap to Passenger Train Near Port Hope

Port Hope, Sept. 23.—Grand Trunk passenger train No. 5, from Montreal to Toronto, which is due here at 5.30 a.m., met with a slight mishap a short distance east of here yesterday morning, but no persons were injured. The engine tender and baggage car left the rails and ploughed up the roadbed for a considerable distance. A defect in the trucks of the engine is believed to have caused the derailment. Another engine was secured, and the train proceeded to Toronto about 7 o'clock.

SMUT DISEASES OF CULTIVATED PLANTS

A Helpful Book Free to All

It is estimated by the Director of the Experimental Farms that Smut diseases of cultivated plants cause an annual loss in Canada of at least fifteen million dollars. If these diseases were properly understood and the best known remedies applied at proper times much of this serious injury would be prevented.

In order to teach crop growers how best to protect their fields against damge by smuts there has been issued by the Department of Agriculture a comprehensive, plainly written treatise which is issued as bulletin No. 73, of the Experimental Farms. The author, Mr. H. T. Gussow, Dominion Botanist, has gone into the subject very thoroughly not only describing the smuts, in their various stages, that affect wheat, barley, oats, corn and millet but attention is given to methods of infection as well as the preventive measures and curative remedies that have been found useful. The text which occupies about fifty pages is much helped by numerous illustrations. This work is being sent out free to all who apply for it to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Achsah Lippincott has been appointed chief market clerk of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Walter Hancock recently received the degree of master of arts from the Temple university of Philadelphia.

Charlotte Perkins Gilman says that the Englishwoman knows more, cares more and talks more about public matters and with greater ability than her American sister.

"As our men will not willingly go back to the farms, we must induce our women to go," says Mrs. Kate Trimble Woolsey. "We know that when they do the men will follow."

The oldest woman in England—Mrs. Rebecca Clark of High Road, Wood Green—is hale and hearty at 109 and is fond of a good meal. She says: "I never believed in being faddy about food. Eat [illegible] and you'll be all right."

Mrs. A. A. A. Brooks, president of the Gotham Club of New York, has been interesting her fellow members in an effort to bring pressure to bear for legislation compelling manufacturing chemists to use a special mold for poison tablets.

Pigeon Post In Antipodes.

Pigeon flying is cultivated as something more than a mere sport at the Antipodes. A pigeon post is almost the only regular means of communication between Hobart, Tasmania, and the Maatsuyker island lighthouse, 75 miles out at sea, and it has seldom been known to fail. Twelve birds are used for the service, and are despatched in trios at stated intervals, with messages written on paper and secured in celluloid cases. In November, 1908, when one of the lighthouse keepers was taken seriously ill, a pigeon messenger brought a doctor from Hobart within 16 hours of its dispatch.

J. J. Turner and Sons Ask Regarding Their Application

In a communication to the City Council last night, Messrs. J. J Turner & Sons asked regarding their application for a railway siding. The letter referred to reports in the Press when the application was considered some time ago.

Then, the application of the Peter Hamilton Company for a siding, was granted. In the "heat of battle" the opposition section of the Council secured a majority to a motion that the Turner request be also granted, on the grounds that as the company got the siding, the same consideration should be given to J. J. Turner & Sons. No further action however, was taken by Council.

The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

The Garbage By-law was amended by Council last night to provide that a householder must not allow garbage from his own residence to be placed on the property of another. Complaints had been made that citizens placed their garbage receptacles on their neighbors' property.

TWO CLAIM DAMAGES

One Man Lost a Leg and the Other His Teeth

Peck, Kerr and McElderry wrote the City Council last night that their instructions were to issue a writ for damages on behalf of Alex Ferguson unless a settlement is arrived at immediately.

Ferguson lost one of his legs in an accident on Bethune street. He was walking on the sidewalk when he slipped and fell under a moving freight car. The sidewalk is close to the tracks.

The Legal committee will consider the question.

LOST HIS TEETH.

O'Connell & Corkery gave notice that John Huxley intends to claim damages from the city as compensation for personal injuries sustained by him in consequence of the want of repair of an excavation and obstruction negligently made on Charlotte street between George and Aylmer streets.

Huxley fell into the excavation while riding his bicycle. He had a number of his teeth knocked out and he estimates the damages at $350.

The communication was passed on to the Legal committee.

Farming by Cinema.

Teaching scientific farming by moving picture methods is likely to be the next step in the educational work the Ontario Department of Agriculture is carrying on for the promotion of improved farming methods in the province. The matter has not been taken up definitely yet, but officials of the department are studying with interest the experiment now being made in that direction in the United States, and are considering its various advantages in connection with the institute lectures carried on during the winter.

DIAMOND MINING.

How They Treat the Blue Dirt in the Kimberly Region.

Writing from Johannesburg, E. W. Howe tells how the diamonds are taken from the mines in South Africa. Briefly, the process of finding the diamonds is as follows:

The blue dirt in which the diamonds are found is brought to the surface precisely as coal is hoisted and mined in about the same way. It is then placed in little iron cars and hauled to a level field, where it is spread over the surface to a depth of two feet. This is done to permit the weather to disintegrate the dirt and render its washing easier. To-day I saw a field of 4,000 acres covered with this blue dirt. It will remain out in the weather a year before it is treated in the washing mills.

You might pause a moment and think of that 4,000 acre field, covered to a depth of two feet with the blue dirt in which diamonds are found. The 4,000 acre field I saw represented the output of only one mine; there are eight in the Kimberly district, only two of which are known to be duffers, as they say here—that is, of little value.

And you may rest assured that this 4,000 acre field is carefully guarded. It is surrounded with a barbed wire fence fourteen feet high, and on the top of the fence are four wires spread out in such a way that no one could possibly climb over. At night the fence is illuminated with electric lights, and there is a patrol of armed guards day and night. But you might be turned loose in the 4,000 acre field and not find a diamond in a year. The process of finding them is very intricate, expensive and difficult. Many of the natives who work in the diamond mines have never seen a diamond; they see only the blue dirt.

After the blue dirt has lain out in the weather a year and been plowed up at intervals with steam plows that all portions of it may have a chance at the sun, it is washed in enormous mills and reduced in the proportion of 1 to 4,000,000—that is, for every pound of diamonds found 4,000,000 pounds of blue dirt are mined, hoisted, exposed in the field a year and then run through the washing mills.

In these washing mills the blue dirt is first crushed between rollers and then run through shaking washing pans three different times. What is left is then taken in cars to another mill call [illegible] dirt is again washed three times. Finally the diamonds and the heavier pebbles remaining after six washings go in a stream of water over a shaking pan, the bottom of which is covered with vaseline. The diamonds stick to the vaseline for some reason yet unexplained, while the pebbles roll away with the water. The diamonds on the screen are then easily collected and sorted.

Welcome to Everybody.

In Russia newspaper correspondents have a hard time of it. Not long ago a nihilist conspiracy was discovered, and the correspondent of the London Standard went to see the building.

"Can I come in?" he asked the officer in charge.

"Certainly," said the officer.

The correspondent entered and took copious notes, but when he turned to go the officer barred the way.

"Anybody who likes may come in," he explained, "but he is immediately arrested."

In vain the prisoner pleaded; the officer had his orders.

The correspondent walked to the window and saw the London Times man on the street.

"Hello!" he called out. "Here's the nihilist place. Come up."

He came up, and when he found himself a prisoner he was furious.

Then the two correspondents spent the afternoon inviting other newspaper flies into the spider's web until there was quite a company of furious and cursing correspondents, and there they remained until released the next morning.

For the Picnic Lunch.

Puff pastry is a delicious little dainty to include in the picnic luncheon menu. To make puff paste take a pound of flour and sift it well and stir in a pinch of salt, the beaten yolk of an egg and sufficient ice cold water to make a stiff paste. As flour varies so much in the quantity of water that it will take up, it is almost impossible to tell how much will be required. Consequently a little should be added at a time till the dough is mixed. Take some good fresh butter and wash it in water and then wrap in a cloth and lay it in the ice chest, if there is one handy; if not, place on the floor of the pantry for an hour. Roll out the dough and place the butter in a lump in the center of the dough and fold the sides over it. Set away in a cold place for another hour. Then roll it out into a long strip. Fold this into three by turning in the ends. Keep the dough quite cold and continue this process six times. Between the third and fifth rollings out lay the dough in a cold place for an hour before proceeding. Then it is ready to bake. Before placing in the oven the top of the pastry should be brushed over either with milk or the beaten yolk of an egg. The latter gives the pastry a rich yellow tint, which, however, is not always liked. Bake in a quick oven and take out as soon as cooked and nicely browned. Pastry should be cooled in a hot or warm room, as it keeps its crispness better.

To make sweet fillings for any of the molds either stew the fruit until quite thick, using only just sufficient water, or else mash or slice the fresh fruit, sweeten to taste and fill the molds. Mash with whipped cream or serve plain. These pies are delicious, and as they are served cold are so easy to prepare once the cases are made. The smaller cases can be filled with sweets or savories as liked. Vegetables served in cases is a nice way of using up cold vegetables. They may be used either hot or cold.

These cases are delightfully easy things to take to a picnic. Store the cases in a tin box and take the filling in jars. There will be no appalling mixture of sweets and meats, for until the cases are filled their contents are reposing in tightly corked or stoppered wide necked jars. A delicious filling for the cases and much liked at river lunches is made with a tin of lobster and cream. Whip a teacupful of cream to a stiff froth and cut open the lobster tin and mince all the flesh finely. Squeeze a few drops of lemon juice over and sprinkle with paprika pepper and any flavoring liked. Just before filling the cases stir the cream and lobster together and fill the cases. Stand on some fresh lettuce leaves—and there you are!

Any nice cream filling may be made of meat finely minced and nicely flavored and placed in a pan with a sprinkle of flour and a tablespoonful of good gravy. Simmer till stiff, take off the fire and add two tablespoonfuls of [illegible] cold.

Summer Salads.

Prime requirements of the salad are lightness and crispness. Heavy garnishes are to be avoided at all times, but particularly in the summer.

Only the white leaves of the lettuce should be used, and these or the cress should be allowed to stand in the ice water for an hour before serving. The salad dressing should never be put on the lettuce or cress, or, for that matter, on the salad mixture, until just before the salad is wanted at the table. When it is to be prepared the green salad should be thoroughly dried in a napkin, and the salad dish should be as cold as possible.

Nests of lettuce leaves, made of four leaves with the stem ends laid overlapping each other, or a deft arrangement of cress in the same shape, placed carefully on a broad, flaring dish and filled with the salad mixture, is easily served and effective in appearance.

If mayonnaise or boiled dressings are used, enough should be saved, after mixing the ingredients, to cover the top. Vegetables salads are pretty decorated with a border of finely shredded red pepper or lettuce or both interlaced or with fine strips of the white of boiled eggs. Nasturtium blossoms, which have a pleasant, spicy flavor, are pretty as a decoration and add to the tastiness. If green or red is wanted in the dressing, spinach green, bits of green pepper or finely chopped parsley may be used for the former and powdered dried lobster coral or beet juice for the latter.

A Simple Sunday Supper.

Some jellied meat or salad, with bread and butter, is quite sufficient. If a salad is preferred as a piece de resistance in place of meat it may be a little heavier than the bit of green served at dinner. Nuts, fish, cheese or egg mixtures may be used in it. For variety's sake the fruit and salad may be combined as in a Waldorf salad or in a banana salad with nuts. If one desires to simplify the menu still further, buns or German coffee cake may take the place of both the cake and the bread. Some people find chocolate too heavy a beverage, while others desire nothing for Sunday supper but chocolate with whipped cream and a sandwich with a bit of green—like mint lettuce, nasturtium or watercress—in the filling.

ADVANCED MODES.

In the Fall We'll Wear Silk Suits.

IN DEEP PURPLE BENGALINE.

Slouchy styles are to hold over this fall and all the advanced models are just as "sloppy" as ever.

Silk suits, too, are to be popular, and the illustration shows a charming affair in deep purple bengaline, a silk that is to be very much worn this autumn.

Cord of the same color is used to outline seams and for the ornaments. A stunning waistcoat is of dull cloth of gold.

At the Wrist.

A very pretty finish for the end of the sleeve is in the shape of a fan. The entire sleeve is cut over a plain pattern, but when it nears the wrist the material is drawn in, so that the edge falls over the hand in fan shape. A piping of black velvet and a frill of lace peeping beneath add to the daintiness.

The sleeves slashed at the wrist are a fine accompaniment for slashed skirts. If the sides of the slash in the skirt are curved the same effect is seen in the sleeves. If they are cut off square they are treated so in the sleeves.

Deep cuffs are prominent on many sleeves. [illegible] inches wide, while others reach the elbow.

Form Versus Food.

A famous humorist says that a new rich family in Cleveland, who were beginning to put on a lot of airs, hired a colored girl just arrived from the south to act as their serving maid. Her new mistress insisted that all meals should be served in courses. Even when there wasn't very much to eat it was brought to the table in courses.

At the end of the week the girl threw up her job. Being pressed for a reason for quitting so suddenly, she said:

"I'll tell you, lady. In dis yere house dere's too much shiftin' of de dishes fur de fewness of de vittles."

Harvard Women's Club.

Mothers, sisters, daughters and wives of men holding degrees from Harvard university are eligible to membership in the new Harvard Women's club. This is an outgrowth of the Harvard Dames, wives of the members of the faculty, organized in 1896. One of the past presidents of the Dames, Mrs. R. F. Hellman, will go with her husband to Iowa, he having been called to the university of that state, and many other members of the Dames are in other parts of the country; hence the establishing of the new club.

Farming For Women.

Mrs. Kate Trimble Woolsey of New York has a plan for women farmers. She says that intensive farming made it possible for 350 persons to be supported for a year on the proceeds of an acre in Japan. Mrs. Woolsey's idea is to have a central community house from which are to radiate little farms in all directions. These farms are to be run by women who would thus be saved from loneliness.

Wants All to Work.

Mrs. John Sharp Williams is doing much to interest the wives of senators without reference to political affiliation in the new congressional women's welfare branch of the National Civic federation. Mrs. Wilson and other Democrats will probably be the officials, but Mrs Sharp wants all wives of senators to take an interest in the work proposed.

Many a woman gets married simply because it is absolutely necessary for her to have an audience.

A LITTLE REBEL

By ALBERT T[illegible]KER KENYON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913

In the spring of 1863, when the Federal General Rosecrans was confronting the Confederate General Bragg at Murfreesboro, Tenn., I was a captain in the —th Ohio regiment of that army. One morning while I was officer of the picket post deployed on either side of the turnpike leading directly south a young girl of fifteen or sixteen came to me and asked me to let her go through the lines to her home, which she said was about a mile down the pike. I told her that I had no authority to do so, but if she would go to headquarters very likely she would get a pass.

She said that she had been to headquarters, but the general was busy and she was pressed for time. She had come up to town to get some medicine a doctor had prescribed for her mother, who was at the point of death. She looked so distressed, turning a pair of heavenly blue eyes upon me beseechingly, that I was sorely tempted to disobey orders and let her go through. War is very hard on the people of the country where the armies are contending, and I confess I had no stomach for that part of it. The girl saw I was weakening and exercised all her persuasive faculties upon me.

"While I am waiting here," she wailed, wringing her hands, "mother may be dying."

The brutality of keeping her under the circumstances was a little more than I could bear. It was several miles back to the town where were the army headquarters, the girl looked tired, and two or three hours would necessarily be consumed if I forced her to go there to make another application for a pass.

"Can you see your house from here?" I asked.

"You can just see the chimney over the hill. There it is, on the right side of the turnpike."

"I'll go with you."

I expected an outburst of gratitude. Instead she threw up her hands in protest.

"Not for the world would I get you into trouble. A Confederate vedette is stationed on the road right in front of our house. You would be captured."

Her unwillingness to implicate me enhanced my desire to serve her, but it also tended to add to my uncertainty as to what to do. My orders were to let no one go beyond our line who did not have a pass. To disobey such an order would render me liable to a very severe punishment. But I was young and full of chivalry. Would it not be better for me to take the risk upon myself than keep this poor girl from carrying medicine to her dying mother? My offer to accompany her was that I might be able to state that I had not let her out of my keeping while beyond our lines. Since it was evident from what she told me as to the proximity of the vedette that this plan would not serve I was at a loss to decide what other course to pursue.

The girl kept wringing her hands [illegible] wild with indecision between the dictates of my heart and my duty.

"If I let you go," I said to her, "and it is known by my superiors I shall be court martialed and doubtless suffer some severe penalty."

She stood for a moment thinking, then said: "Suppose I start to run. You follow me and at last give up the chase."

"No," I said. "I will either let you go through openly, disobeying orders, or not at all."

"Oh, do let me go!" she pleaded. "While you are detaining me you are withholding from my mother what may save her."

"Well," I said at last, "I'll risk it. Go ahead."

She gave me a grateful look, and I saw in it at the same time something of pain or regret. I was looking her straight in the face, on each side of which were two puffs such as were in vogue in women's hairdressing at the time. These puffs were, I believe, usually rolled over something to give them their shape. There was a break in the puff on one side of the girl's head, and a thin line of something white, over which it had been rolled, was visible.

A suspicion struck me.

"One moment," I said.

I reached for the puff and held on to it till I had taken out some crumpled white paper. Smoothing it out, I saw on it writing and figures. A brief examination showed me that it embraced estimates of each division of our Army of the Cumberland, giving its exact position.

"This is the medicine," I said to the girl, "that you are carrying to your sick mother."

There was no reply, only a look of disappointment and vexation that her scheme had failed.

"Corporal," I cried, "take this girl in to general headquarters and this paper also. Say that the girl was trying to get through the lines with it." Then to the girl, "You must have a seared conscience to practice such deception."

"Not at all," she replied. "I was trying to help our cause and thousands of our people and our brave boys. I am sorry I failed."

"And I rejoice that you did. Next time I shall not be so chicken hearted."

I never heard if she were punished; probably not. The next day we moved out on the Tullahoma campaign.

"What a heavenly little dog."

"Yes, he's a skye terrier."

RENFER SHOWED ONLY FLASHES OF FORM AGAINST WASHINGTON

Ed. Renfer, leading pitcher of the Canadian league, who is finishing the season with the Detroit Tigers, got his first chance with the major leaguers, when he was sent against the Washington Senitors at Washington. Bob Groom opposed Renfer. The Ottawa recruit was wild and afflicted with stage fright in the first two rounds, when five runs were scored off him. He went along better till the sixth, when he made way for a pinch hitter. Detroit only got one run for him. Here's what a Washington paper says of Renfer's performance:

"Renfer, a rangy-looking right hander, started the battle and worked for six innings, when he was taken out in order to give another youngster, Platt by name, a chance to show the extent of his hitting proclivities. Despite the fact that but six hits were made off Renfer's delivery, he was fortunate to get by without having more runs scored against him. He showed only flashes of form, and was treated rather shabbily in the first two innings, when he seemed to be suffering a severe attack of stage fright.

The Nationals hit everything he served up sharply; but were unfortunate in that the majority were right in the direction of the fielders. Harding, who was picked up from Winston Salem in the Carolina association, pitched the seventh and eighth, and was not much of an improvement on his predecessor. He was found for three hits, including a triple and a double, and passed a man in the two periods. But one run resulted, clever work behind him having at least a couple of others

A Drink and a Fight.

The Albanians used to practice a form of dueling well nigh as fatal as that advocated by Sir Charles Napier. Sir Richard Barton, who once commanded a corps of bashibazouks, write that "the Albanian contingent, who generally fight when they are drunk, had a peculiar style of monomachy. The principals, attended by their seconds and by all their friends, stood close opposite, each holding a cocked pistol in his right hand and a glass of raki or spirits of wine in his left. The first to drain his draught had the right to fire, and generally blazed away with fatal effect. It would have been useless to discourage this practice, but I insisted on fair play."—London Chronicle.

HOW KEATS KNOCKED OUT THE BUTCHER

Poets as Boxers

According to a French newspaper, the Cri de Paris, Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet and dramatist, some time ago agreed to spar a number of rounds with Charpentier, the celebrated heavyweight champion of Europe. The poet and the pugilist appeared on behalf of a deserving Paris charity.

The author of "Pelleas and Melisande" is thus following in the steps of another celebrated poet, Lord Byron, who prided himself on being a skilled boxer. He frequently attended meetings of the "Fancy" at Bribb's and elsewhere, and in his diary he writes: "I have been sparring with Jackson this morning and mean to continue and renew my acquaintance with my mufflers. My wind is in good plight, and I [illegible] hitter."

From Byron's friend and fellow-bard, Percy Bysshe Shelley, such a resolution would have been impossible; yet, although in every sense of a retiring disposition, he could when needful resent an insult in true British style. Keats used to relate how he once astonished a drunken and abusive waterman by pitching into him in such unexpectedly vigorous style with his fists that the fellow soon bawled for mercy.

Keats himself, although constitutionally delicate, was broad-shouldered, and possessed no small amount of physical strength. He was, indeed, well able to take his own part, as he conclusively proved when assaulted by a hectoring butcher, who mistook for cowardice the poet's naturally retiring manner. Quickly did he find out his error as he rose, amid the jeering laughter of his companions, from the mud into which he had been sent by a straightly-delivered blow.

Charles Kingsley, besides being a novelist, was a poet of no mean order. He was, too, what may be termed a handy man with his fists. "There was another professor whose lectures we attended together," wrote the Rev. Pitcairn Campbell, who was a fellow undergraduate with Kingsley at Cambridge, "one who taught the gentle art of self-defence—a negro of pure blood—who appeared to have more joints in his back than are usually allotted to humanity.

Robert Burns, besides being an adept at such athletic exercises as putting the stone, well knew how to take care of himself in a "turn-up"; while another Scottish bard, James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, was in his youth a doughty opponent for anyone who fancied himself as a boxer. On one occasion, it is related, he contested for upwards of an hour with a strapping guardsman, a man his superior in weight and inches, and one, moreover, who had fought more than one desperate battle for a money stake. Despite his qualifications the soldier was at length obliged to own himself beaten.

In his youth the ability of Richard Hengist Horne, the author of "Orion" and other poems, as a boxer stood him on more than one occasion in good stead. During the time he was serving in the Mexican Navy he was one night, when on shore, attacked by two desperadoes, who, armed with knives, thought to have an easy prey. Woefully, however, were they mistaken, for Horne, seeing what they were up to, dodged their onslaught, and, with a couple of well-directed blows, laid them sprawling at his feet.

THE TURF

Lindsay's well known horseman, Mr. W. A. Fanning, recently consummated two splendid deals in race horses. First he purchased the fast trotter, Roy Brook, 2.18 1-4, from Mr. Jas. Noble, of Toronto, and on Friday last he bought Picket Boy, 2.24 1-4, from Mr. Fred Peake, of Campbellford. Picket Boy is the stepper that carried off first money at the Campbellford fair races and also won at Peterborough fair in the 2.18 class, and again at the Lindsay Central Fair, last Friday in the 2.22 class. Picket Boy is one of the best known racers on the track in this section of the country and has a splendid pedigree, by Hermit 2.16 1-4, dam Old Tariff 2.20 1-4. He is a consistent race horse and will no doubt be heard from at the fairs this fall, and also at the ice races. Mr. Fanning intends to race both horses in the various winter ice races.—Lindsay Warder.

Duke's Private Army.

The Duke of Atholl occupies the unique position of being the only one of the King's subjects who maintains an army of his own. By a special act of grace the late Queen Victoria, shortly after she ascended the throne, presented the Atholl Highlanders with regimental colors, and thus they were duly constituted an "army." The Duke himself is colonel of the "regiment," while his eldest son, the Marquess of Tullibardine, and his two brothers, Lord James and Lord George Stewart-Murray, are officers. Many of the leading gentlemen in Perthsire also hold rank. The men, numbering about 250 strong, are drawn almost without exception from the vast estates of Atholl. They are sturdy, stalwart Highlanders, many of them standing 6 feet 4 inches high.

Whiskers.

"Whiskers" was a word formerly used to designate the hair on the upper lip. Scott more than once speaks of "whiskers on the upper lip," and so does Defoe in "Robinson Crusoe." Johnson defined a "whisker" as "the hair growing on the upper lip or cheek unshaven, a mustachio." It seems to have taken its name from a fancied resemblance to a small brush, to "whisk" properly meaning to sweep, and a "whisker" having been a particular kind of feather brush; also, in the slang of a former time, a switch or rod. In the seventeenth century a "whisker" signified, among other things, a brazen lie, a "whopper."

Rival to Panama.

The decision of the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Canadian Minister of Railways and Canals, that Port Nelson shall be the tide water terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway—work upon which is forthwith to be resumed—has given a new stimulus to the discussion of the merits and utilities of this project. The Hudson Bay Railway is designed to bring the vast grain areas of the Canadian Northwest within a hauling distance of Liverpool of 3,500 miles, or some 1,800 miles less than the existing rail and lake routes through Montreal, St. John and New York.

A city at the mouth of the new Welland Ship Canal is no longer a day dream. Far-sighted capitalists, seeing the possibilities ahead, have taken the initial steps to map out the city that is to be.

Port Weller is to be the name of the new municipality—a name chosen in honor of Chief J. L. Weller, the man who conceived the building of the new ship canal, and is in full charge of the construction of the great work.

WHEN "LAGS" ESCAPE

INGENIOUS METHODS ARE USED TO BREAK FROM PRISON.

Patience, Keen Wit, Set Purpose and Desperate Cunning All Contribute to the Successful Attempts to Pass Through Locked Doors — France Holds Record for the Most Sensational Jail Deliveries.

Not in all the annals of adventure will you find more stirring tales than those relating to escapes from great prisons. It is a war of keen wits, of long patience, of set purpose, and of passionate thirst for freedom, against every obstacle that can be devised. To a strong man with a lifetime behind bars in prospect, what is a year, two years, five years, spent in scraping away mortar with his finger nails.

His jailers have many things to think of besides his safe keeping; on the other hand, he is free to bend all his faculties, night and day, on ways and means, and the results are indeed full of human interest. I have often spoken with prison wardens on the subject and sat almost breathless with interest as tales were told of escapes and attempts so ingenious and daring that they commanded the admiration and smypathy — purely personal and unofficial of course—of even those stern disciplinarians.

Wardens have shown keys made of wire from tin cans and twisted strands of oakum—keys that would open massive doors with startling readiness. And think of a master key to almost every gate in a prison, forged by a convicted blacksmith entirely from memory! The man had seen the original displayed in the chaplain's belt two or three times and had so accurately impressed each angle and curve on his eager mind that the skeleton he reproduced with such patient labor was, if not a perfect copy, at least an effective substitute. But prisoners using tools of any sorts, or having access to even the most unlikely material, will contrive keys, saws, files and other implements that accomplish miracles as open sesames.

Probably the French penal establishments yield the most interesting and romantic cases. The sentences are more severe and the prisoners are left more to their own devices, particularly at the famous prison of Noumea, in New Caledonia, a lonely island in a tropic sea. Severe punishments are in store at this convict station for men who attempt to escape. They are loaded with chains and thrown into a black hole, where many a man has lost his reason. Moreover, recapture after the alarm gun has been fired means a great prolongation of sentence. It is eloquent of the life in New Caledonia, however, that in spite of this, one will find young prisoners who have made a dozen attempts to escape and in consequence have cumulative sentences hanging over them amounting to 50 or even 100 years.

The latest and strangest case reported to Paris was one where two men had patiently cut their chains and made their bedclothes into petticoats by night. White caps and curls were skillfully fashioned out of picked oakum; and they dyed the lower part of their legs a dark blue to imitate long stockings. Thus disguised they made a bold bid for freedom. But the [illegible] they had to give up after a day and night on a crazy raft, half drowned and delirious with thirst.

As to the great French prisons at Brest, Rochefort and Toulon, up till recently amazingly daring escapes were attempted and carried out; and, stranger still, coining money was constantly practiced in them. In the words of a government inspector, "It seems possible to make files or false keys in the shops by evading supervision; but to strike false money during the short hours of rest—to hollow out molds melt metals and complete the coins—seems incredible; yet it was successfully done."

At Toulon the great French forger, Suttler, was held in durance and his feats even in prison were a sore trial to the officials. One case is on record when official authority reached the prison for the release of a particular prisoner. All the documents and signatures were in perfect order and proper form, and the man would have been set free forthwith, were it not that one important paper was lacking. Inquiry was started concerning this when it leaked out that the letter containing the documents bore the postmark of Toulon and not of Paris. Further search disclosed an astonishing fraud. The orders were forgeries from beginning to end, prepared and carried out by the wonderful Suttler, who had forged every signature, including even that of the President.

The whole life of this prisoner was a strange romance. He had played many parts and displayed genius of a high order, whether clothed in broadcloth or rags. His end was mysterious. One night after displaying some marvelously clever forgeries to the officials whose signatures they purported to be, he went quietly to bed and was found dead next morning. Beyond doubt he had committed suicide; but the surgeons who performed the post-mortem were utterly at a loss to explain the cause of death. Only a week previously he had taught a fellow prisoner 10 or 12 ways of cutting the links of his chain, or of concealing the gaps in the partly sawed steel. To another Suttler sent straw basket which was confiscated by accident, and on pulling it to pieces each straw was found to contain a small file of wonderful fineness.

Usually the British system in convict prisons is perfect enough to detect a man's absence long before he can get clear of the jail precincts. On one occasion at Portland the usual bells were tolled and shots fired to give notice of an escape. All the staff turned out with loaded rifles and half an hour later some of the civil guard casually too to prodding the soft ground of the vegetable garden with their bayonets.

All at once a wild yet smothered yell was heard from somewhere below the ground. And simultaneously the men were astounded to witness a spasmodic upheaval of freshly turned soil. A bayonet point had pierced the flesh of the artfully buried prisoner and with a convulsive movement he sprang out of his strange grave.

Motor Power From the Sun.

Charles Dickens called the sun "our servant of all work"; and, indeed, all power is derived from the sun, though we sometimes forget it, since it comes indirectly. The sun-motor is a successful attempt to obtain power direct from the sun. In the tropics much of the heat of the sun, especially in the sandy deserts, is never used at all, and it has been calculated that the sun's rays on one square foot of the earth's surface can produce one-third of a horse power. The question men have racked their brains to solve is how to collect this energy.

SIDEWALK WILL BE LAID OUTSIDE THE TREE LINE

On McDonnel Street Between George and Water Streets—Ald. Gordon and Ald. Buller Hors de Combat

Ald. G. N. Gordon and Ald. Wm. Buller had a breezy skirmish at Council meeting last night after the Chairman of the Board of Works read the report of his department. This report contained the following resolution;

> That the sidewalk on the north side of McDonnel-st. from George st. to Water-st. be laid on the outside of the trees in line with the sidewalk east of Water-st.

This is the walk for the George street Methodist church. At the Board of Works the vote was a tie and Ald. Buller gave the deciding vote in favor of the "outside."

Ald. Gordon smiled serenely as he proceeded to tell the Council about a meeting some time ago when it was decided that the recommendations of the City Engineer should stand so far as to street building and the construction of sidewalks. That was the policy adopted and Ald. Buller was in favor.

Then Ald. Gordon went on to tell about Ald. Buller's statements when the deputation from George street church waited on the Board of Works with the request that the sidewalk be laid on the outside of the tree line, of how he said that while the sidewalk should be constructed inside the tree line, he was going to vote in favor of the deputation's request.

Ald. Gordon held that Ald. Buller had come out of the meeting with his old time reputation of sticking to his guns, all shot to pieces.

He moved that the sidewalk be laid in accordance with the Engineer's recommendations.

"He's quite an artist," said Ald. Buller, of the centre ward member, as he arose to reply "but he is the man who did the flopping." Ald. Buller claimed that Ald. Gordon voted against the committee on the question of the crossing to Murray street church, after he had first voted with the committee. This was when Rev. J. R. Webb objected to the location of the crossing.

Ald. Buller further stated that when Ald. Gordon knew of certain big questions that were to come before the Board of Works, he did not have the backbone to stay on the Board He quit.

The vote on the amendment of Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, was as follows:

Ayes—Aldermen Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan and Duffus.

Nays—Aldermen Buller, Green, Johnston, Langford and McIntyre.

The original motion carried and the sidewalk will be laid outside the tree line.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS GAVE ESPISCOPAL CROSS AND CHAIN

Past State Deputy Rogers, of Lindsay, made the presentation and also a verbal address. Several members made short speeches congratulating the Bishop-elect on his appointment and wishing him many years of episcopal duties.

The new bishop made a very beautiful reply urging the Knights of Columbus to keep up their good work and he wished them every success.

The representatives from Lindsay were; Messrs. L. V. O'Connor, P. Kennedy, J. Rogers, B. J. Gough, T. Brady and F. McGlory.

ONE-HUNDRED JAPANESE SMUGGLED INTO CANADA

Revelations Follow Seizure of Vessel at Port Simpson.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23—The seizure of a Japanese vessel some day ago by the Canadian fisheries protective cruiser Joliffe at Port Simpson, [illegible] Columbia, has resulted in the discovery of official facts here which tend to show a much more serious state of affairs than at first serious state of affairs than at first appeared. It is now learned authoritatively that no trace could be found of a crowd of 100 Japanese who embarked on the vessel when she left Japan, that the clearing papers were wrong, and that a set of complete charts of the British Columbia coast were found when the vessel was searched.

When the Japanese vessel was seized by the captain of the Joliffe the clearing papers showed that they were for a point in Alaska, but no clearing papers were found for Port Simpson. This being a technical violation of the Customs law, the vessel was seized. Not a trace could be found of the 100 Japanese, who undoubtedly were on board, as information had been received from British agents in Japan to the effect that they were on board when the vessel left Japan. There is no information that they were landed at Alaska, and it is feared they were smuggled into some part of the British Co[illegible]

The captain of the Japanese vessel denied he had any chart of the British Columbia coast, but on a search being made there was discovered a complete and very accurate chart of every inlet and point on the coast. Officials are inclined to treat the incident delicately, as it might easily be constructed into one of international significance, but it is believed that a daring attempt at smuggling has been pulled off successfully.

The captain of the Japanese vessel was fined and then he was released. There was no other course open to the authorities, as the clearing papers were not made out for Port Simpson.

"THE ROSARY"

"The Rosary," Rowland and Clifford's theatrical success, which will be seen at the Grand next Saturday, matinee and night, tells a story of a modern Garden of Eden in which the serpent enters in the form of a rejected suitor who wrecks the home and happiness of a married couple by playing upon the jealousy of the husband. There is diffused throughout the drama a remarkable air of purity, faith and hope from the opening scene, which pictures the happy couple about to celebrate their second marriage anniversary, and surrounded by all the creature comforts of modern civilization to the last act when the twain, broken in health and fortune and wrecked by jealously, come like two weary children at the feet of the old priest who has fathered them throughout their troubles. In the days of their prosperity they had built a chapel for their old friend the priest, and in their adversity they come back to the little edifice on Sunday morning just as the chimes send their music rolling through the valley. According to the story which Mrs Hannah McLennan, of Peterboro, related with great eloquence to Judge Morgan in the Criminal Sessions Court at the City Hall this morning, she had fallen under the evil influence of a wicked woman, who, by her will power, compelled her to steal some hair switches from the T. Eaton Company—in all worth $35.

"She hypnotized me," explained Mrs. McLennan pleading guilty to theft. "I met her at the hair counter and she said to me, 'I would like a dozen of those. ### Mr. Asquith's Birthplace.

Morley, in Yorkshire, was en fete recently, when Mr. Asquith visited it to receive the freedom of his native town. Yorkshire, Mr. Asquith once declared, had produced men in every walk of life who had contributed in a greater degree than the people of any other county in England to the making of history and the progress of mankind; and, however this may be, none will be disposed to deny that Mr. Asquith himself is a worthy representative of his county. But, though born in Yorkshire, Mr. Asquith is a Cockney by adoption, and it was at the City of London School, as most people will be aware, that he laid the foundation of his future fame.

Long before the birth of the future Prime Minister, Asquith was a name honorably known in Morley, and Mr. Asquith's father and grandfather were very prominent personalities in the town. He himself has told us that one of his earliest recollections centres round the carrying of a flag in a Sunday school procession after the Crimean War.

A NATIVE SON OF PETERBORO IS CONSECRATED AS BISHOP

THE NEW BISHOP OF PETERBORO

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP O'BRIEN
In his Episcopal robes.

The new Bishop is a child of the Peterborough Diocese. He was born in Peterborough 38 years ago and is a son of the late James O'Brien. He attended the Separate School and Collegiate Institute of this city, pursuing his classical studies with the late Prof. Lynch, afterwards graduating from St. Michael's College, Toronto. He made his theological and philosophical studies in the Grand Seminary, Montreal.

He was ordained a priest, July 6th, 1897, and in the fall of the same year went to Rome for a post-graduate course of two years. He took his degree of Doctor of Divinity in June, 1899.

On his return he was appointed curate at St. Peter's Cathedral, where he remained ten years. On November 21st, 1909, he was appointed first parish priest for the new Church of the Sacred Heart and remained in that capacity till last Sunday.

Bishop O'Brien was identified with the St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society for ten years, and his work along the line of temperance is known from coast to coast. When he severed his connection with the above Society to take up his parochial duties in his new parish he [illegible] organized the [illegible] well under his guidance.

NOTES FROM THE CONSECRATION SERMON

(By our Special Reporter.)

Men are asking: "Is there a God? Have I a soul? What is this thing called life—will it last?"

They should look for an answer to the proper source.

Certainty is necessary to mankind.

Actually speaking God is under no obligation to us.

God's immensity is necessary to the human heart. His abysmal depth is necessary to the human soul.

We little realize what we are. We act as if we were made for this valley of mortality.

Men say: "Think for yourselves." To whom is this addressed? To many who cannot read much less think.

As men need solid ground to stand upon, so they need solid truth to cling to.

Isolated human researches tend to made generation after generation more hopelessly perplexed.

The world's multitude crave for authority. The crowd clamors to be taught.

HIS GRACE ARCHBISHOP SPRATT
Of Kingston, who assisted the Consecrator.

VAST ASSEMBLAGE OF CLERGY AND LAITY AT THE CEREMONY

Representative of Pope Pius Elevates Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., to Position of High Honor---The Consecration as Carried Out at St. Peter's Cathedral This Morning.

With all the pomp and magnificence of the Catholic Church, Right Reverend Michael Joseph O'Brien, D. DD., was this morning consecrated Bishop of Peterborough Diocese, at St. Peter's Cathedral. It was there his late beloved parents were married; it was there he was baptized; it was there he received his first Holy Communion, it was there he [illegible] was there, some sixteen years ago he was ordained a priest of God.

The ceremony was performed before an audience embracing Canadian and American bishops and one hundred and fifty priests and an audience that crowded to overflowing the auditorium and balconies of the old Cathedral.

A full male choir under the direction of A. New with John Armstrong at the organ, rendered the chant during the solemn high mass celebrated by the consecrator His Excellency Monseigneur P. F. Stagni, D. D., Apostolic Delegate to Canada.

Those assisting were:

Assistant Consecrators—His Grace Archbishop Spratt, of Kingston, and Right Rev. Paul Bruchesi, D. D., Archbishop of Montreal.

Assistant Priest—Ven Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay.

Deacon of the Mass—Rev. W. J. McColl.

Sub-Deacon of the Mass—Rev. C. J. Phelan.

Deacons of Honor—Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick and Rev. J. J. O'Sullivan.

Acolytes—Rev. T. J. Crowley and Rev. V. G. McFadden.

Censer Bearer—Rev. James Guiry.

Masters of Ceremonies—Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. P. J. Kelly.

Amid the ringing of the Cathedral bell the procession, consisting of the acolytes, members of the clergy, bishops and archbishops followed by the Papal Delegate and lastly the Bishop-elect, entered the Church from the bishop's palace. As they mounted the steps the organ pealed the opening strains of "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus" (Behold the Great Priest.) and as the choir sang, they filed up to the sanctuary, completely filling the immense carpeted space and seats reserved for them. The Bishop-elect was clad in a cassock of purple slashed with yellow and wore a biretta of different shape from the rest of the bishops. These garments were changed for a plain purple cassock and biretta of usual shape, after the consecration had been performed.

To-day is the feast of Our Lady of Mercy. A bishop consecration is allowable only on a Sunday or the feast of an apostle, but as there was no apostle's feast in the year future and as it is impossible to hold a consecration on Sunday in this country, because the priests have to attend to their respective parochial duties it was by special dispensation from the Holy Father held today. The vestments of the celebrant of the mass and his two assistants were therefor white and gold.

CATHEDRAL DECORATIONS.

The interior of the Cathedral was beautifully decorated for the occasion with an abundance of Papal colors. Over the main entrance the Union Jack and the Papal flag of yellow and white hung side by side. The altar was also profusely decorated.

Monseigneur Stagni, the consecrator, invested in full pontificals of white and gold, the assistant bishops in amice, stole and cape of the same color, and white linen mitres; the bishop-elect in amice, alb, cincture, white stole crossed on the breast, cape and biretta, sat and knelt while Rev. Father Galvin read the papal bulls which stated that Rev. Michael Joseph O'Brien had been appointed Bishop of Peterborough Diocese.

THE BISHOP'S OATH.

Then Bishop O'Brien kneeling before the Apostolic Delegate solemnly took the following oath:

"I, Michael Joseph O'Brien, elected to the Church of St. Peter-in-Chains, from this hour henceforward will be obedient to Blessed Peter the Apostle, and to the Holy Roman Church and to our Holy Father, Pope Pius the Tenth, and to his successors canonically elected. I will assist them to retain and to defend the Roman Papacy without detriment to my order. I shall take care to preserve, to defend, increase and promote the rights, honors, privileges and authority of the Holy Roman Church, of our Lord, the Pope, and of his aforesaid successors. I shall observe with all my strength, and shall cause to be observed by others the rules of the Holy Fathers, the Apostolic decrees, ordinances or dispositions, reservations, provisions and mandates. I shall come when [illegible] prevented by a Canonical impediment. I shall make personally the visit "ad limina apostolorum" every ten years, and I shall render to our Holy Father, Pope Pius the Tenth, and to his aforesaid successors an account of my whole pastoral office, and of all things pertaining in any manner whatsoever to the state of my Church, to discipline of the clergy and the people, and finally to the salvation of the souls which are entrusted to me; and in turn I shall receive humbly the apostolic mandates and execute them as diligently as possible. But if I shall be detained by legitimate impediment, I shall fulfil all the aforesaid things through a designated delegate having a special mandate for this purpose, a priest of my Diocese, or through some other secular or regular priest of known probity and religion, fully informed concerning the above named things. I shall not sell, nor give, nor mortgage the possessions belonging to my mensa (by the mensa is understood the real estate or investments set aside for the proper support of the bishop) nor shall I enfeoff them anew or alienate them in any manner, even with the consent of the chapter of my church, without consulting the Roman Pontiff. And if through me any such alienation shall occur, I wish, by the very fact, to incur the punishments contained in the constitution published concerning this matter."

THE EXAMINATION

Then followed the examination in which 17 questions concerning the canons of the church and articles of faith were proposed, to which the elect answered "I will" or "I do believe" each time rising slightly and uncovering his head.

When the examination was over the assistant bishops led the bishop-elect to the consecrator whose hand was revently kissed by the bishop-elect kneeling. Then the consecrator put aside his mitre and turning toward the altar began the holy sacrifice of the mass. The bishop-elect remained standing at his left.

When the last verse of the tract was read the assistant bishops led the bishop-elect to the side and clad him in his pontificial vestments. He was again presented to the consecrator, who set forth the duties and powers of a bishop. "It becomes a bishop to judge, interpret, consecrate, offer, baptize and confirm" he said. The litany of the Saints was then chanted, while the elect lay prostrate on the floor of the sanctuary.

The consecration proper then began. Mgr. Stagni, aided by the assistant bishops, took the book of the Gospels and opening it, placed it on the neck and shoulders of the elect and the book was held in this manner by one of the clergy until it was given to the elect after the presentation of the ring. Then followed the imposition of hands, which is regarded as the essence of the consecrator. Both the consecrator and assistant placed both hands on the head of the elect, saying "Receive the Holy Ghost." The "Veni Creator" was then sung by the choir during which the consecrator made the sign of the cross with holy chrism on the head of the new bishop. The anointing of the hands of the bishop in the form of a cross and afterwards of the entire palms then followed. The consecrator made three times the sign of the cross over the hands thus anointed and prayed, "Whatsoever thou shalt bless, may it be blessed; whatsoever thou shalt sanctify, may it be sanctified" and "May the imposition of this consecrated hand and thumb be profitable in all things to salvation."

RECEIVES HIS CROZIER

The crozier was then blessed and handed to the bishop. The consecrator at the same time admonished him that the true character of the ecclesiastical shepherd is to temper the exercise of justice with meekness, and not to neglect strictness of discipline with love of tranquility. The Delegate then blessed the ring and placed it on the third finger of Bishop O'Brien's right hand, reminding the latter that it was a symbol of fidelity. The book of the gospels was taken from the bishop's shoulders and handed to him with the command to go and preach to the people committed to his care. He was then given the kiss of peace from the consecrator and the assistant bishops.

Mass continued the consecrator and consecrated officiating in union. When the offertory was said the consecrator sat with his mitre on at the foot of the altar and the new bishop offered to him two lighted torches, two loaves of bread and a small quantity of wine. This offering is a relic of ancient discipline, according to which the faithful made their offerings on such occasions for the support of the clergy and other purposes connected with the religion.

IMPERIAL PARTNERSHIP

Lord Northcliff has been speaking to the Canadian Press Club at Montreal, and in the course of his address he gave expression to some very sane and apposite observations on the present state of British and Colonial politics.

Speaking of the relationship of Great Britain to the Empire he says:

> "In our Empire, with its fifty different nations, and as many different languages, our more elastic and as we think more truly free system works very well.
>
> "Let us take one proof of our adaptability; there are many others, but it will suffice. One of the business propositions we have undertaken in the last twenty years has been Egypt. When we went there their Government stock was the joke of the world. To-day it stands above par, and the wealth and prosperity of Egypt are increasing rapidly. The Japanese with their usual astuteness have sent inquiries to Egypt to learn how to govern their possessions, they have lately gained in the Far East."

It does seem a little necessary at times to remind ourselves that we are members of no mean Empire and that we own our prosperity, under Providence, largely to [illegible] ship in the Great Empire.

"It can be claimed and proved," says Lord Northcliffe, "that our system of non-interference between the various partners, has enabled the utmost development of the parties concerned. As an example, take Australia. Wealth and capital are pouring in at an unprecedented rate. Only lately it was quite impossible to supply sufficient ships for the State-aided emigrants, and it was actually proposed that John Bull should provide more ships, superseded warships and the like, to enable people to move from his part of the Empire to theirs. To which John replied that he was quite willing to supply Australia with as many folks as she liked within reason, provided that she did not take his skilled ed Lancashire workers and others, who, by the way, rarely leave the Old Country, and that Australia should, at least, provide her own ships."

Australia has the sense to see that her surest anchor is her connection with Great Britain. With all her freedom of Government one seldom hears a breath of disloyalty or of "separation" from the Island Continent.

The following words should be well considered by all who have the best interests of Canada at heart. They are the wise words of a man who has proved his capacity in large business affairs:

"Canada is so busy over her [illegible] the many rich portions of the great Imperial business combination, of which she is a partner. Some Canadians are far too inclined to swallow the jealous rubbish, invented by envious writers in Germany and the United States, as to the decline of the British Empire. That Empire is sound everywhere, Great Britain was never more active and alert. Now that Canadians are acquiring the means and leisure to travel, they are finding that the business partnership has many vast sources of wealth hardly yet tapped."

EDITORIAL NOTES

That the Queen of Spain should have two children born deaf and dumb only goes to show that the common ills of human life are distributed impartially. The good Queen must not give way but show motherly love and fortitude to many of her subjects who have like afflictions.

"The Scout Movement teaches the boys that there is more fun in mending a broken window and running away than there is breaking a window and running away," says the Toronto Star. The Star must have been a boy once itself, and ought to know that such a teaching is impossible. It may be that the Star never was a boy and that it was always so wise as it is now.

Mr. Hall Caine, the novelist, is reported to have joined the "militants." This does not mean that he will forthwith purchase a hammer and a torch and swear to hunger and thirst after votes if he gets locked-up. No, Mr. Caine will leave this to the heroines.

The Hamilton Times, referring to the Spectator's Acceptance of bi-lingual schools says: "We suppose it not only approves of the bi-lingual postal card but would also welcome with open arms the bilingual postage stamp." Now who ever heard of anyone embracing a postage stamp?

Hawkes and Cooper Launch Canadian League

NEWMARKET, Ont., Sept. 24. — About four hundred people gathered in the Town Hall last evening to hear Arthur Hawkes and John A. Cooper of Toronto explain the aims and purpose of the newly-organized Canadian League, Hon. [illegible] presided.

Mr. Cooper said that the league had been formed to unite the east and the west, to maintain self-government in Canada and to bring about non-partisan discussion and action respecting national defence.

The event of the evening was the speech of Mr. Hawkes, who deplored the tendency towards centralization or "high-stepping Imperialism."

"I am an Imperialist," declared Mr. Hawkes, "but not a 'high-stepper'." He said there was undoubtedly an effort on foot, both here and in the old country, to govern Canada so far as naval defence was concerned, from Downing Street.

"It is not ships, but men who furnish the prestige, the moral factor." He would not catalogue the objection raised to enlistment of men on Canadian warships. Ontario, in his opinion, has raised more important suggestions than Quebec. As an Englishman, he thought Canadians were degraded in English eyes by their unwillingness to man their own ships. The idea that Canada should not do anything permanent in naval defence until given a formal voice in the Empire's foreign policy, as reflected in Mr. Borden's Halifax speech, was contrary to the foreign policy of the Empire. Should not Canada provide armed men of war on the water as well as on shore? The committee of Imperial defence was only an advisory body, he said, and had no political responsibility. The assumed policy of hiring our naval forces he said gave Britain a mean idea of Canadians.

Mr. Hawkes went on to say: "If we desire an Imperial destiny we can render the Empire no service comparable to that of securing the best relations with the United States and safeguarding Britain's interests in both the eastern and western worlds. This question of national defence should be tried at a general election."

MAY REPORT ON THURSDAY

U. S. Tariff Bill Has Still Points of Contention.

Joint Committee of House and Senate Is at Work and Disputed Issues Will Be Dealt With To-day—Cotton Tariff Still Gives Trouble—Rigid Inspection of Foreign Factories Restored.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—When the Tariff Conference Committee adjourned yesterday afternoon the hope was expressed that all disagreements would be settled to-night in time for a report to the House on Thursday. But it was admitted that extraordinary progress in reaching agreements would have to be made to accomplish this result. Many important disputed points in the administrative clauses—the income tax section and eleven customs rates—are yet to be settled, and all of them have already occasioned sharp divergence of view.

Yesterday the committee went over the whole of the Administrative clauses with the exception of the so-called customs regulation. The retaliatory provisions, the anti-dumping clause, the convict labor clause and the five per cent. discount on goods imported in American bottoms were all passed over for later consideration.

It is understood that an agreement was reached retaining the Senate amendment prohibiting contingent lawyers' fees in customs litigation. The House provision for rigid inspection of foreign manufacturing methods which the Senate [illegible] rewritten. Instead of prohibiting the importation of the goods of offending foreigners, the rewritten paragraph imposes limited penalties for an undue refusal to give information. It was said that the provision permitting the manufacture of imported tobacco in bonded warehouses had been modified to settle the Florida interests.

An important agreement will retain the provision of the existing law for a drawback fee of only one per cent. The House bill carried that provision, but the Senate amended it by providing that the re-export of imported articles would entitle the exporter to a rebate of all customs duties, less three per cent. The Senate amendment was stricken out.

IMPUDENCE VERSUS HEROISM

While the Girl She Would A-fishing Go.

By JANE LEWIS.

Bakersville was like any other hamlet. It had a store, a postoffice, a blacksmith's shop and a ruined old sawmill. It had a river and a dam, and there were fish in the river. The latter fact was told to Bessie Foster, niece of Uncle Joe and Aunt Mary Warner, who had come from the city for a vacation and who was looking about for a new diversion.

The girl was rigged out with a pole, [illegible] and bait, and Uncle Joe went with her to point out the spot where he once had a bite from something almost as big as a [illegible]. For half an hour she was so intent on her fishing that she was oblivious of her surroundings. Then a cough from a human throat startled her, and she looked up to see a young man fishing in the same waters and not over twenty feet away.

At first glance she saw that he was a stranger to the hamlet. As she looked up he raised his cap and bowed. How long he had been there she could not determine, but his action in sneaking up in the first place and in making the bow in the second irritated her. She at once gave a vicious jerk to her line, intending to quit the spot at once, but she was naturally defiant and changed her mind in an instant. She would not be driven away. She had simply stared at him in a haughty manner when he had lifted his cap, and should he attempt to push matters further he would get a rebuff to freeze his blood.

For the next quarter of an hour the two fished in silence. Now and then the young man reeled in his line and made a new cast and hummed or whistled to show that he had not been annihilated. Now and then the girl gave her head a toss just to prove that she thought herself alone. During this interval the suckers in the river had remained quiet or had business elsewhere. All of a sudden, however, one of them found the girl's hook and gulped it down. There was a mighty tug from the captive and a scream from the girl. It was the first time the sucker had ever been hooked and the first time the girl had ever hooked a fish. The young man saw the situation and came running up to call out.

"You've got him! You've got him! Don't handle him that way or you'll lose him. Play him! Play him!"

Miss Bessie Foster was excited, but she didn't lose her presence of mind. She realized what the situation called for, and she gave the young man one awful look and then threw her fish pole into the water and turned and walked away. In that one awful look she noticed that he was rather good looking and had certain hall marks of a gentleman, but despite that she continued to toss her head, and her cheeks kept getting redder and redder as she left him behind.

"For the land's sake, what has happened to you?" exclaimed Aunt Mary as the girl entered the house on a half run and plumped down into the rocking chair.

"I've found an impudent man!" was the reply.

"Found a what? I've lived in Bakersville ever since I was knee high to a grasshopper, and I've never run across an impudent man yet. How was he impudent?"

"He looked at me. He raised his cap and bowed. He sang and [illegible] wanted to boss things, and, oh, aunty, it was such a lovely fish and such a big one, and he was so willing to be caught!"

When Aunt Mary had extracted all the information possible she went to the kitchen door and blew the horn for dinner, though it was half an hour ahead of time. Uncle Joe came up from the lot in which he was working and in answer to the surprised look on his face Bessie told her story over again. When she had finished Aunt Mary drew herself up and added:

"And now, Joseph Warner, you will eat your dinner and then start out and find that impudent young man and give him a piece of your mind. He has got to be talked to good and hard, and if you are not the man to do it I am."

An hour later Uncle Joe went down to the postoffice to make inquiries concerning the strange and cheeky young man. All he could find out was that the newcomer was stopping at White's, at the other end of the hamlet, and was thought to be a college student on his vacation. The old mill was next visited, and there it was found that Bessie's pole and line had been recovered and left in a conspicuous position. Uncle Joe carried them home and told his story, and Aunt Mary threw up her arms and exclaimed:

"Did any one in all this world ever see such a case of impudence! Joseph, if you were a man you'd go up to White's and take that young man by the ear and make him beg Bessie's pardon. She can't go fishing again as long as he [illegible]."

"But I will," declared the girl as she flared up and stuck her chin in the air. "I'll show him, whoever he is, that he can't scare me off. I'll be right there tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, and if he dares speak to me again I'll—I'll—well, after I have given him a look he won't dare to, that's all."

And Miss Bessie Foster was there at the hour named. She saw nothing of the impudent young man, but a board had been placed across two logs to make a seat for her, and she instantly suspected that it was his work. She refused to sit down. For ten minutes, or while she was getting real mad, she wouldn't go within fifteen feet of the seat.

Then the stranger suddenly made his appearance from behind the old mill, and to show him what she thought of him she laid down her pole and picked up the board and pushed it into the water. To her chagrin, the young man didn't seem to be aware of her presence. He was catching all the fish, and she wasn't getting a nibble. He made a great fuss every time he caught one, and presently the girl found herself wishing that he would tumble in. He could have told her that her line was in only two feet of water and that a crab had eaten off her bait as soon as the hook touched the bottom, but he had nothing to say. He even grinned because he had nothing to say.

Half an hour had passed away when Miss Bessie changed her position. It did not seem to be a secure one, but in her defiance and chagrin she was willing to take chances. She rebaited and cast in her hook, and within a minute something seized it. She repressed a cry and was taking firmer grip on her pole when the planks under her feet gave way and she went into the pond with a shriek and a splash. She rose to the surface [illegible] and gasp[illegible] young man [illegible]

"I expected it. Don't struggle and you'll be all right. We have got to go over the dam, but I can swim ashore below with you."

The girl ought to have given him "one of her looks," but she did not take advantage of the occasion. The water was very cold and the fall over the dam ten feet. She gasped with fright and clutched the young man, and then night seemed to have come. She had fainted away. When she opened her eyes again she was in bed at Aunt Mary's and the doctor was saying:

"She will do nicely now. I happened to be driving by the old mill and saw it all. That young fellow managed like a hero. There was no boat, and I could render no assistance, and two or three times I thought they were gone."

"Aunty," asked the girl after the doctor had gone, "did I fall into the mill pond?"

"Yes, dear."

"And go over the dam?"

"Yes."

"And how—how was I saved?"

"Why, that impudent young feller had the impudence to jump in after you and bring you ashore. If things are to go on this way, I don't know where they will stop. I'll bet he'll have the nerve to call here and ask after you."

Aunt Mary was right. That evening the young man did call and make inquiries and leave his card, and twenty-four hours later he was again ushered into the parlor, to [illegible]. Aunt Mary heard a great deal of talking and some laughing, and at the end of half an hour, when the caller withdrew, she was ready with the remark:

"Well, I suppose it is some more of his impudence."

"I—I think I must have been mistaken all the time, aunty," replied the girl, with a blush.

"What? Wasn't it impudence?"

"No-o. I guess he knew more about fishing than I did."

Aunt Mary looked at her for a long minute and then sagely shook her head and turned away with the observation:

"I don't know about that, young lady. I should say it was right the other way. You may not have caught a whale, but that ain't saying you haven't caught something else."

There may be good fishing in the Bakersville mill pond again this year, but there will be no further impudence on the one hand nor indignation on the other. Affairs have progressed too far and too agreeably for that. In the language of Aunt Mary:

"A girl comes a visiting—she goes out to fish—she meets an impudent feller—she falls into the pond—he saves her life—they"—

"They what?" asked Uncle Joe.

"None o' your business! You go out and see if that pie in the oven has burned all to a cinder while I've been thinking of things."

London In Summer.

London is in summer the warmest place in Great Britain. Its average temperature throughout the hottest month, July, is just over [illegible] degrees day and night.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT

Rest and Rising.

An excellent way of [illegible] after [illegible] minutes is to lie flat on your back on a couch or bed. Relax all your muscles, stretch your arms straight out and draw in several deep, sighing breaths, then release them slowly. You will be surprised how much fresher you feel when you rise from this brief rest.

Do not spring out of bed as soon as you open your eyes in the morning. Remember that while you sleep your vitality is lowered and your circulation not so strong. A sudden jump out of bed is a shock to the heart. Stretch and yawn as soon as you wake, and then yawn and stretch and take plenty of time doing it. Then get up quietly when you are thoroughly wakened.

A Timely Rescue.

KINGSTON, Sept. 24.—Playing in an old punt alongside a dredge owned by Fallon Bros., on which her mother is employed as cook, the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. A. Snider, fell into the water. The mother, at work on the dredge, happened to hear the splash and was just in time to jump from the dredge into the punt and pull the girl from her perilous position.

Winch Operator Hurt.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 24.—While operating a winch at the Government works at Prescott in the building [illegible] factory, Freeman Kirkby met with a serious accident. Owing to a portion of the winch displacing he was thrown to the floor below, a distance of ten feet, alighting on his head. His recovery is doubtful.

Films For Summer Use.

If amateur photographers before setting off on vacation will lay in a supply of films that have been put up specially for "export" they will have fewer disappointments when they gaze upon the result of their summer snapshooting after the developing is finished. These export films are packed in tin boxes to withstand a tropical climate, and they will be found particularly valuable when one is going to a coast resort.

To Encourage the Feminist Movement.

A Sicilian widower of the name of [illegible], who died recently, left $10,000 to promote the feminist movement in Italy and $4,000 as a legacy to the first woman deputy.

ORIGINAL FROCKS.

Individuality the Slogan of Juvenile Styles.

TWO PRETTY FROCKS FOR GIRLS.

The craze for originality that is rampant in grown-up modes has invaded the realm of children's clothes to such an extent this season that many mothers who have [illegible] insisted upon their children wearing nothing save "sensible" garments are departing from this rule and adopting "Parisian fashions for the kiddies."

The frocks pictured are two French models that even the conservative mother will not hesitate to copy.

To Renew [illegible] Feathers.

The present [illegible] ostrich feather, although it is not so tightly curled as the old fashioned plume, looks even more bedraggled and forlorn when it is out of curl than the old one did. Yet fogs and mists or rains are as frequent as ever, and ostrich feathers are now worn at all times of the day and night regardless of the weather. Plumetis feathers were put forward to fill the role of a feather which moisture would not change, but they do not take the place of the regulation ostrich feather.

There is only one thing to do if you wear ostrich feathers, and that is to learn how to curl them. It is as good as impossible to send a feather to the professional cleaner to be curled every time there is a summer shower.

When the moist hat with feather trimming is removed put it, if possible, near a fire. Heat often restores a good deal of the lost curl. When this is not possible let the feather dry thoroughly and then recurl it with a nail file, the blunt edge of a knife or some other steel or silver blade which is not sharp.

Work with one or two of the fronds of the feather at a time. Catch them between the thumb and the blade near the stem of the feather and slowly and firmly draw the thumb and the blade along the fronds to the edge. If necessary go over some of the feathers twice.

The Metaphysical Society.

The distinguished company of contributors to the first number of the Nineteenth Century was selected from a yet more distinguished company of which Lord Avebury was a member. This was the Metaphysical society, founded by James Knowles and Tennyson in 1869. Its members ranged from Dean Stanley to Huxley and from Tyndall to Manning, and its meetings saw such unusual sights as the Catholic Manning, supported by two Protestant bishops, presiding over a discussion among atheists, deists and [illegible]. The society formed the nucleus of the band of contributors who supported Knowles as editor first of the Contemporary and then of the Nineteenth Century.—Westminster Gazette.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! [illegible] how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

Americans Had to Flee From Pancho Villas

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 24.—Dr. C. Shackelford arrived here yesterday from Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua, Mexico, fleeing from Pancho Villa, the rebel leader, who gave him 24 hours to get out or be killed. Shackelford is a native of Frankfort, Ky., and has been living in Santa Rosalia six years.

He says when Villa and his rebel band entered the [illegible] Villa sent for him, told him he was tired of "you American filibusterers" and declared he would shoot them all if they did not get out.

"Villa took all my books and accounts and told me he would collect my money," the doctor said. "He also forfeited my house and furnishings to the rebels and placed two guards over me to see that I didn't depart with any money or property. I left at 10 o'clock the morning of the 16th. I had to walk out, carrying a suitcase, which is all I saved.

"I hired an old mule at a ranch and finally reached the Texas line. My family was forced to flee from Santa Rosalia in May last. They are now in Chihuahua. All the Mexican men of prominence in Santa Rosalia have had to flee from the rebels and when I left there Tuesday, Villa had thrown all the prominent Mexican women in town into jail, and had searched every home for money.

"Villa told me he was going to kill the American officials of the Conchas Dam Co., near Santa Rosalia."

REV. CANON PLUMPTRE AT ST. GEORGES CHURCH

A Church Outside the Walls— A Yonthful Canon — Homily Upon Thanktulness

(By our Special Reporter)

Last evening the Harvest Festival services were begun at St George's church. The Rev. Canon Plumtre, of Toronto, came specially to Peterborough to conduct the service.

WITHOUT THE WALLS

If you have never been to St. George's church, and you do not know its exact location, do not go on a dark night, for it is "without the city wall," and there are no street lamps and no one to direct you. It was late when I entered the church and the service was already in progress.

I will pass over the description of its architecture, for it was dark I could not discover whether the church was Gothic or Norman. But the interior is neither of these; it is a plain hall without chancel and without pews.

A HOMELY CHURCH

Just plain chairs at either side, an altar table at the end, with a large cabinet organ on one side, and a desk and rather comfortable pulpit on the other. The choir, which was [illegible] without surplices.

Flowers, fruits and vegetables were arranged tastefully about the windows and the pulpit, and a large loaf adorned the altar table.

There was a good number present, the church being well lit with electric lights presented a very homely and inviting appearance. The usual prayer service was gone through, and despite the absence of full ecclesiastical arrangements it was entered into with fervency by all present.

A YOUTHFUL CANON

Rev. Canon Plumtre contrary to my expectations of a Canon, is quite a young man. He is simple and natural in the pulpit and has a freedom of utterance a cultured yet earnest manner that makes a direct appeal to the hearts of the people. He speaks straight to his congregation and gets them thinking along with him.

The Canon took for his text a passage in Luke 12: "Soul thou hast much goods laid up for many years." "Thou fool this night shall thy soul be desired of thee."

THOU FOOL

He spoke of the parable preceding the text, and said that Jesus often took His parables from incidents in real life, and this one was probably the story of some man whom He knew, who was in the hey day of his prosperity struck down.

The words, "Thou fool!" appear hard coming from one who was used to tender language. Why should God strike down a man in this way simply because he was legitimately extending his business? Was it because he was doing well that God called him a fool? No, but because he was over-concentrating upon his business and had left God out?

THE POVERTY OF INGRATITUDE

He appeared rich in the eyes of the world, but he was miserably poor in the eyes of God, because he had no gratitude for the good gifts which God through nature had bestowed upon him.

The preacher then went on to speak of thankfulness. He said this was [illegible] ing from agriculture. He spoke of Canada and compared its prosperity and promise with the hard life in the Old Country.

AN EMIGRANT

Like a great many present he said he was an emigrant. He had been back to England after seven years in Canada, and during his year and a half stay in the Old Country, the weight of life seemed to press more heavily upon him after the buoyancy and hopefulness of Canadian life.

The social problem of the Old Country's city life was an unbearable burden, and we in Canada ought to be especially thankful to God for such rich blessings, and for the freedom from the problems which oppress the old land. "We have a good land."

"REMEMBER!"

But in our prosperity we are liable to forget God. Like the man in the parable we are inclined to become selfish. If we neglect this duty of thankfulness, we too shall have these problems in the future. "Already everywhere there are hideous evils raising their heads."

Canada has a great responsibility laid upon it at the beginning of the 2th Century. But if Canada in its youth will walk in the way it should go, and acknowledges the Giver of all the bounty it enjoys, those evils which beset the Old Country may be averted. "Forget not the Lord, it is He that giveth thee the power to get wealth."

Rev. James Price, the Incumbent, and Rev. Canon Davidson assisted in the service, which was followed by a social cup of coffee in the basement of the church.

FOUR KILLED IN WRECK

Misread Train Orders Cause Disaster on the I.C.R.

Engineers Enoch Rushton and Frank Lyons and Firemen Byron Colpitts and George Hingley Are Dead and Two Brakemen Are Badly Injured Near Sackville, N.B., In Head-on Collision.

MONCTON, N.B., Sept. 24.—Two engineers and two firemen killed and two brakemen injured was the toll yesterday of one of the worst wrecks in the history of the Intercolonial Railwa .

The dead are: Enoch Rushton, engineer, Moncton; Byron Colpitts, fireman, Moncton; Frank Lyons, engineer, Truro; George Hingley, fireman, Stewiacke.

The injured: R. H. Sharpe, brakeman, Moncton; Thomas Banks, brakeman, Truro.

Two freight trains travelling about fifteen miles an hour at four o'clock yesterday afternoon ran head-on at a curve in a cut six miles east of Sackville. The engines were demolished, and twenty freight cars heavily laden, telescoped and reduced to a mass of kindling wood.

The I. C. R.-line between Moncton and Halifax was tied up for hours, necessitating the transfer of passengers, mails and baggage from one side of the wreck to the other.

Train No. 231, known as the "way freight," in charge of Conductor George Armstrong of Moncton, with Engineer Rushton, en route to Moncton, was running about two hours late. The other train, No. 234, a special, was in charge of Conductor J. D. Macdonald of Truro and Engineer Lyons.

As the trains came together on a curve the efforts of the engineers to avert a collision were futile. Fire broke out in the wreckage following the explosion of the engine boilers, and the four victims were burned beyond recognition.

The accident is said to have been due to a misreading of train orders by Engineer Rushton and Conductor Armstrong.

If it is necessary to wash furniture, use warm, not hot, water, with a little [illegible]

Which Is More Urgent?

Fire Insurance
Important? You fully realize it. You would not allow your house to remain uninsured over night.
Your house may never burn. Comparatively few buildings ever do.
If your house does burn, your property is destroyed, but you can still provide for your loved ones. Your income remains unaffected, your earning capacity unimpaired.
If your house is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,
YOU Carry the Risk
Your friend has had his home insured these thirty years and has had no fire. He has been fortunate in that, though he has nothing now to show for the money paid out.

Life Insurance
Important? Oh yes, you intend to insure afterawhile when "a little better able to do so."
You will surely die. All men do. You are more likely to die within a week or a year, than your house is to burn.
Death destroys at once and irrevocably, in whole or in part, the income that provided for the daily wants of those you love, the income that was counted on to feed and clothe and educate your children.
If your life is not insured at all, or for an insufficient amount,
Your Wife and Babies Carry the Risk
Your friend has had his life insured these thirty years and is now an old man. He is fortunate in having lived, and he has something now to show for the money paid out. His cash value affords a comfortable support for his own declining years

Flannelette bags made to fit brooms are most useful. A string should be run in each end and tied round the handle of the broom. Thus covered, the brush will be most useful for sweeping down walls, high wardrobes and even polished floors.

Peach salad is made by halving and stoning the fruit and filling the cavities with chopped nuts. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Five Candidates Initiated Into Ancient Order of Foresters

The regular meeting of Court Stanley, [illegible], A.O.F. was held last evening in S.O.E. Hall. The chair was ably filled by Chief Ranger, F. Pratt. After the opening proceedings five candidates were admitted into the order. A few more propositions for membership were passed. The members are busy looking out for propositions for memberships and there is quite a keen rivalry amongst them. D. C. R. Tom Hendry reported progress in the organizing of a Juvenile Court and he hopes to have a thriving Juvenile Branch in full swing in a week or two. The health of the Lodge is very good, only two members being on the sick list at present. Numerous important matters were gone into dealing with the furtherance of Forestry and the social welfare of the members during the coming winter. A goodly number of members turned out to the meeting and a resolution was passed that next meeting be open to friends, when music, etc., will be rendered. Chief Ranger Pratt, trusts that the members and friends will turn out and enjoy themselves on the next regular meeting.

RECEPTION TO THE PAPAL DELEGATE

A Hearty Welcome at the Station and Cathedral

A most hearty reception was tendered his excellency Monseigneur P.F. Stagni, D.D., Apostolic Delegate to Canada, who arrived in the city last night and consecrated the Right Rev. M J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop of Peterboro diocese, this morning.

Long before the train arrived many persons assembled at the C.P.R. station platform and when his excellency arrived on a special train from the east, it is estimated that some 4,500 people were there to welcome him. When he alighted, a mighty cheer of welcome went up. The Roman Catholic men and the school boys of the city numbering between three and four thousand formed a procession and lead by the 57th Regimental Band playing "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus," marched up George street to Brock, west on Brock to to Aylmer, south on Aylmer to Hunter and on Hunter to the Cathedral. The men then lined the sides of the street four deep, while the carriage carrying the Papal Delegate and Bishop O'Brien and other carriages containing notable clergy passed through.

At the top of Hunter street a large sign had been erected bearing the inscription "We Welcome the Apostolic Delegate." Behind it on the church lawn the children of the three separate schools all waving Papal flags were stationed and as the Delegate neared them they sang hymns of welcome at the conclusion of which he gave them his blessing. He then entered the Cathedral. It is estimated that there were six thousand people assembled at the church, which was surrounded by many rows of lights.

After entering the Cathedral, Monseigneur Stagni was welcomed by an address by Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Brien and also by Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C. on the behalf of the laity. In reply his excellency thanked both clergy and laity for as he termed it "their soul stirring reception" and he also thanked the non-Catholics for the very sympathetic and respectful conduct which they showed in as far as they participated. The ceremony was brought to a close by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

To-night a public reception will be tendered his excellency on the church lawn which will afford the people of Peterboro an opportunity to meet the Pope's representative in Canada.

When Everybody Gets Tired.

If everybody is to be tired, what will become of art, music, literature or anything else not predigested and pared in convenient tabloid form for gobbling? No gloomier thought has come upon the horizon in years than the picture of what this globe will be when the tired business man and the tired business woman have runged wearily, flabbily, snatchingly over it, hand to hand, for a quarter century or so.—New York Tribune.

Even Worse.

He—Darling, don't you know that it is unlucky to postpone a wedding? She—I can't help that. My dressmaker is ill, and I'm afraid it would be more unlucky if I were to go and get married before having all the clothes I want made while my father is still willing to pay for them.

A NATIVE SON OF PETERBORO' IS CONSECRATED AS BISHOP

Then, almost until the end of mass the bishop stood at the right side of the consecrator and recited with the latter everything connected with the celebration of the mass. Both took the ablutions with different chalices, after which the new bishop went to the gospel side of the altar and with the Papal delegate went on with the mass until and including the final blessing.

The consecrator blessed the mitre, placing it on the head of the new bishop and referring to its mystical significance as a helmet of protection and salvation, that the wearer of it might seem terrible to the opponents of truth and be their steady adversary. Gloves were then blessed and put on the hands of the newly created bishop, the consecrator referring to the action of Jacob, who having his hands covered with the skins of kids, implored and received the paternal blessing.

ON THE THRONE

The conclusion of the ceremony was reached. The new bishop was seated on the throne erected for him. The Papal delegate intoned the "Te Deum," and while the hymn was being sung by the choir, the new bishop, led by two assistant bishops, traversed the aisles of the church, blessing the people. Having returned to the altar, he gave his solemn blessing. The consecrator and the assistant bishops moved to the gospel side of the altar, facing the epistle side, at which stood Bishop O'Brien. There with mitre and crozier, he made a genuflection and chanted [illegible] then [illegible] of the altar, chanting the same words in a higher tone of voice. Finally, approaching the feet of the Papal delegate, he again genuflected and chanted the words for the third time. The consecrator and the assistant bishops received him with the kiss of peace, and as a conclusion the Gospel of St. John was recited.

THE CHOIR

The grand singing of the choir reflected great credit on Mr John Armstrong, organist; Mr Alter, director, and Rev J. V. McCauley. They have worked hard these past three months to make it such a success and they have been amply rewarded. Rev. Father La Fontaine and Rev. Father Martin of Montreal, were present in the choir, and assisted in the singing of the music proper to the consecration.

The choir was composed of: Bass—Albert New, Joseph Picard, jr., James Sharpe, Edward Bardey, Wiliam Collins, Edward Hanrahan and Rev J. V. McCauley.

Tenor—Joseph Minicola, Joseph Corkindale, Joseph Wilson, Charles Manion, Cecil Wolfe, Peter Henshaw and John Evans.

REV. FATHER O'SULLIVAN
Of Port Hope, the founder of the local Abstinence Society in Peterborough

When all the priests and bishops present joined in the singingg of the Te Deum the walls of the venerable old Cathedral were swelled, and immortal echoes were left in the minds of all those present.

THE SERMON.

"I will give you pastors according to mine heart who shall feed you with knowledge and understanding of the gospel."

This was the text chosen by the Right Reverend J. T. McNally, Bishop of Calgary, who preached the sermon. His eloquent address centred on the revelation of the Word of God to man.

The spiritual soul of a man craves for the revelation of God's Holy Word and how is this wish satisfied? God does not write His revelation on the sky. He fulfils His promise referred to in the above text. God sent His only Son to speak to mankind and reveal His holy word. This Son, Jesus Christ, preached with authority, He baptized, He forgave sins and He left us the Sacrament of the Blessed Eucharist. He appointed His successors and gave them the power to appoint theirs and by following down that unbroken line we will come to present dignitaries of the Catholic Church. Therefore the Catholic Church is the only infallible means by which the Word of God is made known to mankind.

"My dear people," the Bishop continued, "you see here to-day another successor of Christ's Apostles consecrated. To-day we are here to celebrate the lifting of a man from the common ranks to the leadership and to the bearing of the burdens of the diocese. Since the death of the late lamented Bishop O'Connor this diocese has prayed and Almighty God has given you a new leader. The new Bishop's name was sent to the Council at Rome, and considering his merits that body chose him and by the Papal Bulls read before the ceremony began, it was learned that the Holy Father confirmed the appointment."

Bishop McNally went on to state that it was needless for him to speak of the virtues of the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, for they were well known, yet he wished to say that he also owed the new bishop a great debt of gratitude. He said that Bishop O'Brien was sending one of his best priests with him out to Calgary where there is a great scarcity of Catholic priests. His heart was big and generous enough to forget himself and allow this priest to go to another diocese. The new bishop's career has been marked by many such acts of gratitude and affection.

Bishop McNally's closing words were, "Let us pray that you will by your fidelity and loyalty make his episcopal burdens lighter and that every day of his career will bring blessings a hundred fold on himself and on the diocese."

THE DREAM CAME TRUE.

But Washington Warned "Light Horse Harry" to Dream No More.

The relations that existed between General Washington and his younger friend, "Light Horse Harry" Lee—the father of General Robert E. Lee—were exceedingly close and tender. It is an authentic tradition in the Lee family that Washington regarded the brilliant young cavalry officer almost in the light of a son.

Lee was inclined to be a spendthrift, and his lavish use of money often brought on him the paternal reproof of his older and more discreet friend—and the reproof was often followed by affectionate assistance in extricating him from his embarrassments.

Mrs. Washington was almost equally fond of the young officer, who often made long visits at Mount Vernon. During one of his sojourns there, Harry Lee remarked to his host at the breakfast table:

"General, I had a singular dream last night, which I must tell you. I actually dreamed that you made me a present of your Westmoreland place."

The next day, at the dinner table, Harry Lee found under his plate a document—nothing less than a deed to him of the Westmoreland estate. For some moments, dazed with astonishment, he stared at his friend.

"Now, Harry," said Washington calmly, "take good care not to dream Mount Vernon away from me!"

Juvenile Ideas.

A little girl once said to me, "Are there people on the moon?" I said I didn't know, but that perhaps there were. "Well, what do they do," she said, "when there's only a little bit? They must get very crowded. Don't they?" Which was almost as perplexing as the query put to me by another little maiden, who asked, "What do angels do with their wings when they lie down and go to bed?"

Very quaint was the idea of a little girl who was once visiting a house where a small child had died recently. She was asked to draw something. So she drew a grave with some flowers on it. Her mother, on seeing it, said, "Janie, you mustn't do that; Mrs. —— wouldn't like it. You see, it reminds her of very sad things." "Oh, well," said the child, "perhaps it was thoughtless of me, but I can easily turn it into a beehive." And she did, with all the bees coming out.—Hilda Cowham in Strand Magazine.

"EAT LIME," SAYS THIS MAN

RUDOLPH EMMERICH HAS FOUND A NEW PANACEA.

He and Dr. Loew Declare That Devouring Chalk Is the Infallible Cure For a Host of Diseases—Feeding Young Animals on Calcium Chloride Promotes Their Growth Amazingly.

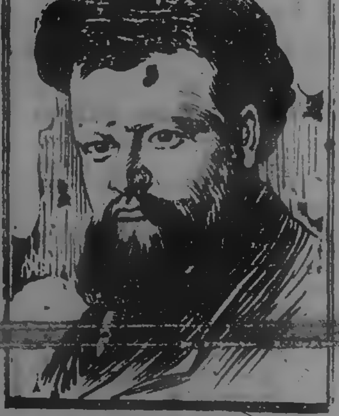
Munich's famous bacteriologist, Rudolph Emmerich, and another famous Munich man, Dr. Loew, hold that swallowing chalk is the infallible arcanum of health. They say that if only people will add to their food a sprinkling of calcium chloride they will grow bigger, stouter, and stronger; they will resist disease, be always in a good temper, and live so long they will die of boredom with life.

Emmerich is professor of hygiene and bacteriology in Munich University. He has eaten queerer things than chalk. In 1895 Abdul Hamid brought him to Constantinople to study the cholera, and Emmerich ate several thousand cholera bacilli and inoculated his blood with other germs. He survived the ordeal, and now claims that while eating cholera germs is merely harmless, the daily consumption of a sprinkling of chalk is curative and invigorating.

Emmerich and Loew have just concluded a series of experiments to test the influence of calcium chloride on the human body and the bodies of animals. They soon discovered that by feeding young animals on calcium chloride their growth and weight may be amazingly increased. Their first important experiment was with a litter of piglets. They divided the litter in two. In feeding one half of the litter they added to the food one gramme of calcium chloride for every kilogramme of the piglet's weight. That is, they gave to each piglet once a day a thousandth of its weight in calcium chloride. The other piglets were fed with exactly the same food as were the bechalked piglets, but they got no chalk. After seven weeks both batches were weighed. The piglets which had been chalked up were found to have increased by 155 per cent., and their rivals by only 75 per cent.



HERR EMMERICH.

From this Emmerich and Loew conclude that the normal food given to animals and man does not contain enough lime. So they have made experiments with an ailing baby which had been putting on weight very slowly. Considerable quantities of calcium chloride were added to the infant's food every alternate week, and the weight each week minutely recorded. It was found that in the weeks when calcium chloride was eaten the rate of growth was one-third greater than in the weeks when ordinary food was given. Thereupon calcium chloride was administered with food every week, and the infant grew more than noramlly big, strong, and animated.

In the need of the animal body for lime there is nothing new. The novelty was in feeding animals with the chemical in an organic state. German military scientists show that districts with water rich in lime salts supply a larger proportion of conscripts than districts with soft water. Carnivorous animals eat the bones of their victims merely because meat contains very little lime and they are driven by instinct to seek a supply of lime in the lime-rich bones. The same instinct impels domestic fowls to peck at stucco walls. Lime is normally found in large quantities in bones, lungs, and grey substance of the brain; but little is found in the muscles, except in the heart muscles, which contain four times as much as their share. The heart and brain, says Emmerich, require lime quite as imperatively as do the bones.

A lime-rich diet is necessary, but it is not enough. The chief articles of diet—meat, bread, potatoes, and fruit of the apple and pear class—are all poor in lime. Rice, lentils, and cherries have much lime; figs have very much lime; egg yolks, cabbage, and strawberries still more lime. But richest of all is milk. That is why milk is the ideal food both for children and adults.

Second Ugliest Man on Earth.

Lulungu is a Congo chief who is rated as the ugliest man on earth. But it is said that he might have to withdraw his claim to that distinction could he have met John James Heidegger, London court favorite and manager of the opera, in the early part of the eighteenth century. Mrs. Delaney described him as "the ugliest man ever formed," and he was so proud of it that he challenged Lord Chesterfield to produce a more hideous face in London. A woman was found who ran him very close, but when Heidegger put on her headdress he was unanimously pronounced to be the winner.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor's Private Beauty Parlor.

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

The beautiful young widow of the late John Jacob Astor, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster, evidently has much faith in the old proverb, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," for she has established in her palatial home on Fifth avenue, New York city, one of the most expensively equipped beauty parlors in the world.

She believes in taking time by the forelock, as it were, and intends wisely to keep herself always young and lovely. In this wonderful parlor can be found all kinds of electric apparatus, invibrators including an "applicator" of great rapidity for the arms and an exquisitely delicate buzzer for the cheeks. A certain powder is placed on this buzzer, which is then rubbed electrically into the skin giving it a peachy glow that can't be detected from the real thing.

The last thing in hair dryers is another accessory of the beauty parlor. Press one button and there comes a draught of cold air. Press another and you get a blast of hot air that any politician would envy. There are two aseptic cabinets for the sterilization of instruments, towels, etc.

But all these adjuncts to beauty cost an enormous sum; face powder alone used by this sybaritic young matron is said to retail at $8 for a few thimblefuls. Then there must be hair dressers, manicures, complexion coaxers, chiropidists, dentists, masseurs and maids of all degrees in attendance. The woman who wants to look as if she "belonged" must have at least one of each of these treatments a day.

Women on Governing Boards.

Concerning woman's availability for state boards of control Mrs. Almah J. Frisby, who served seven years as a member of the Wisconsin board, says: "It [illegible] obvious to any fair-minded person that [illegible] governing board of institutions whose inmates are largely women and children should have women members. The humanitarian side of the work appeals to a woman, while the interest of the male members of the board, I found, was almost entirely confined to the plants and the business connected with the institutions, which is not surprising, as that is the man's chief resposibility in the home.

"Of the eleven men who were members of the board (thanks to politics) during the seven years that I was a member only two or three took any interest in the internal working of the institutions or showed any efficiency in the work of inspection, which seemed to me a very important part of the work of the board. Certainly the welfare and happiness of the inmates depend quite as much on cleanliness, properly cooked food and kind treatment as upon fine buildings, efficient heating plants and good farms, important as the latter unquestionably are."

An Effective President.

"Bosh!" said Mr. Nervepop after Mrs. Nervepop had expressed the wish that a woman might be president of the United States for just one week. "What could she do?"

"What could she do?" retorted the lady. "I tell you this, James, that if I could get into the White House with a couple of good Swedes to help me I'd do more in a minute than any president we've had in twenty years with both houses of congress and his cabinet behind him."—Harper's.

MODERNIZED THE ANGEL.

Mounted on Ball Bearings, It Now Acts as a Weather Vane.

There are many kinds of angels ranging in style from those we read about in the Bible to those who bring out talent on the stage. It has remained, however, for a writer in the American Machinist to discover a new type of the seraphic assortment. This angel is "ball bearing" and entirely unlike the common or garden variety of angels. It stands on top of the famous tower known as the Campanile di San Marco, in Venice, and swings to the wind like a weather vane.

The statue of the angel San Marco, which [illegible] century, was found but little damaged among the ruins after the collapse of the tower. It was repaired and now stands again on the lofty height, but is supported in a very different manner from the old, for it now rests on modern ball bearings.

This method of mounting allows the statue to be turned around a vertical axis by the wind, so that it swings automatically into such a position that the angel always presents the smallest surface to the wind or storm. If one considers that the large wings of the angel, which are eleven feet high, project straight backward, it may be imagined that the difference of the wind pressure is considerable, whether the wind blows against the small front surface or against the side exposing the large face of the wings.

FEAR IS LESSENING.

Britain Will Send Battleships to Outlying Stations.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The announcement of the Admiralty that a fleet, comprising eight battleships, [illegible] battle cruisers, eight [illegible] and eight light cruisers will be sent to the Mediterranean early in November, coupled with the despatch of four large armored ships, which will have their base in the future at Bermuda, [illegible] a radical change in the British naval policy, which, on account of friction with Germany, has kept practically all the fighting units within home waters for several years past.

The Mediterranean fleet, after manoeuvres, will cruise as far as Alexandria. With the vessels already in those waters, the visiting fleet, under Vice-Admiral Sir Stanley Colville, will make the most imposing naval demonstration ever attempted by Great Britain in the Mediterranean.

The fourth cruiser squadron, leaving England Sept. 29, will proceed direct to Bermuda. It is due there Oct. 10, after which the ships will scatter, to visit various ports in the Carribbean.

WOULD JAIL CARSON.

British Liberal Papers Urge Government To Act.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Sir Edward Carson, the leader of the Irish Unionist party, has started on the second week of his Ulster campaign by delivering speeches which have led the Liberal newspapers to again ask whether he should not be prosecuted for sedition or be deprived of his membership of the Privy Council.

The business part of the Ulster campaign was entered upon yesterday when the Ulster Unionist members of Parliament were informed of the civil and military plan to be pursued when the Home Rule Bill for Ireland becomes law, and were also admitted to knowledge of the leading features of the proposed provisional government for the North of Ireland.

A labor leader, in a letter to the press yesterday, warns the public that the chiefs of the labor party are finding it harder to control their followers, who favor physical violence in face of the threats being made in Ulster of forcible resistance to home rule.

Garrisons Were Slaughtered.

SAN LUIS POTOSI, Mexico, Sept. 24.—Confirmation has been received of the slaughter of the garrisons at Laguna Seca and Charcas, in the State of San Luis Potosi. Only one subordinate officer is said to have escaped. The federals at Laguna Seca numbered 35. They fought until their ammunition was gone and then charged the rebels with their bayonets. At Charcas, where the number of federals is believed to have been larger, they fought to the last man.

The station agent at Laguna Seca and his assistant were lined up to be shot, but were saved by an elderly officer of the rebels. The object of these attacks is not apparent. The railroad was not damaged, and the trains are running, although late.

Bow Bent In Collision.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Sept. 24.—With her bow bent badly where she was rammed by the Standard Oil boat Brilliant at Cleveland, the steamer Canadian of the Merchants Mutual arrived yesterday. The damage is above the waterline and although 13 plates will have to be removed a certificate of seaworthiness has been granted to allow her to run until the close of navigation.

May Compromise on Home Rule.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—The Pall Mall Gazette (Unionist) yesterday says important conversations have informally passed between the Ministers and Opposition leaders, and prospects of an attempt at compromise on the Irish question are sensibly improved.

May Release Steamer.

PORT COLBORNE, Sept. 24.—The Reids wrecking plant which went to the stranded steamer Haddington yesterday morning, returned to the harbor last evening after starting a pump on her. They were forced to suspend operations, as the seas were breaking over her decks. It is thought from the progress made with the pump that if weather conditions are favorable they will be able to release her.

Priest Fell Dead.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Sept. 24.—A [illegible] in whose satchel was found books bearing the name of P. Caisse, College of St. Mart[illegible] fell dead in Falls street last night. A steamer ticket for Toronto was found in the man's pocket. He was dressed as a Roman Catholic priest.

CROTHERS CRITICIZED BY LABOR DELEGATES

Speakers at Congress in Montreal Say Minister of Labor Made Unwarranted Statements to the Press Regarding Miners' Strike

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—Both the Canadian Senate and the Minister of Labor, Hon. T. W. Crothers, came in for a share of criticism at the hands of speakers before the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress yesterday, the latter being openly accused of working in the interest of the employers as against those of the laboring man. The fault found with the Senate lay in the refusal of that body to pass legislation which had been carried by the House along the lines of protection for employed girls and women, in keeping them out of the clutches of "white slavers."

The first attack was made in the morning session by Rev. Dr. Shearer of Toronto, secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada. He told the congress about the legislation the council had succeeded in having passed in the lower chamber. This was, among other things, to provide for the raising of the age of consent to 18 years and the making of all employers criminally responsible for the seduction of a girl in their employ. This had been killed in the Senate, and the doctor sharply criticized the Senate's action.

The attack on the Minister of Labor was the result of an outline of the [illegible] miners' strike [illegible] session by W. J. Wilkinson of Vancouver, representing the American Federation of Labor. It again came up in the afternoon in the shape of a resolution.

Mr. Crothers, it was said, had made the trip to Vancouver Island during the strike, and on the way back had made certain statements to the press, which had been at variance with the truth.

Mr. Rigg of Winnipeg reviewed Mr. Wilkinson's statements of the morning session concerning how 61 miners had been brought from Durham, England, by the Canadian Colliers, Ltd., through the agency of the Cosmopolitan Employment Bureau. He had heard in Winnipeg that there was something wrong on Vancouver Island, and he took the miners to the immigration officer in his city, who, however, could do nothing. He had then advised the miners to continue to Vancouver, where they would at least be taken care of by the United Mine Workers.

Then Hon. Mr. Crothers had come out to look into the situation. On his way back he had stopped in Winnipeg. Mr. Rigg had called on him in his hotel and was introduced by the Minister of Labor to some friends as "the individual who had laid hold of the miners and inculcated in them the spirit of discontent, thereby causing them to become a charge on the community."

"That," shouted Mr. Rigg, "is the type of man you have for a Minister of Labor—who at first impressed the unions as being a fair-minded man in his dealings. But there you have him with the mask off, not concerned with the actions of men who brought these miners to Canada under false pretences, but concerned only with ridiculing the man who is making efforts to have the country kept as clean as possible of this sort of thing."

Swindlers Fake Travelers' Checks.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Twenty thousand banks in every section of the world have been notified by the United States Express Co. that a band of international swindlers have counterfeited the company's travelers' checks and are passing them wholesale in Europe. Twenty-four of the counterfeit checks, issued and uttered within a week and cashed at Carlsbad, Lugano and Nice, have been received by the company here.

These checks, representing one week's operations, are dated August 22 and 29, and were cashed by two men who signed the checks, Robert T. MacDonald and Wm. T. Riley.

Crosses Mediterranean.

BIZERTA, Tunis, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Roland G. Garros, the French aviator, succeeded yesterday morning in accomplishing the remarkable feat of flying across the Mediterranean from Saint Raphael, France, to Bizerta, between 550 and 600 miles, in seven hours and twenty-five minutes.

To Vote on Initiative.

SASKATOON, Sept. 24.—A plebiscite vote to determine what people think of the initiative and referendum for the Province of Saskatchewan will be taken early in November, according to a statement yesterday by Hon. A. P. McNab.

A conference has been arranged between members of the Government and leaders in the direct legislation movement to arrange the details. New voters' lists and polling divisions as in the last provincial election will be followed in taking the vote.

Relief For the Strikers.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—The Parliamentary committee of the Trades Union Congress decided yesterday to send a shipload of provisions to Dublin for the relief of the strikers there, many of whom with their wives and children are on the verge of starvation. The committee has pledged $25,000.

Connaught at Manoeuvres.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(C. A. P. Cable)—The King and the Duke of Connaught are proceeding together to the military manoeuvres at Aldershot. They will return afterwards to Balmoral for a week. The duke has no further public engagements before returning to Canada.

A laundry chiffonier is a useful thing to hold washing powders, soaps, blueing, starch and so on. One drawer should be lined with zinc and kept for irons.

MRS. TAYLOR IS IN THE HOSPITAL

CORNWALL, Sept. 24.—Mrs. Taylorr, the Montreal lady who committed the terrible crime in Alexandria in the early hours of Sunday morning, was brought to the counties jail here yesterday afternoon by Constable Segar of Alexandria, the trip across country being made in an automobile. On reaching the jail Dr. D. O. Alguire, the jail physician, made an examination of the unfortunate lady, after which she was taken to the general hospital, where she will be treated.

WEDDING—PERSONALS

O'DONNELL—McCARTY.

The marriage of Miss Mary McCarty to Mr. Jos. O'Donnell, of this city, was solemnized yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral by Rev. Father McColl.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell left on the afternoon train for Toronto and other points, where they will spend honeymoon, after which they will take up residence in Peterborough.

At Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto, this morning at 11.30, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Amy Crafts and Rev. Ernest Codling, the Rev. Dr. Young officiating.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mabel Curtis and the groom was supported by Rev. Wm. Mumford.

Rev. and Mrs. Codling left shortly after the ceremony for Eglingburg, near Kingston, where Rev. Mr Codling is the pastor of the Methodist church.

Many Peterborough friends of the bride will extend congratulations and best wishes.

ALLEN—SWEENEY.

St. Joseph's Church, Douro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday morning, when the marriage of Miss Mary Sweeney, of Douro, and Mr. Jos Allen, of Kinmount, was solemnized by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick. The attendants were Miss M. O'Donnell and Mr W. Sweeney.

After a honey-moon in Toronto and Detroit Mr. and Mrs Allen will reside in Kinmount.

CLANCY—HEFFERNAN.

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday at St. Joseph's Church Douro, by the Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, when Miss Bessie Heffernan, of Douro, was united in bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thos. Clancy, of this city. They were attended by Miss Jean Heffernan and Mr. Ed Clancy.

Mr. and Mrs Clancy will take up residence in Peterborough.

WOOD—WITHERS.

BARNES—LEACH.

St. John's Chimes rang out to the solemnization of two pretty weddings between 2.30 and 3 o'clock this afternoon at which Rev. Canon Davidson officiated. Miss Ethel Withers was united in marriage to Mr. Victor A. Wood, both of this city. They were attended by Miss L. Lucas and Mr. J. Young. Mr. and Mrs. Wood will reside in Peterborough after a short honeymoon.

Miss Ethel Leach was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel Barnes, both of this city. They were attended by Miss E. Nicholson and Mr. H Barnes. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes will take up their residence in the city.

Rev. Father Kelly, of Trout Creek who attended the consecration of Bishop O'Brien, was some years ago on the staff of St. Peter's Cathedral.

The following paragraph from a New York paper will be of interest to Peterborough people: Miss Maria Thompson Daviess, whose new book "The Tinder Box," is to be issued by The Century Company, November 5th, has just returned from several months play-time on Stoney Lake, Canada. Miss Daviess will spend the winter in New York, but she has bought an island of her own in Stoney Lake and will build a cottage there for her summer home.

Ready For Anything.

The efficiency of the French system of highly centralized government, even in the face of the upheavals of nature, has been comically illustrated.

A slight earthquake shock having been felt in a part of the French provinces, the subprefect of one department, an important government official, telegraphed to the minister of the interior as follows: "On the first information of the seismic tremors I summoned the government attorney, the lieutenant of gendarmerie and the police magistrate. I have assumed my uniform and now await your orders."—London Mail

FORMER LOCAL YOUNG MAN TO TAKE CHARGE OF METHODIST MISSION

Hamilton, Sept. 24—B. W. Sharpe, who for the past two years has been prominently connected with the Zion Tabernacle church and Sunday school, left last night for Calgary, where he will take charge of a Methodist mission. Mr Sharpe came to this city from Peterborough, where he was connected with the Y.M.C.A. for two years, and since that time has been taking a course in the Collegiate. He intends taking up the ministry and his position in the western city will be his first venture in this kind of work. While in this city he has been prominently connected with various church societies and the boys' Y.M.C.A.

The young men of Zion Tabernacle congregated at the home of Mr. Sharpe's parents Friday evening and presented to him a beautiful morocco leather club bag, while on Sunday the members of the Zion Sunday school gave him a set of books. Mr Sharpe's many friends wish him much success in his new undertaking.

FISKE O'HARA IN "OLD DUBLIN"

London Free List, Thursday, September 11, 1913. If Fiske O'Hara was as well pleased with his audience as that audience was with his play, "In Old Dublin," at the Grand last night everybody was happy. Probably that was so, for Mr. O'Hara recalled four times after the second act sang a little song ending, "I see you're happy, so am I." It was a great crowd even for exhibition week, and the box office sold about as much standing room in the theatre as the law allows. At that, everyone seemed delighted with the Irish tenor and his players. The play is handsomely staged too.

Mr. O'Hara "wears well." It does seem as if "The Minstrel Boy" had been written especially for his voice. The O'Hara smile is as captivating as ever, and both brogue and smile had their match in those of "Peggy" Gilroy, (Miss Marie Quinn) whose frolics throughout caused lady visitors from all over Western Ontario to say "Isn't she cute!" Mr. J. P. Sullivan, a veteran actor, has drawn a proper role in that of the grim but kind-hearted John Farley, New York shipowner whose face, as the saying goes, is a map of Ireland in fact. Mr. O'Hara's support throughout is good. Rose Stratton (Miss Tyrone) and Irene Ferguson (Miss Maitland) were charming, and the Widow Gilroy (Miss Ripley) earned a batch of laughs for herself.

Mr. Frazier and Mr. Russell in the important roles of Sir John Davies and Capt. Wharton, of the "castle set" must be credited with delightfully smooth performances. Mr. O'Hara's work in the part of Neil Powers, young shipbuilder, is of course the feature. His acting was warmly applauded at each climax.

BURGLARS AT NORWOOD

Two Attempts to Rob Store of E. P. Cuffe

NORWOOD, Sept. 24— Two weeks ago on Monday night, the store of Mr. E P. Cuffe was entered by burglars and several articles taken, and again on Monday evening of this week a further attempt was made to further relieve Mr. Cuffe of some of his stock.

The burglars had gained entrance to the store through the cellar door but before anything was taken they were discovered, and an alarm was sent in to the Chief of Police, and a raid was made on the premises. But the intruders had taken the hint and withdrew to safer quarters. This took place about midnight, and watch was kept for the balance of the night but no further depredations were attempted.

A CANNON WITH A LONG HISTORY

Is Placed in Position on Lawn of Armories

A cannon nearly 100 years old was placed in front of the Murray street entrance to the armories last evening. The cannon was placed there at the instigation of the Daughters of the Empire, through Col. Young. Besides carrying the monogram of George III. and William IV., the cannon has quite a history.

It was sent here some years ago for gun practice and for several years has been stored away in the armories. During the North West Rebellion, while firing a salute in front of the old drill shed, Capt. Jas. Snyder, of the 14th Durham Field Battery, had one of his hands blown off by the cannon. Mr Jos. Metheral was also connected with the same company.

In future the cannon will grace the lawn in front of the armories.

STORIES AND THE DRAMA.

Harder Work to Write a Novel Than to Construct a Play.

One reason why a play is easier to write than a novel is that a play is shorter than a novel. On the average one may say that it takes six plays to make the matter of a novel. Other things being equal, a short work of art presents fewer difficulties than a longer one. The contrary is held true by the majority, but then the majority, having never attempted to produce a long work of art, are unqualified to offer an opinion.

It is said that the most difficult form of poetry is the sonnet. But the most difficult form of poetry is the epic. The proof that the sonnet is the most difficult form is alleged to be in the fewness of perfect sonnets. There are, however, few more perfect sonnets than perfect epics. A perfect sonnet may be a heavenly accident. But such accidents can never happen to writers of epics.

Some years ago we had an enormous palaver about the "art of the short story," which numerous persons who had omitted to write novels pronounced to be more difficult than the novel. But the fact remains that there are scores of perfect short stories, whereas it is doubtful whether anybody but Turgenev ever did write a perfect novel.

A short form is easier to manipulate than a long form because its construction is less complicated, because the balance of its proportions can be more [illegible] by means of a rapid [illegible] and even [illegible] undone many things which are very hard to do and because the emotional strain is less prolonged. The most difficult thing in all art is to maintain the imaginative tension unslackened throughout a considerable period.—Metropolitan Magazine.
